PREFACE

The Mississippi Code of 1972, which became effective on November 1, 1973, is the culmination of nearly four years of effort on the part of the Legislature, the Attorney General's office and the publishers, which brings together provisions of general statutory law having a common subject matter into a more orderly and logical framework of code titles and chapters, and employing a modern and effective section numbering system. A major by-product of the code revision will be the state-owned magnetic computer tape containing the Mississippi Code of 1972, which will be of invaluable assistance to the Legislature and to the state.

The enabling act for the code was a recommendation of the Mississippi State Bar, which resulted in the consideration and passage of Senate Bill 1964, Chapter 465, Laws of 1970, signed into law by Governor John Bell Williams.

The Code Committee provided for in that act was comprised of A. F. Summer, Attorney General, Heber Ladner, Secretary of State, Representative Edgar J. Stephens, Jr., Chairman, House Appropriations Committee, Senator William G. Burgin, Jr., Chairman, Senate Appropriations Committee, Representative H. L. Meredith, Jr., Chairman, House Judiciary "A" and Judiciary en banc Committees, Senator E. K. Collins, Chairman, Senate Judiciary "A" and Judiciary en banc Committees, Representative Ney McKinley Gore, Jr., Chairman, House Judiciary "B" Committee, and Senator William E. Alexander, Chairman, Senate Judiciary "B" Committee. In 1972, Representative Marby Robert Penton and Senator Herman B. Decell, Chairman of House and Senate Judiciary "B" Committees, respectively, became members of the Committee, replacing Representative Gore and Senator Collins, Senator Alexander having been appointed Chairman of Senate Judiciary "A" and Judiciary en banc Committees. The Deputy Attorney General, Delos H. Burks, served the Code Committee as Secretary. Special Assistant Attorney General Fred J. Lotterhos, under the supervision of the Attorney General, was assigned the principal responsibility for the supervision of the recodification, including the consideration and treatment of some 16,000 sections of code manuscript.

Final legislative approval was given to the Mississippi Code of 1972 by passage of Senate Bill 2034, Laws of 1972, which was signed by Governor William L. Waller on April 26, 1972.

The Code Committee is of the opinion that the recodification has been thoroughly and well accomplished, and will result in a greatly improved repository of the general statutory law of the state.

PUBLISHER'S FOREWORD

This 2018 Replacement Volume 20 of the Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated represents material appearing in the original 1973 bound volume, the 1994 Replacement Volume 20, the 2004 Replacement Volume 20, and the 2013 Replacement Volume 20, as well as reflecting amendments, repeals, and new Code provisions enacted by the Mississippi Legislature through the 2018 Regular Legislative Session.

This volume contains the text of Titles 91 through 95, of the Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated, as amended through the 2018 Regular Legislative Session.

Case annotations are included based on decisions of the State and federal courts in cases arising in Mississippi. Many of these cases were decided under the former statutes in effect prior to the enactment of the Code of 1972. These earlier cases have been moved to pertinent sections of the Code where they may be useful in interpreting the current statutes. Annotations to collateral research references are also included.

To better serve our customers by making our annotations more current, LexisNexis has changed the sources that are read to create annotations for this publication. Rather than waiting for cases to appear in printed reporters, we now read court decisions as they are released by the courts. A consequence of this more current reading of cases, as they are posted online on LexisNexis, is that the most recent cases annotated may not yet have print reporter citations. These will be provided, as they become available, through later publications.

This publication contains annotations taken from decisions of the Mississippi Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals decisions and decisions of the appropriate federal courts. These cases will be printed in the following reporters:

Southern Reporter, 3rd Series
United States Supreme Court Reports
Supreme Court Reporter
United States Supreme Court Reports, Lawyers' Edition, 2nd Series
Federal Reporter, 3rd Series
Federal Supplement, 3rd Series
Federal Rules Decisions
Bankruptcy Reporter

Additionally, annotations have been taken from the following sources:

American Law Reports, 6th Series
American Law Reports, Federal 2nd Series
Mississippi College Law Review
Mississippi Law Journal

Finally, published Opinions of the Attorney General and opinions of the Ethics Commission have been examined for annotations.

ADVANCE CODE SERVICE

Three times a year, at roughly quarterly intervals between delivery of Code supplement pocket parts, we publish the Mississippi Advance Code Service pamphlets. These pamphlets contain updated statutory material and annotations to Attorney General opinions, research and practice references, and recent court decisions construing the Code. Each pamphlet is cumulative, so that each is a "one-stop" source of case notes updating those in your Code bound volumes and pocket parts.

ADVANCE SHEETS

The Advance Sheets consist of a series of pamphlets issued in the spring. The series reproduces the acts passed by the Mississippi Legislature and approved by the Governor during the legislative session. Features include tables showing the impact of legislation on sections of the Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated, and a cumulative index. These pamphlets enable the user to receive a preview of approved legislation prior to supplement availability, and serve as an excellent source of legislative history.

AMENDMENT NOTES

Every time a Code provision is amended, we prepare a note describing the effect of the amendment. By reading the note, you can ascertain the impact of the change without having to check the former statute itself.

Amendment notes are retained in the Supplement until the bound volume is replaced, at which time notes from all but the last two years are deleted.

Amendment notes are retained online indefinitely.

ANALYSES

Each title, chapter, and article appearing in a bound volume or supplement is preceded by an analysis. The analysis details the scope of the title, chapter, and article and enables you to see at a glance the content of the title, chapter, and article without resorting to a page-by-page examination in the bound volume or supplement.

CODE STATUS

The Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated is Mississippi's official code and is considered evidence of the statute law of the State of Mississippi (see § 1-1-8). The Code was enacted by Chapter 394 of the Laws of 1972, which was signed by the Governor on April 26, 1972.

Title 1, Chapters 1 through 5 of the Code contain statutes governing the status and construction of the Code.

COMPARABLE LEGISLATION FROM OTHER STATES

Notes to comparable legislation from other states appear for uniform laws, interstate compacts, statutory provisions pertaining to reciprocity and cooperation with other states, and various important statutes of general interest. Other states' statutes that are similar in subject matter and scope to those of Mississippi are cited, generally, under the first section of the chapter or article to which they pertain. Occasionally, comparable legislation pertains to only one section, in which case it is cited under that section rather than at the chapter or article level.

See also Federal Aspects.

COURT RULES

The Mississippi Court Rules are published separately by LexisNexis in a fully annotated softcover volume which is replaced annually and supplemented semi-annually.

The Court Rules volume contains statewide rules of procedure of the state courts, the local rules of the United States district courts and bankruptcy courts for Mississippi, and the rules of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Rules are received from the courts and edited only for stylistic consistency. For further information, see the Preface to the Mississippi Court Rules volume.

CROSS REFERENCES

Cross references refer you to notes under other Code sections, that may affect a law or place it in context. Cross references also are used under repealed provisions to refer you to an existing law on a similar subject. Cross references do not cite all related statutes, however, since these can be identified by using the General Index.

See also Comparable Legislation from other States and Federal Aspects.

EDITOR'S NOTES

Editor's notes are notes prepared by the Publisher that contain information about important or unusual features of a law, or special circumstances surrounding passage of the law, that are not apparent from the law's text.

See also Effective Dates.

EFFECTIVE DATES

Absent a specific effective date provision within an act, Mississippi laws generally take effect upon approval date, which is the date the act is signed into law by the Governor.

FEDERAL ASPECTS

Notes to federal legislation that is similar in subject matter and scope to the laws of Mississippi are referenced throughout the Code. In addition, the Code contains the United States Code Service citation for any federal law that is referred to in a Mississippi statute by its popular name or by its session law designation.

See also Comparable Legislation from other States.

HISTORY NOTES

Each section of the Code is followed by a brief note showing the acts of the Legislature on which it is based, including the act that originally enacted the section and any subsequent amendments.

The history note follows the section text, preceding any other annotations for the section. Information in the history note is listed in chronological order, first by Codes, then by Laws, with the most recent information listed last. If a section has been renumbered, the former number will appear in the history note.

The tables volume should also be consulted when researching the history of a statutory section, since it contains cross reference tables that provide a statutory citation for each section of the session laws and the date each act went into effect.

INDEX

The Code is completely indexed in two softcover Index volumes, which are updated and replaced annually. In addition, each volume of the Code is followed by its own index. As accurate and thorough as the Index is, your best defense against index wild goose chases is familiarity with indexing techniques. To that end, an explanatory Foreword to the Index appears in the first Index volume.

JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE NOTES

Joint Legislative Committee notes are included in the Code to describe codification decisions made by the Mississippi Joint Legislative Committee on Compilation, Revision and Publication of Legislation. Examples of Committee actions that warrant the inclusion of a note are the integration of multiple amendments to a single Code section during the same legislative session, and the correction of typographical errors appearing in the Code.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Every reported case from the Supreme Court of Mississippi, the Court of Appeals of Mississippi, federal district courts for Mississippi, the federal Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court has been read for constructions of Mississippi law. These constructions are noted under pertinent sections of the statutes or Mississippi Constitution provisions, under the heading "Judicial Decisions." Where a decision has been reviewed by a higher court, subsequent judicial history and disposition is noted in the case note if such disposition has any bearing on the annotated material. Where two or more decisions state the same rule of law, the case citations are cumulated under one case note.

Case notes are grouped together under headings called "catchlines." The catchlines identify the basic subject matter of the case notes and assist the user in locating pertinent notes. Catchlines are numbered and arranged thematically, with "In general" first. Where there are two or more catchlines, an analysis, listing all the catchlines, precedes the annotations.

Frequently, statutes carry notes to cases that arose under earlier laws on the same subject. Case notes are retained so long as the editor believes the note will have some relevance under current law, though of course the relevance may be diminished by later changes in the law. These case notes appear under the heading "Decisions under former law."

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Opinions of the Attorney General for the State of Mississippi have been read for constructions of Mississippi law. Notes describing the subject matter of the opinions have been placed under relevant Code provisions under the heading "Opinions of the Attorney General."

ORGANIZATION AND NUMBERING SYSTEM

The Code is organized by titles, chapters, articles, subarticles, undesignated centered headings and sections. Analyses at the beginning of each title, chapter, article, and subarticle help you understand the internal arrangement of each Code unit (see Analyses).

Odd numbers are generally used for the numbering of titles, chapters and sections. Even numbers have been used for some chapters and sections so that a particular new chapter or section might be logically placed with other chapters and sections dealing with the same or similar subject matter. Similarly, the use of numbers with decimal points has been used for some sections in order that they may be inserted among other sections pertaining to the same subject.

The title, chapter, and section for each Code section is revealed by its section number. Thus, in the designation "§ 1-3-65," the first digit ("1") means the provision is in Title 1 ("Laws and Statutes"); the second ("3") indicates Chapter 3 ("Construction of Statutes"); and the last two digits ("65") mean the 65th section in that chapter ("Construction of terms generally").

Articles and subarticles are not reflected by section number designations.

Within sections, subsections and paragraphs usually are designated following this pattern: (1)(a)(i)1. or (1)(a)(i)A. A distinctive indention scheme is applied to suggest the relative value of each unit within this hierarchy.

PLACEMENT OF NOTES

Where a note pertains to a single statute section, it will of course be set out following that section. In many instances, however, a note applies equally to several statute sections or to an entire chapter or article. If the pertinent sections are scattered, or few in number, the note will be duplicated for each section. But where the note applies to all or most of the sections in a chapter or article, we prevent the space-consuming repetition of notes by placing the note at the very beginning of the chapter or article.

REPLACEMENT VOLUMES

The Code is periodically updated and streamlined by the replacement of volumes. Although a current set of the Code contains all currently applicable statutes, we encourage you to retain replaced volumes and their supplement pockets parts for historical reference.

RESEARCH AND PRACTICE REFERENCES

Citations to references in American Jurisprudence, American Jurisprudence Pleading and Practice, American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts, American Jurisprudence Trials, American Law Reports, First through Sixth Series, ALR Federal, Corpus Juris Secundum, various other treatises and practice guides, and Mississippi law journals are given under this heading, wherever the references appear to discuss the statute under which the citation appears, or a topic related to the statute. These citations are intended only to give you a starting point for your library research. The Mississippi law journals include Mississippi Law Journal and Mississippi College Law Review.

STATUTE HEADINGS

Headings or "catchlines" for Code sections and subsections are generally created and maintained by the publisher. They are mere catchwords and are not to be deemed or taken as the official title of a section or as a part of the section. Your suggestions for the improvement of particular catchlines are invited.

TABLES

The Mississippi Code of 1972 Annotated contains several tables that can assist you in your research. These are published in the Statutory Tables volume of the Code, and include the following:

- Sections of the Code of 1930 carried into the Code of 1942.
- Sections of the Code of 1942 carried into the Code of 1972.
- Allocation of Acts of Legislature, 1931 — 1972.
- Allocation of Acts of Legislature, 1972 — present.
- Consolidated Tables of amendments and repeals of 1942 Code sections.
- Consolidated Tables of amendments and repeals of 1972 Code sections.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Application.
3. —Particular personalty.

1. In general.

Courts cannot ingraft exceptions on the statute. Williams v. Lee, 130 Miss. 481, 94 So. 454, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 225 (Miss. 1923).

Wife not estopped by silence with knowledge of pretended second marriage to assert right of inheritance. Williams v. Lee, 130 Miss. 481, 94 So. 454, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 225 (Miss. 1923).

Payment of debt having situs in Mississippi to foreign administrator is no defense against heirs. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

The effect of the statute is to abolish ancillary administrations in this state altogether. Carroll v. McPike, 53 Miss. 569, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1876); Partee v. Kortrecht, 54 Miss. 66, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 12 (Miss. 1876).

The statute makes the local law the rule of distribution. Wilson v. Cox, 49 Miss. 538, 1873 Miss. LEXIS 142 (Miss. 1873).

2. Application.

Although the Uniform Commercial Code may govern whether a certificate of deposit passes to the estate or under a presumed joint tenancy, it does not determine who takes a certificate of deposit once it is in the estate. Matter of Zimmerman v. Corely, 519 So. 2d 430 (Miss. 1988).

But where the owner of the debt so deals with it as to establish an intention to locate it here, or if the debt arose as an incident to a business conducted in this state, the statute applies. Jahier v. Rascoe, 62 Miss. 699, 1885 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1885).

The statute does not per se localize here all debts which are due by residents of this state to persons domiciled out of it. Speed v. Kelly, 59 Miss. 47, 1881 Miss. LEXIS 73 (Miss. 1881).

The statute applies in cases of partial intestacy. Wilson v. Cox, 49 Miss. 538, 1873 Miss. LEXIS 142 (Miss. 1873).

The statute applies only to the estates of intestates. The renunciation of a will by a widow will not make the statute applicable. Slaughter v. Garland, 40 Miss. 172, 1866 Miss. LEXIS 60 (Miss. 1866).

3. —Particular personalty.

Stock in Mississippi corporation, owned by person domiciled in Minnesota at the time of death, has its situs in Mississippi, and distribution is controlled by law of the state. Ewing v. Warren, 144 Miss. 233, 109 So. 601, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 1926).

Money, deposited in a bank within the state, belonging to person domiciled in another state at time of death, will be distributed under Mississippi law. Ewing v. Warren, 144 Miss. 233, 109 So. 601, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 1926).

Rent on land in Mississippi is a debt governed by its laws. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

Descent of the leasehold interest in school lands situated within the state, owned by testatrix domiciled outside of the state, is to be governed by the laws of the state, and of legacy of such interest lapses on the death of the legatee without children, though under the statute of the domicile of testatrix it would not lapse. Neblett v. Neblett, 112 Miss. 550, 73 So. 575, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 145 (Miss. 1916).

Stock of Mississippi bank owned by nonresident had situs in Mississippi and was liable to claims of creditors of estate, and was not exempt to widow. Jane v. Martinez, 104 Miss. 208, 61 So. 177, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. 1913).

The personal estate of a young unmarried man who leaves his parental home in another state and in search of health, or a suitable field of labor, acquires a domicile in this state but abandons it and returns to his original domicile, is not distributable according to the laws of this state. Mayo v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc., 71 Miss. 590, 15 So. 791, 1893 Miss. LEXIS 123 (Miss. 1893).

§ 91-1-3. Descent of land.

When any person shall die seized of any estate of inheritance in lands, tenements, and hereditaments not devised, the same shall descend to his or her children, and their descendants, in equal parts, the descendants of the deceased child or grandchild to take the share of the deceased parent in equal parts among them. When there shall not be a child or children of the intestate nor descendants of such children, then to the brothers and sisters and father and mother of the intestate and the descendants of such brothers and sisters in equal parts, the descendants of a sister or brother of the intestate to have in equal parts among them their deceased parent's share. If there shall not be a child or children of the intestate, or descendants of such children, or brothers or sisters, or descendants of them, or father or mother, then such estate shall descend, in equal parts, to the grandparents and uncles and aunts, if any there be; otherwise, such estate shall descend in equal parts to the next of kin of the intestate in equal degree, computing by the rules of the civil law. There shall not be any representation among collaterals, except among the descendants of the brothers and sisters of the intestate.

4. —Exempt property.

1. Construction and application in general.

Under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-3, since decedent had no spouse or children, his heirs at law were his brother, sisters, mother and the descendants of his deceased brother and sister in equal parts; the decedent's illegitimate children, having failed to file suit to determine legitimacy within the limitation period, had made moot any consideration of whether or not they were legitimate heirs. In re Estate of Thomas, 881 So. 2d 257, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 996 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), rev'd, 883 So. 2d 1173, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1269 (Miss. 2004).

Collateral heirs, under statute of descent and distribution for real property, may take only if there is no surviving spouse or child. Daniel v. Snowdoun Asso., 513 So. 2d 946, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2840 (Miss. 1987).

The nephews and nieces of an intestate decedent, who were children of his whole-blood brothers, succeeded to his entire estate to the exclusion of his half-blood sister, under §§ 91-1-5 and 91-1-3, since his whole-blood brothers would have been his sole and only surviving legal heirs to the exclusion of his half-blood sister, and their children occupied the same position as their parents, by right of representation. Jones v. Stubbs, 434 So. 2d 1362, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2741 (Miss. 1983).

A claim of inheritance based upon an alleged oral contract of adoption made many years prior to the death of the intestate, will not be recognized. Brassiell v. Brassiell, 228 Miss. 243, 87 So. 2d 699, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 509 (Miss. 1956).

Husband is heir of wife, but not of wife's parents, and he inherits no interest in lands of wife's parents where wife predeceased parents, children of wife inheriting share of their mother. Dunaway v. McEachern, 37 So. 2d 767 (Miss. 1948).

The statutes on descent and distribution are not suspended by, and have no application to, the refusal of a court to set aside a divorce decree in an action brought by the surviving party to the divorce action. Stanley v. Stanley, 201 Miss. 545, 29 So. 2d 641, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 418 (Miss. 1947).

The right of an heir to the estate of a deceased person does not originate in the lifetime of the decedent. Covington v. Frank, 77 Miss. 606, 27 So. 1000, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1900).

In a suit by the creditor of a deceased person to foreclose a mortgage, persons whose heirship is denied are competent witnesses to prove relationship. Covington v. Frank, 77 Miss. 606, 27 So. 1000, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1900).

An equitable right to a cause of action on a debt accruing to two or more persons by descent from the creditor is a joint right. Stauffer v. British & American Mortg. Co., 77 Miss. 127, 25 So. 299, 1899 Miss. LEXIS 46 (Miss. 1899).

Preference is not given by the statute to relations of one side over those of the other. Doe ex dem. Hickey v. Gilbert, 2 Miss. 32, 1834 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 1834).

2. Application in particular circumstances.

Brother clearly had standing to challenge the transfer of the family farm from their mother to a revocable trust on the basis of undue influence because he was one of his mother's heirs at law; if the conveyance of the property from his mother to the trust was set aside, the brother presumptively stood to inherit a child's share of the property. Hodnett v. Hodnett, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 189 (Miss. Ct. App. Apr. 17, 2018).

Although grandfather of two deceased children qualified as a "statutory heir" under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-3, he did not qualify as a listed relative under Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13, and would not have standing as such to bring a wrongful-death action. Burley v. Douglas, 26 So. 3d 1013, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 538 (Miss. 2009).

Chancery court did not err in ruling that appellee was entitled to two shares of a decedent's estate; while Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-3 preserved appellee's right to inherit his mother's portion of the decedent's estate as his mother's sole descendant, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-17-13 provided that appellee would be treated as the decedent's adopted brother for inheritance purposes. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 990

So. 2d 807, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 557 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Question of whether party asserting interest in property, which had been inherited through Mississippi laws of descent and distribution, should be prohibited in equity from doing so was not appropriate matter for decision on motion for summary judgment, where heir at law did not intend to relinquish any inherited rights by signing final estate decree and signed for sole purpose of settling will contest between children and widow, where evidence existed that persons taking under estate decree also knew of and recognized interest of heir at law in property, and he took action to assert his interest in that property. Sumrall v. Doggett, 511 So. 2d 908, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2612 (Miss. 1987).

When a person dies intestate his or her property passes in the manner provided by this section [Code 1942, § 468], unless there has been a statutory adoption of the child claiming the right of inheritance, and in the manner provided by the statute of adoption then in force. Brassiell v. Brassiell, 228 Miss. 243, 87 So. 2d 699, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 509 (Miss. 1956).

Where a testator bequeathed a portion of his estate to his brothers and sisters, with a share of any of brother or sister predeceasing the testator to go to his surviving child living at the time of the testator's death, but provided also that where a brother or sister left no children the share should go to surviving brothers and sisters in equal shares, and where none of his brothers and sisters survived the testator, a bequest to his sister who left no children surviving her, lapsed. Meyers v. Teichman, 219 Miss. 860, 70 So. 2d 17, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 395 (Miss. 1954).

Where the grantor conveyed land to his daughter for and during her natural life and after her death the remainder in fee simple of children of her body, and the daughter had two children who predeceased her, but left children of her own surviving them, and the daughter died intestate, the grandchildren of the daughter took fee simple estate per stirpes and not per capita. A chart sets forth relationships and degrees of kindred according to the civil law. Owen v. State, 255 Ala. 354, 51 So. 2d 541, 1951 Ala. LEXIS 2 (Ala. 1951).

Title remained in grantor after executing deed of trust, and, on his death, property descended to his heirs. Wright v. Wright, 160 Miss. 235, 134 So. 197, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1931).

Where land was devised by will to a husband for life and he died before the testatrix, there being no life estate in the property at the time of her death, it vested at once on her death in her legal heirs. Harvey v. Johnson, 111 Miss. 566, 71 So. 824, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 339 (Miss. 1916).

Where an intestate decedent left surviving uncles and aunts and cousins the descendants of aunts, who had died in his lifetime, the uncles and aunts inherited his property to the exclusion of his cousins, under this section [Code 1942, § 468]. Grantham v. Statham, 83 Miss. 176, 35 So. 423, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 28 (Miss. 1903).

3. —Relatives of half blood.

Second cousins of the whole blood and a first cousin of the half blood were collateral kindred to the intestate, as against the contention that descendants of first cousins of the whole blood should take to the exclusion of a first cousin of the half blood. Toomey v. Turner, 184 Miss. 831, 186 So. 301, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 54 (Miss. 1939).

Surviving parent of an unmarried intestate dying without issue inherited his real estate to the exclusion of his half-blood kindred. Aycock v. Aycock, 119 Miss. 641, 81 So. 482, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1919).

Illegitimate son of sister of whole blood took intestate's personalty to exclusion of children of sister of half blood. Davidson v. Brownlee, 114 Miss. 398, 75 So. 140, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1917).

4. —Exempt property.

Bill attempting partition of exempt lands without widow's consent, not demurrable where it also asks accounting for timber cut by widow. Gavin v. Gavin, 116 Miss. 197, 76 So. 879, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 307 (Miss. 1917).

Homestead not subject to an execution for alimony. Jackson v. Coleman, 115 Miss. 535, 76 So. 545, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 230 (Miss. 1917).

Consent of widow without which exempt property cannot be partitioned, being without consideration, may be withdrawn in the absence of intervening estoppel, any time before the property has been divided. Tiser v. McCain, 113 Miss. 776, 74 So. 660, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1917).

Exempt property of decedent descending to the widow with others is used by her so long as its income is used for her support, whether or not she resides on it. Tiser v. McCain, 113 Miss. 776, 74 So. 660, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1917).

Bill for partition, alleging land not homestead nor exempt, held good against demurrer. Tiser v. McCain, 113 Miss. 776, 74 So. 660, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1917).

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Applicability to illegitimates.

1. In general.

The nephews and nieces of an intestate decedent, who were children of his whole-blood brothers, succeeded to his entire estate to the exclusion of his half-blood sister, under §§ 91-1-5 and 91-1-3, since his whole-blood brothers would have been his sole and only surviving legal heirs to the exclusion of his half-blood sister, and their children occupied the same position as their parents, by right of representation. Jones v. Stubbs, 434 So. 2d 1362, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2741 (Miss. 1983).

Under the rule of the civil law, a first cousin, although of the half-blood, is nearer in degree of kindred to an intestate than a second cousin of the whole-blood. Mississippi State Highway Dep't v. Meador, 184 Miss. 381, 185 So. 816, 186 So. 642, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 47 (Miss. 1939).

Term "brothers and sisters" embraces brothers and sisters of whole and half-blood. Darrow v. Moore, 163 Miss. 705, 142 So. 447, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 1932).

Surviving parent of unmarried intestate took his real estate to the exclusion of half-blood kindred. Aycock v. Aycock, 119 Miss. 641, 81 So. 482, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1919).

The descendants of the brothers and sisters of the whole-blood take in exclusion of the brothers and sisters of the half-blood. Scott v. Terry, 37 Miss. 65, 1859 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 1859).

By the common law, the kindred of the half-blood could not inherit real property. The object of the statute was to change that rule. Those of the whole-blood are preferred to those of the half-blood; but if there be none of the whole-blood, then those of the half-blood inherit. Fatheree v. Fatheree, 1 Miss. 311, 1828 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 1828); Hulme v. Montgomery, 31 Miss. 105, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1856).

2. Applicability to illegitimates.

Where proponents of a will never denied that contestants were the natural grandchildren of the testator, and where, although there was no record of a divorce between the testator's son, through whom the grandchildren sought to inherit, and his first wife, there was a ceremonial marriage between the son and his second wife, from which union the grandchildren were born, there was no impediment to their inheriting as lawful heirs-at-law of the testator's son. Webster v. Kennebrew, 443 So. 2d 850, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 3056 (Miss. 1983).

This section [Code 1942, § 469] and Code 1942, § 474, are in pari materia and should be construed together. Taylor v. Jackson, 194 Miss. 441, 12 So. 2d 144, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1943).

This statute is applicable to illegitimates as well as to legitimates when determining blood relationship for the purpose of inheritance, and permits the rights of illegitimates inter sese to be determined on the same basis as if they were legitimate and some of them were related to the intestate as of the whole-blood and some of the half-blood. Taylor v. Jackson, 194 Miss. 441, 12 So. 2d 144, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1943).

Where it appeared that the father of an intestate and the mothers of several groups of claimants to intestate's property were all illegitimate children of the same mother, but that the mother of one group had the same father as the intestate's father, the latter group was entitled to take the property to exclusion of the other groups of claimants, since, although children of an illegitimate, they were kindred of the whole-blood to the intestate, while the other groups, also being children of illegitimates, were kindred of the half-blood by reason of their mothers having a different father. Taylor v. Jackson, 194 Miss. 441, 12 So. 2d 144, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1943).

The legitimate children of an illegitimate father were entitled to inherit from the half-sister of their father, who died intestate, regardless of whether such half-sister was legitimate or illegitimate, where the intestate had no kindred of the whole-blood. Malone v. Pope, 189 Miss. 46, 196 So. 319, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 109 (Miss. 1940).

Illegitimate son of sister of whole-blood took intestate's personalty to exclusion of children of sister of half-blood. Davidson v. Brownlee, 114 Miss. 398, 75 So. 140, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1917).

If a husband die intestate and do not leave children or descendants of children, his widow shall be entitled to his entire estate, real and personal, in fee simple, after payment of his debts; but where the deceased husband shall leave a child or children by that or a former marriage, or descendants of such child or children, his widow shall have a child's part of his estate, in either case in fee simple. If a married woman die owning any real or personal estate not disposed of, it shall descend to her husband and her children or their descendants if she have any surviving her, either by a former husband or by the surviving husband, in equal parts, according to the rules of descent. If she have children and there also be descendants of other children who have died before the mother, the descendants shall inherit the share to which the parent would have been entitled if living, as coheirs with the surviving children. If she have no children or descendants of them, then the husband shall inherit all of her property.

1. In general; legality of marriage.
2. Rights of widow.
3. Rights of widower.
4. Rights of children.
5. Divorce or separation as affecting rights of surviving spouse.

1. In general; legality of marriage.

No right to property vests by virtue of the marriage relationship alone prior to entry of a judgment or decree granting equitable or other distribution pursuant to dissolution of the marriage; thus, the rights of alienation and the laws of descent and distribution are not affected by the recognition of marital assets. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

While this statute [Code 1972, § 91-1-7] controls the general descent of property as between husband and wife, the statute is not applicable to the descent of exempt property; Code 1972, § 91-1-19 specifically controls the descent of exempt property. Weaver v. Blackburn, 294 So. 2d 786, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1828 (Miss. 1974).

In the absence of proof of a subsequent bigamous marriage which could work an estoppel, one spouse is not barred from inheriting from the other on account of his or her abandonment, desertion, nonsupport, or adultery, and evidence of a wife's adulterous conduct did not preclude her from taking her deceased husband's estate as his sole heir at law. Rowell v. Rowell, 251 Miss. 472, 170 So. 2d 267, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 365 (Miss. 1964).

Where testator's intention was that a class described as his heirs should be ascertained at the termination of a life estate given his widow, she does not take in virtue of this section [Code 1942, § 470]. Dailey v. Houston, 246 Miss. 667, 151 So. 2d 919, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 492 (Miss. 1963).

One who enters into a ceremonial marriage with another without obtaining a divorce from a former spouse is estopped from asserting a right to inherit from such former spouse. Harrison v. G. & K. Inv. Co., 238 Miss. 760, 115 So. 2d 918, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 546 (Miss. 1959), cert. denied, 363 U.S. 844, 80 S. Ct. 1614, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1728, 1960 U.S. LEXIS 822 (U.S. 1960).

Third ceremonial wife of deceased and his only child, the child of first ceremonial wife, are entitled to share deceased's estate equally under laws of descent and distribution in this state, when presumption that all prior marriages of deceased had been dissolved prior to third ceremonial marriage is not overcome by competent evidence to contrary. Wallace v. Herring, 207 Miss. 658, 43 So. 2d 100, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 377 (Miss. 1949).

Marriage between white person and Negro valid in the State of Illinois where it was contracted and the parties continued to live, will be recognized in this state to the extent of permitting one spouse to inherit property from the other in this state. Miller v. Lucks, 203 Miss. 824, 36 So. 2d 140, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 325 (Miss. 1948).

Code of 1892, §§ 4496, 1545 (Code 1942, §§ 668, 470), must be construed together in determining rights of widow renouncing will. Callicott & Norfleet v. Callicott, 90 Miss. 221, 43 So. 616, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 83 (Miss. 1907).

Where testator had portioned off to and accepted releases from 3 of his 6 children, widow upon renouncing will was entitled to a one-fourth part of the estate. Callicott & Norfleet v. Callicott, 90 Miss. 221, 43 So. 616, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 83 (Miss. 1907).

2. Rights of widow.

The recording of a deed from the defendants' predecessor's widow to the complainants' predecessor was the equivalent of actual knowledge by the defendant heirs that the complainants' predecessor claimed adversely to them, where by its terms the deed purported to convey the entire interest, and the legal presumption that one cotenant holds property for the benefit of his cotenants as well as for himself was refuted and an ouster was affected. Hardy v. Lynch, 258 So. 2d 414, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1495 (Miss. 1972).

Where a cotenant's widow in possession claimed the property to the exclusion of the other cotenants for more than 10 years after the death of her husband, who had claimed the entirety of the property, and during such period the widow had received all benefits flowing from the land and had made all expenditures without accounting to anyone, there was the equivalent of an ouster of the other cotenants and she had clear full title by adverse possession, the fiduciary relationship usually presumed to exist between cotenants having no application here; since the circumstances surrounding the widow's acquisition of title completely negated any such relation to the extent that it was the equivalent of an ouster of the other cotenants. Bayless v. Alexander, 245 So. 2d 17, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1349 (Miss. 1971).

Where a husband and wife lived together for approximately 40 years, had no children, and where the husband predeceased the wife by approximately eight years, the wife became the owner of the property of her husband and had every right to devise it in any manner that she desired so long as the devise was not contrary to public policy, and the fact that her holographic will referred to a request of her husband, was no more than an explanation as to her reason for devising the property as she did, and was not an expression of the testamentary intent of the husband. Carlisle v. Carlisle, 233 So. 2d 803, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1680 (Miss. 1970).

Evidence of a wife's adulterous conduct did not preclude her from taking her deceased husband's estate as his sole heir at law. Rowell v. Rowell, 251 Miss. 472, 170 So. 2d 267, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 365 (Miss. 1964).

A Tennessee court decree adjudging complainant to be the widow of the deceased and awarding her $6,000 in full settlement of any and all rights in the decedent's estate and all rights to dower and homestead in the decedent's real property, and which vested out of complainant all interest in the described Tennessee real property, but made no mention of decedent's real property located in Mississippi, did not deprive complainant of her fee simple title to the Mississippi property, which she had acquired upon the death of a life tenant since the decedent left no children. Gillum v. Gillum, 230 Miss. 246, 92 So. 2d 665, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1957).

Where the husband, as devisee under his mother's will, had been vested at the time of his death with a fee simple title to a one-fourth interest in a plantation, his wife succeeded to that interest. Martin v. Eslick, 229 Miss. 234, 90 So. 2d 635, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 604 (Miss. 1956).

Wife as devisee of the usufruct of land under husband's will, which made no further disposition, held entitled to absolute estate as heir upon death of husband without children or descendants. Lemon v. Rogge, 11 So. 470 (Miss. 1892).

3. Rights of widower.

Decedent's husband was entitled to inherit an interest in land owned by his wife, even though he had entered into a consent decree in Michigan in which he relinquished his rights as heir of his wife, where the parties did not intend the Michigan decree to cover Mississippi lands; the testimony of husband that he shot his wife accidentally was properly admitted in evidence as an exception to the dead man's statute; insofar as the shooting was not wilful, the husband was not barred from inheriting by statute. Bianchi v. Scott, 363 So. 2d 289, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2191 (Miss. 1978).

Devise of a life estate in the whole of the property to husband does not militate against his inheriting a fraction of the remaining fee simple title which was not disposed of by the will. Williams v. Gooch, 208 Miss. 223, 44 So. 2d 57, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 1950).

Where testatrix devised a life estate in land to her husband then gave 50 per cent of the remainder in fee to two others leaving 50 per cent undisposed of, the undevised 50 per cent in fee descended to husband as sole heir at law of testatrix. Williams v. Gooch, 208 Miss. 223, 44 So. 2d 57, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 1950).

Husband is heir of wife, but not of wife's parents, and he inherits no interest in lands of wife's parents where wife predeceased parents, children of wife inheriting share of their mother. Dunaway v. McEachern, 37 So. 2d 767 (Miss. 1948).

Estate by curtesy abolished in 1880, and subsequent to that date land of wife passed to husband and children as tenants in common, and conveyance by husband vested grantee with an undivided interest. Hauer v. Davidson, 113 Miss. 696, 74 So. 621, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 147 (Miss. 1917).

4. Rights of children.

Son, one of ten adult heirs of deceased father, who paid to his mother $400 which was owing to father on purchase of homestead, there being no administrator and no agent appointed by heirs authorized to receive payment, is not entitled to be credited with $250 paid to mother as allowance to widow, as widow had only a one-tenth interest in this $400, in suit in which heirs claim balance due them on purchase price of land. Davis v. Davis, 205 Miss. 794, 39 So. 2d 486, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 465 (Miss. 1949).

Unadopted illegitimate child of deceased veteran who, while in army, declared in writing that child was his in order to obtain allotment for her, held not entitled to inherit share payable under veteran's war risk policy as "heir" within World War Veterans' Act construed in connection with Mississippi laws of descent and distribution, there being no conflict between federal and state laws. Moyse v. Laughlin, 177 Miss. 751, 171 So. 784, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 153 (Miss. 1937).

Word "child" means child with right to share in estate of intestate father; it does not include children portioned off or who have released their interest in the estate. Callicott & Norfleet v. Callicott, 90 Miss. 221, 43 So. 616, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 83 (Miss. 1907).

Children cannot have partition of exempt property while occupied or used by widow, nor an accounting by her for its use. Stevens v. Wilbourn, 88 Miss. 514, 41 So. 66, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1906).

5. Divorce or separation as affecting rights of surviving spouse.

A decree of divorce from an insane wife, obtained by a husband who had previously entered into a ceremonial marriage with another, will not be disregarded in determining whether the husband may inherit because obtained to avoid a prosecution for bigamy. Harrison v. G. & K. Inv. Co., 238 Miss. 760, 115 So. 2d 918, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 546 (Miss. 1959), cert. denied, 363 U.S. 844, 80 S. Ct. 1614, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1728, 1960 U.S. LEXIS 822 (U.S. 1960).

Where the husband had legally married the intestate and they had lived together as man and wife in a home owned by the wife from the time of the marriage until two months prior to the wife's death when the husband left the home because of fear of the wife's brother, who had shot and driven the husband from the home, the husband was not estopped from asserting title to the home. Parsons v. Butler, 230 Miss. 830, 94 So. 2d 320, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 428 (Miss. 1957).

Contract between husband and wife in contemplation of divorce, whereby wife released all claims for alimony or property adjustment, held not to have affected rights of wife as widow where divorce was not granted before husband's death. Kirby v. Kent, 172 Miss. 457, 160 So. 569, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 1935).

When no administrator is appointed, or necessary, personal property descends directly to heir the same as real property. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

2. Application in particular circumstances.

Property that a Chapter 13 debtor inherited from her mother, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-3, before the debtor declared bankruptcy was part of the debtor's bankruptcy estate. The property passed to the debtor and her siblings when their mother died, the debtor lived on the property, and she had a possessory interest in the property that was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of 11 U.S.C.S. § 541. Jackson v. Priority Trs. Servs. of Miss. L.L.C. (In re Jackson), 392 B.R. 666, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 2239 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2008).

§ 91-1-15. Descent among illegitimates; definitions.

(1) The following terms shall have the meaning s ascribed to them herein:

(a) "Remedy" means the right of an illegitimate to commence and maintain a judicial proceeding to enforce a claim to inherit property from the estate of the natural mother or father of such illegitimate, said claim having been heretofore prohibited by law, or prohibited by statutes requiring marriage between the natural parents, or restrained, or enjoined by the order or process of any court in this state.

(b) "Claim" means the right to assert a demand on behalf of an illegitimate to inherit property, either personal or real, from the estate of the natural mother or father of such illegitimate.

(c) "Illegitimate" means a person who at the time of his birth was born to natural parents not married to each other and said person was not legitimized by subsequent marriage of said parents or legitimized through a proper judicial proceeding.

(d) "Natural parents" means the biological mother or father of the illegitimate.

(2) An illegitimate shall inherit from and through the illegitimate's mother and her kindred, and the mother of an illegitimate and her kindred shall inherit from and through the illegitimate according to the statutes of descent and distribution. However, if an illegitimate shall die unmarried and without issue, and shall also predecease the natural father, the natural mother or her kindred shall not inherit any part of the natural father's estate from or through the illegitimate. In the event of the death of an illegitimate, unmarried and without issue, any part of the illegitimate's estate inherited from the natural father shall be inherited according to the statutes of descent and distribution.

(3) An illegitimate shall inherit from and through the illegitimate's natural father and his kindred, and the natural father of an illegitimate and his kindred shall inherit from and through the illegitimate according to the statutes of descent and distribution if:

(a) The natural parents participated in a marriage ceremony before the birth of the child, even though the marriage was subsequently declared null and void or dissolved by a court; or

(b) There has been an adjudication of paternity or legitimacy before the death of the intestate; or

(c) There has been an adjudication of paternity after the death of the intestate, based upon clear and convincing evidence, in an heirship proceeding under Sections 91-1-27 and 91-1-29. However, no such claim of inheritance shall be recognized unless the action seeking an adjudication of paternity is filed within one (1) year after the death of the intestate or within ninety (90) days after the first publication of notice to creditors to present their claims, whichever is less; and such time period shall run notwithstanding the minority of a child. This one-year limitation shall be self-executing and may not be tolled for any reason, including lack of notice. If an administrator is appointed for the estate of the intestate and notice to creditors is given, then the limitation period shall be reduced to ninety (90) days after the first publication of notice, if less than one (1) year from the date of the intestate's death; provided actual, written notice is given to all potential illegitimate heirs who could be located with reasonable diligence. No claim of inheritance based on an adjudication of paternity, after death of the intestate, by a court outside the State of Mississippi shall be recognized unless:

(i) Such court was in the state of residence of the intestate at the time of the intestate's death;

(ii) The action adjudicating paternity was filed within ninety (90) days after the death of the intestate;

(iii) All known heirs were made parties to the action; and

(iv) Paternity or legitimacy was established by clear and convincing evidence.

(d) The natural father of an illegitimate and his kindred shall not inherit:

(i) From or through the child unless the father has openly treated the child as his, and has not refused or neglected to support the child.

(ii) Any part of the natural mother's estate from or through the illegitimate if the illegitimate dies unmarried and without issue, and also predeceases the natural mother. In the event of the death of an illegitimate, unmarried and without issue, any part of the illegitimate's estate inherited from the mother shall be inherited according to the statutes of descent and distribution.

A remedy is hereby created in favor of all illegitimates having any claim existing prior to July 1, 1981, concerning the estate of an intestate whose death occurred prior to such date by or on behalf of an illegitimate or an alleged illegitimate child to inherit from or through its natural father and any claim by a natural father to inherit from or through an illegitimate child shall be brought within three (3) years from and after July 1, 1981, and such time period shall run notwithstanding the minority of a child.

The remedy created herein is separate, complete and distinct, but cumulative with the remedies afforded illegitimates as provided by the Mississippi Uniform Law on Paternity; provided, however, the failure of an illegitimate to seek or obtain relief under the Mississippi Uniform Law on Paternity shall not diminish or abate the remedy created herein.

(4) The children of illegitimates and their descendants shall inherit from and through their mother and father according to the statutes of descent and distribution.

(5) Nothing in this section shall preclude the establishment of paternity solely for the purpose of the illegitimate receiving social security benefits on behalf of the illegitimate's natural father after one (1) year following the natural father's death.

The Preamble to Chapter 339, Laws, 1983, provides as follows:

"WHEREAS, The Mississippi Legislature passed an act amending Section 91-1-15, Mississippi Code of 1972, and other sections of said code pertaining to the rights and claims of illegitimates, during the 1981 Regular Session, said amendment being effective from and after July 1, 1981; and

"WHEREAS, Section 91-1-15 was so amended to provide for intestate succession among an illegitimate and the natural father and his kindred with certain limitations, and to afford unto all illegitimates without classification a remedy whereby they could enforce their substantive rights and claims of intestate succession as provided for in said amendment; and

"WHEREAS, the Legislature recognized that the decisions and statutes of this state existing prior to said amendment placed an insurmountable barrier to inheritance by illegitimates when compared to the rights of a legitimate person, and that said decisions and statutes effectively barred an unnecessarily large number of illegitimates from inheritance through their natural father as a result of certain classifications into which the illegitimate may be categorized in violation of equal protection under the law; and

"WHEREAS, it now appears that there is confusion as to the legislative intent in amending Section 91-1-15, Mississippi Code of 1972, and said section is now interpreted by some segments of the judiciary to mean that the Legislature did not intend to create a new, separate and distinct remedy for the benefit of all illegitimates without any classification and said amendment as now codified in Section 91-1-15, Mississippi Code of 1972, is interpreted by some segments of the judiciary to be prospective only rather than retrospective and prospective in effect and is interpreted not to have created a new, separate and distinct remedy for the claims of all illegitimates without classification; and

"WHEREAS, the Legislature recognized at the time it was considering said amendment, that by creating said remedy the Legislature was opening the door to the possible litigation of stale or fraudulent claims and that a further effect of bestowing said remedy upon all illegitimates would possibly be to create a certain amount of confusion and uncertainty as to the status of titles to real property; however, the Legislature intended to bestow upon illegitimates a new and additional remedy whereby such illegitimates could maintain their rights of inheritance notwithstanding such interests of the state in preventing stale and fraudulent claims and avoiding uncertainty as to the titles of real property and, accordingly, the Legislature enacted appropriate periods of limitations within which illegitimates could bring their claims;.

"NOW, THEREFORE, in order to eliminate any ambiguity in Section 91-1-15, Mississippi Code of 1972, and to conform said section to express the true legislative intent,

"BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI:"

3. Inheritance by illegitimates.
4. Inheritance through illegitimates.

1. In general.

Individual overcame a presumption that a man married to his mother when he was born was his biological father as his mother testified the decedent was his father, and his aunts and other documentary evidence supported that conclusion. Smith v. Bell, 876 So. 2d 1087, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 611 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Father's claim against his unborn child's estate was barred by his failure to comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3)(c); the father had taken no action to be declared the father of the child within one year of her death and there was no evidence that the administratrix took any action as an administratrix de son tort prior to May 31, 2000. Tew v. Estate of Doe, 859 So. 2d 347, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 599 (Miss. 2003).

Deceased musician's half-sister became executrix de son tort of decedent's unprobated estate by entering agreement, in which she purported to be sister and only surviving heir of decedent, for assignment of decedent's works, photographs, and materials in exchange for share of royalties. Johnson v. Harris (In re Estate of Johnson), 705 So. 2d 819, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, Harris v. Johnson, 522 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1037, 140 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 888 (U.S. 1998).

Status as executrix de son tort, in favor of alleged illegitimate child of deceased musician, was assumed when irrevocable power of attorney was accepted from decedent's half-sister after half-sister had assigned all rights to musician's copyrights, as well as by later accepting appointment as personal representative of half-sister's estate. Johnson v. Harris (In re Estate of Johnson), 705 So. 2d 819, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, Harris v. Johnson, 522 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1037, 140 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 888 (U.S. 1998).

Since personal representative of decedent was expressly authorized by statute to commence wrongful death action for benefit of all heirs entitled to recover, personal representative had sufficient standing to determine heirship of testator's reputed illegitimate children for purposes of wrongful death statute. Jones v. Estate of Richardson (In re Estate of Richardson), 695 So. 2d 587, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1997).

The administrator of an estate is required to provide actual notice to known or reasonably ascertainable legitimate children who are potential heirs and whose claims would be barred by the running of the 90-day period from the notice of publication to creditors under the nonclaim statute, § 91-1-15(3)(c). To hold otherwise would encourage administrators and executors to benefit as heirs at law by setting in motion the shortest filing period which, unbeknownst to the potential heir, has significantly shortened the time for the potential heir to meet with the statutory requirements to inherit as an heir. Smith v. Estate of King, 579 So. 2d 1250, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 250 (Miss. 1991).

A claimant's timely filing, 3 days after the decedent's death, of a sworn Petition for Letters of Administration in which he alleged that he was the son and sole surviving heir of the deceased, sufficiently complied with the provisions of §§ 91-1-15, 91-1-27 and 91-1-29 and therefore his claim of heirship was not barred by the statute of limitations of § 91-1-15(3)(c). The fact that the claimant did not precisely state that he was the "illegitimate" or "born-out-of-wedlock" son, as opposed to simply declaring himself to be "the son," was a matter of semantics which made no difference; the indication that he was the sole surviving heir was sufficiently clear. Wash v. McIntosh, 566 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1990).

A party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 1990).

Section 91-1-15(3)(c), which requires that an action seeking adjudication of paternity be filed within 90 days after the first publication of notice to creditors, does not require that notice be given within the 90-day period. An out-of-wedlock child who brought a claim for heirship after her father's death complied with the filing requirement by petitioning to be appointed administratrix and seeking to be declared the sole and only heir-at-law, where other persons, who would inherit from the decedent, had actual knowledge of the claim of heirship as evidenced by their hiring of an attorney, and, before the estate was closed, were properly allowed by the court to file their claim. The summons by publication requirement of § 91-1-29 was met, and all parties were given their day in court. This procedure sufficiently complied with the notice requirements of § 91-1-27 and § 91-1-29, and the filing requirements of § 91-1-15(3)(c). Perkins v. Thompson, 551 So. 2d 204, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 360 (Miss. 1989).

The six-year statute of limitations is inapplicable to suits brought by illegitimates under § 91-1-15 whose cause of action accrued prior to July 1, 1981. Re In re Estate of Smiley, 530 So. 2d 18, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 333 (Miss. 1988).

A prior action on a petition to determine heirship, in which the petitioners sought to establish that they were the children of the deceased from a common law marriage, did not bar, under the doctrine of res judicata, the children's action to share in the decedent's estate pursuant to § 91-1-15 since that statute as amended in 1981 created a totally new cause of action in favor of illegitimate children. In re Estate of Stutts, 529 So. 2d 177, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1988).

When mother of decedent's alleged illegitimate child moved to intervene in case brought under Federal Employers Liability Act, it was incumbent on her to file petition in chancery court under § 91-1-27 and proceed under § 91-1-29, and intervention should have been denied because these statutes had not been followed; where parties agreed for circuit judge to hear issue of paternity on merits, case would not be reversed because wrong court decided issue; on merits, circuit judge was correct in dismissing proposed intervention because there was no clear and convincing evidence that decedent was child's natural father. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Mississippi law compels equal treatment of legitimates and illegitimates, and illegitimate child is therefore entitled to social security benefits. Jones v. Heckler, 754 F.2d 519, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 13727 (4th Cir. Md. 1985).

Under the terms of § 91-1-15, the Department of Welfare, which had the authority under §§ 43-19-31 and 43-19-35 to institute paternity proceedings to obtain repayment for support of a dependant child under the Aid to Dependent Children program (ADC) from the person legally obligated to pay that support, would be held to a standard of proof by preponderance of the evidence where the proceeding was brought prior to the death of the putative father, rather than the standard of clear and convincing evidence that applies to an adjudication after the death of the father to establish heirship. Ivy v. State Dep't of Public Welfare, 449 So. 2d 779, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1694 (Miss. 1984).

In a proceeding to determine heirship, the trial court erred in declaring § 91-1-15 unconstitutional of its own volition, where appellee, in his pleadings, did not claim that he was entitled to inherit from the decedent as his illegitimate son, and did not attack the constitutionality of the statute. Witt v. Mitchell, 437 So. 2d 63, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2859 (Miss. 1983).

The chancellor erred in passing upon the constitutionality of the statute where the issue of constitutionality had not been specially pleaded. Estate of Miller v. Miller, 409 So. 2d 715, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 1862 (Miss. 1982).

A Section of the Illinois Probate Act barring illegitimate children to inherit by intestate succession from their fathers violated the Equal Protection Clause, although not a "suspect classification", a statutory classification based on illegitimacy must, at minimum, bear some rational relationship to a legitimate state purpose, in view of which the provision in question could not be justified on the ground that it promotes legitimate family relationships since a state may not attempt to influence the actions of men and women by imposing sanctions on children born of their relationships, nor do the difficulties of proving paternity in some situations justify the total statutory disinheritance of illegitimate children whose fathers die intestate. The fact that an illegitimate child's father could have provided for her by making a will did not save the provision from invalidity. Finally, the provision could not stand validated on the theory that it represents the legislature's attempt to mirror the intent of the state's decedents. Trimble v. Gordon, 430 U.S. 762, 97 S. Ct. 1459, 52 L. Ed. 2d 31, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 77 (U.S. 1977).

A state's intestate succession statutes which provide that an illegitimate child, acknowledged but not legitimated by the father, cannot claim the right of a legitimate child and may take the father's property only to the exclusion of the state when the father has left no descendants, ascendants, collateral relatives, or surviving wife, while legitimate children have a right of forced heirship in the father's estate, which statutes have the effect of barring an acknowledged illegitimate child from sharing in the father's estate with surviving collateral relatives, are not violative of constitutional due process and equal protection provisions, such statutes having a rational basis in the state's interest in promoting family life and in directing the disposition of property left within the state. Trimble v. Gordon, 430 U.S. 762, 97 S. Ct. 1459, 52 L. Ed. 2d 31, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 77 (U.S. 1977).

This section [Code 1942, § 474], being in derogation of the common law, must be strictly construed. Akers v. Estate of Johnson, 236 So. 2d 437, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1493 (Miss. 1970).

This section [Code 1942, § 474] and Code 1942, § 469, are in pari materia and should be construed together. Taylor v. Jackson, 194 Miss. 441, 12 So. 2d 144, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1943).

2. Legitimation of children born out of wedlock.

Chancery court did not err in determining an illegitimate child was the natural daughter of a decedent who died intestate because there was evidence the putative father openly acknowledged and treated the child as his natural daughter, as exhibited by declarations the putative father made to others outside the family and by the fatherly conduct he bestowed on the child since the time she was a young girl; the weight to be given the DNA results, which were inconclusive as to paternity, was for the chancellor. In re Estate of Kendrick v. Gorden, 46 So. 3d 386, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 585 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Although an intestate decedent acknowledged an illegitimate daughter by spoken words and actions, this acknowledgment of possible paternity was insufficient under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3) where the paternity was never adjudicated by a court of law within the appropriate time limits. Prout v. Williams, 55 So. 3d 195, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 21 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

There is no statutory requirement that putative father acknowledge child in order for child to establish its right to inherit, although open acknowledgment has great bearing in determining factual issue of paternity. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Under former provisions of the statute, in an action by an illegitimate child demanding that she be declared the heir of her natural father, capable of inheriting from him under the Mississippi laws of descent and distribution, the order entered in favor of the illegitimate daughter would be reversed and the suit dismissed where the time for bringing the action was six years from the date of the daughter's majority (§ 15-1-49) but the action was not commenced until 18 years after that date. Knight v. Moore, 396 So. 2d 31, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1984 (Miss.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 817, 102 S. Ct. 95, 70 L. Ed. 2d 86, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3122 (U.S. 1981).

Any child legitimized by Code 1972, § 91-1-15 is a child of the marriage within the meaning of Code 1972, § 93-11-65. Harper v. Harper, 300 So. 2d 132, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1602 (Miss. 1974).

In a proceeding on a petition by an alleged son seeking to be declared the sole heir of a decedent, where the decedent and the petitioner's mother were married and the alleged father acknowledged that the petitioner, born out of wedlock, was his son, and the alleged father was subsequently adjudicated non compos mentis and had a guardian appointed for his estate not long after the marriage and acknowledgment, the petitioner became the alleged father's sole heir at time of his death. Nickles v. Nickles, 247 So. 2d 836, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1461 (Miss. 1971).

Where proof is clear, convincing, and unambiguous that the decedent acknowledged and believed over a long period of time that a child, conceived by a woman whom he subsequently married, was his daughter, she is entitled to be regarded as one of his heirs at law and to participate in his estate. Crosby v. Triplett, 195 So. 2d 69, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1427 (Miss. 1967).

Where evidence clearly shows a decedent's recognition and acknowledgment of plaintiff as his child over a long period of time, by statements, acts, and abiding belief that she was his daughter, it was incumbent upon the defendant to contradict or refute by credible, clear, and convincing evidence that no such acknowledgment ever took place, and in the absence of such a refutation the child is entitled to be acknowledged as one of decedent's heirs at law. Crosby v. Triplett, 195 So. 2d 69, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1427 (Miss. 1967).

Where a decree of chancery court annulled a marriage between an employee and mother of child who was born out of wedlock before such marriage, and the decree made the marriage void ab initio, on the ground that it had been entered into as result of coercion and duress and the parties had not lived together as man and wife, the child could not claim it was legitimate under the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 474]. Stanford v. Stanford, 219 Miss. 236, 68 So. 2d 275, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 385 (Miss. 1953).

Under a former version of this statute, for one born out of wedlock in another state to become a lawful heir as the child of a decedent in this state, it must be shown first that such person was the natural child of decedent, that both parents were later lawfully married and that the father acknowledged such person as his child in this state. Thomas v. Thomas, 200 Miss. 96, 25 So. 2d 710, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 271

Under former provisions of this statute, in a suit by appellee to establish sole heirship by reason of being the legitimate daughter of deceased, evidence was insufficient to show that appellee, born in another state prior to marriage of her mother with decedent, was the natural child of deceased or that he ever acknowledged her as his own daughter. Thomas v. Thomas, 200 Miss. 96, 25 So. 2d 710, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1946), and see In re Estate of Stutts, 529 So. 2d 177, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1988).

Where decedent and his alleged surviving widow, in good faith and with the bona fide intention of becoming man and wife, had entered into a ceremonial marriage in 1896 under a regular license, thinking that his first wife was dead, when, in fact, she did not die until 1923, such marriage became lawful and valid upon the death of the first wife, without any new or different understanding or intention between them, so that second wife was his lawful widow and their offspring became and were legitimate children, entitled to share in his estate with the offspring of the first marriage. Johnson v. Johnson, 196 Miss. 768, 17 So. 2d 805, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 255 (Miss. 1944).

3. Inheritance by illegitimates.

Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3)(c)'s 90-day limitations period for an illegitimate child to seek a determination of paternity was tolled while the child did not have notice of the estate proceeding, but it began to run when he filed a motion to remove the administrator and expired 90 days later, over a month before he sought a paternity determination. In re Estate of Elmore, 150 So. 3d 709, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 795 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), aff'd on other grounds, 150 So. 3d 700, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 547 (Miss. 2014).

Where an illegitimate daughter of an intestate decedent did not follow the plain language of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3), she had no claim to the decedent's estate even though the decedent executed a delayed birth certificate because the birth certificate did not meet the requirements for adjudication of paternity under § 91-1-15(3). Prout v. Williams, 55 So. 3d 195, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 21 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15 does require certain criteria, including an option to prove paternity of any illegitimate children within a restricted period after the putative father's death, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15 (2004); these requirements place a higher burden on illegitimate children to inherit from their fathers than legitimate children. However, the State has a legitimate interest in protecting the family and the estates of the deceased by requiring adjudication of paternity within a reasonable timeframe; the purpose of § 91-1-15 in the context of intestate succession is to (1) avoid litigation of stale or fraudulent claims, (2) cause fair and just disposal of property, and (3) facilitate repose of title to real property. In re Estate of McCullough v. Yates, 32 So. 3d 403, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 2010).

It is true that illegitimate children do have the right to inherit from their natural fathers; nonetheless, the illegitimate child must prove paternity by clear and convincing evidence, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3)(c) (1994). Further, the child must make his claim to the estate of his father within one year from the time of his father's death, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15 (1994). In re Estate of McCullough v. Yates, 32 So. 3d 403, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 2010).

Appellants failed properly to adjudicate themselves as the illegitimate children of their putative father in the time prescribed by Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15 and as such, the petition to be determined heirs of the decedent was barred by the time provision of § 91-1-15; additionally, § 91-1-15 did not violate the Equal Protection Clause or the Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution. Further, appellants were not deprived of either their procedural or substantive due process rights as Mississippi had a legitimate state interest in the legislation propounded in § 91-1-15, therefore, the statute did not violate any substantive due process rights; in addition, appellants had notice of the putative father's death and would have been afforded a hearing for adjudication of paternity, however, they failed to make such a petition within the statutory limits of § 91-1-15. In re Estate of McCullough v. Yates, 32 So. 3d 403, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 2010).

Language of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-28 satisfies the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3)(a), such that the minor can inherit from his natural father where the father has executed an acknowledgment of paternity; therefore, substantial evidence supported a finding that a decedent's illegitimate minor son was his sole heir at law because, although the son's mother did not institute paternity proceedings within the required time under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15, the father acknowledged paternity pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-9-28 before his death. In re Estate of Farmer, 964 So. 2d 498, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 2007).

Thomas, 883 So. 2d 1173, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1269 (Miss. 2004).

Illegitimate children's claim that the administratrix's failure to provide them with actual notice tolled the running of the one-year statute of limitations could not be supported and they were barred from recovery under the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Thomas, 881 So. 2d 257, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 996 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), rev'd, 883 So. 2d 1173, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1269 (Miss. 2004).

Claim for heirship was barred because the alleged illegitimate son filed the claim more than 18 years after the father's death. Delaying out of respect for the widow did not excuse failing to take timely action to establish paternity. Mann v. Mann, 853 So. 2d 1217, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 412 (Miss. 2003).

The plaintiff's claim that she was the illegitimate child and sole heir of the decedent was barred by the statute where she failed to assert her claim until 14 years after the death of the decedent, notwithstanding her assertion that she was too young at the time of his death and that she did not know any better than to wait to stake any claim she might have had until after the death of his alleged common law wife. In re Estates of Davidson, 794 So. 2d 261, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 75 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Evidence was sufficient to support a chancellor's determination that the appellee was the illegitimate son of a jazz musician who died in 1938. Harris v. Johnson (In re Estate of Johnson), 767 So. 2d 181, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 959, 121 S. Ct. 1489, 149 L. Ed. 2d 376, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 2752 (U.S. 2001).

The appellants failed to meet their burden of proof by clear and convincing evidence that they were the illegitimate twin children of the decedent where the chancellor considered both genetic evidence of paternity as well as non-genetic or social evidence. In re Estate of Grubbs v. Woods, 753 So. 2d 1043, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 2000).

The administratrix of an estate had sufficient actual knowledge of the potential right of heirship of a child to have required her, within a reasonable time after the child's birth, to comply with the formalities of §§ 91-1-27 and 91-1-29 by making the child a party to the administration proceeding; therefore, the administratrix was precluded from raising the 90 day time bar set out in subsection (3)(c) of this section. Balsara v. Adams (In re Estate of Brewer), 755 So. 2d 1108, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 255 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Evidence that both executrixes de son tort held themselves out as representatives of deceased musician's estate and took actions to chill interest of copyright purchasers in locating musician's rightful heirs waived three-year statutory bar to claim by musician's alleged illegitimate son; executrixes de son tort breached duty to act for rightful heirs of musician, rather than for themselves. Code 1972, § 91-1-15(d)(ii). Johnson v. Harris (In re Estate of Johnson), 705 So. 2d 819, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, Harris v. Johnson, 522 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1037, 140 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 888 (U.S. 1998).

To be declared heirs, illegitimate children of testator were required to establish paternity by clear and convincing evidence. Jones v. Estate of Richardson (In re Estate of Richardson), 695 So. 2d 587, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1997).

Chancery court was required to hold hearing regarding personal representative's petition to determine heirship of testator's reputed illegitimate children. Jones v. Estate of Richardson (In re Estate of Richardson), 695 So. 2d 587, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1997).

Chancellor abused his discretion in failing to set aside order determining heirship of testator's reputed illegitimate children, which was entered without formal hearing on matter. Jones v. Estate of Richardson (In re Estate of Richardson), 695 So. 2d 587, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1997).

The failure of the illegitimate children of a decedent to assert any claim in the decedent's estate until after the expiration of 90 days from the date of the first publication of notice to creditors did not bar their claim of heirship or wrongful action where the petition for letters of administration specifically named the illegitimate children as the natural children of the decedent and the administratrix failed to give them notice of the letters' issuance. Leflore v. Coleman, 521 So. 2d 863, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 170 (Miss. 1988).

A minor seeking to be declared an heir of the decedent as an illegitimate daughter and to share in the estate should have been allowed to amend her complaint to allege that the widow and former executrix knew of the existence of the minor as an illegitimate child of the decedent, but fraudulently failed to so inform the court, notwithstanding that the minor's petition was filed more than 90 days after the publication of notice to the creditors of the estate. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2287 (Miss. 1987).

Illegitimate child could inherit from their natural father, who died intestate in 1969. Holloway v. Jones, 492 So. 2d 573, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2527 (Miss. 1986).

Illegitimate grandson is entitled to interest in estate of paternal grandmother where grandson's answer to petition filed by daughter of grandmother seeking to be adjudicated sole heir at law alleges that grandson is illegitimate son of grandmother's deceased son and where parties have stipulated that illegitimate grandson is indeed such and that grandson and daughter are only parties interested in estate. Miller v. Watson, 467 So. 2d 672, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2022 (Miss. 1985).

Action by illegitimate to be adjudicated son of deceased and to be allowed to share in estate which is brought within 3 years of July 1, 1981, date of enactment of amendment of § 91-1-15 is timely, notwithstanding fact that suit is brought 14 years after death of deceased, so long as death occurred prior to July 1, 1981. Berry v. Berry, 463 So. 2d 1031, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1830 (Miss. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 828, 106 S. Ct. 90, 88 L. Ed. 2d 73, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 3348 (U.S. 1985).

The Supreme Court would not answer a certified question concerning the rights of illegitimate children of deceased fathers to certain social security benefits where it was asked to assume that § 91-1-15 was unconstitutional, and the constitutionality of that statute had not been squarely presented to, and litigated by, a court of competent jurisdiction. Jones ex rel. Jones v. Harris, 460 So. 2d 120, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2002 (Miss. 1984).

An illegitimate daughter's petition to determine heirship was not a paternity action, and therefore was not barred by § 15-1-49 when she failed to file suit within six years of reaching majority, since under § 91-1-15, the determination of heirship could not be made prior to the decedent's death, and, until then, her cause of action did not accrue. Estate of Kidd v. Kidd, 435 So. 2d 632, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2600 (Miss. 1983).

The phrase, "children of illegitimates", as used in this section [Code 1942, § 474] applies only to legitimate children of illegitimates. Akers v. Estate of Johnson, 236 So. 2d 437, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1493 (Miss. 1970).

Illegitimate children inherit mother's share in the estate of her intestate brother, who left no wife or children surviving him. McDaniel v. McDaniel, 123 Miss. 401, 85 So. 113, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 1920).

Illegitimate son of sister of whole-blood took intestate's personalty to exclusion of children of sister of half-blood. Davidson v. Brownlee, 114 Miss. 398, 75 So. 140, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1917).

Word "children" in constitution and bylaws of benefit association held not to exclude illegitimate child of female member. Shelton v. Minnis, 107 Miss. 133, 65 So. 114, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 60 (Miss. 1914).

Under former provisions, this chapter made an innovation on the common law in favor of illegitimates in regard to inheritance, but it nowhere made rights in action for torts, transmissible by descent, and at common law they were not so transmissible. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Johnson, 77 Miss. 727, 28 So. 753, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 59 (Miss. 1900).

4. Inheritance through illegitimates.

Deceased child's biological father was not entitled to inherit from his daughter's estate and to receive proceeds from a wrongful death suit because to permit the father to inherit from the decedent's estate would result in a financial windfall to the father; the evidence supports a conclusion that the father refused or neglected to support the child under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3) where the father failed to provide any financial support to the child's mother before he went to prison the month before the child was born and instead permitted the mother to support him and where, although the father received money from friends and relatives while he was in prison, he failed to direct any of those funds to the care and support of his child. Estate of McCoy v. McCoy, 988 So. 2d 929, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 407 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Parent could inherit from an illegitimate child under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15 if he had openly treated the child as his and had not refused or neglected to support the child; however, the father made no effort to be a parent to the child, suffered no loss as the result of the demise of the child, and any part of the settlement received by the father and his kindred could only have been termed a windfall and unjust enrichment. Williams v. Farmer, 876 So. 2d 300, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 760 (Miss. 2004).

Court erred in finding that an administratrix had unclean hands in the administratrix's action to disinherit the deceased's biological father; before filing the petition, the administratrix had not stated in any prior pleading or action that the father had openly treated and supported the deceased as a child, nor had the administratrix waived the provisions of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3)(d), which would have entitled the father to inherit from the deceased. In re Estate of Richardson v. Cornes, 905 So. 2d 620, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 448 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), rev'd, in part, aff'd in part, 903 So. 2d 51, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 114 (Miss. 2005).

In the absence of a clear, unequivocal, and unambiguous waiver of the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-15(3) by the maternal heirs of an illegitimate child, the natural father, who has not fulfilled obligations to acknowledge and support the child during the child's lifetime, is prevented from enjoying the benefits of inheritance. In re Estate of Richardson v. Cornes, 905 So. 2d 620, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 448 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), rev'd, in part, aff'd in part, 903 So. 2d 51, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 114 (Miss. 2005).

The father of an illegitimate child failed to establish his right to inherit from the child where he never met the child, failed to support the child, and failed to acknowledge the child as his own during the child's lifetime, notwithstanding that he did not receive the results of a blood test that established his paternity until just four days before the child's death. In re Estate of Patterson v. Patterson, 798 So. 2d 347, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 11 (Miss. 2001).

In an action by the kindred of the natural father of an illegitimate daughter to inherit from her estate, the claimants had the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the father openly recognized the illegitimate daughter as his child and that he did not refuse or neglect to support her when she was a child. Woodall v. Johnson, 552 So. 2d 1065 (Miss. 1989).

Claim by natural father of illegitimate child, that he, the father, was entitled to the proceeds of a proposed settlement for the wrongful death of that child, was properly denied where the father had not supported the child and was therefore not the lawful heir. Alexander v. Alexander, 465 So. 2d 340, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 1967 (Miss. 1985).

Daughter of an illegitimate may sue to determine her heirship descending from the father of her illegitimate mother. In re Estate of Kimble, 447 So. 2d 1278, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1661 (Miss. 1984).

An action brought by the daughter of decedent's illegitimate daughter to establish her heirship was timely filed, where it was brought within the three year period prescribed by § 91-1-15(3)(d)(ii) paragraph 2, which regulates the limitation period for claims accruing to any legitimate child as the result of the death of an intestate prior to July 1, 1981, and where the decedent died prior to that date. In re Estate of Kimble, 447 So. 2d 1278, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1661 (Miss. 1984).

Where it appeared that the father of an intestate and the mothers of several groups of claimants to intestate's property were all illegitimate children of the same mother, but that the mother of one group had the same father as the intestate's father, the latter group was entitled to take the property to exclusion of the other groups of claimants, since, although children of an illegitimate, they were kindred of the whole-blood to the intestate, while the other groups, also being children of illegitimates, were kindred of the half-blood by reason of their mothers having a different father. Taylor v. Jackson, 194 Miss. 441, 12 So. 2d 144, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1943).

The legitimate children of an illegitimate father were entitled to inherit from the half-sister of their father, who died intestate, regardless of whether such half-sister was legitimate or illegitimate, where the intestate had no kindred of the whole-blood. Malone v. Pope, 189 Miss. 46, 196 So. 319, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 109 (Miss. 1940).

§ 91-1-17. Advancement to be brought into hotchpot.

When any of the children of a person dying intestate, or their descendants, shall have received from such intestate, in his lifetime, any real or personal estate by way of advancement, and shall choose to come into the partition and distribution of the estate with the other parceners and distributees, such advancement, both of real and personal estate, shall be brought into hotchpot with the whole estate, real and personal, descended. Such party bringing such advancement into hotchpot shall thereupon be entitled to his or her proper portion of the whole estate descended, both real and personal; but such advancement shall be valued according to its value at the time said distributee received it.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Inasmuch as this section [Code 1942 § 475] is applicable only in the case of a person dying intestate, where decedent died testate, conveyances of property to two children did not constitute an advancement. Mills v. Mills, 279 So. 2d 917, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1495 (Miss. 1973).

Book accounts kept by father against children during minority, without anything to show intention to charge them as advancements, will not be held advancements. Greene v. Greene, 145 Miss. 87, 110 So. 218, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1926).

To constitute "advancement," donor must irrevocably part with title, which must be vested in donee, in lifetime of donor; where no estate which can be alienated is given donee, no advancement is made. Greene v. Greene, 145 Miss. 87, 110 So. 218, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1926).

Land given by father to son as advancement should be valued for partition as of date of gift. Greene v. Greene, 145 Miss. 87, 110 So. 218, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1926).

Mere gift of money to a son is not presumed an advancement, but money advanced to son to purchase real estate is presumed an advancement. Kemp v. Turman, 104 Miss. 501, 61 So. 548, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1913).

The widow is not within the statute. Whitley v. Stephenson, 38 Miss. 113, 1859 Miss. LEXIS 100 (Miss. 1859).

The value of the property at the time of the advancement must govern in the distribution, and interest is not to be charged thereon. Jackson v. Jackson, 28 Miss. 674, 1855 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. 1855).

The party bringing an advancement into hotchpot does not relinquish his interest in the particular property. The title to it was derived from the gift and cannot be affected by the distribution. Jackson v. Jackson, 28 Miss. 674, 1855 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. 1855).

A child who does not claim anything by inheritance cannot be compelled to bring the property received from the father in his lifetime into hotchpot. Phillips v. McLaughlin, 26 Miss. 592, 1853 Miss. LEXIS 142 (Miss. 1853).

The advancements must have been received from the intestate himself. Callender v. McCreary, 5 Miss. 356, 1840 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 1840).

§ 91-1-19. Descent of exempt property.

The property, real and personal, exempted by law from sale under execution or attachment shall, on the death of the husband or wife owning it, descend to the survivor of them and the children and grandchildren of the decedent, as tenants in common, grandchildren inheriting their deceased parent's share; and if there be no children or grandchildren of the decedent, to the surviving wife or husband; and if there be no such survivor, to the children and grandchildren of the deceased owner. Where the surviving husband or wife shall own a place of residence equal in value to the homestead of the decedent, and the deceased husband or wife have no surviving children or grandchildren of the last marriage but have children or grandchildren of a former marriage, the homestead of such decedent shall not descend to the surviving husband or wife, but shall descend to the surviving children and grandchildren of the decedent by such former marriage, as other property.

1. Construction and application in general.
2. Exempt property not part of estate to be administered.
3. Date for determining value of property.

1. Construction and application in general.

This statute [Code 1972, § 91-1-19] specifically controls the descent of exempt property, and those entitled thereto under the statute inherit the exempt property in fee simple free of decedent's debts; only when the decedent leaves no surviving spouse or children or grandchildren does the exempt property become liable for the decedent's debts under Code 1972, § 91-1-21. Weaver v. Blackburn, 294 So. 2d 786, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1828 (Miss. 1974).

Undivided interest in homestead descended to decedent's wife and children. Jones v. Jones, 249 Miss. 322, 161 So. 2d 640, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 393 (Miss. 1964).

A widow, children and grandchildren are tenants in common subject to the right by the widow to undisturbed possession of the exempt homestead. Bonds v. Bonds, 226 Miss. 348, 84 So. 2d 397, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 406 (Miss. 1956).

The fact that a widow was given a right under the statute to have the undisturbed possession of the exempt homestead following the death of the husband does not have the effect of destroying the tenancy in common, which arose in the property upon the death of the husband, merely because of the fact that the right of possession of the other heirs is postponed pending the widowhood of the wife. Bonds v. Bonds, 226 Miss. 348, 84 So. 2d 397, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 406 (Miss. 1956).

Son, one of ten adult heirs of deceased father, who paid to his mother $400 which was owing to father on purchase of homestead, there being no administrator and no agent appointed by heirs authorized to receive payment, is not entitled to be credited with $250 paid to mother as allowance to widow, as widow had only a one-tenth interest in this $400, in suit in which heirs claimed balance due them on purchase price of land. Davis v. Davis, 205 Miss. 794, 39 So. 2d 486, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 465 (Miss. 1949).

This section [Code 1942, § 476] lays down general rule that upon death of a husband or wife, his or her exempt property shall descend to the survivor and to the children of the owner as tenants in common, but the section concludes with an exception thereto. Reed v. Reed, 197 Miss. 261, 19 So. 2d 745, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 294 (Miss. 1944).

A bill to establish widow's right to possession and occupancy of the homestead of her deceased husband need not negative the exception contained in this section [Code 1942, § 476]. Reed v. Reed, 197 Miss. 261, 19 So. 2d 745, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 294 (Miss. 1944).

The status of cotenancy is recognized in statutory provisions that a decedent's widow shall share in the homestead property as a tenant in common with the children, and that there shall be no partition during her widowhood, or while she continues to occupy or use it, but the usual rights thereunder are made subordinate to the widow's right of use and occupancy during her life. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

In line with the purpose of and under the statutory provisions that a decedent's widow shall share in the homestead property as a tenant in common with the children, and that there shall be no partition during her widowhood, or while she continues to occupy or use it, the immunity from partition, being personal to the widow, is not extended to her grandniece. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

The right of the widow has the attributes and incidents of a life estate, and the other heirs are vested with a future estate which takes effect in possession at the termination of the preceding estate or interest. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

Where deceased share tenant left nothing except exempt property, administration was unnecessary; hence widow and children having unsuccessfully demanded tenant's share from landlord could recover in replevin. Williams v. Sykes, 170 Miss. 88, 154 So. 267, 154 So. 727, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 100 (Miss. 1934).

Complainant in partition suit, claiming interest as tenant in common through ancestor, was not required to prove that ancestor died intestate. Smith v. Stanley, 159 Miss. 720, 132 So. 452, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 68 (Miss. 1931).

Exempt property, real or personal, left by a deceased husband descends to his widow and children as tenants in common, the grandchildren taking per stirpes the share of deceased children, but the widow has the right to occupy and use the same free from liability for rent or hire and from partition during her widowhood. Martin v. Martin, 84 Miss. 553, 36 So. 523, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1904).

If the widow renounces the will disposing of exempt property, she is only entitled to share in the estate generally and is not entitled to the specific exempt property so disposed of. Nash v. Young, 31 Miss. 134, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 48 (Miss. 1856).

In case the exempt property be disposed of by will, the statute does not apply. Turner v. Turner, 30 Miss. 428, 1855 Miss. LEXIS 114 (Miss. 1855); Norris v. Callahan, 59 Miss. 140, 1881 Miss. LEXIS 87 (Miss. 1881); Osburn v. Sims, 62 Miss. 429, 1884 Miss. LEXIS 98 (Miss. 1884).

2. Exempt property not part of estate to be administered.

Executrix did not waive the homestead exemption by entering into a contractual relationship with the Mississippi Division of Medicaid on behalf of a decedent because the record did not support the idea that the decedent had any knowledge of the benefits a homestead exemption provided, nor that he intentionally waived his right to the benefit of that exemption since the contract did not provide any information pertaining to, or even mention, the significance of any exemption; there was no evidence of the decedent's intent to waive any of his rights because by entering into the contract, the decedent merely acknowledged Medicaid as a creditor of his estate, which estate had no property against which Medicaid could recover. State v. Stinson (In re Estate of Darby), 68 So. 3d 702, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 96 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not err in granting an executrix summary judgment and in determining that the claim of the Mississippi Division of Medicaid was not valid against a decedent's property because the decedent predeceased his children and a grandchild to whom he devised all of his property, and pursuant to the unambiguous language of Miss. Code Ann. §§ 85-3-21, 91-1-19, and 91-1-21, coupled with case law, the homestead, with its exemption, passed from the decedent to his children and grandchildren free of his debts; thus, Medicaid was not entitled to pursue a claim against the exempted property as it was not a part of the estate. State v. Stinson (In re Estate of Darby), 68 So. 3d 702, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 96 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2011).

This is so whether the estate be solvent or insolvent. Mason v. O'Brien, 42 Miss. 420, 1869 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 1868); De Baum v. Hulett Undertaking Co., 169 Miss. 488, 153 So. 513, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1934).

Under Code 1892, § 1551 [Code 1942, § 476], $1,000 of life insurance, being exempt, inures to the heirs and forms no part of the estate to be administered. Equitable Life Assurance Soc. v. Hartfield, 87 Miss. 548, 40 So. 21, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 175 (Miss. 1905).

The exempt personal property is no part of the estate to be administered, but descends directly under the statute. Whitley v. Stephenson, 38 Miss. 113, 1859 Miss. LEXIS 100 (Miss. 1859); Holliday v. Holland, 41 Miss. 528, 1867 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 1867); Wally v. Wally, 41 Miss. 657, 1868 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1868); De Baum v. Hulett Undertaking Co., 169 Miss. 488, 153 So. 513, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1934).

3. Date for determining value of property.

If at the death of the owner of a homestead it does not exceed the full limit of value allowed, a subsequent appreciation in value, no matter how great, does not give creditors of the decedent any right to subject to their claims the excess over the full amount allowed. Moody v. Moody, 86 Miss. 323, 38 So. 322, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 34 (Miss. 1905).

The value of the property claimed as a homestead must be as of the time of decedent's death. Parisot v. Tucker, 65 Miss. 439, 4 So. 113, 1888 Miss. LEXIS 14 (Miss. 1888).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Executrix did not waive the homestead exemption by entering into a contractual relationship with the Mississippi Division of Medicaid on behalf of a decedent because the record did not support the idea that the decedent had any knowledge of the benefits a homestead exemption provided, nor that he intentionally waived his right to the benefit of that exemption since the contract did not provide any information pertaining to, or even mention, the significance of any exemption; there was no evidence of the decedent's intent to waive any of his rights because by entering into the contract, the decedent merely acknowledged Medicaid as a creditor of his estate, which estate had no property against which Medicaid could recover. State v. Stinson (In re Estate of Darby), 68 So. 3d 702, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 96 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court did not err in granting an executrix summary judgment and in determining that the claim of the Mississippi Division of Medicaid was not valid against a decedent's property because the decedent predeceased his children and a grandchild to whom he devised all of his property, and pursuant to the unambiguous language of Miss. Code Ann. §§ 85-3-21, 91-1-19, and 91-1-21, coupled with case law, the homestead, with its exemption, passed from the decedent to his children and grandchildren free of his debts; thus, Medicaid was not entitled to pursue a claim against the exempted property as it was not a part of the estate. State v. Stinson (In re Estate of Darby), 68 So. 3d 702, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 96 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2011).

Where a decedent died leaving no surviving spouse, child or grandchild, the homestead exemption expired with her death and was not valid as against unpaid claims against her estate, even though the decedent left a will devising her previously exempt homestead property to her ex-husband; the specific language of § 91-1-21 does not continue a decedent's homestead exemption for anyone other than a surviving spouse, children or grandchildren, and consequently there was no exemptionist who could defeat the claim against the estate's homestead property. Memorial Hosp. v. Franzke (In re Estate of Franzke), 634 So. 2d 117, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 1994).

The general rule imposing liability for the debts of the decedent upon his exempt property in the absence of wife or children, is laid down in this section [Code 1942, § 477], but there are exceptions of limitations placed thereon in cases where the proceeds of life insurance policy, in one case, are made payable to beneficiary, and in the other, made to inure to the heirs of legatees of the decedent. Coates v. Worthy, 72 Miss. 575, 17 So. 606, 1895 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 1895).

1. In general.

Judgment creditor of husband and wife who together owned property as tenants by the entirety could levy execution and sell that portion of homestead property which exceeded value of statutory homestead exemption which had vested in wife following husband's death; this section was not applicable to debt for which surviving spouse was jointly and severally liable. In re Osborne, 120 B.R. 64, 1990 Bankr. LEXIS 2184 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 1990).

A surviving spouse's statutory right to occupy a homestead prevails where, by will, the owner devises it to another without share to the spouse; the surviving spouse need not renounce the will of the deceased owner in order to benefit from the statutory homestead right. Rush v. Rush, 360 So. 2d 1240, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2341 (Miss. 1978).

This section would not apply to defeat the former wife's partition action of a home to which she had been given exclusive right of possession under the decree of divorce, where neither the former wife nor former husband were deceased. Blackmon v. Blackmon, 350 So. 2d 44, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2207 (Miss. 1977).

Exempt homestead which descended to decedent's wife and children was not subject to partition during the widowhood of the surviving wife, provided she remained a widow and qualified under the exemption statute. Jones v. Jones, 249 Miss. 322, 161 So. 2d 640, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 393 (Miss. 1964).

A husband in possession of realty which he and his wife held as cotenants, may, so long as he remains a widower, resist partition sought by one to whom the wife devised her interest. Biggs v. Roberts, 237 Miss. 406, 115 So. 2d 151, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1959).

Where a widow of a landowner, who had died intestate leaving also a son and daughter, neither waived nor attempted to dispose of her homestead rights by a deed conveying her one third interest to her son reserving to herself a life estate in all the lands, a grantee of one half interest of the tract of land from the son, to whom the daughter had also conveyed her one third interest therein, was not entitled to have the exempt property partitioned over the widow's objection. Gresham v. Clark, 231 Miss. 206, 95 So. 2d 234, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 506 (Miss. 1957).

The property of an intestate was not subject to partition or sale for partition during the widowhood, as long as it was occupied by her, unless she consented. La Blanc v. Busby, 223 Miss. 415, 78 So. 2d 456, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 397 (Miss. 1955).

Under provision widow has the right to retain the homestead as it was during her husband's lifetime, and this is true even though he also left children surviving. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

Children cannot have partition of exempt property occupied or used by widow. Stevens v. Wilbourn, 88 Miss. 514, 41 So. 66, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1906).

Exempt property, real or personal, left by a deceased husband descends to his widow and children as tenants in common, the grandchildren taking per stirpes the share of the deceased children, but the widow has the right to occupy and use the same freed from liability for rent or hire and from partition during her widowhood. Martin v. Martin, 84 Miss. 553, 36 So. 523, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1904).

2. To what property applicable.

Where property is subject to partition during the lives of cotenants-husbands, the right to partition is not enjoined by the deaths of the cotenants-husbands and the survival of their wives; however, the widows should retain their houses as improvements on the land, if possible, or, in the alternative, if it is not feasible to partition the land to allow the widows to receive their respective houses as improvements, then an accounting should be had as to such improvements. Carter v. Brewton, 396 So. 2d 617, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2055 (Miss. 1981).

Where the husband of the defendant in a partition action had never established the property in question as his homestead, his widow had no homestead interest in the land which would prevent its partition. Mathis v. Quick, 271 So. 2d 924, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1527 (Miss. 1973).

This section [Code 1942, § 478] applies only to the property of the decedent owned at the time of his death, and does not prevent partition of the property of a deceased cotenant. Solomon v. Solomon, 187 Miss. 22, 192 So. 10, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 1939).

3. How title acquired immaterial.

A widow or widower is entitled to full use and occupancy of homestead property during widowhood whether he or she took that interest by deed, devise, or descent. Stockett v. Stockett, 337 So. 2d 1237, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1603 (Miss. 1976).

It is not necessary to the operation of this section [Code 1942, § 478] that title should have been acquired by inheritance. Biggs v. Roberts, 237 Miss. 406, 115 So. 2d 151, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1959).

Widow, redeeming her interest from tax sale, had right against the other tenants to occupy property as homestead while widow, regardless of source from which cotenant's title was derived. Lackey v. Harrington, 162 Miss. 512, 139 So. 313, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 123 (Miss. 1932).

4. —Renunciation of will.

Although proper contracts not to renounce a will are enforceable even though Code 1972 § 91-5-25 provides that a husband or wife may renounce the will of another, the wife's agreement not to renounce her will constituted an unconscionable contract so as to permit the wife's renunciation of her husband's will, notwithstanding her prior agreement not to renounce, where the wife was taken by her husband directly from her job to the office of the husband's attorney and persuaded to assign the contract without prior knowledge of its existence or the opportunity to read the entire contract, and where the provision in the will, giving the wife a life estate in the parties' homestead as long as she continued to live on the property, was minimal consideration when viewed against her rights under the laws of descent and distribution including her statutory right to a life estate in the homestead under Code 1972 § 91-1-23 irrespective of her living on the property. In re Will of Johnson, 351 So. 2d 1339, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 1950 (Miss. 1977).

Upon a widow's renunciation of a testator's will devising to her a life estate in his home with remainder to a daughter, the widow became entitled to a one-third interest to the property in fee, and the daughter to the other two-thirds interest therein, subject to the right of the widow to occupy and use it during her widowhood. Milton v. Milton, 193 Miss. 563, 10 So. 2d 175, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 131 (Miss. 1942).

Widow with one child, upon renouncing, took undivided interest in the homestead, which is not subject to partition during her widowhood as long as occupied by her, without her consent. Williams v. Williams, 111 Miss. 129, 71 So. 300, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 253 (Miss. 1916).

5. Personal nature of right.

In line with the purpose of these provisions, the immunity from partition, being personal to the widow, is not extended to her grandniece. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

The right here conferred upon the widow is purely a personal one which does not pass to a grantee of her interest in the property. Middleton v. Claughton, 77 Miss. 131, 24 So. 963, 1899 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1899).

6. Effect on others' interests.

The fact that a widow was given a right under the statute to have the undisturbed possession of the exempt homestead following the death of the husband does not have the effect of destroying the tenancy in common, which arose in the property upon the death of the husband, merely because of the fact that the right of possession of the other heirs is postponed pending the widowhood of the wife. Bonds v. Bonds, 226 Miss. 348, 84 So. 2d 397, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 406 (Miss. 1956).

A widow, children and grandchildren are tenants in common subject to the right by the widow to undisturbed possession of the exempt homestead. Bonds v. Bonds, 226 Miss. 348, 84 So. 2d 397, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 406 (Miss. 1956).

The status of cotenancy is recognized by the statute, but the usual rights thereunder are made subordinate to the widow's right of use and occupancy during her life. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

Under these provisions a widow's right has the attributes and incidents of a life estate, and the other heirs are vested with a future estate which takes effect in possession at the termination of the preceding estate or interest. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

A widow takes a child's part in the fee with the right of undisturbed possession or use of the homestead during her lifetime, and her use thereof may not be divided with the children. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

7. "Partition."

The partition prohibited by this section [Code 1942, § 478] means an actual division of title with the right of possession thereunder, not a mere record identification of the several interests therein without an assertion by the coparceners of their respective rights. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

8. Obligation to give accounting.

The rights of the widow are absolute, and she cannot be called upon to account for the use and occupancy, nor forced to purchase the rights of her cotenants. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

Children cannot have accounting, by widow, for her use of exempt property occupied or used by her. Stevens v. Wilbourn, 88 Miss. 514, 41 So. 66, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1906).

9. Remarriage of widow/widower.

Upon remarriage of a widow, her rights under § 91-1-23, which prevents partition of homestead property, are terminated and the entire property becomes subject to partition by any and all of the other joint owners. Cheeks v. Herrington, 523 So. 2d 1033, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1988).

Upon remarriage of a widow, her rights under the statute are terminated and the entire property becomes subject to partition by any and all of the other joint owners. Breland v. Bryant, 402 So. 2d 838, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2145 (Miss. 1981).

This provision ceases to operate when the widow remarries. Jefcoat v. Powell, 235 Miss. 291, 108 So. 2d 868, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 429 (Miss. 1959).

10. Use without occupancy.

Where a decedent resided on one tract of land and used this tract with another as a farm unit which consisted of less than 160 acres, the widow was entitled to claim both parcels of land as a homestead although they were not contiguous. Horton v. Horton, 210 Miss. 116, 48 So. 2d 850, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1950).

Neither the cases dealing only with urban property and those dealing with an urban tract and a rural tract as constituting together one homestead are applicable to a case where rural lands are involved. Horton v. Horton, 210 Miss. 116, 48 So. 2d 850, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1950).

Widow, being entitled to use and occupancy of homestead, was entitled to rents thereof, and would so continue during her life or widowhood unless she elected or consented otherwise. Miers v. Miers, 160 Miss. 746, 133 So. 133, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1931).

Court could not order sale of homestead of widow more than 60 years of age who has moved from premises, but was being supported in part from products. Wright v. Coleman, 137 Miss. 699, 102 So. 774, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 21 (Miss. 1925).

Exempt property of decedent descending to the widow with others is used by her so long as its income is used for her support, whether or not she resides on it. Tiser v. McCain, 113 Miss. 776, 74 So. 660, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1917).

11. Value of property.

The question of value has no place in the consideration of the rights of a surviving widow to use and occupancy of the homestead, her rights being absolute so long as she remains a widow; the limitation on the value of the homestead that is exempt from creditors' demands, set by § 85-3-21, is not applicable. Stockett v. Stockett, 337 So. 2d 1237, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1603 (Miss. 1976).

The value of the homestead is not material in passing on the rights of the surviving widow, since it was never the intention of the legislature that "160 acres of land should be reduced in quantity, save in one instance, and that is where the rights of the creditors were involved." Horton v. Horton, 210 Miss. 116, 48 So. 2d 850, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1950).

Surviving widow entitled to occupy homestead of 160 acres irrespective of value, and heirs cannot have partition thereof. Dickerson v. Leslie, 94 Miss. 627, 47 So. 659, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 319 (Miss. 1909).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 478] a surviving widow is entitled to occupy the homestead as it existed in the lifetime of the husband without reference to its value, the limit of value placed by law on exempt homesteads being solely for the benefit and protection of creditors and not affecting the rights of a surviving widow to the use and occupation of the homestead against the other heirs of the deceased exemptionist. Moody v. Moody, 86 Miss. 323, 38 So. 322, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 34 (Miss. 1905).

12. Tax delinquency.

Where a widow of intestate occupied and used intestate's tax delinquent property, she could not permit the title to mature in the state and thereafter purchase the land for her own benefit at the expense of the children and any purchase she made of the tax title was made for the joint benefit of her and the intestate's children. La Blanc v. Busby, 223 Miss. 415, 78 So. 2d 456, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 397 (Miss. 1955).

Widow, redeeming her interest from tax sale, had right against the other tenants to occupy property as homestead while widow, regardless of source from which cotenant's title was derived. Lackey v. Harrington, 162 Miss. 512, 139 So. 313, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 123 (Miss. 1932).

13. Insurance.

Proceeds of policy procured by widow on homestead property occupied by herself and children as cotenants, each having an undivided one-fifth interest therein, did not inure to the benefit of the children as cotenants merely because of alleged fiduciary relationship existing between them as such, notwithstanding insurance was not limited to widow's separate interest. Collette v. Long, 179 Miss. 650, 176 So. 528, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 60 (Miss. 1937).

14. Practice and procedure.

A bill to establish widow's right to possession and occupancy of the homestead of her deceased husband need not negative the exception contained in Code 1942, § 476. Reed v. Reed, 197 Miss. 261, 19 So. 2d 745, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 294 (Miss. 1944).

Where the defendant, a decedent's adult son, and his family were in possession of the lower floor and part of the second floor of a two-story homestead property, the widow was properly granted a peremptory writ upon the issue of liability for rent for the portion of the homestead occupied by the son, and she was entitled to have him ejected. Bohn v. Bohn, 193 Miss. 122, 5 So. 2d 429, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1942).

Decree in partition ordering and confirming sale of homestead, to which widow objected, should be vacated and bill dismissed. Talley v. Talley, 108 Miss. 84, 66 So. 328, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 172 (Miss. 1914).

ANALYSIS

2. Construction.

1. In general.

Although the chancellor cited the wrong statutory section in finding that a father had no interest in his former wife's estate, the finding was substantively correct where there was no dispute that he had murdered his former wife, and as a result, he could have no interest in the estate under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-25 (Rev. 2013). Young v. O'Beirne, 147 So. 3d 877, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 311 (Miss. Ct. App. 2014).

In an action in which a beneficiary filed suit against an insurance company alleging claims of tortious breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty and duty of good faith and fair dealing, negligence, gross negligence, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, the insurance company was granted summary judgment where: (1) the insured executed a voluntary statement to police that her husband had stabbed her with a knife and a month after the knife wound, the insured died in her bed; (2) no reasonable juror could conclude that the insurance company acted with malice, gross negligence, or reckless disregard in wanting to review the autopsy report; and (3) the delay in receiving the autopsy report was due in part to the beneficiary's failure to inform them of his address change. Washington v. Am. Heritage Life Ins. Co., 500 F. Supp. 2d 610, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 54120 (N.D. Miss. 2007).

Neither the Mississippi slayer's statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-25, or the Mississippi Uniform Simultaneous Death Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-3-1 through 91-13-15 acted to entitle the estate of a wife who was killed by her husband in a murder-suicide to a child's share of the husband's estate; husband's son by a previous marriage was the husband's sole heir-at-law. Miller v. Miller (In re Estate of Miller), 840 So. 2d 703, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2003).

Evidence of a guilty plea to a charge of manslaughter is not sufficient, standing alone, to enable a fact finder to conclude that one is prohibited from inheriting under §§ 91-1-25 and 91-5-33. Hood v. VanDevender, 661 So. 2d 198, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 456 (Miss. 1995).

An action alleging that funds distributed to a decedent's son under a prior decree which adjudicated the intestate distribution of the decedent's estate, were "wrongfully inherited" pursuant to § 91-1-25 because the decedent's son willfully caused the decedent's death, was barred by § 91-1-31. Johnson v. Howell, 592 So. 2d 998, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 986 (Miss. 1991).

Mississippi Code § 91-1-25 represents a legislatively-created exception. Roberts v. Grisham, 493 So. 2d 940, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2588 (Miss. 1986).

Decedent's husband was entitled to inherit an interest in land owned by his wife, even though he had entered into a consent decree in Michigan in which he relinquished his rights as heir of his wife, where the parties did not intend the Michigan decree to cover Mississippi lands; the testimony of husband that he shot his wife accidentally was properly admitted in evidence as an exception to the dead man's statute; insofar as the shooting was not wilful, the husband was not barred from inheriting by statute. Bianchi v. Scott, 363 So. 2d 289, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2191 (Miss. 1978).

Equitable estoppel does not and cannot authorize the exercise of a personal right which terminates with the death of a spouse, and the fact that a husband shot and killed his wife, an act which would have precluded his inheriting her estate, is no justification for permitting the deceased wife's personal representatives to renounce the husband's will, an act which by law can only be invoked personally by a surviving spouse. Jenkins v. Borodofsky, 211 So. 2d 874, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1288 (Miss. 1968).

The statute requiring commencement of action to recover land ten years after right to do so accrues, did not apply to a suit to cancel as cloud on title claim asserted by husband who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his wife. Henry v. Toney, 217 Miss. 716, 64 So. 2d 904, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 484 (Miss. 1953).

In a suit to cancel as cloud on title claim asserted by husband by virtue of inheritance from his deceased spouse, where it was finally adjudicated that the husband had pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the death of his wife, the suit was not one for penalty or forfeiture on a penal statute required to be brought within one year from the date of offense. Henry v. Toney, 217 Miss. 716, 64 So. 2d 904, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 484 (Miss. 1953).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 479] it is not requisite that the wilful killing shall amount to murder but it is enough that it was wilful and without justification in law. Henry v. Toney, 211 Miss. 93, 50 So. 2d 921, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 335 (Miss. 1951).

In a suit to cancel husband's claim to property of wife on the ground that he had feloniously slain his wife in Ohio and thereby forfeited his right to the property under this section [Code 1942, § 479], the fact that the husband pleaded guilty to manslaughter in Ohio does not admit a wilful killing but the husband should be allowed to introduce evidence to explain the circumstances of killing. Henry v. Toney, 211 Miss. 93, 50 So. 2d 921, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 335 (Miss. 1951).

Insurance beneficiary's acts, after an assault by her husband, in running to a neighbor's home, procuring a gun and returning to shoot her husband through the window, constituted a deliberate homicide without justification in law and precluded her, as the widow beneficiary, from claiming the proceeds of a life insurance policy. Gholson v. Smith, 210 Miss. 28, 48 So. 2d 603, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 316 (Miss. 1950).

2. Construction.

Slayer's statutes such as Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-25 are strictly construed and narrow in purpose. Miller v. Miller (In re Estate of Miller), 840 So. 2d 703, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2003).

The Mississippi slayer's statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-25, is a statute of exclusion, not inclusion and, when applicable, it acts to exclude a slayer from participation in the victim's estate but it does not act to include the victim in the slayer's estate due to the slayer's crime. Miller v. Miller (In re Estate of Miller), 840 So. 2d 703, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2003).

§ 91-1-27. How title to property acquired by descent may be made.

In all cases in which persons have died, or may hereafter die, wholly or partially intestate, having property, real or personal, any heir at law of such deceased person, or any one interested in any of the property as to which he shall have died intestate, may petition the chancery court of the county in which said deceased had his mansion house or principal place or residence, or in which any part of his real estate may be situated, in case he was a nonresident, setting forth the fact that said person died wholly or partially intestate, possessed of real or personal property in the State of Mississippi, the names of the heirs at law or next of kin, and praying that the person named in said petition be recognized and decreed to be the heir at law of said deceased.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

A claimant's timely filing, 3 days after the decedent's death, of a sworn Petition for Letters of Administration in which he alleged that he was the son and sole surviving heir of the deceased, sufficiently complied with the provisions of §§ 91-1-15, 91-1-27 and 91-1-29 and therefore his claim of heirship was not barred by the statute of limitations of § 91-1-15(3)(c). The fact that the claimant did not precisely state that he was the "illegitimate" or "born-out-of-wedlock" son, as opposed to simply declaring himself to be "the son," was a matter of semantics which made no difference; the indication that he was the sole surviving heir was sufficiently clear. Wash v. McIntosh, 566 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1990).

A party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 1990).

Section 91-1-15(3)(c), which requires that an action seeking adjudication of paternity be filed within 90 days after the first publication of notice to creditors, does not require that notice be given within the 90-day period. An out-of-wedlock child who brought a claim for heirship after her father's death complied with the filing requirement by petitioning to be appointed administratrix and seeking to be declared the sole and only heir-at-law, where other persons, who would inherit from the decedent, had actual knowledge of the claim of heirship as evidenced by their hiring of an attorney, and, before the estate was closed, were properly allowed by the court to file their claim. The summons by publication requirement of § 91-1-29 was met, and all parties were given their day in court. This procedure sufficiently complied with the notice requirements of § 91-1-27 and § 91-1-29, and the filing requirements of § 91-1-15(3)(c). Perkins v. Thompson, 551 So. 2d 204, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 360 (Miss. 1989).

When mother of decedent's alleged illegitimate child moved to intervene in case brought under Federal Employers Liability Act, it was incumbent on her to file petition in chancery court under § 91-1-27 and proceed under § 91-1-29, and intervention should have been denied because these statutes had not been followed; where parties agreed for circuit judge to hear issue of paternity on merits, case would not be reversed because wrong court decided issue; on merits, circuit judge was correct in dismissing proposed intervention because there was no clear and convincing evidence that decedent was child's natural father. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Provided paternity is established as required by §§ 91-1-27 and 91-1-29, "children" under Federal Employers Liability Act means illegitimate as well as legitimate children. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Illegitimate child has right to inherit in father's wrongful death claim, but such claim must be asserted and established by clear and convincing evidence under §§ 91-1-27 and 91-1-29. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Administrator who, in his petition for administration, represented that decedent's half-sister was the sole heir, even though he had actual knowledge that decedent had a living natural daughter, made a serious misrepresentation to the court, and, if the misrepresentation was determined to be a fraud on the court, the administrator would be removed. Campbell v. Gregory, 493 So. 2d 950 (Miss. 1986).

Although appointment of plaintiff as administrator of brother's estate may have violated Mississippi Code Annotated § 91-1-27, wrongful death action would not be dismissed where such appointment could be attacked in Chancery Court of De Soto County, Mississippi, which court appointed plaintiff as administrator. McGowan v. Riley, 628 F. Supp. 1087, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15478 (N.D. Miss. 1985).

This section [Code 1942, § 1270] and Code 1942, § 1271 must be read as in pari materia. Shepherd v. Townsend, 249 Miss. 383, 163 So. 2d 746, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1964).

The statute providing for the determination of the heirs of a decedent by a chancery court applies where the decedent has left a will bequeathing in part or entirely his estate to his nearest of kin according to the laws of descent and distribution. Shepherd v. Townsend, 249 Miss. 383, 163 So. 2d 746, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1964).

Where there was no proceeding under this statute for the determination of heirs, one not a party to the administration of a decedent's estate may question its distribution even after expiration of the two years within which the statute permits the opening of an account. Shepherd v. Townsend, 249 Miss. 383, 163 So. 2d 746, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1964).

Adopted children of decedent are not necessary parties to suit to adjudicate heirship, unless decree of adoption made adopted children lawful heirs of adopting parent. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

In a suit under this section [Code 1942, § 1270] to have themselves declared heirs, brother and sister of deceased, allegedly insane at time of marriage, could not after his death collaterally attack marriage which was merely voidable. § 91-1-29. Heirs to be cited to appear.

All the heirs at law and next of kin of said deceased who are not made parties plaintiff to the action shall be cited to appear and answer the same. And in addition thereto a summons by publication shall be made addressed to "The heirs at law of ________, Deceased," and shall be published as other publications to absent or unknown defendants, and the cause shall be proceeded with as other causes in chancery, and upon satisfactory evidence as to death of said person and as to the fact that the parties to said suit are his sole heirs at law, the court shall enter a judgment that the persons so described be recognized as the heirs at law of such a decedent, and as such be placed in possession of his estate. And said judgment shall be evidence in all the courts of law and equity in this state that the persons therein named are the sole heirs at law of the person therein described as their ancestor.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Decedent's administratrix's failure to notify decedent's illegitimate children of the administration of their father's estate resulted in tolling of the 90-day statute. In re Estate of Thomas, 883 So. 2d 1173, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1269 (Miss. 2004).

When the individual asserting heirship claims to be an illegitimate child, the necessary parties include those blood relations of the decedent that would be the decedent's heirs at law should the illegitimate's claim of paternity fail; these persons are necessary parties even if they would be completely excluded from inheritance if the paternity claim is proven. Balsara v. Adams (In re Estate of Brewer), 755 So. 2d 1108, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 255 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A claimant's timely filing, 3 days after the decedent's death, of a sworn Petition for Letters of Administration in which he alleged that he was the son and sole surviving heir of the deceased, sufficiently complied with the provisions of §§ 91-1-15, 91-1-27 and 91-1-29 and therefore his claim of heirship was not barred by the statute of limitations of § 91-1-15(3)(c). The fact that the claimant did not precisely state that he was the "illegitimate" or "born-out-of-wedlock" son, as opposed to simply declaring himself to be "the son," was a matter of semantics which made no difference; the indication that he was the sole surviving heir was sufficiently clear. Wash v. McIntosh, 566 So. 2d 1208 (Miss. 1990).

A party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 1990).

Section 91-1-15(3)(c), which requires that an action seeking adjudication of paternity be filed within 90 days after the first publication of notice to creditors, does not require that notice be given within the 90-day period. An out-of-wedlock child who brought a claim for heirship after her father's death complied with the filing requirement by petitioning to be appointed administratrix and seeking to be declared the sole and only heir-at-law, where other persons, who would inherit from the decedent, had actual knowledge of the claim of heirship as evidenced by their hiring of an attorney, and, before the estate was closed, were properly allowed by the court to file their claim, the summons by publication requirement of § 91-1-29 was met, and all parties were given their day in court. This procedure sufficiently complied with the notice requirements of § 91-1-27 and § 91-1-29, and the filing requirements of § 91-1-15(3)(c). Perkins v. Thompson, 551 So. 2d 204, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 360 (Miss. 1989).

Illegitimate child has right to inherit in father's wrongful death claim, but such claim must be asserted and established by clear and convincing evidence under §§ 91-1-27 and 91-1-29. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

Provided paternity is established as required by §§ 91-1-27 and 91-1-29, "children" under Federal Employers Liability Act means illegitimate as well as legitimate children. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

When mother of decedent's alleged illegitimate child moved to intervene in case brought under Federal Employers Liability Act, it was incumbent on her to file petition in chancery court under § 91-1-27 and proceed under § 91-1-29, and intervention should have been denied because these statutes had not been followed; where parties agreed for circuit judge to hear issue of paternity on merits, case would not be reversed because wrong court decided issue; on merits, circuit judge was correct in dismissing proposed intervention because there was no clear and convincing evidence that decedent was child's natural father. Ivy v. Illinois C. G. R. Co., 510 So. 2d 520, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2619 (Miss. 1987).

This section [Code 1942, § 1271] must be read as in pari materia with Code 1942, § 1270. Shepherd v. Townsend, 249 Miss. 383, 163 So. 2d 746, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1964).

§ 91-1-31. Judgment as to descent of property cannot be assailed collaterally except for fraud.

A judgment so rendered as provided in Section 91-1-29 shall not be assailed collaterally, except for fraud, and shall be binding and conclusive upon all persons cited to appear from the date of its rendition, and upon all persons whomsoever from and after the expiration of two (2) years from the date on which the same was rendered, saving to minors and persons of unsound mind, the right to re-open said cause within one (1) year after attaining majority or being restored to sanity. A judgment so rendered shall thereupon be filed, recorded and indexed by the chancery clerk of the county where rendered in the general deed records of said county, just as if it were a deed of conveyance from said decedent to his heirs at law. And a certified copy of such judgment may likewise be filed, recorded and indexed in any other county where the decedent owned land at the date of his death.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
An action alleging that funds distributed to a decedent's son under a prior decree which adjudicated the intestate distribution of the decedent's estate, were "wrongfully inherited" pursuant to § 91-1-25 because the decedent's son willfully caused the decedent's death, was barred by § 91-1-31. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

No presumption as to survivorship as between persons killed in a common disaster arises under the Mississippi Uniform Simultaneous Death Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-3-1 through 91-3-15, nor is there a presumption of simultaneous death; the burden of proof is on the party whose claim depends on survivorship to establish the fact. Miller v. Miller (In re Estate of Miller), 840 So. 2d 703, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 2003).

Neither the Mississippi slayer's statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-1-5, or the Mississippi Uniform Simultaneous Death Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-3-1 through 91-3-15 acted to entitle the estate of a wife who was killed by her husband in a murder-suicide to a child's share of the husband's estate; husband's son by a previous marriage was the husband's sole heir-at -law. 1. In general.

Denial by a chancery court of the payment of attorney fees in a will contest was proper because testators did not have the authority in Mississippi to require unsuccessful will contestants to pay attorney fees for their adversaries, as there was no statutory law permitting it. Parker v. Benoist, 160 So. 3d 198, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2015).

Competent person may dispose of property by will in any manner not prohibited by law. Parker v. Broadus, 128 Miss. 699, 91 So. 394, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1922).

Right to devolve property by will and rights thereunder are statutory. Woodville v. Pizzati, 119 Miss. 442, 81 So. 127, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1919).

Statute upon wills and testaments authorizes every person sui juris to devise all his estate, real or personal, of any description whatever, and such a will unless broken by heirs or renounced by the widow governs the entire disposition of his estate. McGaughey v. Eades, 78 Miss. 853, 29 So. 516, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 1901).

2. What interests are devisable.

A testator cannot, by will, dispose of property which he or she placed, during his or her lifetime, in a validly created joint tenancy account with rights of survivorship. A subsequent will does not destroy the joint tenancy and does not terminate that tenancy and divest the corpus of it into the estate of the testator. In re Will & Estate of Strange, 548 So. 2d 1323, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 431 (Miss. 1989).

A person of sound and disposing mind whose property has been placed under conservatorship may execute a valid will and may do so without the knowledge of the conservator or the permission of the court. Lee v. Lee, 337 So. 2d 713, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1588 (Miss. 1976).

This statute authorizes devises of all interests in real estate, whether present or future. Hemphill v. Mississippi State Highway Com., 245 Miss. 33, 145 So. 2d 455, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 529 (Miss. 1962).

A testator has the right to devise or bequeath all of the property which he may have, not only at the time the will is executed, but any that he may thereafter acquire and own at the time of his death. Milton v. Milton, 193 Miss. 563, 10 So. 2d 175, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 131 (Miss. 1942).

A will does not operate as substitution of legatees as beneficiaries in testator's life policy payable to his executors, administrators or assigns. Magee v. Bank of Hattiesburg & Trust Co., 134 Miss. 126, 98 So. 541, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 243 (Miss. 1923).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 657] one may devise land acquired after the will. McRae v. Lowery, 80 Miss. 47, 31 So. 538, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 225 (Miss. 1902).

3. Establishment of lost or destroyed will.

The evidence was sufficient to rebut the presumption that a testator revoked a will which was known to have been made and was kept in a locked drawer of the testator's desk, but which was not found upon his death, where the testator had a close and affectionate relationship with his daughter who was the sole beneficiary under the will, he talked to people about his will and told them that he was leaving his entire estate to his daughter, there was nothing in the record suggesting that he had changed his mind, the desk in which the will was kept was subject to entry by others, and there was evidence that someone had entered the house and the desk area after the testator died and emptied the contents of filing cabinet drawers. Matter of Berry v. Smith, 584 So. 2d 400 (Miss. 1991).

The trial court properly set aside a jury verdict finding that the decedent's lost or destroyed will had been properly executed where there was neither direct nor secondary evidence that the alleged lost or destroyed will was ever signed, witnessed, and executed according to law. Gaston v. Gaston, 358 So. 2d 376, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2527 (Miss. 1978).

Although there was no direct proof that the testatrix had destroyed the will, proof showing that the will was in her possession when last seen and that it could not be found after her death, together with other evidence, sustained the chancellor's finding that complainant's proof was insufficient to establish the existence of the alleged lost or destroyed will at the time of testatrix's death, or to overcome the presumption that the will had been destroyed by the testatrix during her lifetime with the intention of revoking it. James v. Barber, 244 Miss. 234, 142 So. 2d 21, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 443 (Miss. 1962).

Failure to locate an instrument apparently alleged to have revoked a lost will of which an admittedly true copy was produced, coupled with evidence that the devisee named had for years devoted himself to fulfillment of an oral agreement with the testator, sustained establishment of the lost will. Denson v. Denson, 203 Miss. 146, 33 So. 2d 311, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 242 (Miss. 1948).

To establish destroyed will, interested parties must establish date thereof, attesting witnesses, and whether wholly or partly written and subscribed in testator's genuine handwriting. Didlake v. Ellis, 158 Miss. 816, 131 So. 267, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1930).

Personal property not disposed of by will is distributed under statute of descent and distribution. Eaton v. Broaderick, 101 Miss. 26, 57 So. 298, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1910).

4. Reformation or revocation.

Any instrument expressly revoking a will must meet the requirements of Mississippi Code § 91-5-1. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

The mental capacity required to revoke a will is the same as that required to make one. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Courts cannot add to or take from a will or make a new will for the parties. Williams v. Gooch, 208 Miss. 223, 44 So. 2d 57, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 1950).

Courts will not by construction add to the terms of the will. Jones v. Carey, 122 Miss. 244, 84 So. 186, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 432 (Miss. 1920).

Courts can no more supply defects in the execution of a will or codicil than they can add to or subtract from its words. Johnson v. Delome Land & Planting Co., 77 Miss. 15, 26 So. 360, 1899 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1899).

No court can decree the reformation and correction of a will. Schlottman v. Hoffman, 73 Miss. 188, 18 So. 893, 1895 Miss. LEXIS 105 (Miss. 1895).

5. Construction of wills.

Where the residuary clause of a will devised the remainder of a trust to named persons, "my heirs at law, including", following which all the testator's heirs were named with the exception of his two older children by his first wife, and the will was carefully drawn, with gifts made to the testator's heirs at law in other parts of the will without naming them individually, it was evident that the testator intended under the residuary clause to make a gift to certain named individuals, rather than to a class. Eubanks v. Lucius, 257 So. 2d 215, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1451 (Miss. 1972).

A will is to be construed so as to avoid intestacy if that can be reasonably done considering the language employed in the instrument and the circumstances confronting the testator at the time of execution. Martin v. Eslick, 229 Miss. 234, 90 So. 2d 635, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 604 (Miss. 1956).

Where, at the time a testator made his will, he owned property designated in the will as the "home place," which he afterwards disposed of, and acquired other property which answered the same description, and owned it at his death, the will must be applied thereto, unless something therein indicates that the testator does not so intend. Milton v. Milton, 193 Miss. 563, 10 So. 2d 175, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 131 (Miss. 1942).

The term "reversion" is not used in a restricted sense, but includes the right of reversion which would mature into an estate upon the happening of an uncertain future contingency the same as upon the happening of an event which at the time of the execution of a conveyance is certain to occur in the future. Ricks v. Merchants Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 191 Miss. 323, 2 So. 2d 344, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1941).

A possibility of reverter owned by a testatrix at the time of her death passed to her residuary devisee, and did not descend according to the laws of descent and distribution. Ricks v. Merchants Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 191 Miss. 323, 2 So. 2d 344, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1941).

A will does not operate as substitution of legatees as beneficiaries in testator's life policy payable to his executors, administrators or assigns. Magee v. Bank of Hattiesburg & Trust Co., 134 Miss. 126, 98 So. 541, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 243 (Miss. 1923).

This section [Code 1942, § 657] is not qualified by Code 1942, § 700, defining the word "written." Sheehan v. Kearney, 82 Miss. 688, 21 So. 41, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1896).

6. —Lapsed or void devises; property not devised by will.

Under this section [Code 1942, § 657] and Code 1942, § 831, a residuary devise or bequest carries everything the testator has attempted but failed to dispose of, unless a contrary intention appears from the will. Oliphant v. Skelton, 230 Miss. 518, 93 So. 2d 181, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1957).

Where a testatrix devised to her two daughters a life interest in certain real estate with the remainder over to their descendants, bequeathed one dollar each to her other children, and devised to the same two daughters the rest of her estate, both real and personal, the two daughters, having no children, took a fee to the realty. Oliphant v. Skelton, 230 Miss. 518, 93 So. 2d 181, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1957).

Remainder goes to heirs, where devise thereof is void. Wheat v. Lacals, 139 Miss. 300, 104 So. 73, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1925).

Devise lapsed because of death of devisee descends as undisposed of property. Marx v. Hale, 131 Miss. 290, 95 So. 441, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 289 (Miss. 1923).

7. Effect of mistake.

A mistaken belief of an extrinsic fact, even though it causes a testator to make a will differently than he otherwise would had he known the truth, is insufficient to avoid a will. In re Estate of Vick, 557 So. 2d 760, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 434 (Miss. 1989).

8. Testamentary capacity.

Trial court did not err in granting beneficiaries summary judgment in a will contest because they established a prima facie case that the will was valid and that the testator possessed testamentary capacity, and the son failed to rebut the prima facie case with any summary-judgment evidence that there was a genuine issue for trial; the will was admitted to probate, and the beneficiaries attached affidavits of individuals that testified as to the testator's mental capacity. Froemel v. Estate of Froemel, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 230 (Miss. Ct. App. May 8, 2018).

The mental capacity required to revoke a will is the same as that required to make one. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Capacity relates to time of execution; temporary insanity not presumed to continue until execution of will. Scally v. Wardlaw, 123 Miss. 857, 86 So. 625, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1920).

Sound and disposing mind of testator is essential. Gathings v. Howard, 122 Miss. 355, 84 So. 240, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1920).

One of testamentary capacity may execute will from any motive. Moore v. Parks, 122 Miss. 301, 84 So. 230, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 437 (Miss. 1920).

Where on an issue devisavit vel non the question is whether the testator was sane or insane the contestants are not required to prove his sanity beyond all reasonable doubt. King v. Rowan, 82 Miss. 1, 34 So. 325, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1903).

9. —Determination; generally.

The granting of an instruction in a will contest which advised the jury that it could not return a verdict for the proponent if it found that the testatrix was in any way influenced, or guided, or directed, about, or in, or concerning the signing, publication, or the securing of attestation of the will by any person whomsoever, was reversible error, since it is undue influence that vitiates a will; a testator has the right to be directed and assisted in the preparation of his will, and may have any aid or direction which he desires. Estate of Briscoe v. Briscoe, 255 So. 2d 313, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1284 (Miss. 1971).

In determining whether the chancellor should have granted a peremptory instruction on the question of testamentary capacity the court must assume as true all the facts which contestant's evidence fairly tends to establish, together with all reasonable inferences to be deduced therefrom. Lowrey v. Wilkinson, 222 Miss. 201, 75 So. 2d 643, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 640 (Miss. 1954).

In a proceeding devisavit vel non involving a will which was challenged on the ground of lack of testamentary capacity and of undue influence, the submission to jury of both issues was in error where the evidence as to undue influence was insufficient. Thames v. Thames, 233 Miss. 24, 100 So. 2d 868, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1958).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, it should be assumed that general verdict of jury against validity of will was on ground of want of testamentary capacity which was amply supported by evidence, where proof was insufficient to sustain verdict on ground of undue influence. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, judgment on general verdict against validity of will returned under instruction as to burden of proponents to establish both testamentary capacity and lack of undue influence by preponderance of evidence will not be reversed because of refusal to grant peremptory instruction on question of undue influence where there is sufficient evidence on question of want of testamentary capacity to warrant jury's finding. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, general verdict of jury on issue of whether or not proponents have shown by preponderance of evidence both testamentary capacity and lack of undue influence at time of execution of will should be sustained if proponents fail to prove either or both of these necessary requirements. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

It is the general rule that the nature and extent of testator's estate may be shown on issue of testamentary capacity and undue influence. Norman v. Norman, 196 Miss. 597, 18 So. 2d 130, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1944).

Unnatural or unreasonable provisions not sufficient to show incapacity, but may be considered with other evidence. Scally v. Wardlaw, 123 Miss. 857, 86 So. 625, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1920).

Occasional fits of anger not connected with the will do not show incapacity. Moore v. Parks, 122 Miss. 301, 84 So. 230, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 437 (Miss. 1920).

10. —Sufficiency.

Children failed to come forward with evidence to overcome the prima facie case of their father's testamentary capacity; the father's physical weakness did not preclude him from making a will, and a bare and unexplained assertion that his mental state was "terrible" did not raise a jury issue as to his mental capacity. The father's agreement that he was no longer up to the task of campaigning for elected office did not amount to an admission or even evidence that he lacked the mental capacity to sign a will, and all testimony relevant to his mental capacity on March 2, 2009, indicated that he had sufficient capacity to execute both a general power of attorney and a will. Callington v. Gardner (In re Estate of Gardner), 228 So. 3d 921, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 95 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 232 So. 3d 785, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 360 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

Son showed a prima facie case of the son's deceased mother's testamentary capacity because (1) the son's subscribing witness's testimony to such capacity had more weight than contrary testimony of daughters who were not present at the will's execution, and (2) further testimony on the mother's condition rebutted the contrary testimony. Terry v. Phelps (In re Estate of Phelps), 180 So. 3d 835, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 642 (Miss. Ct. App. 2015).

Trial court properly granted a directed verdict and a peremptory instruction in favor of will proponents on the issue of whether the testator of a will had testamentary capacity to make a will at the time it was executed as the attesting witnesses indicated that the testator had capacity at the moment of the will's execution despite claims by the will contestants that the testator was lethargic, jaundiced, on medication, and hallucinating on days prior to signing the will. Noblin v. Burgess, 54 So. 3d 282, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 287 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), cert. denied, 53 So. 3d 760, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 109 (Miss. 2011).

Trial court erred by giving the issue of the decedent's testamentary capacity to the jury where there was no indication that the decedent lacked testamentary capacity; on the contrary, she left her estate to the natural objects of her bounty, the decedent was capable of determining the property disposition that she wished, and she was cognizant of the nature of her actions. McClendon v. McClendon (In re Estate of Pigg), 877 So. 2d 406, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 851 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 875 (Miss. 2004).

A court did not err in finding that a testator had the necessary mental capacity to make a valid will where the proponent of the will made a prima facie case of testamentary capacity by placing into evidence the will of the decedent, the affidavits of subscribing witnesses, and the judgment admitting the will to probate, and the only evidence offered by the contestant was the testimony of an adverse witness whose testimony did not indicate that the testator lacked testamentary capacity. In re Will of Wasson, 562 So. 2d 74, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 249 (Miss. 1990).

The evidence in a will contest action brought by the testator's son was insufficient to establish testamentary incapacity where 2 witnesses stated that the testator had made statements of hostility toward his son and cursed him, neither witness could identify the reason for this attitude and expressed the belief that the son tried untiringly to please his father and obey him, and one witness testified to the testator's drinking alcoholic beverages, "some" every day. In re Last Will & Testament of Dickey, 542 So. 2d 903, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 194 (Miss. 1989).

Chancellor's finding that the testatrix lacked mental capacity to make a will was supported by a number of witnesses who had testified as to the testatrix's mental and physical condition on the day before the day after the alleged execution of the will, and it further appeared that for the three days involved the testatrix's condition was continuous. Kelker v. Jordan, 228 Miss. 847, 89 So. 2d 858, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1956).

On issue of testamentary capacity, it is for serious consideration of jury as to whether or not it is either natural or rational that testatrix should devise to sister and nephew half interest in home occupied by husband, when testatrix has ample personal assets to provide for them to extent greater than value of undivided interest devised in residence. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

It is neither unnatural nor evidence of abnormality that testatrix in her will should favor widowed sister, who was not in as good financial circumstances as other members of family and also her nephew who had lived in her home for many years. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

It cannot be said that an eccentric old man was not in one of his admitted periods of calm and discretion at the time he executed a will when at that time he made intelligent and solicitous inquiry as to the contents and import of the will. Ward v. Ward, 203 Miss. 32, 33 So. 2d 294, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 227 (Miss. 1948).

Testator's disposition of his property to certain nephews and nieces to the exclusion of other nephews and nieces and an incompetent brother, was natural and just and did not, of itself, show lack of testamentary capacity or undue influence, where beneficiaries resided near testator, worked with and assisted him in the operation of his farm, and cared for testator during illness. Norman v. Norman, 196 Miss. 597, 18 So. 2d 130, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1944).

Chancellor's finding of testamentary capacity reversed where will showed such capacity lacking and will made in contemplation of suicide. Johnson v. Stansell, 94 Miss. 923, 48 So. 619, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 356 (Miss. 1909).

11. —Undue influence.

In a will contest amongst siblings, the proponent and beneficiary was unable to overcome the presumption of undue influence because, inter alia, the beneficiary was substantially involved in the procurement of the will and paid the costs of the will's execution, and the testator, who was the siblings' mother, was not aware of her total assets and their worth, was totally dependent on the beneficiary to handle her finances, and did not seek advice from a person disconnected to the beneficiary. Thomas v. Thomas, 122 So. 3d 111, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 512 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Finding that the decedent had the requisite mental capacity when he executed his power of attorney was appropriate because the presumption of any undue influence was rebutted; although the decedent's friend was aware of the decedent's deteriorating health, the friend, along with his family, acted unselfishly to lend his support to the decedent. Further, the record indicated that the decedent was aware of his assets and he controlled his own finances. Mitchell v. Poynor (In re Estate of Hall), 32 So. 3d 506, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 331 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 31 So. 3d 1217, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 2010).

Where appellants' sole evidence that a will was procured by appellee's undue influence over his father was testimony from appellee's ex-wife, who had no first-hand knowledge and testified only as to conversations she allegedly had with appellee, and her testimony was fully refuted by appellee, appellants failed to meet their burden to show undue influence. Hensley v. Harris, 870 So. 2d 1227, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 791 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 870 So. 2d 666, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2004).

A daughter failed to overcome the presumption of undue influence arising from her father's execution of a will devising all of his property to her where the father had previously executed a will devising the property to all of his children, the father developed a dislike of all of his children except the daughter within two years after the daughter moved in with the father to care for him after he suffered a stroke, the daughter did nothing to discourage the unwarranted ill will which her father developed towards her brothers and sisters, she took control of the father's financial affairs and initiated the preparation of the second will by contacting a lawyer of her selection, she stayed in the waiting room of the lawyer's office while the will was being executed, she paid the lawyer at the father's request by writing a check from the father's account, and the execution of the will was kept secret by the father and the daughter, though all matters concerning the father had previously been discussed by all the children and all of them had participated in making decisions which concerned his well being and financial affairs. In re Estate of Woodall, 593 So. 2d 471, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1992).

The test for rebutting a presumption of undue influence has been modified and no longer requires the independent advice of a competent person, but instead requires a showing of the grantor's "independent consent and action." Marsalis v. Lehmann, 566 So. 2d 217, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 532 (Miss. 1990).

One of the many ways of effecting undue influence upon a testator is by misrepresentation of fact; the misrepresentation may be made with the deliberate intent to deceive, knowing full well that it is false, as well as recklessly made without regard to its truth or falsity. In order to set aside a will resulting solely from the misrepresentation of a beneficiary, it must first be established that the representation was not true and actually influenced the testator to make a will he or she would not otherwise have made, that but for the misrepresentation by the beneficiary, the will would have been entirely different. In re Estate of Vick, 557 So. 2d 760, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 434 (Miss. 1989).

There was sufficient evidence of undue influence exercised upon a testatrix, in the absence of which she would not have executed the will she made which left an undivided ½ interest in property owned by the testatrix and her husband to their daughters, where one of the testatrix's daughters made persistent efforts to get the testatrix to secure for her some interest in the property, the daughter constantly badgered the testatrix when she was well advanced in years and in failing health, the daughter played a material part in convincing the testatrix that her husband had devised all his real property to their sons, and the testatrix's only reason for executing the will was her conviction that her husband was devising all his property to the sons and it was her desire to treat all the children equally. In re Estate of Vick, 557 So. 2d 760, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 434 (Miss. 1989).

An attorney did not overcome the presumption of undue influence over an elderly couple with whom he had entered into an oral arrangement under which couple made the attorney a signatory of their bank account with the authority to write checks for their needs in the event they became incapacitated and with the attorney being entitled to the balance of the account upon the couples' death where the attorney failed to advise the couple to secure independent advice and counsel, even though the arrangement was accomplished without any intent on the part of the attorney to commit any wrongful act. Lowrey v. Last Will & Testament of Smith, 543 So. 2d 1155, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 185 (Miss. 1989).

Although testatrix' will was prepared by an independent attorney personally employed by her for that purpose, evidence established that the will under which her regular attorney was the principal beneficiary had been procured by the exercise of undue influence upon testatrix by him. Holland v. Traylor, 227 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 1969).

In the absence of proof of an actual attempt to deceive the testator, his mistaken belief that the principal devisee was his son would have been insufficient to show undue influence. Provenza v. Provenza, 201 Miss. 836, 29 So. 2d 669, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 453 (Miss. 1947).

Jury may consider disposition of property, confidential relations, and mental and physical conditions of testator in determining undue influence; jury are sole judges as to undue influence. Isom v. Canedy, 128 Miss. 64, 88 So. 485, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1921).

Undue influence may be made out by circumstantial evidence. Jamison v. Jamison, 96 Miss. 288, 51 So. 130, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1909).

12. Execution, in general.

Chancery court properly granted summary judgment to a testator's siblings in their contest to the testator's will because the ninth page of the will naming a friend of the testator as the sole beneficiary of her estate failed to meet the statutory requirements of a valid codicil or holographic will where it constituted a separate document from the first eight pages of the will (it was typed in a different font style and size than the rest of the will and contained its own separate signature line), the will failed to incorporate it by reference, and there was no evidence that the testator signed the ninth page in the presence of two credible witnesses or that she published or acknowledged it as her will in the presence of witnesses. Murakami v. Young (In re Will of Massingale), 199 So. 3d 710, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 539 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

Although a testator did not affix her initials in the margins of the first two pages of her four-page will, the will was validly executed because there was evidence the testator actually signed the will in the presence of two attesting witnesses. Thomas v. Thomas, 122 So. 3d 111, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 512 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

The chancery court correctly denied probate to a document offered as the will of a decedent, where the document was neither wholly written and subscribed by the testator nor attested by two or more credible witnesses in the presence of the testator as required by § 91-5-1, but was entirely typewritten, signed by the decedent, and had a certificate of a notary public that it had been "sworn to and subscribed before me" followed by the signature and seal of the notary. The history of will contests in Mississippi supports the view that the requirements that there be two attesting witnesses to a will and, moreover, that it be attested by them in the presence of the testator, and that such attestation be evidenced by the affixation of their signatures to document, are indispensable safeguards of the integrity of testimentary documents. Batchelor v. Powers, 348 So. 2d 776, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2108 (Miss. 1977).

Where a testator in his will clearly expressed a desire that his estate be held together, and it was evident that his intent could be followed only by execution of the trust recommended by the testator in his will, the form of the trust attached to the will was mandatory, and it was proper that the trust was admitted to probate and established, notwithstanding that the testator's words in the will attaching a draft of his plans for the trust, and recommending it as a guide, were merely precatory. Farmer v. Broadhead, 230 So. 2d 779, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1561 (Miss. 1970).

As a general rule of law, courts tend to sustain a testamentary document as having been legally executed if it is possible to do so consistent with statutory requirements. Lyle v. Shannon, 228 So. 2d 594 (Miss. 1969).

Ordinarily, substantial compliance with statutory formalities in the execution of a will is sufficient in the absence of a suggestion of fraud, deception, undue influence or mental incapacity. Lyle v. Shannon, 228 So. 2d 594 (Miss. 1969).

It is the requisite to a valid will that it be executed as prescribed by statute. Boyles Coffee Co. v. Anderson, 218 So. 2d 843, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1621 (Miss. 1969).

No matter how earnestly one may desire and intend to make a will, a paper, although fully intended by the maker to be a will, is ineffective and invalid unless its execution meets statutory requirements. Boyles Coffee Co. v. Anderson, 218 So. 2d 843, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1621 (Miss. 1969).

The purpose of statutes prescribing formalities for the execution of wills is not to restrict the power of testator to dispose of his property, but it is to guard against mistakes, impositions, undue influences, fraud, deception, etc., which would divert the property of the testator from those intended by him or her to inherit same. Boyles Coffee Co. v. Anderson, 218 So. 2d 843, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1621 (Miss. 1969).

Although the intention of the testator is paramount in the construction of wills, the search for the testator's intention does not begin until there is a will executed in accordance with the requirements of this section [Code 1942, § 657]. In re Estate of King, 203 So. 2d 581, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1383 (Miss. 1967).

An instrument executed by a husband and wife which purported to be their last will and testament but which was not witnessed by two subscribing witnesses and was neither wholly in the handwriting of each, nor wholly in the handwriting of either, was invalid under the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 657]. Seab v. Seab, 203 So. 2d 478, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1373 (Miss. 1967).

A will was not executed within the requirements of this section [Code 1942, § 657] where it appeared that after the witnesses, who were in a different room, had signed the instrument and the testatrix's name had been signed thereto, it was then carried into the room of the testatrix who merely touched the pen. Kelker v. Jordan, 228 Miss. 847, 89 So. 2d 858, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1956).

Methods of executing will, and who may execute one, are defined by statute. Didlake v. Ellis, 158 Miss. 816, 131 So. 267, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1930).

Publication and attestation of will may be by construction. Green v. Pearson, 145 Miss. 23, 110 So. 862, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1927).

The writing of a will by a witness, at the request of the deceased, and embodying therein the disposition the deceased desired to make of his property, and the signing of the will by the deceased, was a sufficient declaration by the latter that the paper he had signed was his last will and testament, it being unnecessary for him to so declare in appropriate words. Green v. Pearson, 145 Miss. 23, 110 So. 862, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1927).

Duly attested will need not be dated. Lee v. Stewart, 139 Miss. 287, 104 So. 89, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1925).

Where there was a good faith effort to execute will, no technical construction should be allowed to defeat its purpose. Better v. Hirsch, 115 Miss. 614, 76 So. 555, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1917).

If it appears from the face of a writing testamentary in its character that a contemplated voyage and the dangers incident thereto were merely the occasion of its execution, and that the testator's death while on the voyage was not made a condition upon which its validity depended, it will be operative and may be probated after his return and subsequent death. In re Redhead's Estate, 83 Miss. 141, 35 So. 761 (Miss. 1904).

13. —Codicil.

Failure to execute codicil as required of will rendered it invalid but did not affect the will. Hawkins v. Duberry, 101 Miss. 17, 57 So. 919, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 140 (Miss. 1912).

14. Signature or subscription.

The Chancellor made no error in submitting the issue to the jury of whether there was compliance with § 91-5-1, where contestants of a will specifically charged that the signature to the will was not the testator's, where proponents, in their answer, denied all such allegations, where all witnesses for the proponents and all evidence offered on their behalf indicated that the testator had signed the will without assistance, and where the proponents changed their testimony only after overwhelming evidence was offered by the contestants that, at the very least, the testator, who was 88 years old at the time the will was executed, was assisted in making her signature. Webster v. Kennebrew, 443 So. 2d 850, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 3056 (Miss. 1983).

A certificate of deposit payable to a decedent "P.O.D. (two named persons)" failed as a testamentary disposition by the decedent, since, among other things, it was neither in the handwriting of the decedent, nor signed by him, and did not otherwise conform to § 91-5-1. Rand v. Moore, 414 So. 2d 885, 32 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. (CBC) 1539, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2466 (Miss. 1981).

A will was not executed within the requirements of this section [Code 1942, § 657] where it appeared that after the witnesses, who were in a different room, had signed the instrument, and the testatrix's name had been signed thereto, it was then carried into the room of the testatrix who merely touched the pen. Kelker v. Jordan, 228 Miss. 847, 89 So. 2d 858, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1956).

This section [Code 1942, § 657] does not require the testator to sign in the presence of the witnesses. Phifer v. McCarter, 222 Miss. 415, 76 So. 2d 258, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 659 (Miss. 1954).

Any signature or mark signed by the testator, or by another in his presence and at his express direction, to the will, as and for his completed signature, and acknowledged and adopted by him as such at the time, in the presence of subscribing witnesses, is a sufficient signing. Wallace v. Harrison, 218 Miss. 153, 65 So. 2d 456, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 525 (Miss. 1953).

In a will contest, that the testatrix's name, which appeared beside her mark, was written there at her request, did not establish the invalidity of the will. Wallace v. Harrison, 218 Miss. 153, 65 So. 2d 456, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 525 (Miss. 1953).

The words "sign" and "subscribe" in this section [Code 1942, § 657] are not synonymous but are used in different senses. Baker v. Baker's Estate, 199 Miss. 388, 24 So. 2d 841, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 208 (Miss. 1946).

The section [Code 1942, § 657] is not qualified by Code 1942, § 700. A testator, though able to write, is not required to write his name to his will, but he may sign by mark. Sheehan v. Kearney, 82 Miss. 688, 21 So. 41, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1896).

Where the testator consents to have his hand guided by another in signing his will, it is sufficient. Watson v. Pipes, 32 Miss. 451, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 227 (Miss. 1856).

15. Attestation.

Judgment which rejected the probate of the decedent's alleged last will and testament was affirmed because the witnesses each asserted that he had not witnessed a will, but a power of attorney; Miss. Code Ann. § 91-5-1 required attesting witnesses to a will know the purpose of their attestation. In re Estate of Griffith, 30 So. 3d 1190, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 159 (Miss. 2010).

The chancery court correctly denied probate to a document offered as the will of a decedent, where the document was neither wholly written and subscribed by the testator nor attested by two or more credible witnesses in the presence of the testator as required by § 91-5-1, but was entirely typewritten, signed by the decedent, and had a certificate of a notary public that it had been "sworn to and subscribed before me" followed by the signature and seal of the notary. The history of will contests in Mississippi supports the view that the requirements that there be to attesting witnesses to a will and, moreover, that it be attested by them in the presence of the testator, and that such attestation be evidence by the affixation of their signatures to document, are indispensable safeguards of the integrity of testamentary documents. Batchelor v. Powers, 348 So. 2d 776, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2108 (Miss. 1977).

Although this section [Code 1942, § 657] states that a will, not wholly written and subscribed by the testator, must be attested by two or more creditable witnesses, the section means that witnesses must be competent rather than credible. Wallace v. Harrison, 218 Miss. 153, 65 So. 2d 456, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 525 (Miss. 1953).

One of the purposes of having witnesses of the will is to determine the capacity of the testator to make the will. Cowart v. Cowart, 211 Miss. 459, 51 So. 2d 775, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1951).

The publication and attestation of a will may be by construction. One may speak by his actions as well as by word of mouth. Green v. Pearson, 145 Miss. 23, 110 So. 862, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1927).

Will signed by one attesting witness before signature by testatrix held valid. Gordon v. Parker, 139 Miss. 334, 104 So. 77, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 1925).

Witness must be satisfied with maker's testamentary capacity. Smith v. Young, 134 Miss. 738, 99 So. 370, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 303 (Miss. 1924).

It was the purpose of the statute in requiring two witnesses to attest the will to have more than the mere signatures of two persons to the will. Maxwell v. Lake, 127 Miss. 107, 88 So. 326, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 193 (Miss. 1921).

It was the duty of the attesting witnesses, under the statute, to observe and see that the will was executed by the testator, and that he had capacity to execute the will. Maxwell v. Lake, 127 Miss. 107, 88 So. 326, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 193 (Miss. 1921).

"Attested" is broader than "subscribed." Maxwell v. Lake, 127 Miss. 107, 88 So. 326, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 193 (Miss. 1921).

Word "credible" is synonymous with "competent." Swanzy v. Kolb, 94 Miss. 10, 46 So. 549, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1908).

16. —Validity; particular circumstances.

Chancellor erred in upholding a lease assignment that purported to convey the lessor's rights to the assignee upon the lessor's death because while the lease agreement acted as a testamentary document, it did not constitute a valid will and failed to validly assign the lessor's rights to the assignee where there was no indication that the lessor was of "sound and disposing mind," that the document represented a will, or that the lessees met any of the statutory requirements of attesting witnesses. Estate of Greer v. Ball, 218 So. 3d 1196, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 259 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016), aff'd, 218 So. 3d 1136, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 219 (Miss. 2017).

Chancery court properly determined that a decedent's will was invalid because the will was only signed by the decedent and a notary; therefore, the will lacked the proper attestation and as a result the decedent died intestate. Lockhart (In re Estate of Thomas) v. Wilson, 962 So. 2d 141, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 500 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a will contest, it was error for the trial court to permit the jury to take into consideration the suspension of a license to practice law for mental aberration of the attesting witness, which occurred a little over 4 years subsequent to the execution of the last will and testament, since that matter of itself would not determine the competence of the witness, and competence, not credibility, is the test. Estate of Briscoe v. Briscoe, 255 So. 2d 313, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1284 (Miss. 1971).

Although under Code 1942, § 498 the testimony of only one living witness is sufficient to establish a will's proper execution, proof of two signatures of witnesses is required to prove due execution where the witnesses to a will are deceased. Estate of Willis v. Willis, 207 So. 2d 348, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1609 (Miss. 1968).

The affidavits of two subscribing witnesses to a will were sufficient for the probate thereof in common form. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

Will was sufficiently attested where one of two witnesses took testator's acknowledgment instead of signing as a witness. Bolton v. Bolton, 107 Miss. 84, 64 So. 967, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1914).

Will was sufficiently attested where one witness signed on separate sheet of paper which was folded together with will. Bolton v. Bolton, 107 Miss. 84, 64 So. 967, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1914).

Devise to witness is void, but witness is competent to establish residue of will. Swanzy v. Kolb, 94 Miss. 10, 46 So. 549, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1908).

17. —Presence of witnesses.

Where one of the witnesses to a will, a non-lawyer, helped prepare the will, had known the testator for more than 25 years, was fully aware of the testator's motives for disinheriting all but one of his children, and could testify as to the testator's capacity for executing the will, and the second witness testified that the testator seemed fully capable of executing the will, it was properly held valid; that the will was prepared by a non-lawyer did not invalidate it. Hensley v. Harris, 870 So. 2d 1227, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 791 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 870 So. 2d 666, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 2004).

The attestation of a will that occurred outside the testator's physical presence was invalid, notwithstanding that the attesting witness was the draftsman of the will and that his long time familiarity with the testator and his handwriting provided him with the assurances that the document was indeed the will of the testator. McDevitt v. McDevitt (In re Estate of McDevitt), 755 So. 2d 1125, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 273 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A purported will did not meet the statutory requirements of an attested instrument where the document, which was entirely handwritten, only contained decedent's purported signature in the opening paragraph, where none of the three witnesses to the document saw, read, or heard the entire document, where no page of the document except the last was signed by a witness, and where no evidence showed that any witness had observed decedent affix her signature on the document or had heard her acknowledge that she had at any time signed it. Jay v. Thrash, 380 So. 2d 1273 (Miss. 1980).

A telephone conversation between the testator and one of the witnesses to the will, in which the witness first asked the testator whether he had signed the will and received an affirmative reply prior to the witness' attestation, did not constitute the necessary "presence" of the witness to the signing for purposes of validating the will; the purpose of signing in the presence of the testator is to allow the testator to know that the witnesses are attesting the testator's will and not another document, that the witnesses will know the same, that imposition or fraud is thus prevented by precluding the substitution of another will in place of that signed by the testator, and that the witnesses will be reasonably satisfied that the testator is of sound and disposing mind and capable of making a will. In re Will of Jefferson, 349 So. 2d 1032, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2174 (Miss. 1977).

A will was not executed within the requirements of this section [Code 1942, § 657] where it appeared that after the witnesses, who were in a different room, had signed the instrument, and the testatrix's name had been signed thereto, it was then carried into the room of the testatrix who merely touched the pen. Kelker v. Jordan, 228 Miss. 847, 89 So. 2d 858, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1956).

Where the testator signed his will at the end and exhibited it to two witnesses telling them it was his will and requesting them to sign, and one of the witnesses read the will in the presence of the testator and the other witness after which both witnesses attached their signatures in testator's presence, the will was valid. Phifer v. McCarter, 222 Miss. 415, 76 So. 2d 258, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 659 (Miss. 1954).

The necessity of two witnesses in the making of a will has no application to proof of a promise to make a will. Boggan v. Scruggs, 200 Miss. 747, 29 So. 2d 86, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1947), overruled, Talbert v. Ellzey, 203 Miss. 612, 35 So. 2d 628, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1948).

Subscribing witnesses to wills are not required to sign in the presence of each other. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

Subscribing witnesses to wills are not required to see the testator sign the will, but is enough if testator produces the will, declares it to be his will, and states that signature appended thereto is his and that he wrote it. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

Evidence of subscribing witness that testatrix told him that instrument was her will, that she had signed it and wanted him to sign it as a witness, and that he did so in her presence, and testimony of other witness who did not sign in presence of other subscribing witness and was not present when other witness signed, that testatrix told him instrument was her will and requested him to sign it as a witness, was sufficient to authorize admission of will to probate in solemn form. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

A request to sign a will as a witness, made in the presence of the testator by one intrusted with the preparation of the will, is equivalent to a request by the testator, and it is sufficient that enough is said and done in the presence and with the knowledge of the testator to make the witnesses understand that he desires them to know that the paper is his will, and that they are to be the witnesses thereto. Green v. Pearson, 145 Miss. 23, 110 So. 862, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1927).

Where a testator did not sign his will in the presence of one of the witnesses, did not declare his signature, did not identify the paper or signature, and did not declare it to be his will, it was improper to instruct the jury that the will as duly and legally executed. Maxwell v. Lake, 127 Miss. 107, 88 So. 326, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 193 (Miss. 1921).

Will duly attested by two witnesses is valid although third witness signed when other two were not present. Gore v. Ligon, 105 Miss. 652, 63 So. 188, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 245 (Miss. 1913).

Attestation held sufficient where testator directed another to sign his name for him to the will and then sign it as witness, and afterwards exhibited it to two other persons stating it was his will and having them sign as witnesses. Miller v. Miller, 96 Miss. 526, 51 So. 210, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 164 (Miss. 1910).

18. Particular instruments as valid testamentary instruments.

Will was properly found to be invalid because, while stating an intent to distribute the testator's property, the will did not designate a beneficiary. Swilley v. Estate of LeBlanc (In re Estate of Regan), 179 So. 3d 1155, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 179 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 179 So. 3d 1137, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 577 (Miss. 2015).

The words on a certificate of deposit "payable on death" were testamentary in character and constituted an attempt to make a negotiable instrument a will, thus requiring compliance with this section. In re Collier, 381 So. 2d 1338, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 1933 (Miss. 1980).

An instrument executed in the manner required by the statute with the express intent of vesting the testator's property upon his death constitutes a valid testamentary disposition, no matter what name the testator may give it. Peebles v. Rodgers, 211 Miss. 8, 50 So. 2d 632, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 1951).

Provision in an instrument which intends to convey all the lands the grantor owns but the grantor to live on and control the land during his life time and on his death the instrument to take effect and the title to vest in the grantee, was testamentary in character. Peebles v. Rodgers, 211 Miss. 8, 50 So. 2d 632, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 1951).

A letter clearly indicating that its writer had her death in mind when writing it, and intended by it to make the gifts set forth therein effective when that event should occur, constituted all that is necessary to a will. In re Mey's Estate, 200 Miss. 548, 28 So. 2d 125, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 321 (Miss. 1946).

An instrument in the form of a deed which provided that the grantors were to retain possession, control and occupancy of the lands during their lifetime and then vest in the purported grantee, "but not until the death of both grantors herein, does the title pass," was testamentary in character since it did not meet the requirement of a deed that it must convey some estate effective upon delivery. Coulter v. Carter, 200 Miss. 135, 26 So. 2d 344, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 274 (Miss. 1946).

Test to determine whether instrument is will or deed set forth; instrument will operate according to legal effect regardless of denomination given by maker. Knight v. Knight, 133 Miss. 74, 97 So. 481, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1923).

Letter not containing dispositive word is not a will, in absence of evidence that it was intended to be testamentary. Sullivan v. Jones, 130 Miss. 101, 93 So. 353, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1922).

Letter stating writer held property to protect interest of addressee, that he would later give her a deed to it, and that it was to go to her at his death, held declaration of trust and not a will. Morgan v. Hayward, 115 Miss. 354, 76 So. 262, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 206 (Miss. 1917).

Instrument in form of deed to take effect only after grantor's death, held testamentary and not a deed. Simpson v. McGee, 112 Miss. 344, 73 So. 55, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1916).

Letter of testatrix stating disposition to be made of her property unless she made another and more formal will, fully written and subscribed by her, was properly admitted to probate. Hewes v. Hewes, 110 Miss. 826, 71 So. 4, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1916).

An instrument, executed by plaintiffs' father and mother, providing that in consideration of five dollars and parental love and affection, the parents sold and granted to plaintiffs, as joint owners, certain lands in fee simple, with a reservation of possession and control in the grantors so long as they should live, was not a will, but a deed, with the reservation of a life estate to the grantors. Myers v. Viverett, 110 Miss. 334, 70 So. 449, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1915).

Instrument executed by decedent expressing her wish as to devolution of her property in case her husband survived her was not subject to probate as her will on her surviving her husband. Du Sauzay v. Du Sauzay, 105 Miss. 839, 63 So. 273, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 268 (Miss. 1913).

Letter written by decedent to brother stating how he wished his property disposed of is a valid will, if he did not deliver it but kept it and treated it as his will. Prather v. Prather, 97 Miss. 311, 52 So. 449, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 232 (Miss. 1910).

Parol agreement by two sisters that survivor should have certain personal property is not testamentary. Marshall v. Stratton, 96 Miss. 465, 51 So. 132, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 161 (Miss. 1910).

19. Holographic wills.

A purported holographic will did not comport with the execution requirements of § 91-5-1 and was therefore invalid, where the will was a one-page document with writing on the front and back, the testator's name appeared in the first line of the will but did not appear again, and the will was not signed at the end. Amyotte v. Hollingsworth, 585 So. 2d 731 (Miss. 1991).

There is no legal requirement that signature "subscribing" holographic will must be placed on the same sheet of paper as the dispositive provisions of the will, so long as the signature is at the conclusion of the will; and the part of the will containing the signature may be mechanically attached to the other part of the will so that it may be identified as a part thereof. Lyle v. Shannon, 228 So. 2d 594 (Miss. 1969).

The intent of one to make a will, insofar as probate of a holographic will is concerned, is immaterial; for the question is whether the will actually is executed in accordance with the statute of the state. Boyles Coffee Co. v. Anderson, 218 So. 2d 843, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1621 (Miss. 1969).

With respect to holographic wills, this section [Code 1942, § 657] has been construed to mean that such a will must be signed at the end of a document, testamentary in character, which shows on its face that the testamentary purpose therein expressed is completed, that nothing which follows the signature may be considered, and if the writing does not meet the requirements of this section the intent of the writer is immaterial. In re Estate of King, 203 So. 2d 581, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1383 (Miss. 1967).

Holographic wills must be subscribed by testator, or another for him, and nothing can be effective which appears after and beneath such signature. In re George's Estate, 208 Miss. 734, 45 So. 2d 571, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 292 (Miss. 1950).

Unsigned postscript cannot be treated as part of dispositive provisions of letter offered as holographic will. In re George's Estate, 208 Miss. 734, 45 So. 2d 571, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 292 (Miss. 1950).

Letter constituting valid holographic will must be of testamentary character, wholly written, dated, and signed by testator. Sullivan v. Jones, 130 Miss. 101, 93 So. 353, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1922).

Holographic will must be both written and subscribed by testator. Better v. Hirsch, 115 Miss. 614, 76 So. 555, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1917).

A letter testatmentary in its character wholly written, dated and signed by the testator is a valid holographic will although it contains a request that the person to whom it was addressed should keep its contents private. Buffington v. Thomas, 84 Miss. 157, 36 So. 1039, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 84 (Miss. 1904).

20. —Date requirement.

An otherwise valid holographic will is not invalid for lack of a date, there being nothing in the statute which requires that a holographic will be dated. Vaughn v. General Cable Corp., 248 So. 2d 798, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1489 (Miss. 1971).

21. —Reference to extrinsic documents.

Extrinsic document, by reference made part of will wholly written by testator, must also be so written, otherwise the whole will would not be in the handwriting of testator. Hewes v. Hewes, 110 Miss. 826, 71 So. 4, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1916).

22. —Construction.

In giving legal effect to an instrument prepared by a lay person, the court should endeavor to ascertain what the words contained in it meant to the author, not simply what they could connote to a lawyer. Thus, where a holographic will provided that if the testator preceded his wife in death "all of my earthly possessions be received by her," the use of the ordinary words "possessions" and "receive," with no further qualification or restriction, indicated that the testator intended for his wife to receive and own everything he possessed and owned. In re Estate of Dedeaux, 584 So. 2d 419, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 462 (Miss. 1991).

In a will contest, requiring construction of a holographic will, in view of evidence that the testatrix' use and enjoyment of land was not restricted and that there was no fence defining a "yard" in which a dwelling house and out buildings were located, and the testatrix had been accustomed to referring to the entire place by the term "home", her bequest of one-half the value of the "home" was not a bequest of one-half the value of the house and "yard" but of one-half the value of the entire 58.4 acres of land on which the house was situated. Carlisle v. Estate of Carlisle, 252 So. 2d 894, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1208 (Miss. 1971).

In construing a will, consideration must be given to all the provisions of the instrument and every part thereof taken together, rather than to any particular clause, sentence or form of words, and this is particularly true with respect to a holographic will since the words and terms are those of the testator who is also the writer and the will is not therefore as subject to mistake through misunderstanding as might be the case where the instrument is drawn by one other than the testator. Carlisle v. Estate of Carlisle, 252 So. 2d 894, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1208 (Miss. 1971).

Fact that wife's holographic will referred to a request of her husband was no more than an explanation as to her reason for devising the property as she did, and was not an expression of the testamentary intent of the husband. Carlisle v. Carlisle, 233 So. 2d 803, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1680 (Miss. 1970).

A holographic will written and subscribed by the decedent which, after making certain specific bequests concluded with the statement, "I will finish this later," was properly admitted to probate, for the testamentary purpose as far as expressed in the will was complete. Maines v. Davis, 227 So. 2d 844, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1372 (Miss. 1969).

The intent of one to make a will, insofar as probate of a holographic will is concerned, is immaterial; for the question is whether the will actually is executed in accordance with the statute of the state. Boyles Coffee Co. v. Anderson, 218 So. 2d 843, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1621 (Miss. 1969).

23. —Particular instruments as valid holographic wills.

A page of a scratch pad on which appeared, in the decedent's handwriting: "Madge Do what should be done and complete my work. I will all to you." , followed by the decedent's signature and the abbreviation for Thursday, constituted a valid holographic will, though undated. Vaughn v. General Cable Corp., 248 So. 2d 798, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1489 (Miss. 1971).

A holographic will written and subscribed by the decedent which, after making certain specific bequests concluded with the statement, "I will finish this later," was properly admitted to probate, for the testamentary purpose as far as expressed in the will was complete. Maines v. Davis, 227 So. 2d 844, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1372 (Miss. 1969).

Letter written wholly in sender's handwriting expressing desire to give addressee interest in plantation and saying, "I want you to begin fixing things that you may get the rent for 1947," and expressing intent to enter upon negotiations for purchase of four lots, is not testamentary or dispositive, but merely expresses desire with purpose to later effectuate it, and cannot be probated as holographic will of writer. In re George's Estate, 208 Miss. 734, 45 So. 2d 571, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 292 (Miss. 1950).

A simple statement written by the signer that she gives everything she owns without bond to her sister named, which writing is kept in the signer's possession until the time of her death, is effective as a holographic will, even though the day of the month when executed is not specified by the signer who could not possibly have attained her majority during the particular month of the year shown by the writing. Estes v. Estes, 200 Miss. 541, 27 So. 2d 854, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 320 (Miss. 1946).

Instrument entirely in handwriting of deceased, with caption consisting of the name of deceased followed by the words "writing this," where no signature, date or other writing appeared underneath the last paragraph of the instrument, was inadmissible to probate as a holographic will, since the instrument was not subscribed to within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 657]. Words appearing at top and as caption were mere words of description and identification of the person writing the instrument and did not constitute a signature in execution of the instrument. Baker v. Baker's Estate, 199 Miss. 388, 24 So. 2d 841, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 208 (Miss. 1946).

A letter testatmentary in its character wholly written, dated and signed by the testator is a valid holographic will although it contains a request that the person to whom it was addressed should keep its contents private. Buffington v. Thomas, 84 Miss. 157, 36 So. 1039, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 84 (Miss. 1904).

An holographic will complete and perfect in itself is not invalidated because the words "my will", a mere caption, were written above it on the same sheet of paper by the hand of another than the testator. Baker v. Brown, 83 Miss. 793, 36 So. 539, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 1904).

24. Probate; requirement, generally.

Will ineffectual as instrument of title until probated. Virginia Trust Co. v. Buford, 123 Miss. 572, 86 So. 356, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 60 (Miss. 1920).

25. —Practice and procedure.

In will contest where more than one ground is asserted challenging validity of will, court should require jury to return special verdict as authorized by Mississippi Rule of Civil Procedure 49 to enable reviewing court to determine true verdict of jury and render opinion in accord. Street Medical Found. v. Watts, 475 So. 2d 819 (Miss. 1985).

Giving of jury instruction addressing issue of which nonprofit corporation is proper beneficiary under will is reversible error where primary issue presented is testatmentary capacity of testatrix, particularly where instruction is peremptory in obligating jury to find for contestant on uncontradicted facts. Matter of Street Medical Found. v. Watts, 475 So. 2d 819 (Miss. 1985).

The trial court in an action contesting a will properly refused jury instructions offered by the will proponents, where one was a "boiler plate" instruction purporting to set forth the law on who might make a will, which contained mere abstract principles of law, did not apply to the specific facts of the case, and was erroneous in that it failed to take into account § 91-5-1, and where the other instruction correctly recited the law but did not apply to the specific facts of the case. Estate of Lawler v. Weston, 451 So. 2d 739, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1757 (Miss. 1984).

Where contestants attempt to show subsequent will was valid, instruction that if contested will was not believed by jury to be the true and last will beyond a reasonable doubt, it should be held invalid, is erroneous. Williams v. Morehead, 116 Miss. 653, 77 So. 658, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 354 (Miss. 1917).

26. —Evidence.

A person contesting a will should be allowed to examine the subscribing witnesses to the will as to all matters relevant to the will's execution and to inquire into surrounding facts and circumstances so that the court may determine if the will was properly signed and attested, if attestation be required, and if the testator was mentally competent and free of undue influence. Chapman v. Chapman, 264 So. 2d 395, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1357 (Miss. 1972).

Presumption against intestacy is only a presumption which must yield to facts, and cannot be applied to change or write new will so as to dispose of property under a will which makes no such disposition. Williams v. Gooch, 208 Miss. 223, 44 So. 2d 57, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 241 (Miss. 1950).

In proceeding by residuary legatee to recover his share of estate, introduction in evidence of proceedings before chancery clerk in vacation admitting will to probate in common form makes out prima facie case of validity of will. Rice v. McMullen, 207 Miss. 706, 43 So. 2d 195, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 382 (Miss. 1949).

Lay witnesses are competent to testify on issue of capacity of testator to make will on date of its alleged execution where they first give facts upon which their opinions are based. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

Notwithstanding transcript, in view of entire testimony, witness held not to have said will was typewritten. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

Testimony of subscribing witness best evidence of execution. Smith v. Young, 134 Miss. 738, 99 So. 370, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 303 (Miss. 1924).

Undue influence may be made out by circumstantial evidence. Jamison v. Jamison, 96 Miss. 288, 51 So. 130, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1909).

27. — —Admissibility.

Where testatrix, who had a daughter named Rosalind Gwin Hutton Johnson and a granddaughter named Rosalind Gwin Hutton, devised land to "Rosalind Gwin Hutton," the will was ambiguous as to the identity of the devisee, and evidence extrinsic to the will was admissible to identify the intended devisee. Hutton v. Hutton, 233 Miss. 458, 102 So. 2d 424, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 404 (Miss. 1958).

In contest proceeding arising out of offer of letter for probate as holographic will of writer, later unsigned will prepared at writer's suggestion, letter with reference to unsigned will, circumstances surrounding preparation of documents, their contents, and action of parties with reference thereto are competent evidence upon question of whether writer intended letter as will and so considered it, and whether, in legal effect, it was will. In re George's Estate, 208 Miss. 734, 45 So. 2d 571, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 292 (Miss. 1950).

In will contest, admission in evidence of opinions of lay witnesses as to mental incapacity of testatrix to make will on date of its alleged execution followed by statement by witnesses of facts or incidents in connection with their acquaintance, association and experience with testatrix on which opinion is based is not reversible error in absence of objection interposed by proponents to expression of these opinions by witnesses for contestants on ground that they had not previously stated facts upon which their opinions were given, objection on ground that profferred testimony involved opinion of lay witness being insufficient. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

Parol evidence to effect that deceased stated that she had made her will was inadmissible on question whether alleged holographic will was intended to be and in fact was "subscribed" within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 657], even though parol evidence generally is competent to show whether an instrument was intended to be of testamentary character where its meaning in that behalf is not clearly shown on the face thereof, since there was no issue as to whether the instrument was testamentary in character. Baker v. Baker's Estate, 199 Miss. 388, 24 So. 2d 841, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 208 (Miss. 1946).

Evidence as to how testator acquired certain personal property about 23 years prior to making of his will is inadmissible, as too remote, on issue of testamentary capacity, especially where it is not shown that any of this property was in existence at time of testator's death. Norman v. Norman, 196 Miss. 597, 18 So. 2d 130, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1944).

Error by trial court in excluding evidence as to timber cruise on testator's lands, in suit contesting will on grounds of undue influence and lack of testamentary capacity, did not constitute reversible error in view of other evidence admitted showing value and extent of testator's estate. Norman v. Norman, 196 Miss. 597, 18 So. 2d 130, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1944).

Exclusion of evidence of attorney drawing will held harmless in will contest where proponents granted peremptory instruction. Isom v. Canedy, 128 Miss. 64, 88 So. 485, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1921).

Opinion evidence that testatrix was under influence of a legatee is inadmissible. Scally v. Wardlaw, 123 Miss. 857, 86 So. 625, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1920).

Declarations of sole beneficiary of a will shortly after testatrix's death held incompetent in will contest on ground of forgery, he being a witness in his own behalf and testifying he wrote the will. Liles v. May, 105 Miss. 807, 63 So. 217, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1913).

Whether writing was intended as will may be shown by parol. Prather v. Prather, 97 Miss. 311, 52 So. 449, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 232 (Miss. 1910).

Declarations of testator that he would make no will held incompetent. Miller v. Miller, 96 Miss. 526, 51 So. 210, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 164 (Miss. 1910).

28. —Burden of proof.

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, there is but a single issue-will or no will, and burden is on proponent throughout. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

Burden of proof on proponents of will as to capacity and undue influence, but they make out prima facie case by introduction of record of probate in common form. Gathings v. Howard, 122 Miss. 355, 84 So. 240, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1920).

Proponents of will have burden of giving reasonable explanation of unnatural character of will. Jamison v. Jamison, 96 Miss. 288, 51 So. 130, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1909).

Where on an issue devisavit vel non the question is whether the testator was sane or insane the contestants are not required to prove his sanity beyond all reasonable doubt. King v. Rowan, 82 Miss. 1, 34 So. 325, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1903).

§ 91-5-3. Revocations.

A devise so made, or any clause thereof, shall not be revocable but by the testator or testatrix destroying, canceling, or obliterating the same, or causing it to be done in his or her presence, or by subsequent will, codicil, or declaration, in writing, made and executed. Every last will and testament made when the testator or testatrix had no child living, wherein any child he or she might have is not provided for or not mentioned, if at the time of his or her death he or she have a child, or if the testator leave his wife enceinte of a child who shall be born, shall have no effect during the life of any such after-born child and shall be void unless the child die without having been married, or without leaving issue capable of inheriting, and before he or she shall have attained twenty-one years. The estate, both real and personal, so devised shall descend to such child in the same manner as if the testator or testatrix had died intestate, subject, nevertheless, to the bequests made in the last will and testament in case of the death of such child before marriage, or without issue capable of inheriting, and under the age of twenty-one years. When a testator shall leave children born and his wife enceinte, the posthumous child or children, if unprovided for by settlement and neither provided for nor disinherited, but only pretermitted, by the last will and testament, shall succeed to the same portion of the father's estate as such child or children would have been entitled to if the father had died intestate, towards raising which portion the devisees and legatees shall contribute proportionably out of the parts devised and bequeathed to them by the same will and testament.

1. In general.

Chancellor, on remand, had to determine whether the decedent's 2001 will was validly made and executed; if the chancellor found that the 2001 will was validly made and executed, the chancellor had to re-admit the 2001 will to probate; however, if the 2001 will was not valid, then the decedent's 1973 will had to be re-admitted to probate. Woodfield v. Woodfield (In re Estate of Woodfield), 968 So. 2d 421, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 606 (Miss. 2007).

Generally, revocation of a will can be accomplished only by physical destruction of the will or by subsequent will, codicil, or declaration, in writing, made and executed. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Mississippi Code § 91-5-3 provides the only means by which a will may be expressly revoked. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Revocation of a will is a matter of intent, except in those instances in which it occurs by operation of law from a change in circumstances subsequent to the execution of the will. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

Statute pertaining to revocations of wills applies only to express revocation, and has no application to an implied revocation. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 173 Miss. 192, 159 So. 564, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 194 (Miss. 1935).

2. Requirements — mental capacity.

The execution of a will in 1982, at a time when testatrix lacked testamentary capacity, did not revoke a 1980 will. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

The mental capacity required to revoke a will is the same as that required to make one. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Same degree of mentality is necessary for revocation as for making. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

Burden of showing lack of capacity to revoke on party seeking to establish lost will. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

3. —Intent to revoke.

In Mississippi, revocation of a duly executed will is governed by a statute, and in order to affect the revocation of a will, it is essential that it be shown in some competent manner that the testator or someone for him performed one or more of the acts specified in the statute of "destroying, cancelling, or obliterating" the will and that he did so with the intention of revoking the will. Griffith v. Movie Star of Collins, Inc., 233 So. 2d 760, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1664 (Miss. 1970).

The intent to revoke a will is essential to the revocation by act of the testator. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

In order for an act to have the effect of revoking a will the intention to revoke must clearly and unequivocally appear, so that a will is not revoked by any act of spoliation or destruction not deliberately done animo revocandi, and even where the statutory methods for revoking a will are followed by the testator, his act is ineffectual unless his intent thereby to revoke or alter the will appears. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

4. By instrument of revocation.

Any instrument expressly revoking a will must meet the requirements of Mississippi Code § 91-5-1. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

In a proceeding to annul probate of will and codicil and for decree that decedent died intestate, the question whether the instrument of revocation had been executed in compliance with the requirements of the statute was a question of fact to be determined according to the proof. Kennard v. Evans, 218 Miss. 176, 65 So. 2d 285, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 528 (Miss. 1953).

Where instrument intended to revoke a codicil, which disposed of all the property of testatrix, was not signed in the presence of one of the subscribing witnesses and the witness was not informed that the instrument was a revocation of the codicil and that signature appended to the instrument was that of the testatrix, and the witness learned only from other witness that testatrix had signed the instrument, the revoking instrument was not duly executed and attested. Kennard v. Evans, 218 Miss. 176, 65 So. 2d 285, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 528 (Miss. 1953).

5. By subsequent will.

Will unambiguously stated that the testator's wife was to inherit a life estate in a home, and the will further revoked all prior wills and testaments, and the antenuptial-agreement provision leaving the testator's daughter the home was a devise, or testament, that the testator intended to revoke by the subsequent will; since the antenuptial-agreement provision was revoked by the will, the provision was void and gave the daughter no claim of ownership to the home, and the will's gift of the home to the wife controlled. Dixon v. Jones (In re Will of Jones), 138 So. 3d 205, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 230 (Miss. Ct. App. 2014).

The execution of a will in 1982, at a time when testatrix lacked testamentary capacity, did not revoke a 1980 will. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

A validly executed will with inconsistent provisions, but no express revocation clause, revokes an earlier will. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

In a probate contest the court properly admitted testimony concerning a 1979 will, where such testimony was probative as to whether there was a statement of revocation of a 1961 will or whether there were inconsistent devises under the two wills. Deposit Guaranty Nat'l Bank v. Cotten, 420 So. 2d 242, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2203 (Miss. 1982).

Revocation of a will by a subsequent instrument requires the document to be in writing, made and executed; execution in this context means signing. Therefore, a properly executed will that revoked a prior holographic will was not itself revoked by the testator's re-dating of the holographic will without re-signing that will. Ramsey v. Robinson, 346 So. 2d 379, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2528 (Miss. 1977).

A surviving wife could by a valid, subsequent will revoke her part of a joint will earlier executed with her husband. Lane v. Woodland Hills Baptist Church, 285 So. 2d 901, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1313 (Miss. 1973).

Provision that testatrix's daughter and her son should not inherit any of the testatrix's property until five years after the death of the daughter's husband was revoked by implication by two subsequent testamentary instruments, one of which devised to the daughter certain Louisiana property without provision for the postponement of the enjoyment thereof, the other of which directed the management by trustees of the interest of the daughter and her son, also without making any provision for the postponement of the enjoyment thereof. Martin v. Eslick, 229 Miss. 234, 90 So. 2d 635, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 604 (Miss. 1956).

Where a testator made a second will which had no revoking provisions but which was inconsistent with the first will and where the sole devisee and legatee was a witness to the will and therefore ineligible to take under it, the property passed as if the deceased had died intestate. Estate of Crawford v. Crawford, 225 Miss. 208, 82 So. 2d 823, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 574 (Miss. 1955).

Revocation may be worked by inconsistent provisions of subsequent will. Wheat v. Lacals, 139 Miss. 300, 104 So. 73, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1925).

6. By codicil.

The rule that a codicil does not work a revocation except to the precise extent that it either expressly or by necessary implication modifies the former provisions in a will was applied to a separate paper in the testator's handwriting, signed and dated after the will, found in the same envelope as the will and referring to "my formal will." Klein v. Gaines, 203 Miss. 871, 34 So. 2d 488, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 332 (Miss. 1948).

Statute pertaining to revocations of wills held not to prevent implied revocation through codicil directing sum loaned legatee by testator to be repaid or deducted from his legacy. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 173 Miss. 192, 159 So. 564, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 194 (Miss. 1935).

Codicil to will not subscribed and attested is invalid, but does not affect validity of will. Hawkins v. Duberry, 101 Miss. 17, 57 So. 919, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 140 (Miss. 1912).

7. By destruction or obliteration.

A total or partial revocation of a will by either cancellation or obliteration is authorized by this section. In re Will of Palmer, 359 So. 2d 752, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2267 (Miss. 1978).

In Mississippi, revocation of a duly executed will is governed by a statute, and in order to affect the revocation of a will, it is essential that it be shown in some competent manner that the testator or someone for him performed one or more of the acts specified in the statute of "destroying, cancelling, or obliterating" the will and that he did so with the intention of revoking the will. Griffith v. Movie Star of Collins, Inc., 233 So. 2d 760, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1664 (Miss. 1970).

8. —Presumptive animo revocandi.

Will presumed destroyed animo revocandi, where traced to testator and not found after death. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

Presumption of destruction animo revocandi is overcome by showing existence after permanent incapacity. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

9. —Destruction of one of multiple copies.

Where a will has been executed in duplicate, the destruction by testator of that copy which he retains in his possession, with intent to revoke the will, creates a presumption that the testator intends thereby to revoke the will. Phinizee v. Alexander, 210 Miss. 196, 49 So. 2d 250, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 337 (Miss. 1950).

Where there are two copies of a will, both in possession of deceased, the presumption of law would be that by the preservation of one duplicate entire the testator did not intend a revocation of these particular devises, otherwise he would have mutilated both duplicates. Phinizee v. Alexander, 210 Miss. 196, 49 So. 2d 250, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 337 (Miss. 1950).

10. —Marginal notation.

Where credible extraneous evidence to the contrary is available, marginal notations made by a testator subsequent to the execution of his will need not necessarily constitute a revocation thereof. Wiley v. Wiley, 184 So. 2d 854, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1483 (Miss. 1966).

11. Implied revocation; generally.

Mississippi Supreme Court declined to adopt a rule of revocation of a will by divorce and to adopt a rule that a pre-divorce will was automatically or expressly revoked by a divorce accompanied by a property settlement agreement with provisions inconsistent with the terms of the pre-divorce will; on the other hand, it did acknowledge that there may be an implied revocation of a pre-divorce will in cases where there is a divorce accompanied by a property settlement agreement with provisions inconsistent with the terms of the pre-divorce will, but any document submitted by a contestant as a subsequent declaration pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 91-5-3 must reveal by "clear and unequivocal" evidence the testator's intention to revoke the prior will by looking to the facts and circumstances of the particular case, the terms of the will itself, the divorce decree and the property settlement, and the conduct of the parties. Hinders v. Hinders, 828 So. 2d 1235, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 312 (Miss. 2002).

Mississippi recognizes the doctrine of revocation of wills by statute, and also, in proper cases where the facts give rise to an implied revocation, by operation of law. Rasco v. Estate of Rasco, 501 So. 2d 421, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2274 (Miss. 1987).

The doctrine of implied revocation is carefully limited to execution of conflicting deeds or other instruments; statements of the testator that he intends to revoke the will are not enough; and, generally, such statements are inadmissible if offered to show an implied revocation. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Mississippi recognizes that a will may be impliedly revoked. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Revocation of a will is a matter of intent, except in those instances in which it occurs by operation of law from a change in circumstances subsequent to the execution of the will. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

Revocation of a will is a matter of intent except where it occurs by operation of law from a change in circumstances subsequent to the execution of the will. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

The doctrine of implied revocation has been carefully limited in Mississippi to the execution of conflicting deeds and other instruments. In re Stoball's Will, 211 Miss. 15, 50 So. 2d 635, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 1951).

This section [Code 1942, § 658] has no application to implied revocations by operation of law, but has reference alone to express revocations which are sought to be shown in the manner stated in the statute. Hilton v. Johnson, 194 Miss. 671, 12 So. 2d 524, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1943).

Statute pertaining to revocations of wills applies only to express revocation, and has no application to an implied revocation. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 173 Miss. 192, 159 So. 564, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 194 (Miss. 1935).

Forcefully preventing testator from changing will held not such a change in conditions or circumstances as to amount to a revocation by implication. Minor v. Russell, 126 Miss. 228, 88 So. 633, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 29 (Miss. 1921).

Doctrine of implied revocation is always recognized in Mississippi. Caine v. Barnwell, 120 Miss. 209, 82 So. 65, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 79 (Miss. 1919).

This section [Code 1942, § 658] does not prevent implied revocation. Hoy v. Hoy, 93 Miss. 732, 48 So. 903, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 169 (Miss. 1908).

12. —Subsequent inconsistent instrument.

Decedent's will was revoked by implication because the chancellor determined that the express terms of the will and the provisions of the property-settlement agreement were inconsistent; by the express terms of the property-settlement agreement, the ex-wife forfeited her interest in the Tennessee farmland; the property-settlement agreement satisfied the requirements of this statute as a subsequent declaration to the will that revoked the decedent's predivorce will and divested the ex-wife of any interest in the farmland; and the chancellor correctly found that the parties intended to settle any and all property rights against each other and that the decedent acted by implication and intent to void the previous bequests. Chaney v. Chaney (In re Estate of Chaney), 235 So. 3d 120, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 278 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017), cert. denied, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 2018).

A divorce accompanied by property settlement did not revoke, by implication, a previously executed will where the parties continued to live together, the divorce decree or property settlement contained no proof of intent to revoke the prior testamentary instrument, and there was no showing that the property settlement was anything more than a formality to comply with the requirements of a divorce for irreconcilable differences. Rasco v. Estate of Rasco, 501 So. 2d 421, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2274 (Miss. 1987).

Under the provisions of Code 1942, § 658 a divorce accompanied by a property settlement made by the husband to his former wife will not serve as a revocation of a prior will providing property rights or legacies for the divorced spouse, absent proof that the testator intended that the settlement should operate as a fulfillment of support rights or as an ademption of a prior-created legacy and release by the divorced spouse of all rights in the deceased's estate. McKnight v. McKnight, 267 So. 2d 315, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1417 (Miss. 1972).

Execution of deed to property conveying it to devisee named in prior executed will covering same property operates as pro tanto revocation of will, but only to extent of property deeded and revokes will in no other particular. Dantone v. Dantone, 205 Miss. 420, 38 So. 2d 908, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1949).

13. Joint wills.

A surviving wife could by a valid, subsequent will revoke her part of a joint will earlier executed with her husband. Lane v. Woodland Hills Baptist Church, 285 So. 2d 901, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1313 (Miss. 1973).

14. Pleading and practice.

Burden of showing lack of capacity to revoke on party seeking to establish lost will. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

15. Evidence — sufficiency.

The evidence was sufficient to rebut the presumption that a testator revoked a will which was known to have been made and was kept in a locked drawer of the testator's desk, but which was not found upon his death, where the testator had a close and affectionate relationship with his daughter who was the sole beneficiary under the will, he talked to people about his will and told them that he was leaving his entire estate to his daughter, there was nothing in the record suggesting that he had changed his mind, the desk in which the will was kept was subject to entry by others, and there was evidence that someone had entered the house and the desk area after the testator died and emptied the contents of filing cabinet drawers. Berry v. Smith, 584 So. 2d 400 (Miss. 1991).

Where a testator's will was found in a lock box at his bank, to which box only he had access, and where the testator's signature, but not the signatures of the witnesses, had been cut off of the bottom of the first two pages of the will apparently with scissors, but the third page with the signature of the testator and those of the witnesses, and with an attestation certificate also signed by the witnesses, was unmarred and intact, and in all other respects the will was in its original condition, the will had not been revoked. Griffith v. Movie Star of Collins, Inc., 233 So. 2d 760, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1664 (Miss. 1970).

Although there was no direct proof that the testatrix had destroyed the will, proof that the will was in her possession when last seen and that it could not be found after her death, together with other evidence, supported finding that complainant's proof was insufficient to establish the existence of the alleged lost or destroyed will at the time of testatrix's death, or to overcome the presumption that the will had been destroyed by the testatrix during her lifetime with the intention of revoking it. James v. Barber, 244 Miss. 234, 142 So. 2d 21, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 443 (Miss. 1962).

Although a will which had last been seen in testatrix' possession was not found after her death, evidence established that the testatrix did not revoke her will and rebutted the presumption as to revocation arising due to the fact that the will could not be found upon her death, especially since it appeared that the devisees under the will were blood relatives of the testatrix, and that one, who desired to defeat the will, had access to the place where it was kept. Adams v. Davis, 233 Miss. 228, 102 So. 2d 190, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 377 (Miss. 1958).

Under evidence that testatrix might have desired to revoke her will but later changed her mind, the chancellor did not err in holding that there had been no revocation where both copies of the instrument were found in her possession at the time of death, and even though the original or ribbon copy of the instrument, which was found in the envelope with other of the testatrix' papers, was torn from the bottom upwards by five separate tears which extended to points opposite or above the testatrix' signature, it was shown that no part of the instrument was torn off, and the signature of the testatrix and subscribing witnesses were plainly legible, there were no interlineations, erasures or cancellations on the instrument, and the carbon copy thereof was not torn. McCormack v. Warren, 228 Miss. 617, 89 So. 2d 702, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1956).

Will presumed destroyed animo revocandi, where traced to testator and not found after death. Watkins v. Watkins, 142 Miss. 210, 106 So. 753, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1926).

16. —Parol.

Parol testimony designed to show an implied revocation is not admissible. In re Stoball's Will, 211 Miss. 15, 50 So. 2d 635, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 327 (Miss. 1951).

The statute by its very language excludes parol testimony to change a will in any respect. Hilton v. Johnson, 194 Miss. 671, 12 So. 2d 524, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1943).

In a widow's contest of her husband's will, leaving all his property to his brothers and sisters, parol testimony of several witnesses, offered by the widow, that the husband had stated that he wanted her to have all of his property, was properly excluded as not establishing a revocation in the manner provided by this section [Code 1942, § 658]. Hilton v. Johnson, 194 Miss. 671, 12 So. 2d 524, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1943).

17. Equity; promise not to revoke.

A breach of a contract not to revoke a will is just that a breach of contract. It is not grounds for contesting the will pertaining to the contract. Remedies, if any, of promissor's heirs lie on the contract or perhaps upon constructive trust theory. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

A contract not to revoke a will may become irrevocable, as long as the promisee performs in accordance with the contract. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

A proper rescission of a contract not to revoke a will does not revoke the will to which the contract pertains. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Where testator executes a will in compliance with an oral agreement with the devisee that the latter will render unique and necessary personal services to testator involving a substantial change in the status and manner of living of the promisee, and such services have been performed, so that a revocation of the will amounts to fraud upon the devisee rendering it impossible or impracticable to restore devisee to prior situation, equity will hold such will to be irrevocable and the rights thereunder may be established. Johnston v. Tomme, 199 Miss. 337, 24 So. 2d 730, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1946).

If a testator or testatrix, having a child or children born at the time of making and publishing his or her last will and testament, shall, at his or her death, leave a child or children born after the making and publishing such last will and testament, the child or children so after-born, if unprovided for by settlement and neither provided for nor disinherited, but only pretermitted, by the last will and testament, shall succeed to the same portion of the father's or mother's estate as such child or children would have been entitled to if the father or mother had died intestate, towards raising which portion the devisees and legatees shall contribute proportionately out of the parts devised and bequeathed to them by the same will and testament, in the same manner as is provided in the case of posthumous children.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Rights of after-born children.

1. In general.

In interpreting a will, as affected by this section [Code 1942, § 659], and in an effort to determine the intent of the testatrix, the court should take into consideration all of the terms and provisions of the will and the circumstances surrounding the testatrix at the time at which she executed the will. Guion v. Guion, 232 Miss. 647, 100 So. 2d 351, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1958).

Intent is to be determined by the words of the will and by circumstances surrounding the testator, including the events and circumstances happening after the execution of the will and before the death of the testator. Guion v. Guion, 232 Miss. 647, 100 So. 2d 351, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1958).

In a case involving an adopted child born before the execution of a will, the court need not reach the question whether this section [Code 1942, § 659] was intended to apply to adopted children born after the execution of a will since the legislature intended pretermitted children provisions to apply only to children born after the will was made. Lee v. Foley, 224 Miss. 684, 80 So. 2d 765, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 531 (Miss. 1955).

2. Rights of after-born children.

Where a mother had two living children at the time she executed her will, the fact that she devised and bequeathed all of her property to her husband manifested an intent to disinherit her children as a class, so that a child born after the execution of the will had no inheritable rights in the mother's estate. Guion v. Guion, 232 Miss. 647, 100 So. 2d 351, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1958).

A general devise of a remainder or reversionary interest to the heirs of the testator or to his children does not comprehend a posthumous child, so as to prevent it from claiming under the statute as a child pretermitted by the will, in the absence of anything to show that the child was in the mind of the testator. Mahaffey v. First Nat'l Bank, 231 Miss. 798, 97 So. 2d 756, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 567 (Miss. 1957).

Provisions of testator's will, directing that the residue of testator's estate should be distributed into four parts, with one part each going to his wife and then living children, and devising a life estate in certain property to testator's sister and brother-in-law, with reversion to the heirs of testator's body, did not manifest an intent to deprive two children born after the execution of the will, one posthumously, of the status of pretermitted children. Mahaffey v. First Nat'l Bank, 231 Miss. 798, 97 So. 2d 756, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 567 (Miss. 1957).

Child born within 10 months after testator's death, or after time devisees must be living to take under will, takes under will; "in esse." Scott v. Turner, 137 Miss. 636, 102 So. 467, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 6 (Miss. 1925).

After-born children held to inherit interest in decedent's estate; devises and legacies held subject to proportionate contribution to make up shares of after-born children. Clark v. Clark, 126 Miss. 455, 89 So. 4, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 51 (Miss. 1921).

After-born children not provided for in will held vested with absolute title to property as if parent had died intestate. Clark v. Clark, 126 Miss. 455, 89 So. 4, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 51 (Miss. 1921).

Child born during testator's life, after making of will and not mentioned therein, there being other living children, became vested with absolute title to share in estate. Watkins v. Watkins, 88 Miss. 148, 40 So. 1001, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 150 (Miss. 1906).

§ 91-5-7. Bequests not to lapse in certain cases.

Whenever any estate of any kind shall or may be devised or bequeathed by the last will and testament of any testator or testatrix to any person being a child or descendant of such testator or testatrix, and such devisee or legatee shall, during the lifetime of such testator or testatrix, die testate or intestate, leaving a child or children, or one or more descendants of a child or children, who shall survive such testator or testatrix, in that case, such devise or legacy to such person so situated as above mentioned, and dying in the lifetime of the testator or testatrix, shall not lapse, but the estate so devised or bequeathed shall vest in such child or children, descendant or descendants, of such devisee or legatee in the same manner as if a legatee or devisee had survived the testator or testatrix and had died intestate.

Codes, Hutchinson's 1848, ch. 49, art. 1 (17); 1857, ch. 60, art. 37; 1871, § 2391; 1880, § 1265; 1892, § 4491; 1906, § 5081; Hemingway's 1917, § 3369; 1930, § 3553; 1942, § 660.

1. In general.

Where the residuary clause of the decedent's will gave an undivided one-half interest of the remainder of his estate to his wife, and secondly, an undivided one-half interest, per stirpes, to his children (by an earlier marriage), and where the wife predeceased the husband by one week, the chancery court properly rejected the stepchildren's argument that either spouse intended for all six children (the decedent's children and the stepchildren), to divide their estate equally, no matter which parent died first; because the writing was clear and spoke for itself, parol evidence was not admissible to alter the terms of the document, and the anti-lapse statute, Miss Code Ann. § 91-5-7, was clearly applicable, such that the failed devise to the wife passed to the decedent's natural children. Marlar v. Castillo-Ruiz (In re Will of Roland), 920 So. 2d 539, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 85 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Rule as to lapsed devises is applicable primarily to instances where devisee named in will predeceased testatrix. Mississippi State Univ. Found. v. Clark (In re Estate of Homburg), 697 So. 2d 1154, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1997).

Testamentary gift to life income beneficiary of testamentary trust lapsed when beneficiary predeceased testatrix; however, gift over to remaindermen did not lapse, as remaindermen were capable of taking at time of death of testatrix. Mississippi State Univ. Found. v. Clark (In re Estate of Homburg), 697 So. 2d 1154, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1997).

In a proceeding seeking interpretation of a residuary clause of a will in which the testator left his residual estate to his daughter and to his brothers and sisters, share and share alike, several of whom predeceased the testator, the chancellor properly held that the lapsed portions of the testator's estate descended by the laws of intestate succession to his daughter, his heir-at-law. Moffett v. Howard, 392 So. 2d 509, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1903 (Miss. 1981).

Where a son died intestate prior to the death of the testatrix and left a son and daughter as his surviving heirs, such surviving heirs succeeded to the share of their father in the estate. Martin v. Eslick, 229 Miss. 234, 90 So. 2d 635, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 604 (Miss. 1956).

The rule as to lapsed devises is applicable primarily to instances where the devisee named in the will had died prior to the death of the testator. Hays v. Cole, 221 Miss. 459, 73 So. 2d 258, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 551 (Miss. 1954).

Under devise of residue of estate under will to the fiancee, two uncles and a cousin of testator, the share of one of the devisees who predeceased the testator goes to testator's heirs at law, and is not saved by this section [Code 1942, § 660]. Clark v. Case, 207 Miss. 163, 42 So. 2d 109, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 1949).

This section [Code 1942, § 660] does not apply to bequests to those who are not descendants of the testator, and a legacy to a niece who predeceased the testator lapsed so that her son did not inherit through her. Kullman v. Dreyfus' Estate, 201 Miss. 887, 30 So. 2d 81, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 460 (Miss. 1947).

Leasehold interest in school land in state owned by testatrix of other state is governed by Mississippi law; legacy lapses on death of legatee without children though statute of domicile of testatrix provides contrary. Neblett v. Neblett, 112 Miss. 550, 73 So. 575, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 145 (Miss. 1916).

§ 91-5-9. Devise to witness void.

If any person be a subscribing witness to a will wherein any devise or bequest is made to him and the will cannot otherwise be proven, such devise or bequest shall be void, and the witness shall be competent as to the residue of the will as if a devise or bequest had not been made to him, and he may be compelled to testify. If such witness would have been entitled to any share of the testator's estate in case the will were not established, then so much of such share shall be saved to the witness as shall not exceed the value of the devise or bequest made to him in the will.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Where a devisee or legatee to the will is also a witness, the devise or bequest to him is void but the witness is competent as to the residue of the will, so the will is valid except as to the annulled legacy or devise. Estate of Crawford v. Crawford, 225 Miss. 208, 82 So. 2d 823, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 574 (Miss. 1955).

Devise to witness is void, but witness is competent to establish residue of the will. Swanzy v. Kolb, 94 Miss. 10, 46 So. 549, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1908); Estate of Crawford v. Crawford, 225 Miss. 208, 82 So. 2d 823, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 574 (Miss. 1955).

Where a husband qualified as executor under the will of his wife, proved the will as a subscribing witness, and administered the estate, he is estopped to claim title to land belonging to him and devised by the will to a third party. In this case this section [Code 1942, § 661] was not invoked, and the husband took the bequests and devises under the will. West v. West, 131 Miss. 880, 95 So. 739, 1923 Miss. § 91-5-11. Devise or bequest to trustee.

(1) A devise or bequest in a will duly executed pursuant to the provisions of Section 91-5-1 of Mississippi Code of 1972 may be made to the trustee of a trust which is evidenced by a written instrument in existence when the will is made and which is identified in the will. Such devise or bequest shall not be invalid because the trust is amendable or revocable, or both, by the settlor or any other person or persons; nor because the trust instrument or any amendment thereto was not executed in the manner required for wills; nor because the trust was amended after execution of the will. Unless the will provides otherwise, such devise or bequest shall operate to dispose of the property under the terms and provisions of the instrument creating the trust, including any amendments or modifications in writing made at any time before or after the making of the will and before the death of the testator, and the property shall not be deemed held under a testamentary trust. An entire revocation of the trust prior to the testator's death shall invalidate the devise or bequest.

(2) The provisions of this section shall apply to all devises or bequests made in any will duly executed according to said section of any testator dying after May 6, 1958, whether the will is executed before or after that date.

(3) The term "will" in this section shall include and refer to the term "codicil".

1. In general.

Biological father entitled to inherit from illegitimate child is entitled to share in recovery in wrongful death action. Burdette v. Crump, 472 So. 2d 959, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2142 (Miss. 1985).

"Last sickness," as used in statute permitting nuncupative wills under certain conditions, means that at time of making will testator is in extremis, at least so near death that he did not have reasonable time and opportunity to make written will. Schmitz v. Summers, 179 Miss. 260, 174 So. 569, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. 1937).

Where testator made nuncupative will while sick with illness of which he died, but neither testator nor his physician considered his condition mortally serious, will was invalid under statute requiring nuncupative wills to be made "in the time of last sickness." Schmitz v. Summers, 179 Miss. 260, 174 So. 569, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. 1937).

Nuncupative will is testamentary declaration, not in writing, made before sufficient number of witnesses when testator is in extremis. Lee v. Barrow, 156 Miss. 711, 126 So. 648, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1930).

Nuncupative will requires intent of testator that declaration then made constitute his will without being embodied in written instrument. Lee v. Barrow, 156 Miss. 711, 126 So. 648, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1930).

Instrument dictated in form of letter to executor was simply defectively executed written will and not subject to probate as nuncupative will. Lee v. Barrow, 156 Miss. 711, 126 So. 648, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1930).

The witnesses are not required to prove the presence of each other. Burch v. Stovall, 27 Miss. 725, 1854 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1854).

2. Devise of lands.

Lands do not pass under a nuncupative will. Sadler v. Sadler, 60 Miss. 251, 1882 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1882).

3. Foreign nuncupative wills.

The removal and change of citizenship from Louisiana to this state of a person who has executed a nuncupative will in that state according to its laws does not revoke the will. Pratt v. Hargraves, 77 Miss. 892, 28 So. 722, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 1900).

4. Not found.

Where a joint owner of a certificate of deposit (CD) still retained an ownership interest when the CD was reissued with new owners right at the time of her death, there was no violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-5-15 since there was no testamentary devise. DeJean v. DeJean, 982 So. 2d 443, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 730 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. Validity of Postnuptial Agreements in Contemplation of Spouse's Death. 87 A.L.R.6th 495.

When a husband makes his last will and testament and does not make satisfactory provision therein for his wife, she may, at any time within ninety (90) days after the probate of the will, file in the office where probated a renunciation to the following effect, viz.: "I, A B, the widow of C D, hereby renounce the provision made for me by the will of my deceased husband, and elect to take in lieu thereof my legal share of his estate." Thereupon she shall be entitled to such part of his estate, real and personal, as she would have been entitled to if he had died intestate, except that, even if the husband left no child nor descendant of such, the widow, upon renouncing, shall be entitled to only one-half (½) of the real and personal estate of her deceased husband. The husband may renounce the will of his deceased wife under the same circumstances, in the same time and manner, and with the same effect upon his right to share in her estate as herein provided for the widow.

1. In general.

Where a husband can properly renounce his wife's will, and there are no children, he is entitled to one half of the estate of his deceased wife; however, the right of a husband to renounce is qualified by Code 1942, § 670, which expressly applies to husband renouncing the will of his wife. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

The effect of renunciation is to make the deceased spouse an intestate as to one-half of the willed property, leaving the will to stand as to the other half, so that the deductions provided in Code 1942, § 670, on account of the separate estate of the surviving spouse are to be taken out of the half of the total estate to which the surviving spouse is limited by this section. [Code 1942, § 668]. Davis v. Miller, 202 Miss. 880, 32 So. 2d 871, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 351 (Miss. 1947).

2. Construction.

Code 1942, §§ 470 and 668, must be construed together. Callicott & Norfleet v. Callicott, 90 Miss. 221, 43 So. 616, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 83 (Miss. 1907).

A failure to renounce within the statutory time amounts to an election to take under the will. Collins v. Melton, 40 Miss. 242, 1866 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1866).

3. Who may take or renounce.

A wife justified in living separate and apart from her husband at the time of his death, there being no children, was entitled to renounce his will and take one-half of his estate, less the value of her own separate property. Stringer v. Arrington, 202 Miss. 798, 32 So. 2d 879, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 1947).

4. —Common law spouse.

In a proceeding to renounce will and to obtain a year's support from the estate on ground that plaintiff had been testator's common law wife, the will which did not refer to the plaintiff as wife, but left her an annuity as long as she was unmarried, could be taken into consideration. Martin v. Martin's Estate, 217 Miss. 173, 63 So. 2d 827, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 421 (Miss. 1953).

In a proceeding to renounce will and to obtain a year's support from the estate on ground that plaintiff had been testator's common law wife, income returns for years during which plaintiff claimed to have been testator's common law wife in which plaintiff reported herself as single person constituted competent evidence since they were declarations against interest. Martin v. Martin's Estate, 217 Miss. 173, 63 So. 2d 827, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 421 (Miss. 1953).

In a proceeding to renounce will and to obtain a year's support from the estate on ground that plaintiff had been testator's common law wife, income tax reports for a period which plaintiff claimed to be common law wife, filed by the plaintiff as a single person did not constitute a waiver of plaintiff's disqualification as witness under the Deadman's Statute. Martin v. Martin's Estate, 217 Miss. 173, 63 So. 2d 827, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 421 (Miss. 1953).

5. Time within which to renounce.

Substantial evidence supported the chancery court's judgment awarding a wife a one-third interest in a decedent's estate because the wife filed a renunciation of the provision made for her in the will and her intention to elect her spousal share within the time period established by the statute, and the chancery court found that the wife complied with the statute. Chester v. Labasse (in re Estate of Labasse), — So. 3d — (Miss. 2017)

Widow may renounce at any time within 6 months after probate; widow and not court determines what is "satisfactory provision." Simpson v. Simpson, 120 Miss. 197, 82 So. 3, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1919).

Spouse's right to renounce will under statute was personal and abated at her demise; therefore, such right may not be undertaken by personal representative after death of spouse, even where death occurs prior to expiration of statutory period for election. Shattuck v. Estate of Tyson, 508 So. 2d 1077, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2556 (Miss. 1987).

A widow's renunciation of her husband's will, which renunciation was made before the will was admitted to probate, was nevertheless effective and valid, despite the provision in § 91-5-25 stating that renunciation may be made at any time within 90 days after the probate of the will. Gettis v. McAllister, 411 So. 2d 770, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 1917 (Miss. 1982).

6. Right as personal.

Spouse's right to renounce will under statute was personal and abated at her demise; therefore, such right may not be undertaken by personal representative after death of spouse, even where death occurs prior to expiration of statutory period for election. Shattuck v. Estate of Tyson, 508 So. 2d 1077, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2556 (Miss. 1987).

Where a wife in her will failed to make any provision for her surviving husband, and the husband's property was not equal to his lawful portion of the wife's estate, the right of the husband to renounce the will and to take his legal share of the wife's estate vested as a matter of law and became part of his estate upon his death, exercisable by the executor of the husband's estate, even though before his death, 3 weeks following his wife's death, the husband did not renounce the wife's will or take any affirmative action with reference thereto. McBride v. Haynes, 247 So. 2d 129, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1436 (Miss. 1971).

The personal representative of a deceased spouse does not have the right to renounce the will of a predeceased spouse under this section [Code 1942, § 668], for the privilege is one which must be invoked personally by the surviving spouse during her lifetime. Jenkins v. Borodofsky, 211 So. 2d 874, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1288 (Miss. 1968).

Equitable estoppel does not and cannot authorize the exercise of a personal right which terminates with the death of a spouse, and the fact that a husband shot and killed his wife, an act which would have precluded his inheriting her estate, is no justification for permitting the deceased wife's personal representatives to renounce the husband's will, an act which by law can only be invoked personally by a surviving spouse. Jenkins v. Borodofsky, 211 So. 2d 874, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1288 (Miss. 1968).

The right to renounce a will conferred by this statute upon a surviving spouse may not be exercised by his or her administrator. Estate of Mullins v. Estate of Mullins, 239 Miss. 751, 125 So. 2d 93, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1960).

7. Renunciation for person non compos mentis.

Where a widow has been mentally incompetent continuously from the death of the testator and has no guardian acting in her behalf during the statutory period for renunciation, its lapse is no bar to a subsequent election in her behalf by the court, or guardian acting under supervision and approval of the court; for the general rule is that where an election is required by statute to be made within a certain period of time, the incompetency of the person entitled to elect is considered as warranting an extension of the statutory period. Wolcott v. Wolcott, 184 So. 2d 381, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1459 (Miss. 1966).

The general savings statute in favor of those under disabilities insofar as limitations of actions are concerned does not apply to the statute giving a widow the right to renounce her husband's will under certain circumstances. Wolcott v. Wolcott, 184 So. 2d 381, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1459 (Miss. 1966).

The right to renounce a will conferred by this statute upon a surviving spouse may be exercised by a guardian in case of such spouse's incompetency. Estate of Mullins v. Estate of Mullins, 239 Miss. 751, 125 So. 2d 93, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1960).

Guardian, with approval of chancery court, may renounce for widow non compos mentis. Hardy v. Richards, 98 Miss. 625, 54 So. 76, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 101 (Miss. 1910).

8. Effect on right to contest will.

Renouncement by a widow of her husband's will does not constitute an abandonment of her action to contest the will, since renouncement does not affect the validity of the will but merely affects the amount of property which the parties receive, and, therefore, renouncement does not constitute an estoppel to contest the will. Edwards v. Edwards, 193 Miss. 889, 11 So. 2d 450, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1943).

Where a widow contesting the will of her husband renounced within the time prescribed, there was no inconsistency between such renunciation and the will contest so as to preclude her appeal from an adverse decision in the will contest, since both by the renunciation and the contest, if successful, she takes by inheritance; and renunciation is not an abandonment of the contest since renouncement does not affect the validity of the will but merely affects the amount of property which the parties receive. Edwards v. Edwards, 193 Miss. 889, 11 So. 2d 450, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1943).

Renunciation by a widow of her husband's will within the time prescribed and pending an appeal from a judgment against her in a contest of the will, did not preclude her from prosecuting her appeal in the will contest irrespective of any inconsistency between renunciation and the prosecution of the appeal. Edwards v. Edwards, 193 Miss. 889, 11 So. 2d 450, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1943).

9. Effect on executorship.

Husband must renounce wife's will and refuse qualification as executor if he would keep on property devised thereunder. West v. West, 131 Miss. 880, 95 So. 739, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 1923).

10. Testator having foreign domicil.

Husband may renounce wife's will and take child's share, although domicil of testatrix in foreign state. Bolton v. Barnett, 131 Miss. 802, 95 So. 721, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 220 (Miss. 1923).

Right of husband to renounce will of wife and take child's part governed by law of state, and not by law of wife's domicil; husband renouncing will of wife, who also leaves children, may take child's part in both real and personal property. Bolton v. Barnett, 131 Miss. 802, 95 So. 721, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 220 (Miss. 1923).

11. Contract to make or renounce will.

Although proper contracts not to renounce a will are enforceable even though Code 1972 § 91-5-25 provides that a husband or wife may renounce the will of another, the wife's agreement not to renounce her will constituted an unconscionable contract so as to permit the wife's renunciation of her husband's will, notwithstanding her prior agreement not to renounce, where the wife was taken by her husband directly from her job to the office of the husband's attorney and persuaded to assign the contract without prior knowledge of its existence or the opportunity to read the entire contract, and where the provision in the will, giving the wife a life estate in the parties' homestead as long as she continued to live on the property, was minimal consideration when viewed against her rights under the laws of descent and distribution including her statutory right to a life estate in the homestead under Code 1972 § 91-1-23 irrespective of her living on the property. In re Will of Johnson, 351 So. 2d 1339, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 1950 (Miss. 1977).

Release of a right to renounce wife's will by the husband constituted sufficient consideration for a contract by the wife to will to the husband or his issue one third of her estate, so that the wife could not, by revoking the will executed pursuant to the contract, defeat the rights of the predeceased husband's issue. In re Estate of Sadler, 232 Miss. 349, 98 So. 2d 863, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 482 (Miss. 1957).

Husband's will giving property to one who provided for him pursuant to contract was an obligation of the contract, not an abrogation of the contract which would enable widow to renounce will. Price v. Craig, 164 Miss. 42, 143 So. 694, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 218 (Miss. 1932).

12. Valuation, calculation.

The value of real property in Louisiana would not be included in the value of an estate for the purpose of determining the lawful portion of the surviving husband of the testatrix, when he renounced the will in Mississippi, by the testatrix' real and personal estate in Mississippi. Banks v. Junk, 264 So. 2d 387, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1356 (Miss. 1972).

In a proceeding to determine whether surviving husband's separate estate was equal in value to one half portion of his deceased wife's estate, the chancellor properly found that the husband had not conveyed his one half interest in certain Louisiana property to his children prior to wife's death, but had given the property to his children by an act of donation after the event; thus, the value of the husband's one half interest in the Louisiana property, less one half of the outstanding mortgage loan, should have been included in the valuation of his separate estate along with the value of his personal property, and he was precluded by Code 1942, § 670, from renouncing his wife's will, which made no provision for him, since his property at the time of her death was more than equal in value to what would have been his lawful portion of her estate. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

Where testatrix had willed an estate of the value of $90,000, and surviving husband had a separate estate worth $30,000, upon renunciation the surviving husband was entitled only to have the value of his separate estate deducted from one-half of the value of testatrix's estate, leaving the sum of $15,000 as a deficiency to be made up for the surviving husband. Davis v. Miller, 202 Miss. 880, 32 So. 2d 871, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 351 (Miss. 1947).

13. Effect on trusts, insurance proceeds.

Where will gave widow one-half interest in testator's entire estate except proceeds of an insurance policy, which were directed to be used to pay certain legacies and to set up a trust for testator's adopted son, widow on renunciation was entitled to one-half the personal estate to the extent of impairing the trust if net personal estate was insufficient. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

Where a widow renounced will leaving her one-half of testator's entire estate except proceeds of insurance policy which were to be used to pay bills of testator's aged father not to exceed $500 and to provide small monthly payments for such father's living expenses, with residue to be used in trust for adopted son, and personal estate of testator was substantial, award to widow would not be postponed pending ascertainment of liabilities with respect to insurance proceeds, since such contingent liabilities were inconsequential in comparison with the net personal estate of the testator. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

Where widow renounced will, leaving her undivided one-half interest in the entire estate excluding proceeds of an insurance policy, and contained a similar provision for testator's adopted son together with a trust in favor of such son with respect to the insurance proceeds, the son took under the will and not as an heir. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

14. Effect on debts.

Widow accepting devise made subject to payment of debts must pay them though she might have renounced. Rainey v. Rainey, 124 Miss. 780, 87 So. 128, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 550 (Miss. 1921).

The estate does not on the widow's election to take against the will become intestate as to the widow's share so as to incumber that share primarily with the debts of the estate, but she is entitled to the same proportion of the estate which she would have taken had her husband died intestate, after the payment of the debts from the whole estate. Gordon v. James, 86 Miss. 719, 39 So. 18, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1905).

15. Application in particular cases.

Chancery court was not manifestly wrong in granting a widow a child's share of her late husband's estate after finding that she had not abandoned her marriage because there was no legal change of marital status; the changer court found that the widow did not willfully leave or have the intention of permanently separating from the marital relationship. Estes v. Estes, 226 So. 3d 583, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2017).

The right of a widow to renounce her husband's will could not be exercised by the co-conservators of her estate where no evidence was presented to the court demonstrating that the widow was non compos mentis, and court approval for the co-conservators to file on her behalf was neither requested nor given. Greer v. State, 755 So. 2d 511, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 434 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A trial court erred in considering a widow's homestead right as part of her separate estate for purposes of determining and reducing the value of her statutory share of the net assets of the estate resulting from her election against her husband's will since her homestead right was not property owned by her at the time of her husband's death, but accrued to her as the result of her husband's death and the renunciation of his will. Holloway v. Holloway (In re Estate of Holloway), 631 So. 2d 127, 1993 Miss. LEXIS 603 (Miss. 1993).

Widow who had entered into a property settlement agreement with husband may not elect to take against his will unless her estate is less than one half of her deceased husband's estate. Will of Best v. Brewer, 236 Miss. 359, 111 So. 2d 262, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 325 (Miss. 1959).

Under Code 1942, § 668, together with Code 1942, § 670, the widow is entitled to one-half of testator's net estate, where he died leaving widow and adopted son as only heirs of law. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

Upon a widow's renunciation of a testator's will devising to her a life estate in his home with remainder to a daughter, the widow became entitled to a one-third interest to the property in fee, and the daughter to the other two-thirds interest therein, subject to the right of the widow to occupy and use it during her widowhood. Milton v. Milton, 193 Miss. 563, 10 So. 2d 175, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 131 (Miss. 1942).

Where a testator directed that monthly payments of $200 be made to his wife so long as she remained his widow, and that, "in the event of the death or remarriage of my wife, and $200 monthly payments shall cease, then" the sum of $75 per month should be paid to a daughter and to a stepdaughter, the use of the words "and $200 monthly payments shall cease" between the words "wife" and "then" demonstrated that he meant that the payment to the daughters should begin on the cessation for any reason of the monthly payments bequeathed to the widow, and, upon renunciation of the will by the widow, the bequests of monthly payments to the daughters became at once effective, regardless of the fact that the widow was still living and had not remarried. Milton v. Milton, 193 Miss. 563, 10 So. 2d 175, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 131 (Miss. 1942).

Provision that on renunciation husband shall be entitled to one-half of wife's estate does not limit his rights as heir to property not devised. Cain v. Barnwell, 124 Miss. 860, 87 So. 484, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 190 (Miss. 1921).

Widow with one child upon renouncing took child's part. Williams v. Williams, 111 Miss. 129, 71 So. 300, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 253 (Miss. 1916).

Upon renunciation one-half of land not going to widow descended as intestate property, and did not go to residuary legatees. Gordan v. Perry, 98 Miss. 893, 54 So. 445, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1910).

Upon renouncing will widow became tenant in common with residuary legatees and devisees, and with them entitled to sue for partition. Laughlin v. O'Reily, 92 Miss. 121, 45 So. 193, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 11 (Miss. 1907).

Where 3 of 6 children of testator received advancements extinguishing their rights in estate, widow by renouncing became entitled to one-fourth interest. Callicott & Norfleet v. Callicott, 90 Miss. 221, 43 So. 616, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 83 (Miss. 1907).

The estate does not on the widow's election to take against the will become intestate as to the widow's share so as to incumber that share primarily with the debts of the estate, but she is entitled to the same proportion of the estate which she would have taken had her husband died intestate, after the payment of the debts from the whole estate. Gordon v. James, 86 Miss. 719, 39 So. 18, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1905).

Where a widow has elected under this section [Code 1942, § 668] to take against her husband's will she becomes a co-tenant with the devisee in each and every parcel of real estate specifically devised by her deceased husband, and is not made a creditor of the estate by Code 1906, § 5089 (Code 1942, § 670). Gordon v. James, 86 Miss. 719, 39 So. 18, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1905).

16. Effect, tax deductions.

The estate tax marital deduction available under 26 USCS § 2056 is not limited to the amount of property the taxpayer could receive by renouncing the will under state law. Waldrup v. United States, 499 F. Supp. 820, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16059 (N.D. Miss. 1980).

§ 91-5-27. Effect of no provision for husband or wife.

If the will of the husband or wife shall not make any provision for the other, the survivor of them shall have the right to share in the estate of the deceased husband or wife, as in case of unsatisfactory provision in the will of the husband or wife for the other of them. In such case a renunciation of the will shall not be necessary, but the rights of the survivor shall be as if the will had contained a provision that was unsatisfactory and it had been renounced.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Trial court erred in failing to determine whether a widow clearly deserted or abandoned her marriage when she left the decedent's home by her own volition after his leg was amputated, and was living in her own home when he died such that she was not entitled to take a child's share of the estate under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-5-27. In re Estate of Estes, 111 So. 3d 1223, 2012 Miss. App. LEXIS 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2012).

No revocation of will as matter of law occurred when, subsequent to death of beneficiary, constructive trust was imposed on assets of estate resulting in husband's will making no provision for wife. Shattuck v. Estate of Tyson, 508 So. 2d 1077, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2556 (Miss. 1987).

The trial court erred in holding that a husband was not entitled to an undivided one-half interest in the real and personal property owned by his deceased wife where, although the parties had lived apart for 15 to 20 years, there was no substantial evidence to show a desertion or abandonment as to estop the husband from claiming under the statute; at most the evidence proved that there had been a long separation between the parties. Tillman v. Williams, 403 So. 2d 880, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2188 (Miss. 1981).

A wife's failure to renounce her husband's will in the six months after its probate constituted a waiver of her right to do so. Rush v. Rush, 360 So. 2d 1240, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2341 (Miss. 1978).

In an action between the beneficiaries under testator's will and the heirs of his widow, who had renounced the will, the chancellor, after finding the testator's net estate and the widow's net estate at the time of testator's death, correctly determined that the estate should be distributed according to Code 1942, § 670, and that the widow's heirs were entitled to the difference between one half of the net estate of the testator and the net value of the widow's estate. The contention by the heirs at law of the widow that under the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 669] the widow was entitled to one half of the real and personal estate of the testator without regard to Code 1942, § 670, and that in any event they were entitled to an undivided one third interest in the real property and one third of the net distribution of the personal property of the deceased, was rejected. Carter v. Evans, 230 Miss. 803, 94 So. 2d 237, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 425 (Miss. 1957).

Husband's will giving property to one who provided for him pursuant to contract prior to his marriage to the wife who survived him, and while a former wife was still living, was not abrogation of contract which would enable widow to renounce will. Price v. Craig, 164 Miss. 42, 143 So. 694, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 218 (Miss. 1932).

Husband not provided for in will, held entitled to undivided one-half interest in homestead lands devised by wife. Cain v. Barnwell, 125 Miss. 123, 87 So. 481, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 339 (Miss. 1921).

Husband without separate estate entitled to undivided interest in land devised where wife's will made no provision for him. Caine v. Barnwell, 120 Miss. 209, 82 So. 65, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 79 (Miss. 1919).

§ 91-5-29. Effect of wife or husband having separate estate.

In case the wife have a separate property at the time of the death of her husband, equal in value to what would be her lawful portion of her husband's real and personal estate, and he have made a will, she shall not be at liberty to signify her dissent to the will or to renounce any provision or bequest therein in her favor and elect to take her portion of his estate. If her separate property be not equal in value to what would be the value of her portion of her husband's estate, then she may signify her dissent to the will, as in other cases provided by law, and claim to have the deficiency made up to her, notwithstanding the will. The court in which the will is probated may appoint three commissioners to ascertain, by valuation of the estate, what her lawful portion thereof would be worth; and the commissioners shall also value her own separate estate and report their valuation to the court. Whereupon the court shall make the proper order for allowing her to share in her husband's real and personal estate to make up the deficiency after the following rule: if her separate property be equal in value to two thirds of what she would be entitled to, she shall have one third of her lawful portion of the land and one third of what would be her distributive share of the personalty; if her separate property be worth half in value what she would be entitled to, then she shall be entitled to half her lawful portion of real estate and half of what would be her distributive share of the personalty; if her separate property be worth only one third in value what she would be entitled to, then she shall be entitled to two thirds of her lawful portion of real estate and two thirds of what would be her distributive share in the personalty. This section shall not preclude or prevent any married woman from renouncing the provisions of her husband's will and electing to take her lawful portion if her separate property do not amount in value to one fifth of what she would be entitled to. This section shall apply to a husband renouncing the will of his wife, and shall govern as to his right to share in her estate in such case.

1. In general.
2. Institution of valuation proceedings.
3. What includible in survivor's separate estate.
4. What includible in deceased's estate.
5. Particular applications.

1. In general.

The rule for the distribution of the estate of a decedent upon renunciation of a will is to determine the value of the gross estate of the decedent, deduct from that amount the debts of the decedent, administrative expenses and funeral expenses, leaving the net value of the decedent's estate; when the surviving spouse is entitled to one-half of the estate, the net value must be divided by two and the net value of the estate of the surviving spouse is deducted from such figure, and any balance remaining would be a deficiency to be made up to the surviving spouse. Banks v. Junk, 264 So. 2d 387, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1356 (Miss. 1972).

Husband whose property greatly exceeds that of his wife may not renounce her will. Biggs v. Roberts, 237 Miss. 406, 115 So. 2d 151, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1959).

Widow who had entered into a property settlement agreement with husband may not elect to take against his will unless her estate is less than one half of her deceased husband's estate. Will of Best v. Brewer, 236 Miss. 359, 111 So. 2d 262, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 325 (Miss. 1959).

Where a husband can properly renounce his wife's will, and there are no children, he is entitled to one half of the estate of his deceased wife; however, the right of a husband to renounce is qualified by this section [Code 1942, § 670], which expressly applies to husband renouncing the will of his wife. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

Under Code 1942, § 668, together with this section [Code 1942, § 670], the widow is entitled to one-half of testator's net estate, where he died leaving widow and adopted son as only heirs of law. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

The effect of renunciation is to make the deceased spouse an intestate as to one-half of the willed property, leaving the will to stand as to the other half, so that the deductions provided in this section [Code 1942, § 670] on account of the separate estate of the surviving spouse are to be taken out of the half of the total estate to which the surviving spouse is limited by Code 1942, § 668. Davis v. Miller, 202 Miss. 880, 32 So. 2d 871, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 351 (Miss. 1947).

The widow is not made a creditor of the estate by this section [Code 1942, § 670] where she has elected to take against her husband's will. Gordon v. James, 86 Miss. 719, 39 So. 18, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1905).

2. Institution of valuation proceedings.

Beneficiaries under will desiring to have widow's separate estate counted against her apportionment should file petition stating facts, but the petition cannot be heard until 12 months after probate and before final settlement. Simpson v. Simpson, 120 Miss. 197, 82 So. 3, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1919).

Proceeding to appoint commissioner may be instituted by executor or any person interested, but all interested persons must be made parties. Jones v. Jones, 94 Miss. 460, 49 So. 115, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 367 (Miss. 1909).

3. What includible in survivor's separate estate.

Contention by the heirs at law of widow that joint and survivorship bank accounts in the name of the widow and the testator, who predeceased widow, were not properly a part of the widow's separate estate, was rejected. Carter v. Evans, 230 Miss. 803, 94 So. 2d 237, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 425 (Miss. 1957).

Proceeds of insurance which widow took as sole heir of husband were not part of her separate estate. O'Reily v. Laughlin, 92 Miss. 1, 45 So. 19, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 7 (Miss. 1907).

4. What includible in deceased's estate.

Contention by the heirs at law of widow that joint and survivorship bank accounts in the name of the widow and the testator, who predeceased widow, were not properly a part of the widow's separate estate, was rejected. Carter v. Evans, 230 Miss. 803, 94 So. 2d 237, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 425 (Miss. 1957).

Where the testator prior to her marriage to appellant had signed and acknowledged a warranty deed conveying her farm to her niece, reserving to herself a life estate, and handed the deed to her brother with the instructions to keep and deliver it to the niece upon the testator's death, there was a valid delivery from the testator to the niece, so that the value of the farm did not form a part of the testator's estate. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

Where a number of Series E Savings Bonds were payable jointly to the wife or some third persons designated therein, the bonds, upon the wife's death, were not a portion of her estate, since the surviving co-owners of the bonds became the sole and absolute owners. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

Where a certificate of deposit in the bank was payable to the wife or the wife's brother, upon the death of the wife, this deposit became the property of the brother, and was no portion of the wife's estate. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

5. Particular applications.

In an action between the beneficiaries under testator's will and the heirs of his widow, who had renounced the will, the chancellor, after finding the testator's net estate and the widow's net estate at the time of testator's death, correctly determined that the estate should be distributed according to this section [Code 1942, § 670], and that the widow's heirs were entitled to the difference between one half of the net estate of the testator and the net value of widow's estate. Carter v. Evans, 230 Miss. 803, 94 So. 2d 237, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 425 (Miss. 1957).

In a proceeding to determine whether a surviving husband's separate estate was equal in value to one half portion of his deceased wife's estate, the chancellor properly found that the husband had not conveyed his one half interest in certain Louisiana property to his children prior to death of testator, but that he had given his children the property by an act of donation after the event; thus, the value of the husband's one half interest in the Louisiana property, less one half of the outstanding mortgage loan, should have been included in the valuation of his separate estate along with the value of his personal property, and he was precluded by this section [Code 1942, § 670] from renouncing his wife's will, which made no provision for him, since his property at the time of her death was more than equal in value to what would have been his lawful portion of her estate. Myers v. Laird, 230 Miss. 675, 93 So. 2d 828, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 409 (Miss. 1957).

Where a testatrix had willed an estate of the value of $90,000, and surviving husband had a separate estate worth $30,000, upon renunciation the surviving husband was entitled only to have the value of his separate estate deducted from one-half of the value of testatrix's estate, leaving the sum of $15,000 as a deficiency to be made up for the surviving husband. Davis v. Miller, 202 Miss. 880, 32 So. 2d 871, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 351 (Miss. 1947).

Editor's Notes —

Former § 91-5-31 was a statute of mortmain, and provided certain restrictions on how a person could, by will, bequeath or devise his assets to charitable, religious, educational or civil institutions. Similar provisions are contained in Miss. Const., Art. 14, § 270.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

The legislature intended the repeal of the statute to be effective as of its date of passage in that there is no savings clause included. Hudson v. Moon, 732 So. 2d 927, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1999).

Where heirs at law had a vested remainder, subject to defeasance by the exercise of a power of disposition by the defendant foundation, but the foundation failed to exercise such power, the subsequent repeal of the statute did not affect the heirs' rights and they maintained rights in the land not disposed of by the foundation. Hudson v. Moon, 732 So. 2d 927, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1999).

§ 91-5-33. Person who kills another not to take under his will.

If any person shall wilfully cause or procure the death of another in any manner, he shall not take the property, or any part thereof, real or personal, of such other under any will, testament, or codicil. Any devise to such person shall be void and, as to the property so devised, the decedent shall be deemed to have died intestate.

This shall not defeat the title of a bona fide purchaser for value of the property so devised, who acquired the same after one year from the probation of the will without notice that the person to whom the same was devised so caused or procured the death of the testator.

Inheritance by killer from his victim, see § 91-1-25.

1. In general.

This section requires a finding of willful conduct to preclude a person from inheriting from his or her victim. Because an insane person lacks the requisite ability willfully to kill another person, the Slayer Statute is not applicable in cases where the killer is determined to be insane at the time of the killing. Armstrong v. Armstrong (In re Estate of Armstrong), 170 So. 3d 510, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 378 (Miss. 2015).

Evidence of a guilty plea to a charge of manslaughter is not sufficient, standing alone, to enable a fact finder to conclude that one is prohibited from inheriting under §§ 91-1-25 and 91-5-33. Hood v. VanDevender, 661 So. 2d 198, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 456 (Miss. 1995).

Equitable estoppel does not and cannot authorize the exercise of a personal right which terminates with the death of a spouse, and the fact that a husband shot and killed his wife, an act which would have precluded his inheriting her estate, is no justification for permitting the deceased wife's personal representatives to renounce the husband's will, an act which by law can only be invoked personally by a surviving spouse. Jenkins v. Borodofsky, 211 So. 2d 874, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1288 (Miss. 1968).

Wills shall be proved in and letters testamentary thereon granted by the chancery court of the county in which the testator had a fixed place of residence. If he had no fixed place of residence and land be devised in the will, it shall be proved in and letters granted by the chancery court of the county where the land, or some part thereof, is situated. If the testator had no fixed place of residence and personal property only be disposed of by the will, it may be proved in and letters granted by the chancery court of the county where the testator died, or of the county in which some part of the property may be.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Forum county pursuant to Miss. Const. Art. VI, § 159 had full jurisdiction over admission of the testator's will to probate. Indeed, under that constitutional provision it had full jurisdiction over matters testamentary and of administration, and the forum county under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-1 was the proper location to hear probate matters concerning the testator's estate because the testator at the time of his death had a fixed residence in the forum county. Ellzey v. McCormick, 17 So. 3d 583, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Hancock County was the proper venue to admit a nondomiciliary's will where the decedent, after living in the county for more than 30 years, had at least acquired some clothing or other personal property in the county in which he died. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

As decedent's will was not a foreign will, but a domestic will, sounding in Mississippi law, executed by the decedent in Mississippi where he had resided in a residential care facility for 25 years, and where he died, the trial court properly determined that it had subject matter jurisdiction to probate the will under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-1. Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

If the testator had no fixed place of residence, and only personal property is to be disposed of by the will, it may be proved in, and letters granted by, the chancery court of the county where the testator died, or the county in which some part of the property may be. Halford v. Hines, 223 Miss. 786, 79 So. 2d 264, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1955).

Where it was shown that the testator had lived for seventy years on the farm, and when he moved to a town did not move any of his household effects and a witness testified that the testator was coming back home, the evidence was sufficient to support the finding that the testator had not changed his residence. Halford v. Hines, 223 Miss. 786, 79 So. 2d 264, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1955).

Domestic will when probated and recorded in county in which testator resided at time of death constituted notice throughout state to subsequent mortgagee of land in Mississippi devised by will, without necessity of recording will in county wherein land was situated. Federal Land Bank v. Newsom, 175 Miss. 114, 161 So. 864, 166 So. 345, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 27 (Miss. 1935).

Probate of will is a proceeding in rem having no effect on property outside of jurisdiction where will probated. Woodville v. Pizzati, 119 Miss. 442, 81 So. 127, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1919).

The probate of a will in common form is not a final adjudication of its validity but is an "incipient step" necessary to enable the court to proceed to carry the will into execution, and it is not conclusive against heirs and distributees, and if they desire to contest the validity of the will this shall be done by an issue devisavit vel non. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Resort to secondary evidence.

1. In general.

A record of probate in common form which does not contain the affidavit of a subscribing witness or other testimony in writing proving the validity of the will, and no explanation of the absence of such proof, is not prima facie evidence of the validity of the will. Gibson v. Jones, 238 Miss. 186, 117 So. 2d 879, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 1960).

In a will contest where proponents introduced a record of probate of will in common form, it was not necessary that they go further and make proof of will by having one of subscribing witnesses present to testify. Bearden v. Gibson, 215 Miss. 218, 60 So. 2d 655, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1952).

This section [Code 1942, § 498] does not require that the execution of the will be proved by more than one of the subscribing witnesses, and where one of two subscribing witnesses testifies to every fact necessary to the due execution of a lost will, together with evidence that the testator made corroborative statements up to the time of her death, the proponent was held to have met the burden of proof, notwithstanding that the other subscribing witnesses denied his attestation or presence at the execution thereof. Warren v. Sidney's Estate, 183 Miss. 669, 184 So. 806, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 1938).

Evidence of subscribing witness that testatrix told him that instrument was her will, that she had signed it and wanted him to sign it as a witness, and that he did so in her presence, and testimony of other witness who did not sign in presence of other subscribing witness and was not present when other witness signed that testatrix told him instrument was her will and requested him to sign it as a witness, was sufficient to authorize admission of will to probate in solemn form. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

If contestant introduces attesting witness, failure of proponents to do so is corrected. Ward v. Ward, 124 Miss. 697, 87 So. 153, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 559 (Miss. 1921).

2. Resort to secondary evidence.

The trial court properly set aside a jury verdict finding that the decedent's lost or destroyed will had been properly executed where there was neither direct nor secondary evidence that the alleged lost or destroyed will was ever signed, witnessed, and executed according to law. Gaston v. Gaston, 358 So. 2d 376, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2527 (Miss. 1978).

When the witnesses to a lost will are dead, their attestation may be proved by secondary evidence. Estate of Willis v. Willis, 207 So. 2d 348, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1609 (Miss. 1968).

Although under Code 1942, § 498 the testimony of only one living witness is sufficient to establish a will's proper execution, proof of two signatures of witnesses is required to prove due execution where the witnesses to a will are deceased. Estate of Willis v. Willis, 207 So. 2d 348, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1609 (Miss. 1968).

Proof of the due execution of the will may, if necessary, be made by others than subscribing witnesses, although subscribing witnesses must be produced, if possible. Warren v. Sidney's Estate, 183 Miss. 669, 184 So. 806, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 1938).

Where subscribing witness will and can prove facts as to execution of will, secondary evidence cannot be used until they have been called or produced. Helm v. Sheeks, 116 Miss. 726, 77 So. 820, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 366 (Miss. 1917); Warren v. Sidney's Estate, 183 Miss. 669, 184 So. 806, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 1938).

Editor's Notes —

Laws, 1974, ch. 375, § 1, amended this section by adding a second paragraph. At the direction of the State Attorney General, the amendment was not executed, and instead, the second paragraph was designated as new code § 91-7-10.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

As the will was not contested, the affidavits of two attesting witnesses that the decedent was of sound and disposing mind at the time he executed his will was sufficient to establish the will was properly executed. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

Under Code 1942, § 499 where there was no will contest, the affidavit of the subscribing witness constituted testimony of the attesting witness for the proponent of the will. Chapman v. Chapman, 264 So. 2d 395, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1357 (Miss. 1972).

The logical basis of the rule that subscribing witnesses to a will that has been admitted to probate in common form should be produced is that the affidavit of proof of due execution of a will authorized by statute is an ex parte statement by the subscribing witnesses. Chapman v. Chapman, 264 So. 2d 395, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1357 (Miss. 1972).

A person contesting a will should be allowed to examine the subscribing witnesses to the will as to all matters relevant to the will's execution and to inquire into surrounding facts and circumstances so that the court may determine if the will was properly signed and attested, if attestation be required, and if the testator was mentally competent and free of undue influence. Chapman v. Chapman, 264 So. 2d 395, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1357 (Miss. 1972).

The contestant of a will was entitled to impeach the testimony of subscribing witnesses who were called by the contestant as adverse witnesses, in an affidavit which was the basis for admission of the will to probate, even if such impeachment was made by the witnesses' own testimony. Chapman v. Chapman, 264 So. 2d 395, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1357 (Miss. 1972).

A record of probate in common form which does not contain the affidavit of a subscribing witness or other testimony in writing proving the validity of the will, and no explanation of the absence of such proof, is not prima facie evidence of the validity of the will. Gibson v. Jones, 238 Miss. 186, 117 So. 2d 879, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 1960).

In a will contest where proponents introduced a record of probate of will in common form, it was not necessary that they go further and make proof of will by having one of subscribing witnesses present to testify. Bearden v. Gibson, 215 Miss. 218, 60 So. 2d 655, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1952).

In a will contest after probate, proponents of a will, executed in Texas, were not required to make proof of the validity of the will by having the subscribing witnesses present to testify, or their testimony in the form of depositions, and a prima facie case of the validity of the will was properly made out by introducing the probate of the will in common form by the affidavits of the subscribing witnesses who resided in Texas. Hilton v. Johnson, 194 Miss. 671, 12 So. 2d 524, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1943).

The affidavits of two subscribing witnesses to a will were sufficient for the probate thereof in common form. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

§ 91-7-10. Affidavits may be used to authenticate holographic wills or codicils.

Where there is not contest about it, a holographic will or codicil may be proved at the time of presentment for probate by the affidavits, made before an officer in the state authorized to administer oaths, of at least two (2) persons, in no wise interested in the estate of the testator or testatrix, attesting to the authenticity of the will or codicil and the competency of the testator or testatrix to make testamentary disposition of his or her property; provided, however, that such affiants shall be persons familiar with the handwriting and signature of the testator or testatrix, and the affidavits so presented shall contain statements made on the personal knowledge of such affiants attesting that such handwriting and such signature are genuine and were made and done by the testator or testatrix; and in such case the affidavits made and presented in conformity herewith may be received as a substitute for the personal attendance of witnesses to prove such will or codicil.

A record of probate in common form which fails to show compliance with this section [Code 1942, § 501] does not constitute prima facie evidence of the validity of the will. Gibson v. Jones, 238 Miss. 186, 117 So. 2d 879, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 1960).

§ 91-7-15. Will executed by person in armed forces — additional manner of proof.

In addition to the manner in which wills may be proved and admitted to probate in the State of Mississippi under other laws, any will executed by any member of the armed forces of the United States during the Korean War, or any other war, may be proved and admitted to probate, and letters testamentary thereon granted, by the chancery court or the chancellor in vacation of the county in which such testator lived when he became a member of such armed forces, or by the chancery court or the chancellor in vacation of the county in which such testator owned land at the time of his death, on the affidavit of any reliable person or persons sufficient to satisfy the chancellor that the testator is dead, that the writing propounded for probate was signed by the testator as his last will and testament, that the affidavit or testimony of the subscribing witnesses to such will cannot reasonably be obtained, and that there is good reason for such will to be then probated.

1. In general.

Trial court did not err in granting beneficiaries summary judgment in a will contest because they established a prima facie case that the will was valid and that the testator possessed testamentary capacity, and the son failed to rebut the prima facie case with any summary-judgment evidence that there was a genuine issue for trial; the will was admitted to probate, and the beneficiaries attached affidavits of individuals that testified as to the testator's mental capacity. Froemel v. Estate of Froemel, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 230 (Miss. Ct. App. May 8, 2018).

Chancellor erred in holding that Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-33 absolutely barred the sister from initially proving a lost foreign will in Mississippi where the will disposed of property in this state. Given the existence of genuine issues of material fact regarding the validity of the testator's will, the chancellor should have proceeded with the will contest and impaneled a jury to decide the will's validity. Watt v. Cobb (In re Estate of High), 19 So. 3d 1282, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 743 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Summary judgment is properly granted where no genuine issues of material fact have been presented although question of will or no will is primary issue in will contest and either party to will contest has automatic right to jury trial. Gallagher v. Warden, 507 So. 2d 27 (Miss. 1987).

Evidence that testator of advanced years living in nursing home was dependent upon beneficiary to some degree is insufficient basis for finding of confidential relationship resulting in will being product of undue influence where there is no proof that testator looked to beneficiary to care for personal needs, to tend to him, or to handle his affairs. In re Will & Estate of Varvaris, 477 So. 2d 273, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2256 (Miss. 1985).

Party who desires jury to try issue of devisavit vel non is under duty to specifically request jury before hearing on matter. In re Will & Estate of Varvaris, 477 So. 2d 273, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2256 (Miss. 1985).

In a probate action the chancery court properly overruled a motion to exclude the jury on the issue involving probate of a 1961 will, where the mover's pleading involving a 1979 will raised the issue of revocation of the 1961 will, and where the question of revocation was a proper question for the jury. Deposit Guaranty Nat'l Bank v. Cotten, 420 So. 2d 242, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2203 (Miss. 1982).

Although the evidence was conflicting, jury's finding that an alleged holographic will was not in the handwriting of the deceased would not be disturbed by the supreme court where there was ample evidence to warrant that conclusion, and the chancellor's decree had upheld a jury's verdict. In re Estate of Rumley, 234 Miss. 490, 106 So. 2d 678, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 522 (Miss. 1958).

It was not required in a probate proceeding that an issue devisavit vel non be tried to a jury. Darby v. Arrington, 194 Miss. 123, 11 So. 2d 220, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 170 (Miss. 1942).

Where cousins of a testatrix's heir, who would inherit the estate if the will, under which the heir would receive a life estate, should be set aside, were precluded from prosecuting an appeal from a decree validating the will, upon the death of the heir pending the appeal, since the proceedings involved the only persons then interested, and the cousins were not beneficiaries, his administrator, in his naked right as administrator of the only "interested person," could not (there being no creditors of the deceased heir's estate), prosecute the appeal, either on behalf of the estate or of the cousins. Darby v. Arrington, 194 Miss. 123, 11 So. 2d 220, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 170 (Miss. 1942).

2. Interested parties.

An administrator is not such an "interested party" within statutes providing that a proponent may make all interested persons parties to application for probate of will and that any interested person may at any time within two years contest validity of will probated without notice, as is authorized to contest will subsequently presented for probate. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

3. Conclusiveness of decree.

The admission of a will to probate was only prima facie evidence of its validity and would not conclude the heirs at law as interested parties from contesting will within two years in manner prescribed by statute, where the heirs at law had not been made parties to the petition for the probate thereof. Austin v. Patrick, 179

Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

In proceeding to probate will and to remove administratrix theretofore appointed, chancery court was without jurisdiction to hear contest as to validity of will where none of the interested parties as such were before the court, and hence such parties would not be concluded by decree adjudicating validity of will. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

§ 91-7-21. Caveat against probate may be filed.

Any one desiring to contest a will presented for probate may do so before probate by entering in the clerk's office in which it shall be presented his objection to the probate thereof, and causing all parties interested and who do not join him in such objection to be made parties defendant. Thereupon the issue devisavit vel non shall be made up and tried, and proceedings had as in other like cases. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

A chancery court did not have jurisdiction to hear a will contest where the executor failed to properly designate the beneficiaries as necessary parties, since the "interested and necessary parties" were not timely noticed and properly joined in the lawsuit; the chancellor should have joined all necessary and proper parties before exercising jurisdiction. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

In an action to probate a will, the chancellor erred in sustaining the executor's and beneficiaries' motions to dismiss a caveat against probate filed by will contestants on the ground that the will was not contested within 2 years as required by § 91-7-23 where the beneficiaries were not listed as interested parties on the petition to probate the will, since the beneficiaries were necessary parties entitled to notice of the action. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

Pleadings filed by the executor and sole beneficiary of 1980 will constituted a caveat against or contest of 1982 will sought to be substituted for earlier will for probate. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Where a will has been admitted to probate in common form as the last will of a testator, it will remain the last will of the testator unless (within the time allowed by law) it is set aside by an order of the chancery court upon a contest and issue devisavit vel non. Perry v. Aldrich, 251 Miss. 429, 169 So. 2d 786, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1964).

Where contest of a will was filed after admission of the will to probate by the clerk in vacation without notice to the objectors but before such admission was approved and confirmed by the court, such contest was not filed "before probate" within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 504], so as to preclude introduction in evidence of the probate of the will as prima facie evidence of its validity, in the trial of the will contest. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

Entry by the clerk of his order in vacation admitting a will to probate is an adjudication by him that the instrument has been duly proven by the presentation thereof with the affidavits of the subscribing witnesses thereto attached. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

Probate of a will in common form before the clerk in vacation should be deemed prima facie evidence of the validity of the will unless and until its invalidity shall have been determined by the court. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

Where instrument purporting to be a will was admitted to probate by the clerk in vacation, without notice to the objectors, and will contest was filed thereafter but before approval and confirmation of clerk's acts in question, and admission to probate was thereafter approved and confirmed over objection of contestants, and on subsequent trial of will contest probate of the instrument was offered in evidence but contestant offered no evidence, peremptory instruction in favor of proponent was correct. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

Surviving wife, only heir at law, may contest husband's will. Woodville v. Pizzati, 119 Miss. 442, 81 So. 127, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1919).

Acquiescence in probate of will in Louisiana, by surviving wife, held not to estop her from contesting will in Mississippi. Woodville v. Pizzati, 119 Miss. 442, 81 So. 127, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1919).

§ 91-7-23. Validity contested within two years.

Any person interested may, at any time within two years, by petition or bill, contest the validity of the will probated without notice; and an issue shall be made up and tried as other issues to determine whether the writing produced be the will of the testator or not. If some person does not appear within two years to contest the will, the probate shall be final and forever binding, saving to infants and persons of unsound mind the period of two years to contest the will after the removal of their respective disabilities. In case of concealed fraud, the limitation shall commence to run at, and not before, the time when such fraud shall be, or with reasonable diligence might have been, first known or discovered.

1. Construction and application in general.

Daughter of testator was not entitled to go forward on the daughter's will contest filed in the forum county more than two years after the testator's will was admitted to probate there. Pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-23, the daughter had to file the daughter's will contest within two years from the date the will was admitted to probate, and the daughter did not do so. Ellzey v. McCormick, 17 So. 3d 583, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

As decedent's brother did not contest the decedent's will within the two-year limitations period for contesting a will admitted to probate in common form, the probate in common form was binding and final. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

In an action to probate a will, the chancellor erred in sustaining the executor's and beneficiaries' motions to dismiss a caveat against probate filed by will contestants on the ground that the will was not contested within 2 years as required by § 91-7-23 where the beneficiaries were not listed as interested parties on the petition to probate the will, since the beneficiaries were necessary parties entitled to notice of the action. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

The failure to join known interested parties within 2 years from the date of probate of a will did not require dismissal of a petition to contest the will; treatment of the "persons interested" as necessary parties would be governed by Rules 19 and 21, Miss. R. Civ. P., and therefore the chancery court was required to make the interested persons parties and process issue accordingly. Estate of Schneider, 585 So. 2d 1275, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 643 (Miss. 1991).

The word "probate" within the meaning of § 91-7-23 refers to the act of the clerk accepting the will for probate, rather than the date upon which the estate closed and, therefore, the 2-year limitations period runs from the date the clerk admits the will to probate. In re Will of Fields, 570 So. 2d 1202, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 708 (Miss. 1990).

Attempt to contest will was unseasonable where, while chancery court was in vacation, chancery clerk on January 24, 1983, admitted will and codicils to probate, thereafter issuing Letters Testamentary; on June 13, 1983, chancellor entered order ratifying actions by chancery clerk conducted while court was in vacation; and, action to set aside will alleging mental incompetency when making will was commenced on May 6, 1985. Sims v. Stennis, 510 So. 2d 798 (Miss. 1987).

The sole issue in a will contest is devisavit vel non, or will or no will. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

In an action by a devisee under a 1935 will to perfect his title in certain realty, the trial court correctly dismissed the pending proceedings upon the motion of such devisee, even though a contest of the will had been filed, where it was discovered that the original will had been admitted to probate in 1937 and where the contestants made no attempt to come within the exceptions to the two-year statute of limitations for will contests. In re Last Will & Testament of Hickman, 374 So. 2d 239, 1979 Miss. LEXIS 2339 (Miss. 1979).

Under Code 1972 § 11-5-3, § 91-7-23, and § 91-7-29, prescribing will contest procedures, trial judge erred in directing verdict in favor of proponents of will on issue of testamentary capacity and undue influence, since roll of jury in will contest is same as that of jury in civil trial in court of law and is not "merely advisory." Fowler v. Fisher, 353 So. 2d 497, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2002 (Miss. 1977).

Under former provisions, it was held that in a proceeding on a petition for probate of a will and revocation of a will previously probated by the defendants, where the plaintiff had filed a petition within the two-year statute of limitations but did not request service of process to issue until after the limitation period, the suit was barred by limitations, since to constitute "legal filing" of the suit, so as to toll the statute of limitations, the presentation of the bill or petition to the clerk must be followed by the issuance of process in the normal and usual manner without undue delay. Knuckles v. Wells, 222 So. 2d 660 (Miss. 1969).

Where a will has been admitted to probate in common form as the last will of a testator, it will remain the last will of the testator unless within the time allowed by law it is set aside by an order of the chancery court upon a contest and issue devisavit vel non. Perry v. Aldrich, 251 Miss. 429, 169 So. 2d 786, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1964).

In the contest of a will, the burden was on the proponent to prove the validity of the will, i.e., that the testator had mental capacity to make it, and that he was not procured to make it by the pressure of undue influence upon him, and this burden was met by the introduction of evidence that the will had been duly admitted to probate. O'Bannon v. Henrich, 191 Miss. 815, 4 So. 2d 208, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 176 (Miss. 1941).

The admission of a will to probate was only prima facie evidence of its validity and would not conclude the heirs at law as interested parties from contesting will within two years in manner prescribed by statute, where the heirs at law had not been made parties to the petition for the probate thereof. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

Contest as to the validity of a will probated without notice must be brought in the court in which the will was probated, the contest being merely supplementary to and a continuation of, the probate proceedings, and, accordingly, the contest is not maintainable in federal courts. In re Armistead's Estate, 4 F. Supp. 606, 1933 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1282 (D. Miss. 1933).

Parties seeking to set aside will as forgery have burden of showing forgery by clear and convincing pleading, and evidence. Didlake v. Ellis, 158 Miss. 816, 131 So. 267, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1930).

2. Who may contest, or procure construction of, will.

Grandchildren of decedent had no standing to maintain an action challenging the validity of the decedent's will because they were not interest parties at the time of the will's entry into probate as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-23. They had no direct, pecuniary interest in the estate at the time it was entered into probate or within the two-year statute of limitations. Tatum v. Wells, 2 So. 3d 739, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 49 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Putative illegitimate children were not interested persons because they failed to establish any right to inherit as illegitimates, therefore, they lacked standing to contest the last will and testament of the decedent. Parks v. Mathis (In re Estate of Mathis), 800 So. 2d 119, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 455 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

A will contestant who alleged that she was the only natural child and heir at law of the decedent had standing to contest the will, even though she would take more under the will than she would without it under her existing status, since her status could change pending the hearing on heirship, and she would take more without the will than under the will if she was found to be the sole heir at law. Dees v. Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 1990).

A widow could not contest her husband's will more than two years after it was probated, notwithstanding her contention that she was lulled into refraining from contesting it by promises of the testator's children to take care of her and to let her share in the estate. Rush v. Rush, 360 So. 2d 1240, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2341 (Miss. 1978).

Children of deceased, who entered into agreement with their father not to interfere with his plans as to the future or to make any claim on other property of decedent, in return for gift of property, were not barred from subsequently contesting will where the chancellor found that the agreement was lacking in certainty as to the purpose and extent of the waiver. Ward v. Ward, 203 Miss. 32, 33 So. 2d 294, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 227 (Miss. 1948).

An administrator is not such an "interested party" within statutes providing that a proponent may make all interested persons parties to application for probate of will and that any interested person may at any time within two years contest validity of will probated without notice, as is authorized to contest will subsequently presented for probate. Austin v. Patrick, 179 Miss. 718, 176 So. 714, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1937).

Parties having no interest in property devised under will admitted to probate cannot complain of forgery or fraud of person beneficially interested. Didlake v. Ellis, 158 Miss. 816, 131 So. 267, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1930).

Bill seeking to revoke probate of will for forgery and fraud, not showing complainants were interested parties nor essential requisites to probate of destroyed will, held insufficient. Didlake v. Ellis, 158 Miss. 816, 131 So. 267, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 112 (Miss. 1930).

Administrator may not contest will subsequently presented for probate. Cajoleas v. Attaya, 145 Miss. 436, 111 So. 359, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1927).

Complainant having no interest subject to enforcement in equity cannot secure construction of will. Orman v. Hall, 91 So. 273 (Miss. 1922).

A person who takes more under a will than he would as heir cannot contest the validity of the will. Biles v. Dean, 14 So. 536 (Miss. 1893).

3. Issues which may be submitted or considered at same time.

A party may combine a suit to determine heirship with a suit to contest a will. Dees v.

Estate of Moore, 562 So. 2d 109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss. 1990).

Whether writing produced is testator's will is sole question to be determined on issue of devisavit vel non, and questions as to construction, sufficiency of identification of beneficiaries, and description of property devised cannot be considered. Kinard v. Whites, 175 Miss. 480, 167 So. 636, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1936).

If the interest or heirship of the contestants be denied, that issue should be determined before the issue as to the validity of the will; and a submission of both issues to the same jury is erroneous. Edwards v. Gaulding, 38 Miss. 118, 1859 Miss. LEXIS 101 (Miss. 1859).

4. Concealed fraud.

Appellants' claim that the chancellor erred in finding that a property interest had passed through inheritance was not considered on appeal where the argument was not raised before the chancellor, the will at issue was probated in 1986, no issue of concealed fraud had been raised, and thus, consistent with Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-23 (Rev. 2013), the inheritance issue was procedurally barred. Wood v. Miller, 179 So. 3d 48, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 300 (Miss. Ct. App. 2015).

A will contest initiated by the daughter of a predeceased son of the decedent, in which she alleged that she was inadvertently omitted from the will, was time-barred where it was not commenced within two years, notwithstanding her contention that the executrix and the attorney for the estate intentionally misled her by stating that she did not need to worry because there was no objection to her and her siblings receiving a share of the estate since she knew from almost the moment the will was offered for probate that she was not included in the estate and the probate of the estate was not hidden from her. Williams v. Estate of Winding (In re Last Will & Testament of Winding), 783 So. 2d 707, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 2001).

"Concealed fraud," within statute extending time for contesting validity of will probated without notice, is designed fraud by which party knowing to whom right belongs conceals circumstances giving that right, thereby enabling himself to enter and hold. Wilson v. Wilson, 166 Miss. 369, 146 So. 855, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1933).

Where plaintiffs knew from beginning facts which would have avoided will, but testator's widow promised them she would make division of property and after two years expired repudiated promise, there was no "concealed fraud" extending time for contesting validity of will. Wilson v. Wilson, 166 Miss. 369, 146 So. 855, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1933).

Estoppel could not operate to prevent defendant from pleading statute of limitations applying to will contest, which set up its own exceptions. Wilson v. Wilson, 166 Miss. 369, 146 So. 855, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1933).

1. In general.

Chancery court's judgment denying daughters' petition to contest the will of their mother had to be reversed and set aside because all necessary parties were not joined. Schmidt v. True (In re Will of True), 220 So. 3d 276, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 288 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

A chancery court did not have jurisdiction to hear a will contest where the executor failed to properly designate the beneficiaries as necessary parties, since the "interested and necessary parties" were not timely noticed and properly joined in the lawsuit; the chancellor should have joined all necessary and proper parties before exercising jurisdiction. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

In an action to probate a will, the chancellor erred in sustaining the executor's and beneficiaries' motions to dismiss a caveat against probate filed by will contestants on the ground that the will was not contested within 2 years as required by § 91-7-23 where the beneficiaries were not listed as interested parties on the petition to probate the will, since the beneficiaries were necessary parties entitled to notice of the action. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

The failure to join known interested parties within 2 years from the date of probate of a will did not require dismissal of a petition to contest the will; treatment of the "persons interested" as necessary parties would be governed by Rules 19 and 21, Miss. R. Civ. P., and therefore the chancery court was required to make the interested persons parties and process issue accordingly. Estate of Schneider, 585 So. 2d 1275, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 643 (Miss. 1991).

All legatees are indispensable parties to a will contest. Moore v. Jackson, 247 Miss. 854, 157 So. 2d 785, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1963).

Proponent's failure to plead nonjoinder of necessary parties to will contest does not waive the objection. Moore v. Jackson, 247 Miss. 854, 157 So. 2d 785, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1963).

Heirs at law who would take property of the deceased in the absence of a valid will are necessary parties. Provenza v. Provenza, 201 Miss. 836, 29 So. 2d 669, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 453 (Miss. 1947).

Once the court has acquired jurisdiction of all interested parties, jurisdiction is not lost by the withdrawal of an answer filed on behalf of one of the defendants by one duly authorized to make such filing. Provenza v. Provenza, 201 Miss. 836, 29 So. 2d 669, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 453 (Miss. 1947).

In suit to confirm title to land, seeking construction of will to effect that it did not convey title to the land because it was devised to no named legatees, all the beneficiaries should have been under valid process. Dorsey v. Sullivan, 199 Miss. 602, 24 So. 2d 852, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1946).

All "interested parties," or those whose interest detrimentally affected by will, are necessary parties to will contest; heirs at law who would take property but for will, are interested parties; where contestants rely on prior will, all beneficiaries therein are interested parties; all beneficiaries in intermediate will are necessary parties in will contest. Hoskins v. Holmes County Community Hospital, 135 Miss. 89, 99 So. 570, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 19 (Miss. 1924).

2. Standing.

Appellant was properly ordered to pay an estate's attorneys' fees under Miss. R. Civ. P. 11, as appellant's arguments on the issue of his standing to contest the will were frivolous, his filings contained misrepresented facts, and the estate was forced to incur unnecessary attorney's fees in responding to those filings. Covington v. McDaniel (In re Estate of Necaise), 126 So. 3d 49, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 108 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 598 (Miss. 2013), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 2013), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 610 (Miss. 2013).

As appellant failed to obtain a judgment, or status as a creditor of the estate, because the statute of limitations had expired and the action was not properly served upon the estate or the decedent during his lifetime, appellant did not have a direct pecuniary interest against the estate and thus was not an interested party under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-25; therefore, he was not a proper party to the will contest. Covington v. McDaniel (In re Estate of Necaise), 126 So. 3d 49, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 108 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 598 (Miss. 2013), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 2013), cert. denied, 125 So. 3d 658, 2013 Miss. § 91-7-27. Probate of will prima facie evidence.

On the trial of an issue made up to determine the validity of a will which has been duly admitted to probate, such probate shall be prima facie evidence of the validity of the will.

HISTORY:

Codes, 1880, § 1969; 1892, § 1824; 1906, § 1999; Hemingway's 1917, § 1664; 1930, § 1611; 1942, § 507.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Construction.
3. Particular applications.

1. In general.

The probation of 1980 will in common form and its admission to probate created prima facie evidence that the will was valid. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

The probate of a will in common form is not a final adjudication of its validity but is an "incipient step" necessary to enable the court to proceed to carry the will into execution, and it is not conclusive against heirs and distributees, and if they desire to contest the validity of the will this shall be done by an issue devisavit vel non. Perry v. Aldrich, 251 Miss. 429, 169 So. 2d 786, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1964).

2. Construction.

This section [Code 1942, § 507] must be read together with Code 1942, § 501. Gibson v. Jones, 238 Miss. 186, 117 So. 2d 879, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 1960).

3. Particular applications.

Will was properly upheld because the wife made a prima facie case for the will's validity when she probated it in common form, and evidence indicated that although she and the testator had a close relationship, she had not overcome the testator's will so as to exert undue influence on him. Estate of Chapman v. Chapman, 966 So. 2d 1262, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 722 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

A will is not shown to have been duly admitted to probate in common form, by a record which fails to show compliance with Code 1942, § 501 and makes no attempt to excuse such noncompliance. Gibson v. Jones, 238 Miss. 186, 117 So. 2d 879, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 1960).

In a will contest, proof of the probate is all that is required of proponents initially in meeting the burden of proof resting upon them. Wallace v. Harrison, 218 Miss. 153, 65 So. 2d 456, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 525 (Miss. 1953).

In a will contest, a prima facie case was made by proponents by introduction of the proof of probate in common form and this extends to every aspect of the will touching upon its validity and without more, the proponents have introduced sufficient evidence to sustain their burden. Bearden v. Gibson, 215 Miss. 218, 60 So. 2d 655, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1952).

In a will contest where proponents introduced a record of probate of will in common form, it was not necessary that they go further and make proof of will by having one of subscribing witnesses present to testify. Bearden v. Gibson, 215 Miss. 218, 60 So. 2d 655, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 555 (Miss. 1952).

Probate of will in common form before chancery clerk in vacation is prima facie evidence of validity of will until will is declared invalid and set aside by proper and lawful proceeding in proper court, having jurisdiction of subject matter and of parties in interest. Rice v. McMullen, 207 Miss. 706, 43 So. 2d 195, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 382 (Miss. 1949).

Probate of a will in common form before the clerk in vacation should be deemed prima facie evidence of the validity of the will unless and until its invalidity shall have been determined by the court. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

Entry by the clerk of his order in vacation admitting a will to probate is an adjudication by him that the instrument has been duly proven by the presentation thereof with the affidavits of the subscribing witnesses thereto attached. Bigleben v. Henry, 196 Miss. 586, 17 So. 2d 602, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1944).

In a will contest after probate, proponents of a will, executed in Texas, were not required to make proof of the validity of the will by having the subscribing witnesses present to testify, or their testimony in the form of depositions, and a prima facie case of the validity of the will was properly made out by introducing the probate of the will in common form by the affidavits of the subscribing witnesses who resided in Texas. Hilton v. Johnson, 194 Miss. 671, 12 So. 2d 524, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1943).

In the contest of a will, the burden was on the proponent to prove the validity of the will, i.e., that the testator had mental capacity to make it, and that he was not procured to make it by the pressure of undue influence upon him, and this burden was met by the introduction of evidence that the will had been duly admitted to probate. O'Bannon v. Henrich, 191 Miss. 815, 4 So. 2d 208, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 176 (Miss. 1941).

1. Burden of proof.
2. Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence.
3. —Proof of incapacity or undue influence.
4. Competency of witnesses.
5. Miscellaneous.

1. Burden of proof.

The proponent of a will at all times bears the burden of persuading the trier of fact on all issues requisite to the validity of the will, e.g., due execution and testamentary capacity. At the outset, the proponent bears the burden of producing evidence of due execution and testamentary capacity. This burden is conventionally met by offering the will itself, the affidavits of subscribing witnesses and the judgment admitting the will to probate; these offerings make out the proponent's prima facie case. Once the proponent has shouldered his or her burden of production such that he or she has made out a prima facie case, the burden of production shifts to the contestants. The burden of persuading the trier of fact on the issues of due execution and testamentary capacity rests on the proponent throughout and never shifts to the contestants; that burden of persuasion is subject to the preponderance of the evidence standard. Clardy v. National Bank of Commerce, 555 So. 2d 64, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 507 (Miss. 1989).

The burden of proof of a proponent of a will is met by the offering and receipt into evidence of the will and the record of its probate and a prima facie case is made by the proponent solely by this proof; the contestants then must offer proof to overcome such prima facie case and although the burden of proof is still with the proponent, the burden of going forward with proof of undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity, or other defenses, shifts to the contestants. Harris v. Sellers, 446 So. 2d 1012, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1649 (Miss. 1984), overruled in part, Mullins v. Ratcliff, 515 So. 2d 1183, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2933 (Miss. 1987).

In a will contest an instruction for the proponents that the material inquiry was the capacity of a testator on the very day and at the very time of the execution of the instrument, properly informed the jury of the issue, and was not invalidated by additional language to the effect that such was true regardless of what the jury might think or believe as to the mental capacity of the testator at any other time. Sides v. Adams, 243 So. 2d 59, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1502 (Miss. 1971).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, there is but a single issue-will or no will, and burden is no proponent throughout. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

In cases where a too close issue of fact is involved, instructions on burden of proof should go no further than to advise jury that proponent of will or plaintiff in other civil cases is required to establish issue by preponderance of evidence. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

In will contest on ground of mental incapacity and undue influence, instructions are not prejudicially erroneous if, when all of instructions are considered as whole, jury is correctly informed that burden resting upon proponents is to show testamentary capacity and lack of undue influence by preponderance of evidence, although two of instructions given were to effect that burden of proof is upon proponents of will to show by preponderance of evidence that alleged testatrix was at time of execution of alleged will of sound and disposing mind and that if jury finds burden has not been met and that it is left uncertain and doubtful whether testatrix was of sound mind then jury should find for contestants. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

Instruction that probating of will was prima facie evidence of its validity, and that burden of proving forgery thereof was on contestant, held erroneous. Ellis v. Ellis, 160 Miss. 345, 134 So. 150, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1931).

Error in placing on contestant burden of proving will was forgery held not cured by instruction that burden was on proponent to prove signature was genuine. Ellis v. Ellis, 160 Miss. 345, 134 So. 150, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1931).

In suit to probate a will, and to cancel the probate of prior wills, the burden of proof was on complainant. Mims v. Johnson, 129 Miss. 403, 92 So. 577, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1922).

2. Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence.

When attesting witnesses deny execution or fail to testify, secondary evidence may be introduced by proponents of the will. Ward v. Ward, 124 Miss. 697, 87 So. 153, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 559 (Miss. 1921).

The proponents on an issue devisavit vel non may introduce evidence in rebuttal of that offered by contestants. Sheehan v. Kearney, 82 Miss. 688, 21 So. 41, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1896).

3. —Proof of incapacity or undue influence.

A daughter overcame the presumption of undue influence arising from her father's execution of a will leaving her ½ of his estate to the exclusion of a friend and charitable organizations where the father had told 2 totally disinterested witnesses that he wanted to change his will, the will was executed openly at a medical center in the presence of the 2 subscribing witnesses and medical personnel, and there was evidence that the father understood the extent and value of his assets and was rational, strong-willed, and independent up until the time of his death. Pallatin v. Jones (In re Will of Fankboner), 638 So. 2d 493, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 314 (Miss. 1994).

The test for rebutting a presumption of undue influence has been modified and no longer requires the independent advice of a competent person, but instead requires a showing of the grantor's "independent consent and action." Marsalis v. Lehmann, 566 So. 2d 217, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 532 (Miss. 1990).

Evidence that testator of advanced years living in nursing home was dependent upon beneficiary to some degree is insufficient basis for finding of confidential relationship resulting in will being product of undue influence where there is no proof that testator looked to beneficiary to care for personal needs, to tend to him, or to handle his affairs. In re Will & Estate of Varvaris, 477 So. 2d 273, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2256 (Miss. 1985).

In an action contesting a will there is a presumption of undue influence that the law imposes where a confidential or fiduciary relationship exists. Harris v. Sellers, 446 So. 2d 1012, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1649 (Miss. 1984), overruled in part, Mullins v. Ratcliff, 515 So. 2d 1183, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2933 (Miss. 1987).

In a proceeding devisavit vel non involving a will which was challenged on the ground of lack of testamentary capacity and of undue influence, the submission to jury of both issues was error where the evidence as to undue influence was insufficient. In re Alexander's Will, 221 Miss. 478, 73 So. 2d 172, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 553 (Miss. 1954).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, general verdict of jury on issue of whether or not proponents have shown by preponderance of evidence both testamentary capacity and lack of undue influence at time of execution of will should be sustained if proponents fail to prove either or both of these necessary requirements. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

In will contest on ground of lack of testamentary capacity and existence of undue influence, it should be assumed that general verdict of jury against validity of will was on ground of want of testamentary capacity which was amply supported by evidence, where proof was insufficient to sustain verdict on ground of undue influence. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

As to undue influence testator's declarations at time of execution of will admissible as res gestae. Sanders v. Sanders, 126 Miss. 610, 89 So. 261, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 70 (Miss. 1921).

Instruction on "undue influence" omitting element of destruction of free agency, is erroneous. Scally v. Wardlaw, 123 Miss. 857, 86 So. 625, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1920).

Where evidence will not support a finding of incapacity, peremptory instruction for proponent proper. Scally v. Wardlaw, 123 Miss. 857, 86 So. 625, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1920).

On an issue devisavit vel non, where the question is as to the sanity of the testator, the contestants are not required to prove his insanity beyond all reasonable doubt. King v. Rowan, 82 Miss. 1, 34 So. 325, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1903).

Upon an issue devisavit vel non, an instruction for contestants is erroneous if it authorizes the jury, without qualification or limitation, to consider the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the will. King v. Rowan, 82 Miss. 1, 34 So. 325, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1903).

4. Competency of witnesses.

Lay witnesses are competent to testify on issue of capacity of testator to make will on date of its alleged execution where they first give facts upon which their opinions are based. Blalock v. Magee, 205 Miss. 209, 38 So. 2d 708, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1949).

At the trial of an issue devisavit vel non, the contestant, or the proponent, although the personal legatee, can testify in support of the will. Tucker v. Whitehead, 59 Miss. 594, 1882 Miss. LEXIS 169 (Miss. 1882).

5. Miscellaneous.

A breach of a contract not to revoke a will is not grounds for contesting the will pertaining to the contract. Trotter v. Trotter, 490 So. 2d 827, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2485 (Miss. 1986).

Party who desires jury to try issue of devisavit vel non is under duty to specifically request jury before hearing on matter. In re Will & Estate of Varvaris, 477 So. 2d 273, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2256 (Miss. 1985).

Under Code 1972 § 11-5-3, § 91-7-23, and § 91-7-29, prescribing will contest procedures, trial judge erred in directing verdict in favor of proponents of will on issue of testamentary capacity and undue influence, since roll of jury in will contest is same as that of jury in civil trial in court of law and is not "merely advisory." Fowler v. Fisher, 353 So. 2d 497, 1977 Miss. LEXIS 2002 (Miss. 1977).

The probate of a will in common form is not a final adjudication of its validity but is an "incipient step" necessary to enable the court to proceed to carry the will into execution, and it is not conclusive against heirs and distributees, and if they desire to contest the validity of the will this shall be done by an issue devisavit vel non. Perry v. Aldrich, 251 Miss. 429, 169 So. 2d 786, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1964).

On trial of devisavit vel non after probate of will and record of probate proceedings, failure to submit such record to the jury was reversible error. Edgington v. Mabry, 111 Miss. 492, 71 So. 801, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 325 (Miss. 1916).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
Chancellor erred in holding that Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-33 absolutely barred the sister from initially proving a lost foreign will in Mississippi where the will disposed of property in this state. Given the existence of genuine issues of material fact regarding the validity of the testator's will, the chancellor should have proceeded with the will contest and impaneled a jury to decide the will's validity. Watt v. Cobb (In re Estate of High), 19 So. 3d 1282, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 743 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court had jurisdiction to admit to probate in Mississippi the will of nondomiciliary as the decedent had lived in a Mississippi county for more than 30 years, and the chancery court properly determined that at the time of his death decedent would have owned some clothing or other personal property in the county, and Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-33 does not require that the property be of a certain value or amount. In re Estate of Kelly v. Cuevas, 951 So. 2d 564, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 951 So. 2d 543, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2007).

Mississippi courts may intervene when disposition of decedent's interests involve property interests which are subject to its jurisdiction. Davis v. Davis, 507 So. 2d 24 (Miss. 1987).

Under the provisions of this section, the original will of a non-resident testatrix was properly probated in this state, and Code 1972 § 91-7-31 prohibited the withdrawal of the original will for transfer to another state. Crum v. First Nat'l Bank, 321 So. 2d 287 (Miss. 1975).

Having properly assumed jurisdiction of the will of a non-resident testatrix, the Mississippi court was not required by comity to defer to the courts of the domiciliary state on the issue of which of the parties should bear the burden of the estate taxes and other debts of the estate. Crum v. First Nat'l Bank, 321 So. 2d 287 (Miss. 1975).

Beneficiary's acquiescence in probate proceedings in Louisiana held not to estop him from seeking annulment of proceedings in Mississippi under certified copy of Louisiana proceedings. Gilmore v. Gilmore, 144 Miss. 424, 110 So. 111, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 377 (Miss. 1926).

Will of nonresident devising property within state may be probated in first instance in county where situated. Bolton v. Barnett, 131 Miss. 802, 95 So. 721, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 220 (Miss. 1923).

Foreign will ineffective as conveyance until probated, when it relates back; purchaser with notice of will takes subject to probate. Belt v. Adams, 125 Miss. 387, 87 So. 666, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1921).

Judgment of Louisiana court establishing instrument as will, not conclusive on Mississippi court. Woodville v. Pizzati, 119 Miss. 442, 81 So. 127, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1919).

All rights derived through a will insofar as it affects property situated in this state are governed by Mississippi law. Heard v. Drennen, 93 Miss. 236, 46 So. 243, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1908).

The probate of an authenticated copy does not authorize an executor to maintain an ejectment without taking out letters in this state. Sims v. Walden, 65 Miss. 211, 3 So. 457 (Miss. 1887); Pratt v. Hargraves, 77 Miss. 892, 28 So. 722, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 1900).

If the testator, by will, direct that his executor shall not be required to give bond, then none shall be required unless the court or the clerk, at the time of granting the letters or afterwards, shall have reason to require bond, in which event it shall be the duty of the court or clerk to require bond with sufficient sureties. If any creditor of such testator petition the court or the clerk in vacation, under oath, stating his claim and that he believes he is in danger of losing his demand, or some of it, by the bad management of said estate or by the personal insolvency of the executor, such executor, having had five days' notice of the petition, shall be required to give a bond with sureties, to be approved by the court or clerk in vacation, payable to said creditor in a sufficient sum to cover his legal demand, and conditioned to save him from all loss by reason of any act or omission of such executor. Instead of such bond, the executor may give bond as if he had not been relieved from it by the will. 6. —Multiple executors.

1. In general.

Chancery court did not err by considering the final accounting, the petition to close a decedent's estate, and the wife's objections to the final accounting because the daughter, who was appointed executor, repeatedly failed to comply with the chancery court's orders; as executor, the daughter bore a responsibility to administer and close the estate, and she could not complain of errors she caused by failing to properly fulfill her duty. Chester v. Labasse (In re Estate of Labasse), 242 So. 3d 167, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 540 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017), cert. denied, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 192 (Miss. 2018).

Executrix was properly surcharged for payment of decedent's debts which had not been probated, registered, or allowed. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Crops growing on devised land at time of death of testatrix which are not needed by executor for payment of debts or cost of administration of estate pass to devisee of land rather than into estate for benefit of residuary legatees where will devised land and all trucks, farm implements, tractors and equipment thereon and directed that immediately after death of devisor devisee should be vested with entire control over her part of property. Oberst v. Mullens, 43 So. 2d 560 (Miss. 1949).

Intention of testator ascertained from entire will given effect if not illegal. Lesche v. Cutrer, 135 Miss. 469, 99 So. 136, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 1 (Miss. 1924).

Where a will creates an express trust for the payment of debts, by virtue of this section [Code 1942, § 518], the statute of limitations barring claims unless probated within one year after notice to creditors has no application. Gordon v. McDougall, 84 Miss. 715, 37 So. 298, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1904).

The statute of limitations is no bar to the payment of unprobated claims in carrying out a will creating an express trust for the payment of debts. Gordon v. McDougall, 84 Miss. 715, 37 So. 298, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1904).

Executors who have paid unprobated claims in pursuance of wills creating express trusts for their payment are entitled to be credited therewith in their accounts. Gordon v. McDougall, 84 Miss. 715, 37 So. 298, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1904).

2. Sale of property.

Where a power of sale of the real estate is conferred by a testator because of his personal trust and confidence in the named executors neither the surviving executor, where more than one is designated, nor an administrator with the will annexed, where the named executors fail to qualify, die or resign, can convey title to the real property of testator without a valid order of court authorizing and empowering the sale and conveyance. Batson v. Humble Oil &

Refining Co., 213 Miss. 340, 56 So. 2d 828, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 372 (Miss. 1952).

Where will gives power of sale to pay legacies, or for distribution, without stating by whom the sale is to be made, the executor takes the power by implication. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

Under will providing "after my house and the rest of jewelry have been sold, I want the money equally divided between two named legatees," and "should either boy die before of age this money to revert to the estate for further distribution of other request," executrix had implied power to sell the realty, although proceeds therefrom were not to be delivered until the legatees became of age. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

Sale by executrix of realty under power of sale in will is not a judicial sale, and needs no court order justifying it. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

Gratuitous advice given by chancellor pursuant to request by executrix concerning implied power under will to sell realty does not diminish power of executrix in respect thereto. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

In a contest between residuary legatees of a will and beneficiaries of an alleged gift inter vivos of certain separate stock which was by the will directed to be sold by the executors along with other assets of the estate for the payment of numerous legacies, wherein the residuary legatee sought to compel a more complete inventory by including such corporate stock, the burden of proof was upon the surviving executor and those claiming the stock, not as purchasers for value, to prove that such stock was not a part of the assets of the estate being administered. Lindeman's Estate v. Herbert, 188 Miss. 842, 193 So. 790, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 1940).

Authority conferred upon executors to sell lands held not discretionary, but to require sale at all events. Glidewell v. Pannell, 158 Miss. 249, 130 So. 288, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1930).

Executor, unable to sell testator's business at public auction, may be authorized by court to sell same to beneficiary for herself and as guardian of infant beneficiary. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. State, 110 Miss. 16, 69 So. 1007, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. 1915).

3. —Exercise of discretion.

Decision to sell, made by executor, given discretion by will to sell or to operate wholesale grocery business, cannot be said to be other than act of ordinarily prudent business man, when success of business was due to decedent, whose place could not be filled because of war, great uncertainty prevailed in business field, good sale could be made, and objectors showed no certainty of profit from operations, or better sale later after attempt at continuation of business. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Supreme court will not say that confirmation of sale of wholesale grocery business by executor, acting under authority of will, was manifestly wrong, when it is not pointed out by what means or manner a higher price could have been obtained for the assets of the estate nor in what respect beneficiaries in will suffered any loss. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

4. —Notice; advertising.

Sale of decedent's property without legal citation to beneficiaries in will is valid where will relieves executor from legal citation to interested parties. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Objection to executor's sale of wholesale grocery business on ground that it was not sufficiently advertised is not well taken when, under the terms of will under which sale was made, no public notice of proposed sale was required to be given. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Objection to executor's sale of wholesale grocery business on ground that it was not sufficiently advertised is not well taken where publication containing elements of sale was made in three newspapers for period of approximately a week, prospective bidders were notified by telephone and letters, many people inspected property, successful bid exceeded appraised value, and objectors produced no proof more than possibility or speculation that had sale been postponed for ten or twenty days there would have been higher, or more numerous, bids on the later date. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Fact that no notice was given to interested parties respecting sale of realty by executrix under power of sale in will, either in proceedings for sale or those whereby directions of court were sought, does not constitute a valid defense in executrix's suit against purchaser at sale for specific performance. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

5. —Taxes and expenses; surcharges.

Executrix would be surcharged for the amount the testamentary trust property was damaged or put in jeopardy due to her mortgaging of estate's unencumbered real property as security for debt incurred by testator which was never probated. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Reasonable expenditures for better sale of land were properly made out of general funds of estate where will directed sale of land and payment of proceeds, in different amounts, to special legatees with provision for reduction in proper proportion of each in event property did not sell for total amount devised, since special legatees are to be favored over residuary legatees to end that they may receive entire amount bequeathed to them respectively if property designated for that purpose could be caused to bring enough for that purpose by reasonable expenditures to promote advantageous sale. Oberst v. Mullens, 43 So. 2d 560 (Miss. 1949).

Unpaid taxes did not constitute valid defense to executrix's suit for specific performance against purchaser of realty sold under power of sale in will, since executrix has duty under Code 1942, § 572 to pay the taxes and such obligation can be readily accounted for under the decree for specific performance. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

In compliance with decree for specific performance of realty sold by executrix under power of sale in will, purchaser is entitled to deed free from lien for unpaid taxes. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

6. —Multiple executors.

A testamentary power of sale conferred on two named executors did not survive the death of one of them and sales of real property made by the surviving executor were set aside where the intention of the testator, as indicated by repeated references in the will to actions to be taken by the co-executors in their joint discretion, was that the power of the remaining executor not survive. Reynolds v. State, 331 So. 2d 913, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1887 (Miss. 1976).

The court would not order specific performance of a contract for the sale of land, which contract was signed by only one of two coexecutors where the second coexecutor knew nothing of the execution of the will and had not authorized the other executor to sign it for him, and where the contract itself did not purport to be signed by the executor for himself and for the coexecutor as joint executors, and where, although the second coexecutor signed a deed as contemplated by the contract, such deed was delivered not to the purchaser but merely to the attorney for the two coexecutors, such act not constituting delivery of the deed nor a ratification of the contract by the second coexecutor. Carter v. Hurst, 234 So. 2d 616, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1412 (Miss. 1970).

Where will required sale of lands at all events, power vested in executors could be exercised by survivors, and court erroneously directed different course from that prescribed. Glidewell v. Pannell, 158 Miss. 249, 130 So. 288, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1930).

The receipt by an executor or any trustee, whether under a will or other instrument, for any money payable to him in the execution of his trust shall discharge the person paying it from any liability to see to the application of the money, unless otherwise expressly provided in the instrument which creates the trust.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

If plaintiff had had a valid claim to the proceeds of an estate sale, his sole legal recourse would have been to probate a claim against the estate pursuant to § 91-7-51, and since he did not do so, he was barred from claiming the proceeds of the sale of minerals from the funds of the estate. Kelly v. Shoemake, 460 So. 2d 811, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2019 (Miss. 1984).

Whenever it shall be necessary for the care and preservation of the estate of a decedent before the grant of letters testamentary, or of administration, to the person entitled thereto, the chancery court or chancellor in vacation, or the clerk of such court, on the petition of any creditor or other interested person, shall appoint a suitable person to be known as "temporary administrator." The person named as executor or the person apparently entitled to letters of administration may be appointed temporary administrator, unless the court shall find that the circumstances require the appointment of a different person.

Whenever an appeal shall be taken from the grant of letters testamentary, or of administration, or whenever a last will and testament shall be contested, the chancery court or chancellor in vacation, on petition of any interested person, may appoint a temporary administrator if it shall appear necessary for the protection of the rights of the parties, and may make such appointment on such terms and impose such conditions as may seem proper.

The powers of such temporary administrator may be special or general, as the court may find proper, and he may be authorized to take charge of, preserve, and administer the estate until the appeal or contest shall be determined. Letters may be issued to him in ordinary form, except that he shall be therein designated as temporary administrator, and any terms or conditions imposed shall be stated therein; and the letters shall state that he is to act only until another appointment shall be made, either temporary or permanent.

It was not an abuse of discretion to appoint a decedent's son as the administrator of the decedent's estate, even though the son was not so named in the decedent's will, because (1) the administrator named in the will died, (2) the court had considerable discretion to appoint a temporary administrator to conserve the estate, and (3) the decedent's daughters received sufficient notice of the appointment during the course of the litigation. Flowers v. Flowers (In re Estate of Flowers), — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 2 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 2, 2018).

Because a chancellor applied the wrong legal standard and incorrectly believed that only uncontested evidence was sufficient to remove the executor of the decedent's estate, remand was necessary for a determination of whether a temporary executor was to be appointed. On remand, the chancellor was to use the correct legal standard, with the understanding that it is within the chancellor's discretion to remove the executor even though the will contestant's evidence may have been contested. Parker v. Benoist, 160 So. 3d 198, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2015).

On a will contest, the chancellor was justified in refusing to appoint a temporary administrator of the estate when, at the time the opponent of the will filed his petition to probate a later will in solemn form, the executrix, acting under an earlier will previously admitted to probate, had fully administered the estate, including notice to creditors and payment of all debts properly probated and nothing remained to be done except final distribution of the assets after a final decree of the court terminating the litigation. Cupit v. International Paper Co., 196 So. 2d 521, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1489 (Miss. 1967).

Where a will probated in common form is contested, the executor may be temporarily removed pending the contest, and a temporary administrator appointed, without first finding the executor disqualified or guilty of misconduct. Sandifer v. Sandifer, 237 Miss. 464, 115 So. 2d 46, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 491 (Miss. 1959).

In a proceeding on a petition for appointment of a permanent administrator, where the chancery court's determination of the heirs at law was not final because of a pending appeal, the appropriate action was appointment of a suitable person to act as a temporary administrator until the legal heirs of the decedent were finally determined. In re Estate of Burnside, 227 Miss. 110, 85 So. 2d 817, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 660 (Miss. 1956).

The status of an administrator is an issue distinct from other matters and it is not necessary that an appeal from an order withdrawing letters of administration await the final determination of the estate, and to hold otherwise would defeat the claim of a petitioner by permitting the incumbent to serve throughout the entire administration. Wells v. Boatner, 216 Miss. 108, 61 So. 2d 662, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 622 (Miss. 1952).

Chancery court has power under this section [Code 1942, § 520] to continue widow of deceased testator as administratrix for purpose of sale of land to pay debts in absence of sufficient personalty therefore, and failure of the court, after the existence of the will became known, to change the letters of administration granted to widow and sole heir at law to letters as temporary administratrix pending a will contest, did not render the action of the court absolutely void in ordering the land sold by her, but only voidable at most, since the court had constitutional jurisdiction of the subject matter and jurisdiction of all the parties in interest. Gill v. Johnson, 206 Miss. 707, 40 So. 2d 600, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 295 (Miss. 1949).

Before the temporary administrator shall act as such, he shall take and subscribe an oath at or prior to the time of his appointment to faithfully discharge the duties required of him by law as such temporary administrator, and shall give bond, payable to the state, in such penalty and with such sureties as may be approved by the court or clerk, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties required of him as such temporary administrator by law or by order of the court or clerk. Thereupon, the estate shall be appraised as now provided by law upon the grant of letters testamentary or of administration, unless the same shall be dispensed with by the court or clerk. The temporary administrator shall make and return to the court a complete inventory of the estate, as is required by law to be made by executors in general or regular administrators, and, as soon as practicable, shall publish the notice provided by law to be published by executors and administrators, requiring creditors to have their claims against the estate probated and registered. All the provisions of the law governing such notice, the proof and registering of claims, and the bar of such as are not proved and registered shall apply when the notice is published by the temporary administrator, as when published by an executor or a general or regular administrator. When the temporary administrator shall have published such notice, no further notice to creditors to have their claims probated and registered shall be given or published upon any subsequent grant of letters testamentary or of administration; and where the estate has been appraised upon the appointment of a temporary administrator, no other appraisement shall be made upon the grant of letters testamentary or of the administration thereafter, unless the court or clerk shall deem the appraisement necessary or advisable.

The temporary administrator shall have power, and it shall be his duty, to collect the goods, chattels, personal property and debts of the decedent and to give acquittances for debts and liabilities upon payment. He may sue and be sued in all cases in which a general or regular administrator may sue or be sued; and suits brought by or against him shall not abate by the termination of his authority, but may be prosecuted by or against the executor or administrator thereafter appointed, and judgments recovered by or against him may be enforced by or against the executor or regular administrator thereafter appointed. The court, or chancellor in vacation, may at any time authorize the temporary administrator to sell such of the estate as may be perishable, likely to deteriorate in value, or be expensive to keep, and to dispose of any crops for cash, and to account for such property sold or disposed of. The court or chancellor, in ordering the sale of such property, shall take into consideration any disposition thereof by last will and testament, in case there be such, and shall order the sale of such property or not, as may be best for the parties in interest. After ninety (90) days from the time the temporary administrator was appointed and the time for probating claims has expired, the court or chancellor in vacation may order the temporary administrator to pay the claims of creditors and to hold the balance of the estate to await the ultimate probate or defeat of such last will and testament. In case the court, or chancellor in vacation, shall order the temporary administrator to pay creditors and make distribution, or to do either, he shall have all the powers and rights for the purpose over the estate, real and personal, that are conferred by law upon general or regular administrators; and all laws governing the acts and duties of a general or regular administrator shall then apply to and govern the temporary administrator.

On the grant of letters testamentary or of administration, the powers of a temporary administrator shall cease, and it shall be his duty at once to settle his accounts with the court or chancellor in vacation and to deliver all the estate that may be in his hands to the person to whom letters testamentary or of administration shall have been granted. In case of refusal, the court or chancellor may proceed against him by attachment and impose a fine, as for a contempt, not exceeding twenty percent (20%) upon the amount of the estate in his hands; and his bond may be put in suit by the executor or administrator. The temporary administrator shall, at the same time, furnish the executor or administrator with a list of all judgments or suits to which he is a party. The court, or chancellor in vacation, may allow the temporary administrator such compensation as may be just, not exceeding five percent (5%) on the amount of the estate inventoried by him.

(1) Letters of administration shall be granted by the chancery court of the county in which the intestate had, at the time of his death, a fixed place of residence; but if the intestate did not have a fixed place of residence, then by the chancery court of the county where the intestate died, or that in which his personal property or some part of it may be. The court shall grant letters of administration to the relative who may apply, preferring first the husband or wife and then such others as may be next entitled to distribution if not disqualified, selecting amongst those who may stand in equal right the person or persons best calculated to manage the estate; or the court may select a stranger, a trust company organized under the laws of this state, or of a national bank doing business in this state, if the kindred be incompetent. If such person does not apply for administration within thirty (30) days from the death of an intestate, the court may grant administration to a creditor or to any other suitable person.

(2) In addition to the rights and duties of the administrator contained in this chapter, he shall also have those rights, powers and remedies as set forth in Section 91-9-9.

3. Administration on behalf of creditors.

1. Construction and application in general.

Because the evidence indicated that the decedent had not divorced her former husband when she purportedly married the administrator, a chancellor did not abuse his discretion under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-63(1) in removing and replacing the administrator. Estate of Wallace v. Mohamed, 55 So. 3d 1057, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 2011).

Widower who was replaced as administrator should have remained administrator for his wife's estate; given the statutory order of preference in Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-63(1), he was preferred to serve over the chancery court clerk because he was the natural father of one of his wife's heirs. Estate of Wallace v. Mohamed, 55 So. 3d 1088, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), rev'd, 55 So. 3d 1057, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 2011).

Widower should have remained administrator for his wife's estate, in keeping with Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-63(1), because the evidence before the chancery court was wholly inadequate to show that the widower was not the decedent's legal husband at the time of her death. There were no clerks' certificates affirmatively showing that there was no divorce in counties where the decedent and her prior husband had lived. Estate of Wallace v. Mohamed, 55 So. 3d 1088, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 106 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), rev'd, 55 So. 3d 1057, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 2011).

Deceased musician's half-sister became executrix de son tort of decedent's unprobated estate by entering agreement, in which she purported to be sister and only surviving heir of decedent, for assignment of decedent's works, photographs, and materials in exchange for share of royalties. Johnson v. Harris (In re Estate of Johnson), 705 So. 2d 819, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, Harris v. Johnson, 522 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1037, 140 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 888 (U.S. 1998).

Where an administratrix was appointed in a county with no evidence that the decedent resided there, then the estate was transferred to the decedent's county of residence and the estate filed a negligence action against defendants, summary judgment should have been granted to defendants because under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-63(1), no legitimate estate ever existed and the appointment of the administratrix was void. Nat'l Heritage Realty, Inc. v. Estate of Boles, 947 So. 2d 238, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 473 (Miss. 2006), overruled in part, Lewis v. Pagel, 233 So. 3d 740, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 2017).

Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-63(1) is jurisdictional in nature. Nat'l Heritage Realty, Inc. v. Estate of Boles, 947 So. 2d 238, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 473 (Miss. 2006), overruled in part, Lewis v. Pagel, 233 So. 3d 740, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 2017).

Status as executrix de son tort, in favor of alleged illegitimate child of deceased musician, was assumed when irrevocable power of attorney was accepted from decedent's half-sister after half-sister had assigned all rights to musician's copyrights, as well as by later accepting appointment as personal representative of half-sister's estate. Johnson v. Harris (In re Estate of Johnson), 705 So. 2d 819, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, Harris v. Johnson, 522 U.S. 1109, 118 S. Ct. 1037, 140 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 888 (U.S. 1998).

Although the appointment of non-distributee relatives lies within the discretion of the chancery court under § 91-7-63, a non-distributee relative had a legal right to letters of administration under the statute where she was the guardian of the sole minor heir. In re Estate of Moreland, 537 So. 2d 1337, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1989).

The chancery court is given wide discretion in the appointment and revocation of administrators, including the discretionary authority to waive compliance with the 30-day period to apply for administration set forth in § 91-7-63. In re Estate of Moreland, 537 So. 2d 1337, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1989).

Notice to creditors of decedent's estate signed by the then duly appointed and qualified administrator was valid, notwithstanding that he was removed, on motion of decedent's widow, on the same date that notice to the creditors was first published, and a creditor's claim filed some 2 months after expiration of the 90 day period from first publication date was time barred. Estate of Myers v. Myers, 498 So. 2d 376, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2844 (Miss. 1986).

Widow's failure to qualify as administratrix did not adversely affect the rights of husband's insurer to recover on items covered by a subrogation agreement and the subrogation provisions of policy since the insurer had the right under Code 1972 §§ 91-7-61, 91-7-63, to apply for and receive letters of administration to conduct whatever suits it deemed necessary to enforce its right. Thornton v. Insurance Co. of North America, 287 So. 2d 262, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1329 (Miss. 1973).

The provision of a state probate code giving a mandatory preference for appointment as administrator of a decedent's estate to a male applicant over a female applicant otherwise equally qualified violates the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment; giving a mandatory preference to members of either sex over members of the other, merely to accomplish the elimination of a hearing on the merits of the applicants, constitutes an arbitrary legislative choice forbidden by the Fourteenth Amendment. Reed v. Reed, 404 U.S. 71, 92 S. Ct. 251, 30 L. Ed. 2d 225, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 8 (U.S. 1971).

A daughter of a decedent who is his sole heir and distributee, and fully competent, is entitled, as against decedent's guardian, to be appointed administratrix of his estate. Moore v. Roecker, 239 Miss. 606, 124 So. 2d 473, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 329 (Miss. 1960).

Action of attorneys for plaintiff, who had a cause of action arising out of a motor vehicle collision, in actively participating in securing the appointment of another as administrator of decedent's estate in order that the action against the estate might be brought in Simpson County and, thus, draw two other codefendants into the circuit court of that county was not improper, in the absence of a fraudulent agreement between plaintiff's attorneys and the administrator, and the codefendant's motion for a change of venue was properly denied. Great Southern Box Co. v. Barrett, 231 Miss. 101, 94 So. 2d 912, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 494 (Miss. 1957).

A chancellor has large discretion in the selection of the person to be appointed administrator of an estate except in cases made mandatory by the statute. In re Estate of Burnside, 227 Miss. 110, 85 So. 2d 817, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 660 (Miss. 1956).

In a proceeding on a petition for an appointment of an administrator, where a will appointing executors for decedent's estate was set aside, the court did not abuse its discretion in denying an application for appointment as administrator and declining to remove the executors theretofore appointed. In re Estate of Burnside, 227 Miss. 110, 85 So. 2d 817, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 660 (Miss. 1956).

Executor or administrator is regarded as officer of court subject to direction, supervision and control of court until estate is closed and he is finally discharged. Bailey v. Sayle, 206 Miss. 757, 40 So. 2d 618, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 298 (Miss. 1949).

Chancellor has large measure of discretion, within limitations, in appointment and revocation of administration of decedents' estates. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

The right of husband, wife, or distributees to preference in granting of administration of intestate's estate is legal right, unless incompetent, but matter is within sound discretion of court as to others. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

Removal of appointed administratrix and appointment of deceased's widow on petition by widow filed more than thirty days after intestate's death is exercise of sound discretion of chancellor and proper when original administratrix was appointed on petition of daughter who withheld from chancellor all information as to widow, stating deceased was survived by three children, and widow knew nothing of proceedings and did not know administration was necessary. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

Appointment of one other than husband of deceased as administrator within thirty-day period is not void, but appointee is subject to removal on husband's application within thirty days, provided husband is fit person for appointment. Kevey v. Johnson, 167 Miss. 775, 150 So. 532, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1933).

Sister of deceased appointed as administratrix held entitled to have administration expenses fixed as charge on real property inherited by husband who did not apply for appointment as administrator within thirty-day period. Kevey v. Johnson, 167 Miss. 775, 150 So. 532, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1933).

2. Necessity of administration.

Heirs suing for debt to decedent must allege and prove no necessity of local administration. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

Foreign administrator has no interest in personalty situated in Mississippi. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

Where insurance policy was expressly payable to daughter of deceased alone, administrator to collect policy not necessary. Young v. Roach, 105 Miss. 6, 61 So. 984, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1913).

3. Administration on behalf of creditors.

Where a nonresident and a resident were killed in an automobile collision in Mississippi allegedly as the result of the nonresident's negligence, the heirs of the deceased resident had a cause of action against the personal representative of the deceased nonresident under the wrongful death statute Code 1942, § 1453, and were creditors of the nonresident's estate, and upon their petition the chancery court of the county where the nonresident's death occurred had jurisdiction to grant administration upon the estate of the nonresident. Day v. Hart, 232 Miss. 516, 99 So. 2d 656, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 301 (Miss. 1958).

Provision of this section [Code 1942, § 525] that if such persons as are preferred do not apply for administration within thirty days from death of intestate court may grant administration to creditor or other person is primarily for benefit of creditors, and only secondarily for benefit of persons inferior in priority to right to administer. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

Recalcitrant heirs will not be permitted to hamper creditors to prejudice of creditors' rights against an estate by failure promptly to institute administration thereof. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

Creditors of decedent have first claim against his estate, and it is paramount duty of administrator to protect their interest. Stribling v. Washington, 204 Miss. 529, 37 So. 2d 759, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 386 (Miss. 1948).

The receiver of an alleged creditor of a decedent could not request appointment of administrator for decedent's estate, unless it appeared that decedent died owing debt to alleged creditor. Thompson v. Carter's Estate, 180 Miss. 104, 177 So. 356, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1937).

The possession and ownership of a decedent's note on which there was a balance due disclosed, prima facie, such a debt as entitled receiver of alleged creditor of decedent to request appointment of administrator for decedent's estate. Thompson v. Carter's Estate, 180 Miss. 104, 177 So. 356, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1937).

A decedent's heirs could not set up that amount of bank deposit due decedent exceeded amount of note held by receiver of bank, to prevent appointment of administrator for decedent's estate on application of receiver, but such issue could only be raised in course of administration, or in suit on note against administrator. Thompson v. Carter's Estate, 180 Miss. 104, 177 So. 356, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1937).

The guardian of a life tenant did not automatically become the administrator of the life tenant's estate on her death pursuant to § 91-7-68, and thus she was not the proper party to prosecute an action to recover damages for personal injury, emotional distress, and reduction in value of the life estate following the life tenant's death, since there is no administrator of the estate of a deceased person until one is qualified and appointed by the court. ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Powers and duties of administrator de bonis non.
3. Powers and duties of administrator of administrator.

1. In general.

Where administrator after final account and approval misappropriated money and absconded, distributees could sue on bond without administrator de bonis non. Davis v. State, 118 Miss. 577, 79 So. 764, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 98 (Miss. 1918).

It is not necessary to give notice to the legatees or wait until final settlement by the executor in order to appoint an administrator de bonis non cum testamento annexo. Sivley v. Summers, 57 Miss. 712, 1880 Miss. LEXIS 44 (Miss. 1880).

2. Powers and duties of administrator de bonis non.

Although administratrix de bonis non is only liable for unadministered assets of estate coming into her hands, she must file final account and have it approved. Hayes v. Holman, 165 Miss. 494, 144 So. 690, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1932).

Administrator de bonis non entitled to amend so as to sue for value of property sold defendant where note given was excluded because payable to original administrator individually. Barnes v. Barnes, 109 Miss. 273, 68 So. 248, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 146 (Miss. 1915).

3. Powers and duties of administrator of administrator.

Where administrator of deceased administrator did not file account required and evidence showed money was paid out by deceased administrator without showing purposes, estate of deceased administrator and his bondsmen were liable to heirs and distributees, payment to be enforced out of original property of administrator if legally possible and in default thereof, out of bondsmen of deceased administrator. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Bondsmen of deceased administrator's administrator, who failed to file account required by statute, were liable to distributees of first estate for all consequences of failure of principal as administrator to faithfully discharge duties required. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Where administrator of administrator did not file account as required, distributees of first estate could recover against bondsmen of administrator of administrator though demand was not probated, since demand was a liability, not a claim. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Until account by administrator of administrator has been approved, administrator of administrator must hold in his hands sufficient assets of estate of his decedent to pay balance due to first estate, whether such assets are derivative of first estate, or whether original property of deceased administrator. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Account by administrator of administrator must be filed with reasonable promptness. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Courts have no authority to excuse performance of duty of administrator of administrator to settle accounts of deceased administrator, regardless of circumstances. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

In filing of account by administrator of administrator, the same requirements, including those in matter of notice to all proper parties in interest, must be observed which appertain to final accounts. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

§ 91-7-71. Rights of administrator de bonis non.

Every administrator de bonis non shall be entitled to all choses in action taken or held by any former executor or administrator, and may institute suit therefor and, if necessary, enjoin the former executor or administrator from collecting the same. He may sue on the bond of any former executor or administrator of the estate, where the estate is insolvent or where suit and recovery may be necessary for the payment of the debts of the estate, for any money due by the former executor or administrator and which should have been accounted for and paid over by him. Where it shall be necessary for the payment of debts of the estate, an administrator de bonis non may except to the final account of a former executor or administrator, or surcharge and falsify an annual or partial settlement of such former executor or administrator, or file and maintain a bill to review any order or decree of the court allowing the account of such executor or administrator, in the same manner that distributees or legatees may do. The court or chancellor may require of an administrator de bonis non an additional bond to cover the money sought to be recovered by any such proceedings.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Administrator's right to recover funds wrongfully paid to deceased's sisters and to guardian of deceased's illegitimate child passed to administratrix de bonis non upon her appointment, and it was her right and duty to recover such funds. National Surety Corp. v. Laughlin, 178 Miss. 499, 172 So. 490, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1937).

While, under statute, administrator de bonis non is entitled to all choses in action taken or held by former administrator, and can maintain suit therefor, he can sue on bond of former administrator only in case estate is insolvent or where suit and recovery may be necessary for payment of debts of estate. National Surety Corp. v. Laughlin, 178 Miss. 499, 172 So. 490, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1937).

Under statute, administrator de bonis non could not sue on bond of former administrator de bonis non, in absence of allegation that estate was insolvent or that recovery was necessary for payment of debts. National Surety Corp. v. Laughlin, 178 Miss. 499, 172 So. 490, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1937).

The right of the administrator de bonis non to sue on the bond will be lost if the debts against the estate become barred or be paid, but the right survives to the distributees. Weir v. Monahan, 67 Miss. 434, 7 So. 291, 1889 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1889).

Before a county administrator shall perform any of the duties or functions of the office, and before any letters shall be granted to him, he shall execute and file in the office of the clerk of the chancery court a bond with two (2) or more sufficient sureties, to be approved by the chancellor in termtime or vacation, in a penalty of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) payable to the state, conditioned that he will discharge all the duties of the office of county administrator, which bond may be sued on at the instance of any person interested. He shall also take an oath at or prior to the granting of letters of administration, to be filed in the clerk's office, to administer according to law every estate which may be committed to his charge, and that he will account for and pay over all monies in his hands by virtue of his office when thereto required by order of the court.

When it shall appear that any person has died, in this state or out of it, and has left real or personal property in this state, and some person has not applied for letters testamentary or of administration, the administration of the estate, after the expiration of sixty days from the death of such person, shall be committed to the county administrator, to whom letters of administration, administrator de bonis non, administration with the will annexed, or as the case may require, shall be granted. He shall administer the estate, as in other cases, under the direction of the court, with the same rights and liabilities as executors and other administrators. The county administrator shall not be bound to incur or be liable for costs, except such as the estate in his hands, in excess of his commissions shall be sufficient to pay. On the final settlement of the estate, he shall be allowed by the court, as his commissions, a sum not to exceed ten percent (10%) on the whole estate administered. The county administrator may also be appointed temporary administrator pending an appeal from the grant of letters testamentary or of administration, and administrator to institute suit in proper cases. He shall be liable in all cases on his official bond for his acts, and another bond need not be executed by him in any case unless, his official bond being insufficient, the court shall require an additional bond, or where he may be required to give bond to account for the proceeds of a sale of land.

Executor's misrepresentation of the true facts to the chancery court (his brother's known claims of ownership to the livestock and the evidence of a valid inter vivos gift by the decedent), amounted to "improper conduct" under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-85, and his removal as executor of the estate was proper. Further, the chancellor properly found that the executor (and his attorney), violated the Mississippi Litigation Accountability Act, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 11-55-1 through 11-55-15 (Rev. 2002), and Miss. R. Civ. P. 11(b), by their misrepresentations in obtaining an order from the chancery court, permitting them to retrieve the subject livestock, and the chancellor's award of attorney's fees and expenses was proper. In re Estate of Ladner v. Ladner, 909 So. 2d 1051, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1356 (Miss. 2004) (Miss. – 2004).

Chancellor's removal of executrix of decedent's estate was amply supported by record showing that she had paid unprobated claims, had failed to timely file estate tax returns, and had paid attorney's fees without court approval, as well as conflicts of interest in the matter of administering the estate. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Since the chancellor had the power to appoint a temporary administrator, it followed that if an executor had qualified, such executor must be removed during the pendency of the will contest in order to permit the temporary administrator to perform his duties pending the outcome of the contest, but since the petition for appointment of the temporary administrator was not brought under this section [Code 1942, § 536], if the will is upheld, appellant would be entitled to resume the office of executor, unless and until he is removed permanently under appropriate proceedings. Sandifer v. Sandifer, 237 Miss. 464, 115 So. 2d 46, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 491 (Miss. 1959).

Supreme court will not interfere with action of chancery court in removing trustee on its own motion, unless palpably unjust. Nutt v. State, 96 Miss. 473, 51 So. 401, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 171 (Miss. 1910).

1. In general.

Where an instrument was considered to be a deed and there was a grant of intestate administration, this was not res judicata on the issue whether testator died leaving a will, and the grant of testator administration is not a bar to the subsequent probate of a will. White v. Inman, 212 Miss. 237, 54 So. 2d 375, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1951).

Chancery court has power under Code 1942, § 520, to continue widow of deceased testator as administratrix for purpose of sale of land to pay debts in absence of sufficient personalty therefor, and failure of the court, after the existence of the will became known, to change the letters of administration granted to widow and sole heir at law to letters as temporary administratrix pending a will contest, did not render the action of the court absolutely void in ordering the land sold by her, but only voidable at most, since the court had constitutional jurisdiction of the subject-matter and jurisdiction of all the parties in interest. Gill v. Johnson, 206 Miss. 707, 40 So. 2d 600, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 295 (Miss. 1949).

Where testimony was sufficient to have will probated in solemn form, chancery court had authority to admit will to probate, grant letters testamentary to executor named therein, and set aside appointment of administratrix theretofore made under statute providing that if a will shall be found and probated, and letters testamentary granted thereon, the same shall be a revocation of administration. § 91-7-91. Assets defined; unsecured creditors to give notice.

The goods, chattels, personal estate, choses in action and money of the deceased, or which may have accrued to his estate after his death from the sale of property, real, personal or otherwise, and the rent of lands accruing during the year of his death, whether he died testate or intestate, shall be assets and shall stand chargeable with all the just debts, funeral expenses of the deceased, and the expenses of settling the estate. The lands of the testator or intestate shall also stand chargeable for the debts and such expenses over and above what the personal estate may be sufficient to pay, and may be subjected thereto in the manner hereinafter directed. Provided, however, that in cases where no administration has been or shall be commenced on the estate of the decedent within three (3) years after his death, no creditor of the decedent shall be entitled to a lien or any claim whatsoever on any real property of the decedent, or the proceeds therefrom, against purchasers or encumbrancers for value of the heirs of the decedent unless such creditor shall, within three (3) years and ninety (90) days from the date of the death of the decedent, file on the lis pendens docket in the office of the clerk of the chancery court of the county in which said land is located notice of his claim, containing the name of the decedent, a brief statement of the nature, amount and maturity date of his claim and a description of the real property sought to be charged therewith. An administrator, by consent of the heirs, may lease out decedent's lands for the purpose of paying his debts. Ashley v. Young, 79 Miss. 129, 29 So. 822, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1901).

2. Rents or other income as assets.

This section [Code 1942, § 539] simply makes rents liable for the debts and expenses of administration if needed for that purpose; if rents are collected from property specifically devised, they are the property of the devisee and not liable for such debts and expenses until the residuum of the estate has been exhausted. Gaines v. Klein, 203 Miss. 271, 34 So. 2d 489, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1948).

Where testatrix in devise of real estate provided for possession thereof in the devisee immediately upon probate of her will if she should die before the month of April in any year thereafter, and she died prior to April, the rents accruing from such realty during the year of her death did not become part of her personal estate so as to be chargeable for her debts, this section [Code 1942, § 539] being inapplicable under such circumstances. Eatherly v. Winn, 185 Miss. 742, 189 So. 99, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1939).

Where a testatrix provided for the payment of all her just and legal debts, taxes on real estate accruing and due for the year prior to her death were to be paid by her executors and were not chargeable against the devisee of such real estate devised to him subject to one-half of the mortgage debt thereon. Eatherly v. Winn, 185 Miss. 742, 189 So. 99, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1939).

Where will did not confer authority, neither executor nor administrator with the will annexed had authority to collect rents on realty except during year of testator's death. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Doughtry, 181 Miss. 586, 179 So. 846, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1938).

Rent accruing on decedent's realty during year of decedent's death held asset in administrator's hands. Wright v. Wright, 160 Miss. 235, 134 So. 197, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1931).

Rent accruing on land in Mississippi is a debt governed by its laws. Richardson v. Neblett, 122 Miss. 723, 84 So. 695, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 472 (Miss. 1920).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 539] and Code 1942, § 577 rents accruing during the year of decedent's death, and crops remaining on the lands at the date of his death, whether gathered or still in the field, and whether they are matured or not, are assets of decedent, whether testate or intestate, and as such pass into the hands of the personal representative for the payment of the debts and the expenses of administration. Gordon v. James, 86 Miss. 719, 39 So. 18, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1905).

3. Particular claims or charges as debts.

Since all the personal and real property of a deceased surety of an administratrix of a veteran's estate were assets of his estate and chargeable as such with his debts, a proceeding to enforce such charge against the property in the hands of such deceased surety's sole distributee because of administratrix's maladministration of the veteran's estate must be recognized. Hill v. Ouzts, 190 Miss. 341, 200 So. 254, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 54 (Miss. 1941).

When bank became insolvent and closed, deceased stockholder's double liability matured, standing in same class as other unsecured debts, and became charge on estate's entire personalty and realty. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

Heirs hold legal title to land subject to charge of ancestor's debts, though indebtedness be not ascertained at death. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

Where devise was void and deceased bank stockholder's heirs obtained judgment against testamentary trustee for proceeds of land sold, judgment claim held inferior to bank's double liability claim on stock, and heirs took remaining land subject to such liability. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

Before bank went into liquidation, no compromise settlement could be made between bank, stockholder's heirs, and testamentary trustee, which would result in defeating bank's right to enforce double liability. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

Bank's quitclaim deed of deceased stockholder's and debtor's land to heirs in settlement transaction, whereby heirs took certain assets in satisfaction of their judgment against estate which was inferior to bank's claim, held not supported by consideration. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

That bank, without consideration, quitclaimed deceased bank stockholder's land to heirs, pursuant to compromise settlement, and took bank stock in satisfaction of bank's claim for loan held not to preclude superintendent of banks, after bank closed, from enforcing stockholder's double liability against land quitclaimed. Gift v. Love, 164 Miss. 442, 144 So. 562, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1932).

The liability of a surety on a guardian's bond is a debt within the statute, charging the lands of a decedent with his estate over and above what his personal estate may be sufficient to pay. Savings Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Tart, 81 Miss. 276, 32 So. 115, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 103 (Miss. 1902).

4. Intent of testator.

A will manifests the testator's intention that the property transferred to his wife be free of estate taxes where "Item IV" exempts from the payment of estate taxes and administration costs those bequests made earlier in the will to his wife and "Item III" specifically states that his wife is to receive $4,800 a year "free of any debts" and therefore this property cannot bear the burden of estate taxes. Waldrup v. United States, 499 F. Supp. 820, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16059 (N.D. Miss. 1980).

This statute does not prohibit the testator himself from making, by his will, his own directions as to the order or priority of the application of his estate in the payment of his debts. Temple v. First Nat'l Bank, 202 Miss. 92, 30 So. 2d 605, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 245 (Miss. 1947).

Notwithstanding the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 539], a testator may charge his real property with the entire burden of the payment of his debts to the complete exoneration of his personalty, if and when the real estate is sufficient to do so, or he may apportion the burden between real and personal property, the will and not the statute controlling as between legatees, devisees, and distributees. Temple v. First Nat'l Bank, 202 Miss. 92, 30 So. 2d 605, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 245 (Miss. 1947).

This statute in no way affects the rule that when a testator makes bequests of his personalty and no devise of his realty, the latter is charged with his debts to the exoneration of the bequests. Temple v. First Nat'l Bank, 202 Miss. 92, 30 So. 2d 605, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 245 (Miss. 1947).

The property specifically set aside by testator to take care of debts, costs, and expenses of the estate proving insufficient, descendible personalty and realty were required to be first exhausted in the payment of such debts, etc., before encroaching upon the legacies provided for in the will, in view of testator's directions that such legacies should be invaded and abated for such purpose only as a last resort. Temple v. First Nat'l Bank, 202 Miss. 92, 30 So. 2d 605, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 245 (Miss. 1947).

The executor or administrator shall, within ninety days of the grant of his letters unless further time be allowed by the court or clerk, return an inventory, verified by oath, of the money belonging to the deceased which has come to his hands and of the debts due the deceased which have come to his knowledge, specifying the nature of each debt, setting down such as may be deemed hopeful distinct and separate from those which may be deemed doubtful and desperate. He shall, where appraisement is dispensed with or be not made, embrace in said inventory and give its value all property which has come to his hands; and where an appraisement has been made, he shall be charged therewith unless he show cause to the contrary.

HISTORY:

Codes, Hutchinson's 1848, ch. 49, art. 1 (78); 1857, ch. 60, art. 73; 1871, § 1127; 1880, § 2018; 1892, § 1864; 1906, § 2039; Hemingway's 1917, § 1704; 1930, § 1644; 1942, § 540.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Intervention in estate proceedings is a proper mode of seeking correction of the inventory. Rayborn v. McGill, 243 Miss. 585, 139 So. 2d 356, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 379 (Miss. 1962).

One listed in the inventory as owing decedent's estate may intervene for the purpose of contesting the item. Rayborn v. McGill, 243 Miss. 585, 139 So. 2d 356, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 379 (Miss. 1962).

In determining what is received by administrator, court may look to appraisement. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Statutory provision that administrator shall be charged with what is shown by appraisement does not preclude proper parties from proving that articles appraised were actually worth more than respective appraised amounts. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Appraisement, as regards items with which it is authorized by law to deal, stands as correct charge prima facie against administrator. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Statutory provision, that administrator shall stand charged with appraisement unless he show cause to contrary, does not limit showing to one by administrator himself, but showing may be made by any proper person sought to be charged with administrator's liability. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

In action against administrator of administrator, apparent defects in appraisement, introduced to show what administrator received, were supplied by operation of presumption that incidental procedural steps which should have been taken were taken. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Appraisement was no evidence against administrator in regard to accounts due estate, life insurance, and money on hand, because appraisement does not legally deal with money and choses in action, since such items are to be returned by inventory. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

That administrator actually received more or less than was charged to him by appraisement may be shown by competent evidence adduced by any proper party in interest. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Although appraisement was no evidence against administrator regarding insurance and cash, he was chargeable with insurance collected and cash received where evidence outside appraisement showed he received them. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Where cotton crop was produced by tenants working on shares and landlord's estate was entitled to only one-third of crop, administrator was chargeable only with such one-third of crop. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

On accounting administrator is chargeable with actual value of property coming into his hands rather than value fixed by appraiser. Davis v. Blumenberg, 107 Miss. 432, 65 So. 503, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 1914).

Whenever personal property of any kind, or assets not contained in the previous inventory, shall come to the possession or knowledge of the executor, administrator, or collector, an account or inventory of the same shall be returned within thirty days from the time of discovery, and the same shall be appraised by sworn appraisers unless the court or clerk shall deem it unnecessary.

§ 91-7-101. Debt from executor or administrator inventoried.

The naming of an executor in a will shall not operate to extinguish any claim which the deceased had against him, but it shall be the duty of every such executor accepting the trust to give in such claim in the list of debts. On his failure to give in such claim or any part thereof, any person interested in the estate may allege the facts by petition to the court, and the court shall decide on the validity of the claim, if it be denied. When the claim is established, the executor shall account for it as a debtor to the estate, and not otherwise; and in the same way and subject to all the foregoing provisions, an administrator shall give in a claim against himself.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

"To give in" the claim does not operate as an estoppel on the executor or administrator to show that the same was invalid. Franks v. Wanzer, 25 Miss. 121, 1852 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1852).

A failure by an administrator to make an inventory of the debt due by him to his intestate may be a breach of duty for which he is liable on his bond; yet it does not follow that the amount of the debt is to be treated as so much money in his hands. Kelsey v. Smith, 2 Miss. 68, 1834 Miss. LEXIS 14 (Miss. 1834).

§ 91-7-103. Summary proceeding for discovery of assets.

If the goods, chattels, and effects are improperly withheld from the executor or administrator, then he shall not be answerable for a failure to return the inventories herein required until the goods, chattels, and effects, or some part thereof, have been received. If the executor or administrator shall have cause to believe that any of the assets of the estate are concealed or have been or are wrongfully withheld from him, or that any person has in his possession or under his control any records, books, or documents containing evidence concerning such assets and the ownership thereof, or has knowledge or information thereof otherwise, then it shall be the duty of such executor or administrator to forthwith proceed by a summary petition before the court or chancellor against all persons suspected of having concealed or wrongfully withheld such assets, as well as all persons having books, records, documents, or information relating thereto, for a discovery of the assets of the estate and all adverse claim thereto, if any. All persons made parties to such petition may be compelled by attachment for contempt to discover under oath by answer filed or testimony given, either or both at such time and place as the court or chancellor may direct, all the facts known to them concerning the assets of the estate and of all adverse claims thereto, if any. If on the hearing it shall appear that any person has property or assets of the estate to which there is no adverse claim, the court or chancellor may direct it to be delivered to the executor or administrator, who shall forthwith account therefor in his inventory. No decree shall be rendered in such proceeding concerning any adverse claim set up by any person to any of the assets. The costs of such proceeding shall be borne by the estate.

1. Accounting.

Because the trustee of an educational trust was not compelled to account to the chancery court, but submitted to the accounting on her own accord, it did not matter that the accounting was not under oath. § 91-7-105. Failure to return inventory.

If any executor, administrator, or temporary administrator fail to return proper inventories within the time prescribed by law or by order of the court, a summons returnable in not less than five days may, on application of any person interested, be issued for such executor, administrator, or collector to show cause why such inventory hath not been returned. If the summons be returned executed and such party do not appear or, appearing, fail to show good cause, the court, or clerk in vacation, shall revoke the letters and grant administration anew.

If any person interested discover that the inventory returned does not contain a full account of all the property, goods, chattels, and effects of the deceased, such person may, on petition to the court, have the executor, administrator, or temporary administrator cited to appear and show cause why an additional inventory should not be returned. If, on hearing, the court be satisfied that a true inventory was not originally returned, it may order the executor or administrator to return a new one; and on his failure to do so, his letters may be revoked. If the title to any property not inventoried be in dispute, it shall be sufficient for the executor, administrator, or collector so to report; and he shall not be required to return an additional inventory until the title be settled in his favor. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Appraisement was no evidence against administrator in regard to accounts due estate, life insurance, and money on hand, because appraisement does not legally deal with money and choses in action, since such items are to be returned by inventory. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Homestead is not subject to sale to pay year's allowance to widow. Miers v. Miers, 160 Miss. 746, 133 So. 133, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1931).

§ 91-7-115. Administration of oath and how vacancies filled.

The oath required to be taken by the appraisers may be administered by any officer authorized to administer oaths, or by the executor or administrator, or by either appraiser to the others. In case any appraiser die, or for any cause do not act, another warrant may forthwith be issued to some other person to act.

HISTORY:

Codes, 1892, § 1875; 1906, § 2050; Hemingway's 1917, § 1715; 1930, § 1655; 1942, § 551.

It shall be the duty of the appraisers to set apart to the widow and children, or to the widow if there be no children, or to the children if there be no widow, such personal property as is exempt by law from execution, and make report thereof and attach it to the appraisement, which shall be approved by the court if found correct, or may be referred back to them by the court with instructions as to what to allow. The action of the appraisers or the court shall not be necessary to the title of the widow and children to the exempt property, which shall vest in them by operation of law on the death of the husband and father.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Title to household furniture vested in testator's children, and was not chargeable to administrator. Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Doughtry, 181 Miss. 586, 179 So. 846, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1938).

Where deceased share tenant left nothing except exempt property, administration was unnecessary; hence widow and children having unsuccessfully demanded tenant's share from landlord could recover in replevin. Williams v. Sykes, 170 Miss. 88, 154 So. 267, 154 So. 727, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 100 (Miss. 1934).

Widow, as administratrix de bonis non, could not be charged with entire personal property received, but only as to part not exempt, though appraisers did not set exempt property apart. Hayes v. National Surety Co., 169 Miss. 676, 153 So. 515, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1934).

Exempt property descends freed not only from debts incurred by owner in lifetime, but also expenses of last illness and funeral, regardless of whether estate is solvent. De Baum v. Hulett Undertaking Co., 169 Miss. 488, 153 So. 513, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1934).

Homestead is not subject to sale to pay year's allowance to widow. Miers v. Miers, 160 Miss. 746, 133 So. 133, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1931).

It shall be the duty of the appraisers to set apart out of the effects of the decedent, for the spouse and children who were being supported by the decedent, or for the spouse if there be no such children, or for such children if there be no spouse, one (1) year's provision, including such provision as may be embraced in the exempt property set apart. If there be no provisions, or an insufficient amount, the appraiser shall allow money in lieu thereof or in addition thereto necessary for the comfortable support of the spouse and children, or spouse or children, as the case may be, for one (1) year. In addition to the provisions or money in lieu thereof, the appraisers shall ascertain and allow what sum of money will be needed to purchase necessary wearing apparel for the spouse and such children, or the spouse or children, as the case may be, and to pay tuition for the children for one (1) year. If a parent dies leaving children who are infants and were being maintained by the parent, the same provisions and allowance shall be set apart and made for them as above provided.

1. In general; nature of entitlement.
2. Who is entitled.
3. Effect of terms of, lack of, or renunciation of, will.
4. Authority, role of court.
5. Non-residents.
6. Spouse living apart from spouse; children living apart from parent.
7. Amount; payment.
8. Miscellaneous.

1. In general; nature of entitlement.

Real estate owned as tenants by the entirety vested exclusively in surviving wife upon husband's death, and thus did not become asset of husband's probate estate and was not available to be distributed in kind as widow's allowance. In re Osborne, 120 B.R. 64, 1990 Bankr. LEXIS 2184 (Bankr. N.D. Miss. 1990).

Right of widow to year's allowance is absolute, whatever may be condition of estate, and application therefor is matter with which administrator has no concern. Harwell v. Woody, 206 Miss. 863, 41 So. 2d 35, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 308 (Miss. 1949).

Administrator, as such, is without right to prosecute appeal from order of court decreeing year's allowance to widow of decedent, in absence of issue involving her status as widow entitled to allowance. Harwell v. Woody, 206 Miss. 863, 41 So. 2d 35, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 308 (Miss. 1949).

The right of a widow to an allowance for a year's support is absolute and cannot be conditioned on the payment by her to the administrator of her deceased husband's wages which she has collected. Westbrook v. Shotts, 200 Miss. 456, 27 So. 2d 683, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 309 (Miss. 1946).

Making a year's allowance for support of deceased's widow is part of jurisdiction of chancery court, which cannot be taken away nor impaired by legislature, so that authority in appraisers to set aside year's support does not deprive chancellor of authority. Prentiss v. Turner, 170 Miss. 496, 155 So. 214, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1934).

Right of widow to year's support superior to lien of enrolled judgment. First Nat'l Bank v. Donald, 112 Miss. 681, 73 So. 723, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 162 (Miss. 1917).

Wife entitled to year's support under will of husband devising all his property to sisters to exclusion of wife. Whitehead v. Kirk, 106 Miss. 706, 64 So. 658, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. 1914).

2. Who is entitled.

In order to be entitled to the widow's allowance, a widow need only show that she and decedent were living together as husband and wife at the time of his death. Waldrup v. United States, 499 F. Supp. 820, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16059 (N.D. Miss. 1980).

A widow's allowance was properly denied where the widow did not make a motion for or in any other manner indicate that she wanted a widow's allowance set aside to her before the estate was finally closed, and where there was no suggestion of fraud. Thomas v. Bailey, 375 So. 2d 1049, 1979 Miss. LEXIS 2607 (Miss. 1979), overruled in part, Clark v. Neese, 131 So. 3d 556, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 643 (Miss. 2013).

Where widow and decedent were living together as husband and wife at time of decedent's death and he was under a duty to support her, widow's allowance was proper under Code 1942 § 561. Mills v. Mills, 279 So. 2d 917, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1495 (Miss. 1973).

One claiming this allowance has the burden of showing that she was being supported by decedent. In re Will of Marshall, 243 Miss. 472, 138 So. 2d 482, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1962).

A posthumous child has rights in the year's support. Womack v. Boyd, 31 Miss. 443, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 1856).

3. Effect of terms of, lack of, or renunciation of, will.

A widow is entitled to the statutory widow's allowance, regardless of a will, unless it clearly appears that the provisions of the will for the widow are in lieu of the year's support provided by statute. Rush v. Rush, 360 So. 2d 1240, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2341 (Miss. 1978).

This section [Code 1942 § 561] applies to cases of testacy and intestacy alike except in the case of wills where it clearly appears that the provisions in the will for the widow and minor children of the decedent are in lieu of the 1 year's support provided for by the statute. Mills v. Mills, 279 So. 2d 917, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1495 (Miss. 1973).

Allowance of a year's support to a widow renouncing her husband's will is within the chancellor's discretion. Sandifer v. Sandifer, 237 Miss. 464, 115 So. 2d 46, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 491 (Miss. 1959).

Widow's contract reciting that she waived right to renounce will of husband and take by inheritance held too indefinite to preclude widow from $3,000 as year's allowance provided by statute. Gidden v. Gidden, 176 Miss. 98, 167 So. 785, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 116 (Miss. 1936).

Will held not to show intention on part of testator that provisions therein for widow were to be in lieu of statutory allowance for support for year. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928).

Widow and minor children entitled to year's support in case of will where provision of will not made in lieu of all other claim, or there is no inconsistency between will and provision for allowance. Stewart v. Stewart, 132 Miss. 515, 96 So. 694, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1923).

4. Authority, role of court.

The fixing of the amount of the widow's allowance by the appraisers is not final, but is subject to approval or disapproval of the chancery court. Beckett v. Howorth, 237 Miss. 394, 115 So. 2d 48, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 483 (Miss. 1959).

Making a year's allowance for support of deceased's widow is part of jurisdiction of chancery court, which cannot be taken away nor impaired by legislature, so that authority in appraisers to set aside year's support does not deprive chancellor of authority. Prentiss v. Turner, 170 Miss. 496, 155 So. 214, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1934).

Action of appraisers in making allowance for year's support to widow of decedent is not final, but only advisory to chancellor, and subject to his approval or disapproval. Prentiss v. Turner, 170 Miss. 496, 155 So. 214, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1934).

If appraisers make no allowance for widow's support for a year, court or chancellor in vacation may, on proper petition therefor, make allowance. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928).

5. Non-residents.

The statute has no application in favor of nonresidents. Barber v. Ellis, 68 Miss. 172, 8 So. 390, 1890 Miss. LEXIS 33 (Miss. 1890).

6. Spouse living apart from spouse; children living apart from parent.

Widow's allowance under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-7-135 and 91-7-141 was improper as the widow did not show that she was being supported by the decedent at the time of his death or that she was away from him without fault on her part since she had left the decedent's home by her own volition after his leg was amputated, and was living in her own home when he died. In re Estate of Estes, 111 So. 3d 1223, 2012 Miss. App. LEXIS 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2012).

Where husband's obligation to support wife was terminated by a property settlement, the wife is not entitled to the statutory support allowance out of his estate. Will of Best v. Brewer, 236 Miss. 359, 111 So. 2d 262, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 325 (Miss. 1959).

A wife being supported by her husband at the time of his death in compliance with a decree for temporary alimony was entitled to an allowance for a year's support. Stringer v. Arrington, 202 Miss. 798, 32 So. 2d 879, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 1947).

Allowance to widow of support for one year was authorized where evidence warranted court in believing that separation of deceased and wife resulted from no fault of wife but was the fault of deceased and that his duty to support her continued. Vaughan v. Vaughan, 195 Miss. 463, 16 So. 2d 23, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 175 (Miss. 1943).

Wife living apart from husband without his fault, and not supported by him, is not entitled to a year's support from his estate. Byars v. Gholson, 147 Miss. 460, 112 So. 578, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 1927).

7. Amount; payment.

Where a decedent left an estate of an approximate value of $139,000, an allowance to the widow of $6,000 for one year's support was not excessive. Bryan v. Quinn, 233 Miss. 366, 102 So. 2d 124, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1958).

Amount of widow's allowance is discretionary with chancellor where fees of administrator and counsel have been paid and award is $800 less than that recommended by appraisers. Harwell v. Woody, 206 Miss. 863, 41 So. 2d 35, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 308 (Miss. 1949).

The amount allowed by the appraisers to the widow for year's support is advisory to, but not binding upon, the chancellor. Moseley v.

Harper, 202 Miss. 442, 32 So. 2d 192, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 1947).

In determining the amount of the widow's allowance, the chancellor should consider the value of the estate, the rights of others having an interest therein, the manner of living to which the widow was accustomed during her husband's life, her station in life and the demands of that station. Moseley v. Harper, 202 Miss. 442, 32 So. 2d 192, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 1947).

Refusal of chancellor to increase appraiser's allowance for widow's support from $5,000 to $8,500 was not an abuse of discretion, where items presented by widow to substantiate her petition for increase included improper items such as expenses for repairs, taxes and insurance upon her separate property, lot and clothing for burial of decedent, and other excessive costs. Moseley v. Harper, 202 Miss. 442, 32 So. 2d 192, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 1947).

Executor must turn over money awarded widow for year's support to her in cash; he cannot withhold it on ground she has property which belongs to estate. Pratt v. Pratt, 155 Miss. 237, 124 So. 323, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 275 (Miss. 1929).

Amount of allowance for support of widow is within discretion of chancellor. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928); Whitehead v. Kirk, 106 Miss. 706, 64 So. 658, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 10 (Miss. 1914); Bryan v. Quinn, 233 Miss. 366, 102 So. 2d 124, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1958).

Allowance of $2,400 for support of widow during year following decedent's death held not excessive. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928).

In proceeding to set aside decree granting widow allowance for year's support, evidence regarding her separate income and income from property bequeathed held properly excluded. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928).

8. Miscellaneous.

Homestead is not subject to sale to pay year's allowance to widow. Miers v. Miers, 160 Miss. 746, 133 So. 133, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1931).

Notice to executor or legatees of proceedings by widow for year's allowance for support is not required. Gilmer v. Gilmer, 151 Miss. 23, 117 So. 371, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1928).

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Allowance improper.

1. In general.

If the widow be not the mother of the children, and they live apart, the latter will be entitled to have a fair proportion of the year's allowance, and the court will apportion it. Womack v. Boyd, 31 Miss. 443, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 97 (Miss. 1856).

2. Allowance improper.

Widow's allowance under Miss. Such executor or administrator shall mail a notice to persons so identified, at their last known address, informing them that a failure to have their claim probated and registered by the clerk of the court granting letters within ninety (90) days after the first publication of the notice to creditors will bar such claim as provided in Section 91-7-151.

(2) The executor or administrator shall file with the clerk of the court an affidavit stating that such executor or administrator has made reasonably diligent efforts to identify persons having claims against the estate and has given notice by mail as required in subsection (1) of this section to all persons so identified. Upon filing such affidavit, it shall be the duty of the executor or administrator to publish in some newspaper in the county a notice requiring all persons having claims against the estate to have the same probated and registered by the clerk of the court granting letters, which notice shall state the time when the letters were granted and that a failure to probate and register within ninety (90) days after the first publication of such notice will bar the claim. The notice shall be published for three (3) consecutive weeks, and proof of publication shall be filed with the clerk. If a paper be not published in the county, notice by posting at the courthouse door and three (3) other places of public resort in the county shall suffice, and the affidavit of such posting filed shall be evidence thereof in any controversy in which the fact of such posting shall be brought into question.

(3) The filing of proof of publication as provided in this section shall not be necessary to set the statute of limitation to running, but proof of publication shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which the cause is pending at any time before a decree of final discharge shall be rendered; and the time for filing proof of publication shall not be limited to the ninety-day period in which creditors may probate claims.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Sufficiency of notice.
3. Failure to give notice.

1. In general.

The role played by the chancery court in probate proceedings under § 91-7-143, upon which the statute's time bar is dependent in that notice may be published only after an affidavit is filed with the clerk of court, is sufficient state action to implicate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution; thus, a creditor's claim against an estate was a property interest protected by the Fourteenth Amendment. Vann v. Mississippi Neurosurgery, P.A. (In re Estate of Petrick), 635 So. 2d 1389, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 205 (Miss. 1994).

The time bar of § 91-7-145 did not apply, and therefore a creditor's untimely claim against an estate was valid, where the creditor was "reasonably ascer-tainable" and the administratrix merely published notice rather than providing notice by mail as mandated by the statute; furthermore, the insufficient notice violated the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Vann v. Mississippi Neurosurgery, P.A. (In re Estate of Petrick), 635 So. 2d 1389, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 205 (Miss. 1994).

Notice to creditors of decedent's estate signed by the then duly appointed and qualified administrator was valid, notwithstanding that he was removed, on motion of decedent's widow, on the same date that notice to the creditors was first published, and a creditor's claim filed some 2 months after expiration of the 90 day period from first publication date was time barred. Estate of Myers v. Myers, 498 So. 2d 376, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2844 (Miss. 1986).

Whether the publication of notice to creditors required by § 91-7-145 is made in an appropriate newspaper brings into bearing § 13-3-31, which sets forth the requirements a newspaper must meet in order to qualify as a valid publisher of legal notices. Estate of Myers v. Myers, 498 So. 2d 376, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2844 (Miss. 1986).

Contention that notice to creditors was not published in a newspaper which qualified as a valid publisher of legal notices, which was not raised in the court below, would not be considered by the Supreme Court on appeal. Estate of Myers v. Myers, 498 So. 2d 376, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2844 (Miss. 1986).

Where decedent's first wife failed to file a claim for unpaid alimony against his estate within the statutory period of 90 days, she was estopped under § 91-7-145 from bringing her claim. Medders v. Ryle, 458 So. 2d 685, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1871 (Miss. 1984).

Administrator is required to speedily publish notice to creditors requiring probate of claims within six months. McDowell v. Minor, 158 Miss. 360, 130 So. 484, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 57 (Miss. 1930).

Administrator could not delay in his duty to make prompt publication of notice to creditors and thereafter take advantage of delay in his own behalf. McDowell v. Minor, 158 Miss. 360, 130 So. 484, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 57 (Miss. 1930).

A decedent's estate is not liable for an assessment against the decedent as stockholder in a failed national bank, made in the decedent's lifetime, where a claim therefor was not presented within the time limited by the Mississippi statute. Mann v. Kleisdorff, 16 F.2d 997, 1927 U.S. App. LEXIS 3682 (5th Cir. Miss. 1927).

Claim not presented within six months after publication is not barred where notice not published for three consecutive weeks and no proof of publication is made and filed with clerk. Boutwell v. Farmers' & Traders' Bank, 118 Miss. 50, 79 So. 1, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 48 (Miss. 1918).

Court cannot after publication make a second publication shortening time allowed in first publication for probating and registering claims. Geisenberger v. Progress Knitting Mills, 113 Miss. 495, 74 So. 331, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. 1917).

2. Sufficiency of notice.

Chancellor erred in holding that a creditor's claim against the decedent's estate was time barred under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-145, as no determination was even made as to whether the creditor was a reasonably ascertainable creditor. Further, § 91-7-145 did not specifically allow for notice by publication as a substitute for actual notice by mail; rather, notice by publication was a requirement in addition to providing the creditor notice by mail. Holston v. Ladner (In re Estate of Ladner), 911 So. 2d 673, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 663 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Notice to creditors of estate to have claims probated and registered before chancery court clerk of certain county within specified six-month period held sufficient as against contention that notice was fatally defective because it did not indicate to creditors what court had granted letters of executorship. Floyd v. Chatham, 178 Miss. 137, 172 So. 504, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 191 (Miss. 1937).

Executor's notice to creditors not void because date in notice not that on which letters granted. George T. Webb & Co. v. Fogg, 134 Miss. 605, 99 So. 504, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1924).

"Notice is hereby given to all creditors having claims against said estate to present same to the clerk of said court for probate and registration according to law, within six months from this date, or they will be forever barred," dated and signed by administrator, is sufficient. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1915).

Publication of notice dated May 26, 1910, in newspaper on June 3, 10 and 17, sufficient. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1915).

Notice stating that person publishing it was appointed administrator and advising all persons having claims to deal as law directs was not sufficient. Marshall v. John Deere Plow Co., 99 Miss. 284, 54 So. 948, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 209 (Miss. 1911).

Administrator's notice not void for use of word "file" instead of "register." Stokes v. Lemon & Gale Co., 96 Miss. 868, 52 So. 457, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 210 (Miss. 1910).

3. Failure to give notice.

Because the executrix failed in the executrix's statutory duty to provide notice to any creditors regarding the probate of the decedent's estate, the filing period for probate claims did not expire as the executrix failed to provide the required statutory notice to trigger the running of the filing period. Avakian v. Wilmington Trust N.A. (In re Estate of Avakian), 231 So. 3d 208, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 201 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 229 So. 3d 122, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 492 (Miss. 2017).

§ 91-7-147. Newspaper notices dispensed with in small estates.

Where the value of an estate shall not be more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), the court shall dispense with newspaper notices; and notices in lieu thereof shall be posted for thirty (30) days at the courthouse door and two (2) other public places in the county. Failure of persons having claims against the estate to have their claims probated and registered by the clerk of the court granting letters within ninety (90) days after the date on which notice is posted will bar such claims as provided in Section 91-7-151.

§ 91-7-149. Probate of claims.

Any person desiring to probate his claim shall present to the clerk the written evidence thereof, if any, or if the claim be a judgment or decree, a duly certified copy thereof, or if there be no written evidence thereof, an itemized account or a statement of the claim in writing, signed by the creditor, and make affidavit, to be attached thereto, to the following effect, viz.: That the claim is just, correct, and owing from the deceased; that it is not usurious; that neither the affiant nor any other person has received payment in whole or in part thereof, except such as is credited thereon, if any; and that security has not been received therefor except as stated, if any. Thereupon, if the clerk shall approve, he shall indorse upon the claim the words following: "Probated and allowed for $________ and registered this ________ day of ________, A.D., ________," and shall sign his name officially thereto. Probate registration and allowance shall be sufficient presentation of the claim to the executor or administrator; provided, that should the clerk probate and allow and register the claim, but fail or neglect to indorse thereon the words, "Probated and allowed for $________ and registered the ________ day of ________, A.D., ________," and officially sign his name thereto, the court may, upon proper showing, allow the clerk to indorse on the claim, nunc pro tunc, the words, "Probated and allowed for $________ and registered, this the ________ day of ________, A.D., ________," and sign his name officially thereto. If the claim be based upon a demand of which there is no written evidence or upon an itemized account, the statement of said claim or the itemized account shall be retained and kept by the clerk among the official papers pertaining to the estate; and if the claim be based upon a promissory note or other instrument purporting to have been executed by the decedent, the creditor shall file with his claim either the original thereof or a duplicate of such original in the discretion of the creditor. If the original writing is presented to the clerk, it may be withdrawn by the creditor, and the clerk shall make a duplicate thereof. No specific writing or certificate shall be required to be made by the clerk on either the original writing or the duplicate retained by the clerk. In no instance shall an original writing be required to be presented to the clerk unless (a) a question is raised by the personal representative of the estate, or by any party in interest, as to the authenticity of the original or (b) in the circumstances it would be unfair to admit into evidence the duplicate in lieu of the original. In either of the above situations, the court or chancellor, upon good cause being shown, may require the creditor to produce the original before the court or clerk for the inspection of the personal representative or other party in interest, who may examine the original and who may make photographic copies thereof under the supervision of the clerk.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, any record, voucher, claim, check, draft, receipt, writing, account, statement, note or other evidence which may be furnished, filed, probated, presented or produced, or required to be produced, by a federally regulated bank, thrift or trust company shall be deemed to be an original admitted, furnished, filed, probated, presented, or produced for all purposes and with the same effect as the original, if such financial institution produces a copy of such evidence from a format of storage commonly used by financial institutions, whether electronic, imaged, magnetic, microphotographic or otherwise.

1. In general.

The amendment to § 91-7-149 which deleted the requirement of filing the original promissory note when a creditor makes a claim against the estate, would be retroactively applied to a case which was before the court when the amendment was enacted. Bell v. Mitchell, 592 So. 2d 528, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 968 (Miss. 1991).

In order for a claimant to introduce evidence to support a claim against an estate for medical expenses upon contest, the claimant may proceed under § 41-9-119, but to do this, he or she must be allowed to go into court to present the bills incurred and to testify for what purpose they were incurred. Since a summary judgment, by its nature, disposes of a case before a trial is commenced, summary judgment practice under Rule 56, Miss. R. Civ. P. is inapplicable in contests of probated claims because it is inconsistent with the statutory procedure which necessitates that a claimant enter court to introduce evidence in support of his or her claim and permits a personal representative to rebut the claim. Thus, the procedure for summary judgment is not applicable to dispose of claims made under § 91-7-149. Biloxi Regional Medical Center, Inc. v. Estate of Ross, 546 So. 2d 667, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 297 (Miss. 1989).

A substantial compliance with the statute is sufficient. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

The purposes of nonclaim statutes are to furnish the legal representative with evidence of the validity of the claim, give him an opportunity to contest the same, and enable him to justify the payment and be allowed credit therefor in his account. Whitaker v. Davenport, 193 Miss. 523, 10 So. 2d 202, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1942).

Probating, allowing, and registering of claims against estate are not "judicial acts" on part of clerk. Poyner v. Gilmore, 171 Miss. 859, 158 So. 922, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 1935).

Purpose of additional provisions, incorporated into statute regulating manner of filing claims for probate was to require evidences of debt to remain on file in clerk's office, where heirs, or other creditors or parties in interest, could better examine into facts, so as to avoid collection of false claims. Jordan v. Love, 171 Miss. 523, 157 So. 877, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1934).

Claim against estate of deceased stockholder in insolvent bank, for personal liability filed and marked "probated" by clerk, held not void because lost or mislaid by clerk. Carothers v. Love, 169 Miss. 250, 152 So. 483, 153 So. 389, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 1934).

Law providing manner for filing claims against estate of decedent should be strictly construed against creditors. Jennings v. Lowery & Berry, 147 Miss. 673, 112 So. 692, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 304 (Miss. 1927).

2. Mandatory nature of statute.

A claimant's pleadings were adequate under § 91-7-149 where she did all that the statute required with the limited exception of the label on her pleading, in that she set forth the nature of her claim and summarized its factual basis, and she complied with the important verification requirements of the statute. Williams v.

Mason, 556 So. 2d 1045, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 34 (Miss. 1990).

Whenever claim against estate of decedent, to which affidavit in compliance with statute is attached, is presented to clerk for probate, he has mandatory duty to admit it to probate by attaching his certificate thereto. Poyner v. Gilmore, 171 Miss. 859, 158 So. 922, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 1935).

Technical precision of form is not required to satisfy statute regulating manner of probating claims, although statute is mandatory as to its substance. Deposit Guaranty Bank & Trust Co. v. Jordan's Estate, 171 Miss. 332, 157 So. 876, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1934); Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Goldstein, 187 Miss. 285, 192 So. 584, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 206 (Miss. 1939).

Substance of law on subject of probating claims against estate is mandatory. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933); Ellsworth v. Fox, 147 So. 790 (Miss. 1933); Jordan v. Love, 171 Miss. 523, 157 So. 877, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1934); Strange v. Strange, 189 Miss. 349, 197 So. 830, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. 1940).

Statute requiring endorsement of clerk is mandatory. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1915).

The statute is mandatory and an affidavit which is not in effect a compliance with it will not give validity to the probation, allowance and registration of a claim. Cheairs v. Cheairs, 81 Miss. 662, 33 So. 414, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 1902).

3. Claims subject to probate.

A former wife proved a valid claim against her former husband's estate for $30,600, where there was a prior court judgment finding that the husband was $600 in arrears in alimony payments, and their divorce decree required the husband to carry a $30,000 life insurance policy on his own life naming the wife as the policy's primary beneficiary after payment of then existing pledged debts, but the husband had let the policy lapse. Raspilair v. Estate of Raspilair, 583 So. 2d 970, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 458 (Miss. 1991).

In an action seeking to compel a perfect inventory, void certain conveyances, partition property, and establish a claim against an estate, §§ 91-7-149, 91-7-251 had no application and petitioner's claim was improperly dismissed as untimely, where the claim was not for a specific money demand due or to become due but rather was an inchoate and contingent claim involving the ownership by co-tenancy of specific property. Maxwell v. Yuncker, 419 So. 2d 580, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2165 (Miss. 1982).

Defaulted instalments of alimony can be recovered against the husband's personal representative and claim therefor may be probated as a decree. Schaffer v. Schaffer, 209 Miss. 220, 46 So. 2d 443, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1950).

Purchaser's claim against decedent's estate for purchase price of royalty interest in oil and gas lease because of breach of warranty based on decedent's prior conveyance of his interest is a probatable claim against the estate of decedent, there having been no production of oil and gas under the lease prior to decedent's death. Dale v. Hickman, 207 Miss. 606, 42 So. 2d 810, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 373 (Miss. 1949).

A secured creditor is free to stand upon his security and is under no duty to probate his debt. Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

A claim that certain funds in a bank belong to one other than the decedent does not constitute a claim against the estate capable of being probated. Matthews v. Redmond, 202 Miss. 253, 32 So. 2d 123, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 268 (Miss. 1947).

Person who took paralytic into her home and continuously cared for him for a period of two and one-half years until his death, pursuant to an oral agreement that in return such paralytic would make will leaving her his entire estate consisting of realty and personalty, where paralytic did execute such a will but subsequently executed a new will leaving all his property to his nephew, at least had a right to establish her claim quantum meruit. Johnston v. Tomme, 199 Miss. 337, 24 So. 2d 730, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1946).

A claim against a decedent's estate for maintenance, nursing and other care furnished by an old men's home upon the decedent's false and fraudulent representation that he was a pauper was not a claim for unliquidated damages for a tort, which under the statute could not be probated, but a claim for reasonable compensation for care and support. Old Men's Home, Inc. v. Lee's Estate, 191 Miss. 669, 2 So. 2d 791, 4 So. 2d 235, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 144 (Miss. 1941).

Judgments obtained against foreign administrator cannot be probated under statute and cannot be basis of claim against estate administered in state. Voyles v. Robinson, 151 Miss. 585, 118 So. 420, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 338 (Miss. 1928).

Physicians' and druggists' bills should be separately probated. Gaulden v. Ramsey, 123 Miss. 1, 85 So. 109, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 1 (Miss. 1920).

4. —Claim of executor or trustee.

Under law permitting executor to probate individual account, fact that trustee, acting with an executor and trustee in petitioning for sale of realty to pay debts, had a probated account did not show fraud and his good faith presumed. Brickell v. Lightcap, 115 Miss. 417, 76 So. 489, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 218 (Miss. 1917), overruled, Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

5. Statement of claims.

No fixed form of claim is ordinarily required, nor is the technical accuracy and certainty of description essential in pleading necessary, so long as it gives such information concerning the nature and amount of the demand as to enable the representative to act intelligently upon it. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

Though a claim may satisfy minimum requirements the personal representative may require the creditor to make it more definite and certain where it does not sufficiently advise him of its essential details or nature. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

Where a claimant presents in good faith a claim in substantial compliance with the statute, it is not equitable for the decedent's representation to wait until the time for filing claims has expired and then to assert that the itemized account is not technically sufficient and thereby to bar the claim. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

A claim for premiums upon insurance policies is sufficiently itemized where it shows the kind of policy, the policy number, the period covered, the amount due on final audit, and the due date. Stewart v. Estate of Williamson, 243 Miss. 450, 138 So. 2d 742, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1962).

The statute clearly contemplates that, in presenting claims against the estate of a decedent, the evidence or statement of same probated must on its face show a prima facie right in the claimant to recover from the estate the amount claimed, and that it must disclose the nature and amount of the claim with sufficient prevision to bar, when paid, an action therefor. Johnson v. Hannon, 211 Miss. 207, 51 So. 2d 283, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1951).

Where a claim was for services rendered as a servant of deceased for washing, ironing, cooking, cleaning house and etc., for 842 days at a $1.00 per day and night totalling the sum of $842, the statement of claim was sufficient on its face to inform the administrator that the services were rendered under an implied, if not an express, promise to pay for the same and the claimant should be permitted to introduce her proof to establish either an express or implied promise to pay for the services. Johnson v. Hannon, 211 Miss. 207, 51 So. 2d 283, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1951).

A claim for "personal services" is too broad and indefinite; the statement of such a claim must specify the nature and character of the services rendered and that they were rendered pursuant to a contract with the decedent during his lifetime, either express or implied, that the services were to be compensated for. Johnson v. Odom, 202 Miss. 213, 31 So. 2d 120, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 261 (Miss. 1947).

Omission of the middle name or initial of the decedent does not invalidate a claim presented for probate against an estate. Boggan v. Scruggs, 200 Miss. 747, 29 So. 2d 86, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1947), overruled, Talbert v. Ellzey, 203 Miss. 612, 35 So. 2d 628, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1948).

A form of claim merely stating that it is in account with the named decedent, setting forth the items and signed at the end is not defective as failing to disclose whether the debt claimed is due from or to the decedent's estate, and if from, to whom. Boggan v. Scruggs, 200 Miss. 747, 29 So. 2d 86, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1947), overruled, Talbert v. Ellzey, 203 Miss. 612, 35 So. 2d 628, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1948).

Certified copies of petitions in suit against foreign administrator in foreign state with statutory affidavits attached held sufficient statement of claim against estate. Voyles v. Robinson, 151 Miss. 585, 118 So. 420, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 338 (Miss. 1928).

Defective description of some of the several items of a claim does not render the probate of the claim void. Gaulden v. Ramsey, 123 Miss. 1, 85 So. 109, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 1 (Miss. 1920).

"To care and attention including board, lodging . . . and service for 3 years prior to the death of said Mrs. O. D. Graves, and being from April 20, 1913, to April 20, 1916," properly states claim. Gaulden v. Ramsey, 123 Miss. 1, 85 So. 109, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 1 (Miss. 1920).

Where purchaser of claims did not itemize them for probate, but listed each, giving amount and name of original creditor, this was not sufficient. Rogers v. Rosenstock, 117 Miss. 144, 77 So. 958, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1918).

The itemized account need not show days of month of doctor's visits; due date of each item held to be first day of month in which charged. Duffy v. Kilroe, 116 Miss. 7, 76 So. 681, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 281 (Miss. 1917).

Statement of claim sufficiently signed where creditor signed affidavit attached thereto. Bankston v. Coopwood, 99 Miss. 511, 55 So. 48, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 1911).

A claim for professional services not based upon an itemized account is sufficiently stated for probate if in writing and if it specifies a definite sum as due "for legal advice and services rendered" to deceased. Foster v. Shaffer, 84 Miss. 197, 36 So. 243, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 1904).

6. Clerk's certificate.

Defendants' promissory notes were properly probated where the clerk's certificate showed that each note was a true and correct copy of the original note and that after each original note was filed and numbered it was withdrawn and the copy substituted; the fact that the clerk did not mark on any of the original notes the word "filed" and did not number the original notes did not invalidate the probation of the notes. Estate of Wilson v. National Bank of Commerce, 364 So. 2d 1117, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2239 (Miss. 1978).

Where a creditor's claim against a decedent's estate is filed with the chancery clerk within the statutory six-month period, it is the purpose of the 1934 amendment to this section [Code 1942, § 568] to allow the clerk to enter a nunc pro tunc indorsement on the claim after the expiration of the statutory period. Ethridge v. Estate of Paul, 196 So. 2d 530, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1492 (Miss. 1967).

Bill against chancery clerk and his surety for failure to attach certificate to claim showing it was probated, allowed, and registered, because of which failure claim was disallowed, held not demurrable since claimant would at least be entitled to nominal damages. Poyner v. Gilmore, 171 Miss. 859, 158 So. 922, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 25 (Miss. 1935).

Claim rendered invalid by failure of clerk to make any endorsement showing probate, registration and allowance. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1915).

Statute requiring endorsement of clerk is mandatory, but court within time period before claim is barred, where clerk's failure was due to ignorance of duty, may enter order nunc pro tunc authorizing clerk to approve and allow claim. Stevens v. D. R. Dunlap Mercantile Co., 108 Miss. 690, 67 So. 160, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1915).

Clerk's certificate not invalidated by omission of word "probated" where shown statute complied with by claimant. Davis v. Blumenberg, 107 Miss. 432, 65 So. 503, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 1914).

7. Withdrawal of instruments.

Defendants' promissory notes were properly probated where the clerk's certificate showed that each note was a true and correct copy of the original note and that after each original note was filed and numbered it was withdrawn and the copy substituted; the fact that the clerk did not mark on any of the original notes the word "filed" and did not number the original notes did not invalidate the probation of the notes. Estate of Wilson v. National Bank of Commerce, 364 So. 2d 1117, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2239 (Miss. 1978).

Clerk keeps original note probated against estate until creditor requests withdrawal thereof, and clerk's statutory obligation to make certified copy to be retained by him arises only on claimant's request to withdraw original and exists only while original yet remains in clerk's hands. Merchants' & Mfrs' Bank v. Busby, 172 Miss. 394, 160 So. 577, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1935).

Clerk held not liable for failure to certify copies of notes filed against estate, resulting in disallowance of claim, in absence of allegations that he had assured creditor at time of withdrawal of originals that certified copies had been made and filed, or promised to make and file certified copies after withdrawal. Merchants' & Mfrs' Bank v. Busby, 172 Miss. 394, 160 So. 577, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1935).

Probate of note withdrawn by claimant held void for absence of clerk's seal on certificate on copy of note, although certificate of probate was sealed. King v. Jones, 171 Miss. 886, 158 So. 457, 158 So. 796, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 19 (Miss. 1935).

Statute requires creditor probating claim against estate on deceased's note, in order to withdraw original note from clerk's office, to furnish for administrator, heirs, and other parties in interest full and true copy made or verified by clerk, accompanied by clerk's certificate, indorsed on copy or appended thereto, which certificate and copy must both remain on file among papers in clerk's office. Jordan v. Love, 171 Miss. 523, 157 So. 877, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1934).

Where clerk certified copy of deceased's note filed for probate and sent certificate and original note back to claimant, who filed them away without observing irregularity until after period for probation had expired, claim was not allowable, since statute was not complied with. Jordan v. Love, 171 Miss. 523, 157 So. 877, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1934).

Statute regulating probate of claims and authorizing withdrawal of original note where clerk retains copy, held to authorize withdrawal of original attached affidavit where clerk retained a certified copy. Deposit Guaranty Bank & Trust Co. v. Jordan's Estate, 171 Miss. 332, 157 So. 876, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 260 (Miss. 1934).

Statute requires clerk of court, when original instruments executed by decedent are withdrawn from files, to make and retain certified copies. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933).

Clerk's certificate on copies retained when original instruments executed by decedent are withdrawn from files, must be under hand and seal of clerk and must show clerk has had originals placed before him and that copies retained are true copies. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933).

It is sufficient for clerk to indorse on copy retained of instrument executed by decedent and withdrawn from files that same is "true copy of original this day exhibited to me," dating certificate, signing same, and affixing thereto his official seal. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933).

Where original note of decedent is withdrawn from files, all indorsements and credits must be shown by copy retained and certificate. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933).

8. Defective probate.

A claim upon a note is properly disallowed where the original is not filed. Stewart v. Estate of Williamson, 243 Miss. 450, 138 So. 2d 742, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 361 (Miss. 1962).

Claim by deceased's brother for a doctor's bill incurred by the decedent in his last illness, there being no evidence that the brother paid the claim at the request of the deceased, was properly refused since under the law such a claim should be separately probated on the affidavit of the original creditor. Martin v. De Jarnette, 185 Miss. 76, 187 So. 202, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 123 (Miss. 1939).

Holder of note against estate must probate original note or account for loss; claimant on open account must itemize as to dates and sums furnished. Levy v. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co., 124 Miss. 325, 86 So. 807, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 512 (Miss. 1921).

Decree disallowing claim not probated according to law affirmed where record does not contain note or account attempted to be probated. Horne v. McAlpin, 101 Miss. 129, 57 So. 420, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 107 (Miss. 1912).

In suit against executor for debt due by testator, proof of correctness of claim properly rejected where not signed by the creditor and no affidavit attached. Walker v. Nelson, 87 Miss. 268, 39 So. 809, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1905).

9. Affidavit.

Where the timely affidavit filed by the creditor designated as the credit account the decedent's business rather than the decedent himself, and it neither presented written evidence of the claim nor an itemized account thereof, it provided no information to the administrator of the estate from which he could reasonably act in either allowing or disallowing the claim, and the trial court properly refused to allow the creditor to amend his complaint after the expiration of 6 months. Stuart C. Irby Co. v. Patton, 301 So. 2d 845, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1665 (Miss. 1974).

Where statute of limitations would not run against claim of brother for services and necessaries furnished to his insane sister with expectation of repayment, until her death, it is not required that the affidavit state the time when decedent died, since the death is already established by the record giving jurisdiction of the case to the chancery court. Talbert v. Ellzey, 203 Miss. 612, 35 So. 2d 628, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1948).

A claim based on a loan to the deceased to buy hotel bonds which were to be a gift to the creditor, evidenced by a check allegedly signed by the creditor, was not properly probated as required hereunder, where there was a variance in the initials of the name of the creditor as it appeared on the statement of accounts, check and affidavit in support of the accounts, with no showing that the various names described the same person. Strange v. Strange, 189 Miss. 349, 197 So. 830, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. 1940).

Affidavit by creditor's agent amounts to no affidavit at all. Persons v. Griffin, 112 Miss. 643, 73 So. 624, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 159 (Miss. 1917).

Affidavit failing to allege that claim "is not usurious" is insufficient. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Miller's Estate, 103 Miss. 435, 60 So. 574, 1912 Miss. LEXIS 190 (Miss. 1912).

Affidavit by creditor's husband as her agent, fatally defective as statute requires that it be by creditor. Saunders v. Stephenson, 94 Miss. 676, 47 So. 783, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1909).

The clerk had no jurisdiction to allow and register a claim where the probate failed to conform to the statute in the following particulars: The affidavit did not after the word "correct" incorporate the words "and owing from the deceased," and did not contain the words "that it is not usurious" nor the words "and that neither the affiant nor any person has received payment." Cheairs v. Cheairs, 81 Miss. 662, 33 So. 414, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 1902).

10. Payment of claims.

Will provision directing probate of claims against decedent's estate and excepting "secured debts not due" cannot defeat obligation of the estate to pay a probated secured claim.

Campbell v. Cason, 206 Miss. 420, 40 So. 2d 258, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1949).

An administrator has no right to pay a probated claim for services rendered to the deceased in his lifetime, in the absence of either an express or implied promise on the part of the decedent to pay for the same. Johnson v. Odom, 202 Miss. 213, 31 So. 2d 120, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 261 (Miss. 1947).

Claims for services rendered by intestate's next of kin in looking after intestate, were properly disallowed where there was no promise, agreement or circumstances from which it could be reasonably inferred that the intestate expected to pay, or that such next of kin expected to receive pay, for such services. Wells v. Brooks, 199 Miss. 327, 24 So. 2d 533, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 201 (Miss. 1946).

Claim for services rendered by husband of daughter of intestate's nephew in assisting the nephew in managing the intestate's farm, was properly disallowed where there was no circumstances justifying any assent, express or implied, on the part of the intestate to pay the husband, and where he failed to show that he rendered any service of substantial benefit. Wells v. Brooks, 199 Miss. 327, 24 So. 2d 533, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 201 (Miss. 1946).

Husband of daughter of deceased's nephew by half blood was entitled to fair and adequate compensation on a quantum meruit basis for services rendered in managing deceased's farm, where such services were performed in expectation that deceased would carry out unenforceable promise to leave her property to the daughter if husband performed such services. Wells v. Brooks, 199 Miss. 327, 24 So. 2d 533, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 201 (Miss. 1946).

Claim against testator's estate, which purported to be itemized account or statement of claim in writing, which charged estate with purchase of note on which there was balance due, would be disallowed, where evidence clearly disclosed that there was no sale of note by claimant to testator, but that testator agreed to collect note for claimant, pay certain amount on debt of testator's son to testator and turn over balance to claimant, and that testator merely became claimant's agent or trustee for collection of note. First Columbus Nat'l Bank v. Holesapple-Dillman, 174 Miss. 234, 164 So. 232, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 73 (Miss. 1935).

Administrator is without authority to pay claim not presented as provided by this section [Code 1942, § 568].A. A. Lehman & Co. v. Powe, 95 Miss. 446, 49 So. 622, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 286 (Miss. 1909).

Decree directing distribution among heirs does not affect right to payment of probated claim; fact that claimant is also administrator who has filed its final account is immaterial. Oliver v. Smith, 94 Miss. 879, 49 So. 1, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1909).

11. Unprobated claims.

Services rendered under an oral agreement between a father and daughter whereby the former agreed to leave the daughter her home in consideration of her living with him and taking care of him, constituted an unliquidated claim which could not be probated as required by this section [Code 1942, § 568], and being a liability in the strictest sense of the word, the daughter was not barred because the claim was not probated but was entitled to recover the reasonable value of her services. Stephens v. Duckworth, 188 Miss. 626, 196 So. 219, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1940).

The court has no power upon ex parte petitions to authorize a payment of an unprobated claim. Townsend v. Beavers, 185 Miss. 312, 188 So. 1, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1939).

While heirs and distributees, so far as they are each concerned, may consent to the payment by the administrator of unprobated debts against the estate, and after such consent and the payment in pursuance thereof will, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, be precluded from any attempt on their part to charge the administrator therewith, this does not bind or affect the interests of those who did not so consent. Townsend v. Beavers, 185 Miss. 312, 188 So. 1, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1939).

Payment of promissory notes which were not probated as required by this section [Code 1942, § 568] could not be surcharged against the administrator as to those distributees of the estate who consented thereto, although such consent was not binding on heirs and devisees who did not consent to such payment. Townsend v. Beavers, 185 Miss. 312, 188 So. 1, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1939).

Court cannot assume justice or correctness of claim not duly probated. Persons v. Griffin, 112 Miss. 643, 73 So. 624, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 159 (Miss. 1917).

Refusal to permit administrator to file plea, after close of evidence, setting up failure to probate within time fixed by statute, was erroneous. Johnson v. Success Brick Machinery Co., 93 Miss. 169, 46 So. 957, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1908).

Setoff cannot be based on unprobated claim. Cohn v. Carter, 92 Miss. 627, 46 So. 60, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1908).

12. Limitations.

The rule that facts which prevented the running of the statute of limitations against a probated claim should appear in some form on probate thereof and cannot be made to appear for the first time by evidence offered when the claim is under consideration in administration of deceased's estate, does not apply to services and necessaries furnished by a brother to his insane sister, since limitations in such case does not begin to run until her death. Talbert v. Ellzey, 203 Miss. 612, 35 So. 2d 628, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1948).

Motion of claimant, who after expiration of six months for probate, moved that clerk be allowed to make proper certificates of true copies of notes withdrawn and to sign probate and allowance, held properly overruled. Merchants & Mfrs. Bank v. Fox, 165 Miss. 833, 147 So. 789, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1933).

Estate of nonresident within state administered as though there were no other administration, and creditor may probate claim barred in other state but not in this state. Buckingham Hotel Co. v. Kimberly, 138 Miss. 445, 103 So. 213, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1925).

Full faith and credit clause held not to require treating order of dismissal in another state of probate claim for late filing as bar to claim in this state. Buckingham Hotel Co. v. Kimberly, 138 Miss. 445, 103 So. 213, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 62 (Miss. 1925).

No action can be maintained on note not probated within time fixed. Johnson v. Success Brick Machinery Co., 93 Miss. 169, 46 So. 957, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 117 (Miss. 1908).

13. Written evidence.

In a case in which appellant, along with her children, filed claims against her ex-husband's estate for child support arrears, other unpaid support obligations, and for life insurance proceeds, appellant's presentation of the divorce decree, the property settlement agreement, and other various documents was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-14. To the extent the chancellor dismissed appellant's claims on the merits, such action was improper, as the merits were not before the chancellor to decide. Strickland v. Estate of Broome, 179 So. 3d 1088, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 604 (Miss. 2015).

In a probate proceeding involving a claim based upon an oral contract between the claimant and the decedent whereby the claimant would lend the decedent $11,000 and the decedent would leave a bequest of certain real property to the claimant, the chancellor properly admitted into evidence the claimant's cancelled check and the document reporting to be the defective holographic will of the decedent, neither of which had been attached as exhibits to the claim, where the claim itself was based upon the oral contract and the exhibits were merely introduced as evidence in support of the claim. Estate of McKellar v. Brown, 404 So. 2d 550, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2229 (Miss. 1981).

The chancellor properly dismissed an amended probate of claim where the alleged written contract between the decedent and the claimant did not in and of itself sufficiently state a claim against the estate and where the claimant failed to allege and prove compliance with the various conditions of the agreement. French v. Druetta, 399 So. 2d 1327, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1966 (Miss. 1981).

Where the timely affidavit filed by the creditor designated as the credit account the decedent's business rather than the decedent himself, and it neither presented written evidence of the claim nor an itemized account thereof, it provided no information to the administrator of the estate from which he could reasonably act in either allowing or disallowing the claim, and the trial court properly refused to allow the creditor to amend his complaint after the expiration of 6 months. Stuart C. Irby Co. v. Patton, 301 So. 2d 845, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1665 (Miss. 1974).

Where the respective proofs of two notes presented as claim against an estate recited that the claim was "annexed" and that the original was presented therewith, and described the claim with great particularity and with such accuracy that there could be no mistake as to what claims were referred to, there was a sufficient compliance with this section [Code 1942, § 568], notwithstanding that the proofs were not physically attached to the claims, this section being mandatory as to substance but not as to letter. Fidelity Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Goldstein, 187 Miss. 285, 192 So. 584, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 206 (Miss. 1939).

Claims, giving claimant's name and stating that specified amount is due for clearing land, should be allowed where correctness proved by evidence of amount of work and price per acre is shown by written agreement signed by deceased. Fairley v. Fairley, 120 Miss. 400, 82 So. 267 (Miss. 1919).

Joint and several note of claimant and deceased husband with attached receipt of payment in full by claimant, was written evidence on its face of her claim for one-half the payment. Wells v. McCollough, 113 Miss. 401, 74 So. 289, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 115 (Miss. 1917).

It was error to disallow claim of creditor who lost original of his claim after probate, but filed copies thereof on day set for filing. Keiffer Bros. Co. v. Bank of Commerce, 105 Miss. 662, 63 So. 189, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 246 (Miss. 1913).

Claim properly disallowed where claimant filed only copy of receipt signed by decedent, evidencing his claim. McMahon v. Foy, 104 Miss. 309, 61 So. 421, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 38 (Miss. 1913).

§ 91-7-151. Claims to be registered in ninety days or barred; amendment of affidavits.

All claims against the estate of deceased persons, whether due or not, shall be registered, probated and allowed in the court in which the letters testamentary or of administration were granted within ninety (90) days after the first publication of notice to creditors to present their claim. Otherwise, the same shall be barred and a suit shall not be maintained thereon in any court, even though the existence of the claim may have been known to the executor or administrator. Where the affidavit is made in good faith and the claim is registered, probated and allowed by the clerk but the affidavit is defective or insufficient, the court may allow the affidavit to be amended so as to conform to the requirements of the statute, at any time before the estate is finally settled; whereupon the probate shall be as effective and the claim as valid against the estate as if the affidavit had been correct and sufficient in the first instance.

Section 91-7-151 applies only to monetary claims against an estate. Allen v. Mayer, 587 So. 2d 255, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 673 (Miss. 1991).

Executrix was properly surcharged for payment of decedent's debts which had not been probated, registered, or allowed. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

The statute is not applicable to a situation where a party denies that it is indebted to an estate and raises no claim against the estate. Bible Ministry Asso. v. Merritt, 391 So. 2d 641, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 2166 (Miss. 1980).

The six months statute of limitations as to claims of creditors is irrelevant to an action against the personal representative and heirs of a decedent seeking adjudication of the existence of a partnership and an accounting of the partnership property. Kelly v. Windham, 204 So. 2d 477, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1206 (Miss. 1967).

An unliquidated claim is not probatable. Powell v. Buchanan, 245 Miss. 4, 147 So. 2d 110, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 526 (Miss. 1962).

This section [Code 1942, § 569] operates to bar a claim for services, notwithstanding a dispute as to rate of compensation. Love v. Estate of Strong, 234 Miss. 869, 108 So. 2d 215, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 561 (Miss. 1959).

This section [Code 1942, § 569] applies only to contractual claims and not to those in tort. Mossler Acceptance Co. v. Moore, 218 Miss. 757, 67 So. 2d 868, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1953); Hancock v. Pyle, 191 Miss. 546, 3 So. 2d 851, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 175 (Miss. 1941).

The term "claim" in statutes relating to claims against estates includes not only debts already due, but unmatured debts, but it applies only to specific money demands due or to become due and not to inchoate and contingent claims. Reedy v. Alexander, 202 Miss. 80, 30 So. 2d 599, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1947).

A claim against the estate of a deceased person is a demand of a pecuniary nature, which could have been enforced against the decedent during his lifetime; the term does not include a claim to the proceeds of the sale of personal property of an estate. Reedy v. Alexander, 202 Miss. 80, 30 So. 2d 599, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1947).

That widow's petition, claiming the proceeds of certain personalty sold by order of the court as her own rather than that of the estate, had the oath of probate attached to it, and the clerk certified it had been probated, registered and allowed, did not convert it to a probatable or probated claim. Reedy v. Alexander, 202 Miss. 80, 30 So. 2d 599, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1947).

The statute of limitations does not bar the claim of an administrator against the estate for an individual debt duly probated and not barred at the time of his appointment. Oliver v. Smith, 94 Miss. 879, 49 So. 1, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1909).

Claim for damages is not within this section [Code 1942, § 569]; the section refers to contractual claims only. Feld v. Borodofski, 87 Miss. 727, 40 So. 816, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 216 (Miss. 1905).

This section [Code 1942, § 569] has no application to a surviving partner administering partnership assets. Lance v. Calhoun, 85 Miss. 375, 37 So. 1014, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 171 (Miss. 1904).

2. —Applicability to particular circumstances.

Claim for reimbursement of funeral expenses was not untimely under this section because the expenses were not required to be probated; such claims were considered to be a part of the cost of the administration of the estate, and the requirement to probate a claim applied to obligations incurred by a decedent during his lifetime. In re Estate of Whitley v. Love, 129 So. 3d 260, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 789 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Clearly, more than 90 days after the first notice to creditors had elapsed when plaintiff (a surviving child), filed his claim against the estate, claiming he was entitled to all the insurance proceeds per the decedent's property settlement with a former wife. However, when the decedent died, plaintiff was a minor, and according to the terms of the decedent's will, the decedent's second and surviving spouse had been appointed testamentary guardian of plaintiff's person and estate; defendant was in a fiduciary relationship with plaintiff, and in that capacity, she not only had an obligation to initiate any and all claims which plaintiff may have had, but she had an obligation to initiate them timely, and therefore, the chancery court erred in granting defendant's Miss. R. Civ. P. 12(b) motion since a constructive trust was possibly at issue. Thornhill v. Thornhill, 905 So. 2d 747, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1083 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Statute was inapplicable to a claim for furniture, since the claim was not pecuniary in nature and was therefore not a probatable claim within the meaning of the statute. Allen v. Mayer, 587 So. 2d 255, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 673 (Miss. 1991).

Since the liability of the deceased guarantor of a promissory note was contingent, and would possibly never occur, § 91-7-151 did not require that it be filed for probate within a period of 90 days following first notice to creditors, and thus the trial court erred in dismissing the lender bank's suit against the guarantor's estate. Peoples Bank of Mendenhall v. Wyatt, 441 So. 2d 117, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 3018 (Miss. 1983).

In an action seeking to compel a perfect inventory, void certain conveyances, partition property, and establish a claim against an estate, §§ 91-7-149, 91-7-251 had no application and petitioner's claim was improperly dismissed as untimely, where the claim was not for a specific money demand due or to become due but rather was an inchoate and contingent claim involving the ownership by co-tenancy of specific property. Maxwell v. Yuncker, 419 So. 2d 580, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2165 (Miss. 1982).

A creditor's claim against decedent's estate for default on an unsecured note assumed by decedent was barred by this section's 90 day statute of limitations, where the balance due under the note was not an inchoate or contingent claim excepted from the statute, but was a claim enforceable against decedent during his lifetime. Barrett v. Moffitt, 381 So. 2d 624, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 1924 (Miss. 1980).

The claim of a bank, based on an agreement between the decedent and the managing director of the bank for services to be rendered the decedent in consideration of an assignment of 30 percent of the decedent's interest in another's estate, was not a joint, undivided and inchoate interest or a contingent unliquidated claim not subject to probate provisions and the time limitation with which to file the claim against an estate, but was instead a claim for personal services which was barred by the bank's failure to file its claim until 6 months had elapsed from the first publication notice to creditors by the administrator. Vacek v. Hoerner-Bank of West Berlin, 258 So. 2d 793, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1513 (Miss. 1972).

Where payee failed to timely probate a claim on a note of deceased, and was barred from asserting claim on the note as an unsecured creditor, he was entitled to recovery of the salvage value of the destroyed automobile which had been mortgaged to secure the note. Mossler Acceptance Co. v. Moore, 218 Miss. 757, 67 So. 2d 868, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1953).

Purchaser's claim against decedent's estate for purchase price of royalty interest in oil and gas lease because of breach of warranty based on decedent's prior conveyance of his interest, there having been no production of oil and gas under the lease prior to decedent's death, was a probatable claim against decedent's estate which was barred for failure to probate same within the period prescribed by this section [Code 1942, § 569]. Dale v. Hickman, 207 Miss. 606, 42 So. 2d 810, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 373 (Miss. 1949).

Claims for the proceeds of timber sold from land purchased at an invalid foreclosure sale, and rents received by the purchaser, are not required to be probated within six months, the claims coming within the purview of such requirement being such as, if paid by the executor or administrator, would prima facie entitle him to credit therefor. Hancock v. Pyle, 191 Miss. 546, 3 So. 2d 851, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 175 (Miss. 1941).

Where executor failed to probate claim against estate secured by mortgage, devisee was not entitled to have land exonerated and claim paid out of general assets. Howell v. Ott, 182 Miss. 252, 180 So. 52, 181 So. 740, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1938), limited, Kent v. McCaslin, 238 Miss. 129, 117 So. 2d 804, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 387 (Miss. 1960).

Unliquidated claim against negligent bank director is not a claim for probate against his estate. Boyd v. Applewhite, 121 Miss. 879, 84 So. 16, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1920).

The limitation provided under this section [Code 1942, § 569] does not apply where a will creates an express trust for the payment of debts and the executor follows the directions of the will as provided in Code 1942, § 518. Gordon v. McDougall, 84 Miss. 715, 37 So. 298, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1904).

The liability of a surety on a guardian's bond is not a probatable claim against the estate of a deceased surety and is not barred by any statute of limitations relating to the probate of claims. Savings Bldg. & Loan Ass'n v. Tart, 81 Miss. 276, 32 So. 115, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 103 (Miss. 1902).

3. Timeliness.

Because the executrix failed in the executrix's statutory duty to provide notice to any creditors regarding the probate of the decedent's estate, the filing period for probate claims did not expire as the executrix failed to provide the required statutory notice to trigger the running of the filing period. Avakian v. Wilmington Trust N.A. (In re Estate of Avakian), 231 So. 3d 208, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 201 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 229 So. 3d 122, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 492 (Miss. 2017).

A claim presented for probate on December 27, 1946, was not presented within the six-months period where the first notice to creditors was published June 26, 1946. Paine Plumbing & Supply Co. v. McMurtray's Estate, 203 Miss. 334, 34 So. 2d 676, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 274 (Miss. 1948).

Where it appeared that on the death of one partner, the surviving partner had agreed to hold the shares of two of the decedent's heirs as an active trust for their benefit until demand was made by them for payment of the principal, that all of the parties to the agreement had died and the estate of the surviving partner had been administered, with due notice given to creditors, a bill filed by heirs of the first deceased partner, more than three and one-half years after the death of the surviving partner and after the estate had been administered and the personal property distributed, and without a claim having been presented to the administratrix of his estate, to fix and impose a money decree upon the administratrix and the heirs at law of the surviving partner, was barred by the nonclaim statute, and also by the statute relating to limitation of actions on unwritten contracts. Whitaker v. Davenport, 193 Miss. 523, 10 So. 2d 202, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1942).

4. Waiver of bar.

The bar of the statute cannot be waived by the conduct of the administrator, however misleading or designing. Harkness v. Kansas C., M. & B. R. Co., 33 So. 77 (Miss. 1902).

5. Accrual of claim before or after death.

Executrix would be surcharged for the amount the testamentary trust property was damaged or put in jeopardy due to her mortgaging of estate's unencumbered real property as security for debt incurred by testator which was never probated. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

A vendor's election to probate and register a promissory note executed in conjunction with a deed of trust against the purchaser's estate, which was not pursued, was lost at the end of the 90 day limitation period of § 91-7-151; however, that section, as qualified by § 91-7-167, did not bar the vendor's election to pursue the trust or lien establishment against the specific real estate, which arose at the time the deed of trust was mistakenly cancelled by the bank. First Nat'l Bank v. Huff, 441 So. 2d 1317, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 3003 (Miss. 1983).

Where statutory liability of bank stockholder had accrued prior to stockholder's death but claim had not been probated, suit to recover such statutory liability instituted after expiration of statutory period for presenting claims held barred. Gray v. Love, 173 Miss. 390, 161 So. 679, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 222 (Miss. 1935).

Claim against bank stockholder for statutory liability having accrued prior to stockholder's death, which occurred after bank became insolvent and closed, was required to be probated the same as other unsecured debts. Gray v. Love, 173 Miss. 390, 161 So. 679, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 222 (Miss. 1935).

Compliance with statute providing that all claims against estate of deceased persons, whether due or not shall be registered, probated, and allowed in court in which letters testamentary or of administration were granted within six months after first publication of notice to creditors, is mandatory. Gray v. Love, 173 Miss. 390, 161 So. 679, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 222 (Miss. 1935).

A decedent's estate is not liable for an assessment against the decedent as a stockholder in a failed national bank, made in the decedent's lifetime, where a claim therefor was not presented within the time limited by statute. Mann v. Kleisdorff, 16 F.2d 997, 1927 U.S. App. LEXIS 3682 (5th Cir. Miss. 1927).

Liability of endorser of note as collateral security for another, not having matured at endorser's death, need not be probated as claim. Sledge & Norfleet Co. v. Dye, 140 Miss. 779, 106 So. 519, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 482 (Miss. 1926).

Claim against estate of deceased stockholder in bank, for double liability, is barred unless probated, where stockholder died after liability accrued. Board of Bank Examiners v. Grenada Bank, 135 Miss. 242, 99 So. 903, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 38 (Miss. 1924).

Claims maturing before decedent's death are barred, notwithstanding probate, by failure to sue thereon within four years and six months from grant of letters. Rogers v. Rosenstock, 117 Miss. 144, 77 So. 958, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1918).

6. Claims on suits brought before or after death.

Law requiring claims to be probated within six months applies only to claims on which suit was not brought during decedent's lifetime. Henry v. W. T. Rawleigh Co., 152 Miss. 320, 120 So. 188, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 214 (Miss. 1929); Dillard & Coffin Co. v. Woollard, 124 Miss. 677, 87 So. 148, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 554 (Miss. 1921).

7. Defective notice.

The failure of the illegitimate children of a decedent to assert any claim in the decedent's estate until after the expiration of 90 days from the date of the first publication of notice to creditors did not bar their claim of heirship or wrongful action where the petition for letters of administration specifically named the illegitimate children as the natural children of the decedent and the administratrix failed to give them notice of the letters' issuance. Leflore v. Coleman, 521 So. 2d 863, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 170 (Miss. 1988).

Note executed by deceased held not barred by limitations, though over six months had elapsed since probate proceedings, where proceedings were had without proper notice because of omission of word "claims" in notice to creditors, and having no equivalent word since, though creditors may file and prove claims, whether statutory notice was given or not, they are not barred from right to probate unless notice conforms to statute. Bankston v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 177 Miss. 719, 171 So. 18, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1936).

Administrator who invoked strict doctrine that probate of note was invalid because clerk's name and seal of court were not on copy of note held required to conform to strict compliance with statutory notice for probate proceedings. Bankston v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 177 Miss. 719, 171 So. 18, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1936).

Where notice given to creditors is insufficient to set six months' statute in motion, creditors may amend probate of claims at any time before estate is closed, without court's leave. Bell v. Union & Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 158 Miss. 486, 130 So. 486, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1930).

Claim not barred by failure to probate where notice not published for three consecutive weeks and no proof of publication made and filed with clerk. Boutwell v. Farmers' & Traders' Bank, 118 Miss. 50, 79 So. 1, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 48 (Miss. 1918).

8. Amendment of claim or affidavit.

The chancellor properly dismissed an amended probate of claim where the alleged written contract between the decedent and the claimant did not in and of itself sufficiently state a claim against the estate and where the claimant failed to allege and prove compliance with the various conditions of the agreement. French v. Druetta, 399 So. 2d 1327, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1966 (Miss. 1981).

Where the timely affidavit filed by the creditor designated as the credit account the decedent's business rather than the decedent himself, and it neither presented written evidence of the claim nor an itemized account thereof, it provided no information to the administrator of the estate from which he could reasonably act in either allowing or disallowing the claim, and the trial court properly refused to allow the creditor to amend his complaint after the expiration of 6 months. Stuart C. Irby Co. v. Patton, 301 So. 2d 845, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1665 (Miss. 1974).

Amendment of a claim after the time for filing is permissible unless it increases the amount of the claim, sets up a new cause of action, and materially changes the basis for the claim. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

A claim for the unpaid balance on an open account for merchandise sold is a sufficient "itemized account" to be amended after the period for filing and to be applified by evidence where contested. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

A claim for a balance due on account for merchandise sold is susceptible of amendment after expiration of the time for filing where it revealed debits and credits, alleged the balance, and was accompanied by photostats of invoices. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

Where certain accounts against an estate were supported by affidavits which did not show the authority of the person signing, amended affidavits could be filed in each of the claims under this section [Code 1942, § 569]. Hughes v. Box, 224 Miss. 513, 81 So. 2d 242, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1955).

Statute requiring court order authorizing amendment of affidavit to probated claims applies to amendments after expiration of six months' period. Bell v. Union & Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 158 Miss. 486, 130 So. 486, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1930).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

In a probate proceeding based upon an oral contract whereby the decedent promised to bequeath to the claimant a parcel of real property in return for a loan of $11,000, the cause of action for breach of the oral contract arising out of the failure of the will to be admitted to probate did not arise until the death of the decedent; therefore, where the claim for probate was filed within three months of the decedent's death, it was not barred by the three-year statute of limitations for all contracts set forth in § 15-1-29. Estate of McKellar v. Brown, 404 So. 2d 550, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2229 (Miss. 1981).

Probated claim maturing before decedent's death barred, notwithstanding probate, by failure to sue thereon within four years and six months. Rogers v. Rosenstock, 117 Miss. 144, 77 So. 958, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1918).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Executrix was properly surcharged with amount of interest and penalties paid from decedent's estate funds for the late filing of federal and state estate tax returns. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Unpaid taxes did not constitute valid defense to executrix's suit for specific performance against purchaser of realty sold under power of sale in will, since executrix has duty under this section [Code 1942, § 572] to pay the taxes and such obligation can be readily accounted for under the decree for specific performance. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

In compliance with decree for specific performance of realty sold by executrix under power of sale in will, purchaser is entitled to deed free from lien for unpaid taxes. Davis v. Sturdivant, 197 Miss. 139, 19 So. 2d 499, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 284 (Miss. 1944).

Decision of umpire designated by will to settle disputes between executors, determining that taxes on real estate devised subject to the mortgage debt thereon were not payable by the estate but by the devisee, was not binding on the devisee, where the provision for action by such umpire was designed to bring about harmony between the executors, and such decision was contrary to the manifest intention of the testatrix. Eatherly v. Winn, 185 Miss. 742, 189 So. 99, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1939).

Where the testatrix provided for the payment by her executors of all her just and legal debts, taxes on real estate accruing and due for the year prior to her death, were to be paid by her executors and were not chargeable against the devisee of such real estate devised to him subject to one-half of the mortgage debt thereon. Eatherly v. Winn, 185 Miss. 742, 189 So. 99, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1939).

Administrator was properly permitted to take credit for payment of taxes on realty and merchandise. Crescent Furniture & Mattress Co. v. Morgan, 178 Miss. 824, 173 So. 290, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1937).

Legatees and distributees not required to pay taxes. Tonnar v. Wade, 153 Miss. 722, 121 So. 156, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1929).

Administrator on accounting was entitled to allowance for taxes paid on land of the estate. Davis v. Blumenberg, 107 Miss. 432, 65 So. 503, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 1914).

§ 91-7-159. Agreement with commissioner of internal revenue to exercise discretion in distributing assets of estate or trust.

The executor, trustee, or other fiduciary having discretionary powers under a last will and testament or transfer in trust shall be authorized to enter into agreements with the commissioner of internal revenue of the United States of America and other taxing authorities to exercise the fiduciary's discretion so that the assets to be distributed in satisfaction of a bequest or transfer in trust will be selected in such a manner that cash and other properties distributed will have an aggregate fair market value representative of the pecuniary legatee's or transferee's proportionate share of the appreciation or depreciation in value to the date, or dates, of distribution of all property then available for distribution in satisfaction of such bequest or transfer. It is the purpose of this section to authorize such fiduciary to enter into any agreement that may be necessary or advisable in order to secure for federal estate tax purposes the maximum marital deduction available under the Internal Revenue Laws of the United States of America, and to do and perform all acts incident to such purpose.

1. In general.

This section [Code 1942, § 573] is indicative of a public policy favoring the early closing of estates of decedents as against delays on account of unmatured claims. In re Estate of Kennington, 204 So. 2d 444, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1194 (Miss. 1967).

Where a marital settlement agreement provided for monthly payments to the divorced wife throughout her lifetime or until she remarried, and the agreement bound her divorced husband and his heirs, executors, and assigns even after his death, future and unmatured payments under the agreement constituted a valid claim against the deceased husband's estate, which this section [Code 1942, § 573] and the principles of equity required to be commuted to a lump sum equal to its fair cash value. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Burden of proof of claims.
3. Evidence.
4. Decree.

1. In general.

A former wife proved a valid claim against her former husband's estate for $30,600, where there was a prior court judgment finding that the husband was $600 in arrears in alimony payments, and their divorce decree required the husband to carry a $30,000 life insurance policy on his own life naming the wife as the policy's primary beneficiary after payment of then existing pledged debts, but the husband had let the policy lapse. Raspilair v. Estate of Raspilair, 583 So. 2d 970, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 458 (Miss. 1991).

In order for a claimant to introduce evidence to support a claim against an estate for medical expenses upon contest, the claimant may proceed under § 41-9-119, but to do this, he or she must be allowed to go into court to present the bills incurred and to testify for what purpose they were incurred. Since a summary judgment, by its nature, disposes of a case before a trial is commenced, summary judgment practice under Rule 56, Miss. R. Civ. P. is inapplicable in contests of probated claims because it is inconsistent with the statutory procedure which necessitates that a claimant enter court to introduce evidence in support of his or her claim and permits a personal representative to rebut the claim. Thus, the procedure for summary judgment is not applicable to dispose of claims made under § 91-7-149. Biloxi Regional Medical Center, Inc. v. Estate of Ross, 546 So. 2d 667, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 297 (Miss. 1989).

There is no conflict between § 91-7-165 and the discovery rules and, therefore, in a proceeding to contest a claim probated against an estate, the estate had the right under Rules 26 and 33, Miss. R. Civ. P. to propound interrogatories and secure all relief appropriate for failure to answer. Biloxi Regional Medical Center, Inc. v. Estate of Ross, 546 So. 2d 667, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 297 (Miss. 1989).

Time for taking appeal by administrator or executor unhappy with decree allowing contested claim runs from date of decree on claim, not from date of decree finally closing estate; efficient and orderly administration of estates and payment of all just debts without unjustified delay compels this result. Braxton v. Johnson, 514 So. 2d 1232 (1987).

On filing of contest of probated claim, claimant need file no pleading in absence of demand or necessity for bill of particulars. Ellis v. Berry, 145 Miss. 652, 110 So. 211, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 1 (Miss. 1926).

2. Burden of proof of claims.

One filing claim for services rendered deceased has burden to establish by clear and convincing evidence that the services were rendered pursuant to an understanding, express or implied. Wells v. Brooks, 199 Miss. 327, 24 So. 2d 533, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 201 (Miss. 1946).

The burden of establishing a claim if contested, is upon the claimant although the claim has been admitted to probate by the clerk. Wooley v. Wooley, 194 Miss. 751, 12 So. 2d 539, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 1943).

Where it appeared that in a hearing on contested claims against an estate, the administratrix proceeded first with her testimony, claimant's contention that she thereby assumed the burden of proof and adopted the legal effect of a probated claim announced in the chancellor's opinion, and that she was estopped to take a different position on appeal, was untenable in view of the effect and weight the chancellor erroneously attached to the mere fact that the claim had been admitted to probate. Wooley v. Wooley, 194 Miss. 751, 12 So. 2d 539, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 1943).

3. Evidence.

Where a claim meets certain minimum requirements, both the person asserting the claim and the personal representative, on a contest, have the right to introduce evidence to support their positions. Central Optical Merchandising Co. v. Estate of Lowe, 249 Miss. 61, 160 So. 2d 673, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 376 (Miss. 1964).

Decision of chancellor that admission to probate of claims against an estate established a presumption of its correctness was erroneous as being a misconception of the effect of a probated claim, since a claim against an estate, although duly probated and registered, must be established by clear and reasonably positive evidence, if contested by the administratrix. Wooley v. Wooley, 194 Miss. 751, 12 So. 2d 539, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 1943).

A claim against the estate of a decedent, although duly probated and registered, must be established by clear and reasonably positive evidence, if objected to by the administrator, or by any legatee, heir, or any creditor, and contested by such party in interest. Nicholson v. Dent, Robinson & Ward, 189 Miss. 658, 198 So. 552, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 148 (Miss. 1940).

Claim against testator's estate, which purported to be itemized account or statement of claim in writing, which charged estate with purchase of note on which there was a balance due, would be disallowed where evidence clearly disclosed that there was no sale of note by claimant to testator, but that testator agreed to collect note for claimant, pay certain amount on debt of testator's son to testator and turn over balance to claimant, and that testator merely became claimant's agent or trustee for collection of note. First Columbus Nat'l Bank v. Holesapple-Dillman, 174 Miss. 234, 164 So. 232, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 73 (Miss. 1935).

Under contract for services between claimant and intestate, at a fixed compensation, declarations of intestate to third person indicating willingness to pay claimant for services then being rendered, not sufficient to establish agreement to pay extra compensation therefor. Bell v. Oates, 97 Miss. 790, 53 So. 491, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 308 (Miss. 1910).

4. Decree.

In contest of claim against decedent's estate, only decree allowing or disallowing claim can be rendered, and monetary judgment against administrator for sum for which claim is allowed, if allowed, would be erroneous. Trippe v. O'Cavanagh, 203 Miss. 537, 36 So. 2d 166, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 304 (Miss. 1948).

§ 91-7-167. Creditor having lien failing to present claim.

A creditor of a decedent who has a lien of any kind on property of the decedent shall not be barred of his right to enforce the lien against the property by a failure to present his claim and have it probated and registered, but shall be barred of all claim to be satisfied out of the assets not affected by such lien. A person claiming to have a lien on any property of the decedent may be made a party to any proper proceeding by the executor or administrator or a creditor to test the validity of such claim to a lien, and to determine upon the right of such claim. This may be in a proceeding to sell property, which may be ordered to be sold free from such lien, or subject to it; and the decree may be made as to a sale and disposition of the proceeds of the sale of the property, as may be according to the rights of parties before the court.

1. In general.
A vendor's election to probate and register a promissory note executed in conjunction with a deed of trust against the purchaser's estate, which was not pursued, was lost at the end of the 90 day limitation period of § 91-7-151; however, that section, as qualified by § 91-7-167, did not bar the vendor's election to pursue the trust or lien establishment against the specific real estate, which arose at the time the deed of trust was mistakenly cancelled by the bank. First Nat'l Bank v. Huff, 441 So. 2d 1317, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 3003 (Miss. 1983).

There payee failed to timely probate claim on note of deceased, and was barred from asserting claim on the note as an unsecured creditor, he was entitled to recovery of the salvage value of the destroyed automobile which had been mortgaged to secure the note. Mossler Acceptance Co. v. Moore, 218 Miss. 757, 67 So. 2d 868, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1953).

The widow and adopted daughter of an intestate were not necessary parties to a proceeding against the administratrix to foreclose a deed of trust on realty constituting a part of the estate, where the estate had been declared insolvent, the realty was in the possession of the administratrix, who was also the widow of the decedent but was made a party only as administratrix, and the daughter advised her regarding the foreclosure matters. Hubbard v. Massey, 192 Miss. 95, 4 So. 2d 230, 4 So. 2d 494, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 3 (Miss. 1941).

Where testatrix, after executing will devising her right, title and interest in land, gave deed of trust to executor covering same land and clothed him with full discretion, executor was entitled to stand on his security and not probate claim. Lien of trust held to exist from misapplication of funds, making probate of same unnecessary to enforce it as against all but bona fide purchaser. Sandy v. Crump, 139 Miss. 163, 103 So. 804, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 122 (Miss. 1925).

An ex parte petition of an administrator erroneously stating that a lien exists on certain assets and asking permission to apply the assets to the satisfaction of the alleged lien is not a proceeding to test the validity of a claim within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 576]. O'Brien Bros. v. Wilson, 86 Miss. 540, 38 So. 509, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1905).

2. Jurisdiction.
Creditor properly brought its claim before a justice court, and then appealed to the circuit court, even though a debtor's estate was still open, because creditor's action was purely a possessory action. Gandy v. Citicorp, 985 So. 2d 371, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 360 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

§ 91-7-169. Growing crop.

The court or chancellor may, on the application of an executor or administrator, decree the sale of the crop growing at the time of the death of the testator or intestate, upon such terms and in such manner as may be deemed best. If the interest of the estate would be promoted by the cultivation and completion of the crop, on application therefor by the executor or administrator, it shall be so ordered by the court or chancellor; and in such case the executor or administrator shall take charge of the farm and manage the same until the crop be completed and gathered, retaining for that purpose so much of the property thereon as may be necessary. The proceeds shall be assets in his hands, the necessary expenses being first deducted; and, in either case, the executor or administrator shall render a true account of the crop. In case of the sale of the growing crop, the purchaser thereof may at all reasonable times enter upon the lands to cultivate and gather the same.

Crops growing on devised land at time of death of testatrix which are not needed by executor for payment of debts or cost of administration of estate pass to devisee of land rather than into estate for benefit of residuary legatees, where will devised land and all trucks, farm implements, tractors and equipment thereon and directed that immediately after death of devisor devisee should be vested with entire control over her part of property. Surcharge upon executrix based upon her per se failure to secure court authority to operate a closely held corporation, which sustained losses both before and after testator's death, was not proper where the estate owned only stock in the corporation, not the business itself; further the proof failed to show that losses were caused by the failure of the executrix to act prudently in the administration of the estate. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

This section [Code 1942, § 581] allows private sale of personal property by an administrator for less than its appraised value, but in making such sale without a prior court order the administrator runs the risk of the court's subsequent disapproval. Dabbs v. Fisher, 27 So. 2d 342 (Miss. 1946).

§ 91-7-179. Sale for appraised value without order.

The executor or administrator, without an order therefor, may sell for cash, either at public or private sale, perishable goods or chattels or livestock of the decedent, whether it be necessary for the payment of debts and expenses of administration or not. He may likewise sell any personal property of the decedent necessary for the payment of the debts and expenses, but he shall realize therefor at least the appraised value of such property.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1880, § 2038; 1892, § 1888; 1906, § 2063; Hemingway's 1917, § 1728; 1930, § 1685; 1942, § 582.

§ 91-7-181. Certain property may be sold without being present.

An executor or administrator may sell the interest of his testator or intestate in a ship, vessel, steamboat, other water craft, or other property which he cannot produce, without the same being present at the time and place of sale.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1857, ch. 60, art. 87; 1871, § 1146; 1880, § 2036; 1892, § 1887; 1906, § 2062; Hemingway's 1917, § 1727; 1930, § 1686; 1942, § 583.

§ 91-7-183. Public sale of personal property.

If it be necessary to sell personal property for the payment of debts, or in case there are no debts and it is to the best interest of all parties concerned, the executor or administrator shall file a petition for an order of sale in which the reasons for the same shall be made known. In case there are no debts, five days' notice to the parties in interest who have not joined in said petition shall be given of the time and place of hearing said petition, or publication made, as provided by law, for nonresident or unknown defendants in chancery. If the court or chancellor in vacation be satisfied that a sale is necessary or proper, an order may be made for the sale of part or the whole of the personal estate; and if a part be ordered sold, the court or chancellor in vacation in selecting such part shall have in view the best interest of the creditors and distributees. The executor or administrator shall advertise in three or more public places in the county ten days before the sale, and shall sell the property designated in the order at public sale to the highest bidder, either for cash or credit, as the order of sale may direct. The executor or administrator shall not become the purchaser of any property which he may sell, either directly or indirectly, nor shall any executor or administrator take the estate or any part thereof at the appraised value.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1857, ch. 60. art. 86; 1871, § 1144; 1880, § 2032; 1892, § 1884; 1906, § 2059; Hemingway's 1917, § 1724; 1930, § 1687; 1942, § 584.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
Sale of decedent's property without legal citation to beneficiaries in will is valid where will relieves executor from legal citation to interested parties. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Objection to executor's sale of wholesale grocery business on ground that it was not sufficiently advertised is not well taken when, under the terms of will under which sale was made, no public notice of proposed sale was required to be given. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 204 Miss. 696, 38 So. 2d 98, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 398 (Miss. 1948).

Objection to executor's sale of wholesale grocery business on ground that it was not sufficiently advertised is not well taken where publication containing elements of sale was made in three newspapers for period of approximately a week, prospective bidders were notified by telephone and letters, many people inspected property, successful bid exceeded appraised value, and objectors produced no proof more than possibility or speculation that had sale been postponed for ten or twenty days there would have been higher, or more numerous, bids on the later date. Whenever personal property shall be sold by an executor or administrator, he shall make report thereof in writing to the next term of the court, stating the time and place of sale, the name of the purchaser, and the amount of the purchase-money, and shall satisfy the court that the directions prescribed in the order for sale, if the sale be under an order, were followed. Thereupon the court shall confirm the sale, unless cause be shown to the contrary. If such sale be not reported at the next term, the court may compel the making of such report at a subsequent term, and may confirm or set aside the same. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Supreme court will not say that confirmation of sale of wholesale grocery business by executor, acting under authority of will, was manifestly wrong, when it is not pointed out by what means or manner a higher price could have been obtained for the assets of the estate nor in what respect beneficiaries in will suffered any loss. § 91-7-187. Sale of land in preference to personalty.

When the estate of any deceased person consists of real and personal property and it shall be necessary to sell a portion thereof, the chancery court, on petition of the executor, administrator, legatees or distributees, being satisfied that it would be to the interest of the distributees or legatees, may decree a sale of the real estate in preference to the personal estate.

Estate of Manscoe v. Simmons, 512 So. 2d 682, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2781 (Miss. 1987).

A will manifests the testator's intention that the property transferred to his wife be free of estate taxes where "Item IV" exempts from the payment of estate taxes and administration costs those bequests made earlier in the will to his wife and "Item III" specifically states that his wife is to receive $4,800 a year "free of any debts" and therefore this property cannot bear the burden of estate taxes. Waldrup v. United States, 499 F. Supp. 820, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16059 (N.D. Miss. 1980).

In the absence of a direction to the contrary by the testator, estate taxes must be paid first from personal property not specifically devised by will, secondly from other personalty of the estate, and thirdly, if necessary, from the real estate. Stovall v. Stovall, 360 So. 2d 679, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2295 (Miss. 1978).

No court other than chancery court in which letters of administration have been granted has jurisdiction over petition for sale of decedent's nonexempt lands for payment of decedent's debts. Trippe v. O'Cavanagh, 203 Miss. 537, 36 So. 2d 166, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 304 (Miss. 1948).

Petition for sale of nonexempt lands of estate for payment of decedent's debts when personalty is insufficient should be filed by executor or administrator, but may be filed by creditor of decedent whose claim against estate is registered. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Dismissal of an action alleging waste due to the cutting of timber was improperly dismissed on the basis that an estate lacked standing to bring the action since it had no interest therein and no power to bring such an action; the trial court should have allowed a substitution of the heirs as parties to the action. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 868 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a suit by a devisee to remove and cancel clouds on her title to an undivided ½ interest in minerals in land which was sold at an execution sale, the 2-year statute of limitations on actions to recover property sold by an order of the chancery court [Code 1972, § 15-1-37] was inapplicable since "order of a chancery court" contemplates an order entered after compliance with Code 1972, § 91-7-195, providing that a petition be filed with the court by creditors of a decedent having registered claims against an estate for the sale of land or personal property for payment of debts, and Code 1972, § 91-7-197, providing that all interested parties shall be cited by summons or publication specifying the time and place of the hearing on the petition. Simmons v. Abney, 292 So. 2d 168, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1762 (Miss. 1974).

Petition for sale of nonexempt lands of estate for payment of decedent's debts when personalty is insufficient should be filed by executor or administrator, but may be filed by creditor of decedent whose claim against estate is registered. No court other than chancery court in which letters of administration have been granted has jurisdiction over petition for sale of decedent's nonexempt lands for payment of decedent's debts. Trippe v. O'Cavanagh, 203 Miss. 537, 36 So. 2d 166, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 304 (Miss. 1948).

Sale under execution of land of decedent pursuant to decree recovered against administrator held void for noncompliance with statutes regulating proceedings for sale of decedent's land for payment of debts. Dolan v. Tate, 161 Miss. 615, 137 So. 515, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1931).

Heirs of decedent suing to remove, as cloud on title, claim asserted through purchase at execution sale under judgment against ancestor's representative, need not offer to pay judgment or amount for which land was sold. Dolan v. Tate, 161 Miss. 615, 137 So. 515, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1931).

Creditor who had properly registered claim may file bill in chancery for sale of lands of estate to pay debts. Halliburton v. Crichton, 147 Miss. 621, 111 So. 743, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 276 (Miss. 1927).

This section [Code 1942, § 590] authorizes a petition by a creditor only when his claim is properly registered, after being probated and allowed. Cheairs v. Cheairs, 81 Miss. 662, 33 So. 414, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 1902).

Where the probate fails to conform to the requirements of Code 1942, § 568, a creditor cannot file a petition to sell land or personalty. Cheairs v. Cheairs, 81 Miss. 662, 33 So. 414, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 180 (Miss. 1902).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Beneficiaries under residual testamentary trusts are "parties interested" so as to be entitled to the notice required under Mississippi Code § 91-7-197; Brickell v. Lightcap (1917) 115 Miss 417, 76 So 489 is thus overruled; however, this new rule of law will apply prospectively only. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Petitioner, who had entered into a contract whereby an executrix agreed to sell and convey certain property to petitioner after the probate of a will, was not a "party interested" within the meaning of § 91-7-197, but was rather one with a contingent interest, and therefore lacked standing to file a direct action in the estate proceeding to change and modify a previous order thereto, since the executrix' title to the property was the will itself and petitioner's interest in the property was merely contingent and depended solely on the outcome of the suit to contest the will. Turner v. Estate of Hightower, 417 So. 2d 919, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2091 (Miss. 1982).

In a suit by a devisee to remove and cancel clouds on her title to an undivided ½ interest in minerals in land which was sold at an execution sale, the 2-year statute of limitations on actions to recover property sold by an order of the chancery court [Code 1972, § 15-1-37] was inapplicable since "order of a chancery court" contemplates an order entered after compliance with Code 1972, § 91-7-195, providing that a petition be filed with the court by creditors of a decedent having registered claims against an estate for the sale of land or personal property for payment of debts, and Code 1972, § 91-7-197, providing that all interested parties shall be cited by summons or publication specifying the time and place of the hearing on the petition. Simmons v. Abney, 292 So. 2d 168, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1762 (Miss. 1974).

Judgment creditors, solely as such, of the heirs or devisees, or of some of them, are not necessary or interested parties with respect to the question of notice under this section [Code 1942, § 591]. Townsend v. Beavers, 185 Miss. 312, 188 So. 1, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 154 (Miss. 1939).

Failure of creditors instituting proceedings against widow as administratrix to have deceased's land sold to pay debts to make widow in individual capacity and adult children parties held to require reversal and remandment, although decree adjudged that land was exempt. Eastman Gardiner Lumber Co. v. Carr, 175 Miss. 36, 166 So. 401, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 28 (Miss. 1936).

Decree for sale of land to pay debts of deceased which affects rights of heirs at law or devisees and which is rendered without process upon them is void. Eastman Gardiner Lumber Co. v. Carr, 175 Miss. 36, 166 So. 401, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 28 (Miss. 1936).

Where chancellor had jurisdiction of minor heirs and subject-matter in administratrix's petition for leave to sell, any defects in process and insufficiency of time held not to prevent application of two years' limitations. Neely v. Craig, 162 Miss. 712, 139 So. 835, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 147 (Miss. 1932).

Sale under execution of land of decedent pursuant to decree recovered against administrator held void for noncompliance with statutes regulating proceedings for sale of decedent's land for payment of debts. Dolan v. Tate, 161 Miss. 615, 137 So. 515, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1931).

Where heirs at law, after the death of their intestate, conveyed his land, and then attempted to have it subjected to the payment of debts, thereby relieving the personal estate, the grantee of the land was a vitally interested party. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

Contingent remaindermen not necessary parties to proceeding for sale of real estate to discharge accumulated annuities without affirmative showing of existence of persons with vested interest. Swayze v. Powell, 153 Miss. 829, 121 So. 852, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 92 (Miss. 1929).

Heirs and devisees entitled to notice and hearing on proceeding by executor to obtain possession of real estate, where specific control not conferred by will and there was sufficient cash to pay debts. Miles v. Fink, 119 Miss. 147, 80 So. 532, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 24 (Miss. 1918).

§ 91-7-199. Hearing and decree.

The court, after service of summons or proof of publication, shall hear and examine the allegations and evidence in support of the petition and the objections to and evidence against it, if any. If on such hearing the court be satisfied that the personal estate is insufficient to pay the debts of the deceased and that the land ought to be sold for that purpose, it may make a decree for the sale of a part or the whole of the land; and when a part only is decreed to be sold, the decree shall specify what part. If the real estate be so situated that a part cannot be sold without manifest prejudice to the heirs or devisees, the court may decree that the whole shall be sold; and the overplus arising from such sale, after the payment of debts and expenses, shall be distributed amongst the heirs according to the law of descents, or amongst the devisees according to the will. The heir or devisee whose lands shall be sold may compel all others holding or claiming under such intestate or testator to contribute in proportion to their respective interests, so as to equalize the burden of the loss.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Decree, and its effect.

1. In general.

A chancellor improperly ordered a sale of the property in an estate to satisfy debts thereof, where there was no proof as to the debts due and expenses of the estate. Brown v. McAfee, 421 So. 2d 1061, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2279 (Miss. 1982).

Upon denial of parties in interest, summoned on petition of creditor to sell land to pay debts, that the personalty was insufficient therefor, it was the duty of the court to hear evidence on the issue made. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

Creditor filing petition to sell land to pay debts had burden of proving personalty was insufficient therefor. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

Court had duty of hearing evidence on issue made by pleadings in proceeding by creditor to sell land to pay debts. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

Court, on petition of creditor to sell land to pay debts, had duty of adjudicating asserted vendor's lien on cross-petition of party in interest. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

Executor cannot purchase at chancery sale to pay debts, and his vendees do not acquire title. Belt v. Adams, 124 Miss. 194, 86 So. 584, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1920).

2. Decree, and its effect.

In proceedings divesting title to lands out of the legatees or heirs and vesting the same in the executor or administrator the statutes must necessarily be complied with to effect such a divestiture, and where the decree of court ordering sale did not adjudicate that the personal estate was insufficient to pay debts and that land ought to be sold for that purpose, did not decree the sale of a part or the whole of the land, and described no land, it was wholly insufficient to order a judicial sale. McWilliams v. Estate of Brown, 183 So. 2d 820, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1443 (Miss. 1966).

Where sale of land to pay debts is shown to have been made under a solemn decree of chancery court, with proper notice and appearance by all parties in interest, and that decree of confirmation was unappealed from, the presumption is that chancery court had acted in good faith in ordering the sale and that administratrix was guilty of no bad faith in conducting the sale and conveying the property to the purchaser, the court necessarily adjudicating that the property had brought a fair price in confirming the sale. Gill v. Johnson, 206 Miss. 707, 40 So. 2d 600, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 295 (Miss. 1949).

Decree for sale of land to pay debts of deceased which affects rights of heirs at law or devisees and which is rendered without process upon them is void. Eastman Gardiner Lumber Co. v. Carr, 175 Miss. 36, 166 So. 401, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 28 (Miss. 1936).

Sale under execution of land of decedent pursuant to decree recovered against administrator held void for noncompliance with statutes regulating proceedings for sale of decedent's land for payment of debts. Dolan v. Tate, 161 Miss. 615, 137 So. 515, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1931).

Heirs of decedent suing to remove, as cloud on title, claim asserted through purchase at execution sale under judgment against ancestor's representative, need not offer to pay judgment or amount for which land was sold. Dolan v. Tate, 161 Miss. 615, 137 So. 515, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 291 (Miss. 1931).

Decree ordering sale of land to pay debts was final decree as regards appeal. Blum v. Planters' Bank & Trust Co., 154 Miss. 800, 122 So. 784, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 177 (Miss. 1929).

A sale decreed to be made for cash is void if part of the purchase money is not paid, but credited on a debt due from the purchaser to the executor individually; and a confirmation upon a report concealing the facts is fraudulent and does not validate the sale. Sharpley v. Plant, 79 Miss. 175, 28 So. 799, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 3 (Miss. 1901).

A decree ordering lands sold for the payment of debts, without notice to the parties in interest, is void. United States v. Curry, 47 U.S. 106, 12 L. Ed. 363, 1848 U.S. LEXIS 302 (U.S. 1848).

§ 91-7-201. Mistake in description of land may be corrected.

If any mistake shall be made in the description of any land of a decedent sold or leased, either in the petition, decree, or other part of the proceedings, the same may be corrected by the court on petition of the creditor or purchaser or his assigns, and on citation to the executor or administrator.

Sale of land not included in petition, nor in decree of confirmation, not "mistake in description." Pearson v. Caldwell, 93 Miss. 637, 47 So. 436, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 141 (Miss. 1908).

§ 91-7-203. Bond to pay debts may be given and decree for sale not made.

A decree for the sale or lease of land shall not be made if any person interested will give bond, describing therein the land sought to be sold, payable to the executor or administrator in a sum to be fixed and with sureties approved by the court, conditioned to pay all the debts duly registered against the estate and the expenses of the administration, so far as the personal estate of the deceased shall be insufficient to pay the same. Such bond shall be filed among the papers of administration and entered on the minutes of the court, and shall have the force and effect of a judgment, upon which execution and other necessary process may be issued in the name of the executor or administrator, after the expiration of six months from the date it shall have been given, against the obligors therein from time to time, until such debts and expenses of administration be paid or the penalty of the bond exhausted. The same may be levied on the lands described in the bond, and the entire interest of the deceased therein may be sold as if the court had decreed the sale in the first instance; and the property of the sureties on said bond may be sold for whatever the land may be insufficient to pay. Instead of enforcing said bond, the executor or administrator or any creditor may petition anew for the sale of the land, as if such bond had not been given; and after the sale under such proceedings, the bond may be enforced, in the manner provided, for whatever the land may be insufficient to pay, and no other bond shall be allowed to prevent a decree for a sale or lease of the land.

HISTORY:

§ 91-7-205. Bond required in decree for sale of lands; waiver of bond.

(1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2) of this section, whenever an executor or administrator sells land pursuant to a decree of the court or chancellor in vacation, said executor or administrator shall execute bond with sufficient sureties in an amount equal to the proceeds of the sale of the land. Said bond shall be executed any time before confirmation of sale, either by the court or chancellor in vacation, and may be approved by the court, chancellor in vacation, or the clerk of the chancery court. Such bond shall be payable to the state and shall be conditioned for the faithful application of the proceeds of the sale. When, however, decree ordering the sale of land shall fix an amount or estimated amount to be paid in cash before confirmation, the executor or administrator shall, before sale, execute bond with sufficient sureties to cover such amount or estimated amount to be paid in cash, conditioned for the faithful application of the same which bond may be approved by the court, the chancellor in vacation, or the clerk of the chancery court.

After the expiration of the time in which all claims against the estate of deceased persons must be registered, probated and allowed as provided in Section 91-7-151, Mississippi Code of 1972, the chancellor may waive all or any part of the bond when all the beneficiaries to the proceeds of the sale petition the court to authorize the sale and waive the necessity of a bond.

(2) At the discretion of the court or chancellor, all or any part of the bond described in subsection (1) of this section may be waived but, in such case, the chancellor shall make adequate and sufficient provision for the maintenance and safety of the assets of the estate. Upon waiver of such bond, the court or chancellor may require the proceeds from the sale of land to be held in trust by an executor, administrator or other qualified person and may require such proceeds to be maintained as otherwise ordered by the court in such manner as the court may direct, consistent with the provisions of this subsection.

Administratrix de bonis non entitled to allowance for premium on special bond executed to collect money for land sold by her predecessor under order of court. Davis v. Blumenberg, 107 Miss. 432, 65 So. 503, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 1914).

Parol testimony by an administrator that he executed the statutory bond is incompetent in the absence of a showing that search had been made for the bond itself by the person charged with its custody in the place where by law it should be kept. Shannon v. Summers, 86 Miss. 619, 38 So. 345, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1905).

An executor must give the bond required for the faithful application of the proceeds, although the will authorizes him to administer the estate without bond, and if he fails to do so the sale will be void. Sharpley v. Plant, 79 Miss.

§ 91-7-207. Failure to give bond.

If an executor or administrator who has been ordered to sell land of a decedent fail to give the bond required, the court may, after five days' notice to the executor or administrator, direct a master or special commissioner to make the sale, who shall give bond with sureties, as the executor or administrator was required to do, and make sale and report it and, after a confirmation of the sale, convey the land as the executor or administrator might have done under the decree. The master or commissioner shall be allowed by the court such commissions as would accrue from the sale to the executor or administrator, or such compensation as the court may order.

§ 91-7-209. Purchase-money a charge on property.

Where the property of a decedent shall be sold by order of the court in which the estate is being administered, and the price paid at such sale for the property has been applied to the payment of debts for which the property might lawfully have been sold, or has been distributed to the heirs, legatees, or distributees, or to the guardians of such as have guardians, the property, if such sale were illegal, shall be charged in favor of the purchaser and his assigns with a lien for the purchase-money paid for it at such sale, and interest thereon. Such lien may be enforced in chancery or may be availed of in defense of any action for the land, in the same manner in which a claim for valuable improvements may be allowed in equity. In case of personal property, the possessor having such lien shall be entitled to retain possession until his claim be paid or tendered, unless the party having the title shall resort to the chancery court to adjust the rights of the parties and to sell said property.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
But if the money in such cases were paid by the administrator to the creditors of the estate, the purchaser has only a lien on the land, and his injunction should be limited accordingly. Hill v. Billingsly, 53 Miss. 111, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1876).

If the heir, after majority, receive or retain the purchase money of a void sale of land, he will be estopped from executing a judgment in ejectment therefor, and may be restrained by any party claiming under the purchaser. Gaines v. Kennedy, 53 Miss. 103, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1876).

One who, through an illegal sale of decedent's land, paid money into the hands of an administrator, which was used to pay debts of the decedent, is entitled, in equity, to be reimbursed out of the proceeds of a subsequent valid sale. Short v. Porter, 44 Miss. 533, 1871 Miss. LEXIS 11 (Miss. 1870); Cole v. Johnson, 53 Miss. 94, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1876); Gaines v. Kennedy, 53 Miss. 103, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1876).

The purchaser of the lands at a void sale by an administrator can claim no equity with respect to the land purchased, as against the heirs, except so far as the purchase money has been paid and applied to their benefit. Jayne v. Boisgerard, 39 Miss. 796, 1861 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1861).

§ 91-7-211. Estoppel from receipt of purchase-money.

Nothing in Section 91-7-209 shall hinder the application of the doctrine of estoppel to assert title to adult heirs who received a share of the purchase-money of land as heretofore announced and applied in this state. The same rule may be applied to minors, persons of unsound mind, convicts of felony, and other wards whose guardians received for them a share of the purchase-money, whether it were actually applied to the benefit of or received by such person under disability or not.

If a ward, after majority, receive from the guardian the proceeds of a void sale, it will be an affirmance of the sale. Handy v. Noonan, 51 Miss. 166, 1875 Miss. LEXIS 29 (Miss. 1875); Gaines v. Kennedy, 53 Miss. 103, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 42 (Miss. 1876); Hill v. Billingsly, 53 Miss. 111, 1876 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1876).

Under doctrine referred to in the section [Code 1942, § 598], if the heir, after majority, receive from the administrator the proceeds of a void sale, it will be an affirmance of the sale. Lee v. Gardiner, 26 Miss. 521, 1853 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1853); Kempe v. Pintard, 32 Miss. 324, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 1856); Wilie v. Brooks, 45 Miss. 542, 1871 Miss. LEXIS 99 (Miss. 1871).

§ 91-7-213. Borrowing money to pay claims.

When an executor or administrator shall discover that the personal property will not be sufficient to pay the debts of the decedent and the expenses of the administration of the estate, he may file a petition in the chancery court in which the estate is being administered, for the purpose of borrowing money to be secured by a deed of trust, mortgage, or other encumbrance on the lands of the decedent, except the exempt property or homestead which shall not be so encumbered save to pay an indebtedness which constitutes a lien on such exempt property or homestead, and then not without the consent of the exemptionist. The money, when so borrowed, shall be used to pay said claims and expenses.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1930, § 1702; 1942, § 599; Laws, 1930, ch. 14.

§ 91-7-215. Procedure for borrowing.

With such petition the executor or administrator shall file and exhibit to the court a true account of the personal estate, debts due from the deceased, the expenses, and a description of the land to be used as security for the money so borrowed. The court, after service of summons or proof of publication of summons, shall hear and examine the allegations and evidence in support of the petition and the objections to and the evidence against it, if any. If on the hearing, the court be satisfied that the personal estate is insufficient to pay the debts of the deceased and said expenses, and that the land ought to be encumbered for such purposes, it may make a decree for the encumbrance of a part or the whole of the land; and when a part only is decreed to be so encumbered, the decree shall specify what part.

§ 91-7-217. Overplus and contribution.

In the event the land so encumbered should be thereafter sold by foreclosure or otherwise to satisfy the said debt, interest, attorney's fee, trustee's fees, or expenses of such sale, and there shall exist an overplus of money above the debt, interest, attorney's fees, trustee's fees, and expenses of such sale, the overplus shall be distributed among the heirs according to the law of descent, or among the devisees according to the will. The heir or devisee whose land shall be sold may compel all others holding or claiming under such intestate or testator to contribute in proportion to their respective interests, so as to equalize the burden of loss.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1930, § 1704; 1942, § 601; Laws, 1930, ch. 14.

§ 91-7-219. Procedure in vacation.

Such decree may be rendered by the presiding chancellor of the court in vacation at any time or place within his district, provided summons has been served on the heirs of the decedent, or devisees under the will of the testator, in the manner provided by law for the service of summons on defendants in chancery for at least ten days before the hearing. In such summons, the time and place of the hearing and the purpose of the proceeding shall be definitely stated; and should the summons be published, such publication shall be completed at least ten days before the hearing.

§ 91-7-221. Executor or administrator to make title to land.

If any person sell lands, enter into contract to make title, and die before the title be made, then the person to whom the title was to be made, his heirs or assigns, may petition the court which granted the letters on the estate of the vendor, for an order on the executor or administrator to make title agreeably to the contract. After the parties interested have been cited by summons or by publication, the court shall hear the petition and evidence, and may decree that the executor or administrator make title according to the contract.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
Contract for sale was not rendered void by the seller's death, though the fact of her death did render her attorney in fact legally incapable of proceeding to carry out the remaining terms of the contract; however, the contract remained a binding agreement that could be enforced against the seller's estate in a probate proceeding. Van Etten v. Johnson (In re Estate of Pickett), 879 So. 2d 467, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 67 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 994 (Miss. Aug. 5, 2004).

A deed will not be ordered where it appears that the deceased made a valid sale of the land to another prior to the contract with the petitioner, and of which the petitioner had notice. White v. Gilbert, 39 Miss. 802, 1861 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1861).

§ 91-7-223. Executors and administrators may make deeds of conveyance.

The administrator, executor, or testamentary trustee may at any time, by and with the consent of the chancery court or the chancellor in vacation, when the chancellor deems it to the best interests of the estate, execute a deed of conveyance conveying any real property formerly owned by the decedent, where said decedent during his lifetime had executed any bond for title, optional contract, or other instrument conferring upon any party the right to purchase and secure title to said real property, where the execution of such conveyance is necessary in order to carry out the terms, provisions, or stipulation of the said bond for title, optional contract, or other instrument.

§ 91-7-225. Lands may be leased to pay debts.

In case it shall be made to appear to the court that a lease of the lands of the deceased can be made to raise the money necessary for the payment of the debts of the deceased, and that the leasing thereof will be to the interest of the devisees, legatees, heirs, or distributees, the court may, in its discretion, decree the same to be leased. If a lease of the lands, or any part thereof, be decreed, the executor or administrator shall, upon giving the notice as in like case of sale, lease the same at public outcry or privately, as directed by the decree, to the person who will take the lands for the fewest number of years, not exceeding fifteen, and pay, either in cash or at such time as shall be fixed by the decree, the specific sum to be stated therein, equal to the amount of the debts of the deceased to be paid and the expenses of administration. If the lease be on credit, the lessee shall give security for the payment of the sum, to be approved by the executor or administrator.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Dismissal of an action alleging waste due to the cutting of timber was improperly dismissed on the basis that an estate lacked standing to bring the action since it had no interest therein and no power to bring such an action; the trial court should have allowed a substitution of the heirs as parties to the action. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 868 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

An administrator has the right to bring an action to protect the assets of the estate. Estate of Jackson v. Mississippi Life Ins. Co., 755 So. 2d 15, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 278 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

In an accountant negligence action arising from the accountant's alleged negligence in performing accounting services for an estate, the trial court did not err in allowing plaintiffs other than the executrix to remain in the suit as nominal parties only; by naming the residuary beneficiaries plaintiffs, the executrix was protecting herself against any possible future lawsuits. Wirtz v. Switzer, 586 So. 2d 775, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 597 (Miss. 1991), overruled in part, Upchurch Plumbing, Inc. v. Greenwood Utils. Comm'n, 964 So. 2d 1100, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 495 (Miss. 2007).

Code 1972 § 11-7-13 must be considered in pari materia with Code 1972 §§ 91-7-231, 91-7-233, which authorize only a personal representative to sue to recover the assets of the deceased. Thornton v. Insurance Co. of North America, 287 So. 2d 262, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1329 (Miss. 1973).

§ 91-7-233. What actions survive to executor or administrator.

Executors, administrators, and temporary administrators may commence and prosecute any personal action whatever, at law or in equity, which the testator or intestate might have commenced and prosecuted. They shall also be liable to be sued in any court in any personal action which might have been maintained against the deceased.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Actions on behalf of estate or beneficiaries.
3. Actions against estate.
4. Limitation of actions.

1. In general.

Code 1972 § 11-7-13 must be considered in pari materia with Code 1972 §§ 91-7-231, 91-7-233, which authorize only a personal representative to sue to recover the assets of the deceased. Thornton v. Insurance Co. of North America, 287 So. 2d 262, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1329 (Miss. 1973).

This section [Code 1942, § 609] does not operate to authorize an administrator to exercise his decedent's right of election against a spouse's will. Estate of Mullins v. Estate of Mullins, 239 Miss. 751, 125 So. 2d 93, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1960).

This section [Code 1942, § 609] is in derogation of the common law. Southern Package Corp. v. Walton, 196 Miss. 786, 18 So. 2d 458, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 762, 65 S. Ct. 93, 89 L. Ed. 609, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 247 (U.S. 1944).

This section [Code 1942, § 609] being in derogation of common law must be strictly construed. McNeely v. Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1927).

Administrator's failure to file letters testamentary waived by failure to object before verdict. Linton v. Skinner, 122 Miss. 613, 84 So. 800, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 460 (Miss. 1920).

2. Actions on behalf of estate or beneficiaries.

Power of attorney prohibited the decedent's attorneys-in-fact from profiting from their role, commingling their funds with hers, or taking ownership of her assets, and during the decedent's lifetime, she could have commenced an action to set aside relatives' joint ownership of certain certificates of deposit; thus, upon her death, her estate became the proper party to commence such an action, and thus the estate had standing to challenge actions taken by a relative that violated the terms of the power of attorney. Swank v. Covington (In re Estate of Hemphill), 186 So. 3d 920, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 60 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

Survival action provided in the wrongful death statute is an extension of Mississippi's survival statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-233, which allows personal actions of a decedent to be pursued after his or her death. Caves v. Yarbrough, 991 So. 2d 142, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 617 (Miss. 2008).

Where summary judgment was granted in a daughter, wrongful death complaint, and upon remand the complaint was amended to allege a survival action under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-233 with the estate added as a party, the real party in interest joined the suit within a reasonable time after objection pursuant to Miss. R. Civ. P. 17. Methodist Hosp. of Hattiesburg, Inc. v. Richardson, 909 So. 2d 1066, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 2005).

Dismissal of an action alleging waste due to the cutting of timber was improperly dismissed on the basis that an estate lacked standing to bring the action since it had no interest therein and no power to bring such an action; the trial court should have allowed a substitution of the heirs as parties to the action. Tolbert v. Southgate Timber Co., 943 So. 2d 90, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 868 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where a decedent was allegedly injured by medication during her life, and allegedly died from it, the estate administrator was to assert both a wrongful death action and a survival action against the drug manufacturer; if the jury found that the drug caused the decedent's death, then the recovery belonged to the wrongful death heirs. If the jury found that the drug did not cause the death, the estate could recover for any personal injuries caused by the drug, and the decedent's ex-husband could recover from the estate amounts he was entitled to under the decedent's holographic instrument. England v. England (In re Estate of England), 846 So. 2d 1060, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 473 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Heirs of deceased smoker could not recover damages for injuries suffered by smoker during his lifetime in wrongful death action where jury found that cause of death was unrelated to smoker's lung cancer or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, but rather was pulmonary embolism caused by complications resulting from treatment for gonorrhea in 1940's, and heirs did not also assert claim under survival statute. Wilks v. American Tobacco Co., 680 So. 2d 839, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 493 (Miss. 1996).

An action for loss of consortium survives the death of the party asserting it, and may be brought as any other action by the executor or administrator or personal representative of the deceased party. Flight Line, Inc. v. Tanksley, 608 So. 2d 1149, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1992).

Nonpossessory equitable claim of intervenor in replevin action survives death of intervenor, whose executor is permitted to revive claim by intervention. Hall v. Corbin, 478 So. 2d 253, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2274 (Miss. 1985).

Decedent's mother had no standing to bring a wrongful death action under § 11-7-13, even though decedent's will named her as executrix of his estate and sole primary beneficiary, where decedent left surviving him his wife, who was injured in the same accident and died approximately 30 minutes after her husband; a cause of action accrued to the wife even though she survived decedent for only a few minutes, and this cause of action was an asset in her estate, upon which it was entitled to sue pursuant to § 91-7-233; furthermore, decedent's will could not circumvent the wrongful death statute, which created a new and independent cause of action in favor of those named in the statute, and recovery under the statute would become an asset of decedent's estate only if none of the statutory heirs had survived him. Partyka v. Yazoo Development Corp., 376 So. 2d 646, 1979 Miss. LEXIS 2374 (Miss. 1979).

Action under the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act for overtime compensation, liquidated damages, and attorney's fees, survives the death of the employee. Southern Package Corp. v. Walton, 196 Miss. 786, 18 So. 2d 458, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 762, 65 S. Ct. 93, 89 L. Ed. 609, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 247 (U.S. 1944).

Recovery for pain and suffering of deceased probably caused by alleged negligence of doctor in treating deceased between time of gunshot wound and deceased's death could be had only in suit by personal representative and not by next of kin or heirs at law. Berryhill v. Nichols, 171 Miss. 769, 158 So. 470, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 6 (Miss. 1934).

Action to recover personal property, or to enforce contract, or recover damages for breach of contract, or for injury to person or property survives; pure penalty intended as punishment for misconduct does not survive. J. H. Leavenworth & Son, Inc. v. Hunter, 150 Miss. 245, 116 So. 593, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1928).

Term "personal action" in this section [Code 1942, § 609] means action for recovery of personal property, for breach of contract, or for injury to person or property. Hamel v. Southern R. Co., 108 Miss. 172, 66 So. 426, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 188 (Miss. 1914).

Administratrix may revive suit for personal injuries to decedent and may thereafter sue for his negligent death. Hamel v. Southern R. Co., 108 Miss. 172, 66 So. 426, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 188 (Miss. 1914).

Action for penalty imposed by ordinance for failure to observe regulations in operating ferry did not survive. Hamel v. Southern R. Co., 108 Miss. 172, 66 So. 426, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 188 (Miss. 1914).

The right to sue for trespass to lands upon the death of the owner survives to the executor or administrator, and his heirs cannot sue. Conklin v. Alabama & V. R. Co., 81 Miss. 152, 32 So. 920, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1902).

In a proper case, the administrator may recover exemplary damages of the defendant for assaulting and beating his intestate. Wagner v. Gibbs, 80 Miss. 53, 31 So. 434, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1902).

3. Actions against estate.

The liability of a decedent's widow in a personal action which survived his death is derivative only to her husband's estate, and to the maximum extent only of the amount of her inheritance from that estate, and this section [Code 1942, § 609] does not authorize a suit against the widow in her individual capacity, in an action to establish liability of the estate. State ex rel. Patterson v. Warren, 254 Miss. 314, 182 So. 2d 234, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1543 (Miss. 1966).

An action to recover misappropriated county funds from members of the board of supervisors is a personal action and upon their deaths survives against their personal representatives. State ex rel. Patterson v. Warren, 254 Miss. 314, 182 So. 2d 234, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1543 (Miss. 1966).

This statute controls a claim against a decedent's estate for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident. Powell v. Buchanan, 245 Miss. 4, 147 So. 2d 110, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 526 (Miss. 1962).

A personal representative is liable to suit on a claim arising from the alleged negligence of his decedent, notwithstanding the estate has been declared insolvent. Bullock v. Young, 243 Miss. 146, 137 So. 2d 777, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 1962).

Claim against estate to recover amount paid on usurious contract may be probated, and action on such claim is "personal action," which survives death. Chandlee v. Tharp, 161 Miss. 623, 137 So. 540, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 1931).

4. Limitation of actions.

Mississippi wrongful death statute, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-7-13, despite the Mississippi Legislature's assigned nomenclature, encompasses all claims, including survival claims, which could have been brought by a decedent, wrongful-death claims, estate claims, and other claims resulting from a tort which proximately caused a death. And where death is not an immediate result of the tort, the limitation periods for the various kinds of claims may not begin to run at the same time. Caves v. Yarbrough, 991 So. 2d 142, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 617 (Miss. 2008).

§ 91-7-235. What actions survive against executor or administrator.

When any decedent shall in his lifetime have committed any trespass, the person injured, or his executor or administrator, shall have the same action against the executor or administrator of the decedent as he might have had or maintained against the testator or intestate, and shall have like remedy as in other actions against executors and administrators. Vindictive damages shall not be allowed, and such action shall be commenced within one year after publication of notice to creditors to probate and register their claims.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

The statute does not allow the recovery of punitive damages against an estate because of a prior tort committed by the decedent. Wilbanks v. Gray, 795 So. 2d 541, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 103 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

This section [Code 1942, § 610] prohibits the award of vindictive damages against an estate of a decedent. Mervis v. Wolverton, 211 So. 2d 847, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1285 (Miss. 1968).

This section [Code 1942, § 610] does not limit the bringing of action against the estate for decedent's negligence. Jones v. Evans, 247 Miss. 285, 156 So. 2d 742, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 299 (Miss. 1963).

This statute is inapplicable to a claim against a decedent's estate for damages for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident. Powell v. Buchanan, 245 Miss. 4, 147 So. 2d 110, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 526 (Miss. 1962).

This section [Code 1942, § 610] is in derogation of the common law. Southern Package Corp. v. Walton, 196 Miss. 786, 18 So. 2d 458, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 762, 65 S. Ct. 93, 89 L. Ed. 609, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 247 (U.S. 1944).

The provision against the allowance of vindictive damages is not applicable to an action by an administrator against a defendant for assaulting and beating his intestate. Wagner v. Gibbs, 80 Miss. 53, 31 So. 434, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1902).

§ 91-7-237. Death of party not to abate suit in certain cases.

When either of the parties to any personal action shall die before final judgment, the executor or administrator of such deceased party may prosecute or defend such action, and the court shall render judgment for or against the executor or administrator. If such executor or administrator, having been duly served with a scire facias or summons five days before the meeting of the court, shall neglect or refuse to prosecute or defend the suit, the court may render judgment in the same manner as if such executor or administrator had voluntarily made himself a party to the suit. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Suits brought by decedent.
3. Suits brought against decedent.

1. In general.

Pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-237, the estate executor stepped into the decedent's shoes in prosecuting an action against the decedent's nephew for unlawfully withdrawing funds; thus, the executor was entitled to the same remedy due the decedent had he been alive at judgment, and the proceeds of suit should have been returned to the estate. Estate of Beckley v. Beckley, 961 So. 2d 707, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 342 (Miss. 2007).

An action for loss of consortium survives the death of the party asserting it, and may be brought as any other action by the executor or administrator or personal representative of the deceased party. Flight Line, Inc. v. Tanksley, 608 So. 2d 1149, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1992).

Where statute was re-enacted by legislature without change after decision holding that term "personal action" is one brought for recovery of personalty, for enforcement of some contract or to recover damages for its breach, or for recovery of damages for commission of injury to person or property, interpretation became part of statute, and could not be changed or modified except by legislature. Catchings v. Hartman, 178 Miss. 672, 174 So. 553, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 259 (Miss. 1937).

Term "personal action" as used in statute providing that, where either of parties to "personal action" shall die before final judgment, executor or administrator may prosecute or defend such action, does not include an action of slander, so as to entitle administratrix to continue the action, since statute, being in derogation of common law, must be strictly construed. Catchings v. Hartman, 178 Miss. 672, 174 So. 553, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 259 (Miss. 1937).

This section [Code 1942, § 611] being in derogation of common law must be strictly construed. McNeely v. Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1927).

Term "personal action" in this section [Code 1942, § 611] means action for recovery of personal property for breach of contract, or for injury to person or property. McNeely v. Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1927).

Action for penalty imposed by ordinance for failure to observe regulations in operating ferry did not survive. McNeely v. Natchez, 148 Miss. 268, 114 So. 484, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1927).

2. Suits brought by decedent.

According to established precedent and Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-237, an executrix's medical malpractice action against a doctor and a medical practice survived a decedent's death and did not have to be recommenced because the executrix complied with Miss. R. Civ. P. 25 as the doctor and medical practice made no suggestion of death upon the record to trigger the ninety-day time requirement set out by the rule; nowhere does Rule 25 state that the substitution of parties is a commencement of a new action, but instead, it is the continuation of a prior action. Harris v. Darby, 17 So. 3d 1076, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 2009).

Where a cancer patient died while a medical malpractice suit he filed was pending, and his daughter was substituted as plaintiff and was appointed executrix of his estate, the trial court erred in dismissing the suit for failing to state a claim, because the amended complaint filed by the daughter on behalf of the estate sought recovery for injuries the patient suffered during his lifetime. Necaise v. Sacks, 841 So. 2d 1098, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 137 (Miss. 2003).

In an action to recover for damage to a life estate, the life tenant's sole heir could not be substituted as the plaintiff following the life tenant's death where no estate had been opened for the deceased life tenant and no administrator had been appointed, since the life tenant's sole heir did not automatically become her legal representative on her death (§ 91-7-237). Madison v. Vintage Petroleum, 872 F. Supp. 340, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18918 (S.D. Miss. 1994), dismissed, 85 F.3d 625, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 12907 (5th Cir. Miss. 1996), aff'd, 87 F.3d 1311, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 16949 (5th Cir. Miss. 1996).

Actions for defamation are not personal actions for purposes of survival statute. Caine v. Hardy, 943 F.2d 1406, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 22455 (5th Cir. Miss. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 936, 112 S. Ct. 1474, 117 L. Ed. 2d 618, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1727 (U.S. 1992).

Action by anesthesiologist against hospital challenging suspension of his privileges was not rendered moot by plaintiff's death, as such parts of claim which alleged wrongful discharge were preserved under state survival statute. Caine v. Hardy, 943 F.2d 1406, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 22455 (5th Cir. Miss. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 936, 112 S. Ct. 1474, 117 L. Ed. 2d 618, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1727 (U.S. 1992).

Action under the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act for overtime compensation, liquidated damages, and attorney's fees, survives the death of the employee. Southern Package Corp. v. Walton, 196 Miss. 786, 18 So. 2d 458, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 257 (Miss.), cert. denied, 323 U.S. 762, 65 S. Ct. 93, 89 L. Ed. 609, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 247 (U.S. 1944).

Judgment in action for injuries revived in name of wife as executrix held res judicata in her subsequent action for damages sustained by herself and children. Edward Hines Yellow Pine Trustees v. Stewart, 135 Miss. 331, 100 So. 12, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 1924).

Dismissal of suit brought by two parties upon death of one of them without motion or other preliminary proceeding will be set aside on proper application and cause reinstated. Merchants' Bank & Trust Co. v. Mississippi Nat'l Bank, 108 Miss. 356, 66 So. 537, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 194 (Miss. 1914).

Administratrix may revive action for personal injuries, and may thereafter sue for negligent death of decedent. Hamel v. Southern R. Co., 108 Miss. 172, 66 So. 426, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 188 (Miss. 1914).

Railroad defendant in suit for personal injury not entitled to move for revocation of letters of administration granted for purpose of bringing suit. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co. v. Jeffries, 99 Miss. 534, 55 So. 354, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 224 (Miss. 1911).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Health care providers' claim against the decedent's estate was time-barred because the four-year statute of limitations began to run ninety days after the executor was issued letters of administration, but the providers did not bring their cause of action until after the expiration of the limitations period. Rush Found. Hosp. v. Carlisle, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 111 (Miss. Ct. App. Mar. 6, 2018).

The purpose of this section [Code 1942, § 612] is to allow time to the administrator to examine and understand the condition of the estate, to provide the means of paying debts, if practicable, without suit by collection of assets, and to be advised of any demands against the estate which it may be necessary to defend. Great Southern Box Co. v. Barrett, 231 Miss. 101, 94 So. 2d 912, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 494 (Miss. 1957).

Where an action was brought against the administrator of an estate and two other defendants within four days after the administrator was issued letters, but the administrator did not raise the objection that the action was prematurely brought, the codefendants of the administrator could not raise the question. Great Southern Box Co. v. Barrett, 231 Miss. 101, 94 So. 2d 912, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 494 (Miss. 1957).

Suit could not properly be brought against an administratrix to have funds in a bank adjudged to belong to the plaintiff rather than to the estate until six months after date of letters of administration. Matthews v. Redmond, 202 Miss. 253, 32 So. 2d 123, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 268 (Miss. 1947).

Statute allows four years and six months within which an executor or administrator can be sued. Toler v. Wells, 158 Miss. 628, 130 So. 298, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 50 (Miss. 1930).

Claims maturing before decedent's death are barred, notwithstanding probate, by failure to sue thereon within 4 years and 6 months from grant of letters. Rogers v. Rosenstock, 117 Miss. 144, 77 So. 958, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 1918).

Claim for medical services rendered during last illness of intestate not barred until after 4 years and 6 months. Hardenstein v. Brien, 96 Miss. 493, 50 So. 979, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1910).

A petition against the administrator and heirs to subject exempt property owned by decedent in his lifetime to a debt for labor performed, the amount of which has been allowed by the chancery court, is not a suit against an administrator, the proceeding not being a suit on a claim, and the administrator not being a necessary party thereto. § 91-7-247. Actions which accrue between administrators.

When there are two (2) or more administrators of an estate, and one or more of them take all the assets, or the greatest part thereof, and refuse to pay the debts or funeral expenses of the deceased, or to account with the other, the court, on petition of the aggrieved administrator and five (5) days' notice thereof to the other, may make an order requiring the delivery or payment to the aggrieved administrator of the proportionate share of the estate to which he is entitled. To enforce compliance, the court may revoke the letters of the administrator in default, and may fine him not exceeding One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or imprison him not exceeding three (3) months as for contempt. Any executor being a residuary legatee may proceed in the same way and with like effect against his co-executor to recover his part of the estate.

§ 91-7-253. Fiduciary not to use funds; investment by fiduciary bank in time certificates of deposit.

No executor, administrator, guardian, receiver or other fiduciary appointed by or acting pursuant to the authority of any chancery court may borrow or use for his own benefit, directly or indirectly, any of the funds or property of the estate committed or entrusted to him by such court, nor purchase or acquire, directly or indirectly, any interest therein adverse to any creditor or beneficiary of such estate. Nor may he loan the same, or any part thereof, to any parent, brother, sister, son, daughter of, or one in loco parentis to the ward or himself, nor to any attorney or agent representing him or such estate, nor to the wife or any child of such attorney or agent. Nor may any court or chancellor authorize or ratify any such prohibited use, acquisition or loan.

Provided, however, the above prohibitions shall not extend to prohibit the investment by a banking corporation of the funds of an estate committed or entrusted to it in time certificates of deposit, provided such be approved by the chancellor, and the banking corporation shall first secure such certificates of deposit in excess of the portion insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as provided in section 81-5-33, Mississippi Code of 1972.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

A conservator's wife could be held liable in an action alleging intentional misappropriation of funds and defrauding of the estate, even though the wife asserted that she was only a "scrivener" for her husband and was not responsible for any of the transactions in the conservatorship account, where the wife received payment for keeping the books and received the benefit of direct loans and gifts from the conservatorship monies, she also received the indirect benefit of the use of other items purchased with the monies, she participated in the disbursal of the monies by writing the checks though she did not sign them, and she clearly knew where the monies were going. Bryan v. Holzer, 589 So. 2d 648, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 762 (Miss. 1991).

A finding that a conservator and his wife violated the fiduciary duty to the ward and converted the ward's funds to their own use was supported by evidence that the ward's funds had been used to purchase a van which was used by the conservator and his wife, and that the conservator, his wife, and their children were the recipients of loans and gifts from monies in the conservatorship account, without previous court approval. Bryan v. Holzer, 589 So. 2d 648, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 762 (Miss. 1991).

The Chancellor properly removed an administrator under § 91-7-253, where the administrator admitted that he had spent or lent large sums of funds taken from estate for which he was unable to account. Kelly v. Shoemake, 460 So. 2d 811, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2019 (Miss. 1984).

Where the testator bequeathed half of his stock to his daughter and the other half to his son for life, with remainder to the daughter and the daughter as executrix surrendered the certificate and obtained two certificates, one of which was issued in the son's name and thereafter the son transferred the certificate to daughter, retaining beneficial interest therein for life, this section [Code 1942, § 619] was not applicable. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
This section [Code 1942, § 620] was enacted to protect creditors and those interested in the estate under disposition of the assets by the executor and where there is no claim that the estate is insolvent, or that there are any creditors and that all beneficiaries have not received the specific bequests bequeathed to them, or that abatement among the beneficiaries is needed, this section is inapplicable. Maples v. Howell, 217 Miss. 322, 64 So. 2d 364, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 435 (Miss. 1953).

§ 91-7-257. Property not to be removed from state.

An executor or administrator shall not remove any of the property of the estate out of this state. If a chancellor or clerk of a chancery court shall be satisfied, by petition or otherwise in term time or vacation, that any executor or administrator is about to remove the property of the estate out of this state, he shall issue a precept to the sheriff of the proper county, commanding him to seize the property about to be removed and hold the same until legally disposed of; and the letters of such executor or administrator may be revoked, on due notice, and administration de bonis non granted to some other person. In case of any such removal, suit may be forthwith instituted on the bond by any of the distributees or creditors of the estate; and, on satisfactory evidence of the removal of the property out of the state, judgment shall be rendered for the full value thereof and such other damages as the parties suing shall have sustained.

§ 91-7-261. Procedures for insolvent estates.

The executor or administrator shall take proper steps speedily to ascertain whether the estate be solvent or insolvent. If both the real and personal estate be insufficient to pay the debts of the deceased, he shall exhibit to the court a true account of all the personal estate, assets of every description, the land of the deceased, and all the debts due from the deceased; and if it appear to the court that the estate is insolvent, it shall make an order for the sale of all the property. The proceeds of such sale and all other assets shall be equally distributed among all the creditors whose claims shall be duly filed and established, in proportion to the sums due and owing to them respectively, the expenses of the last sickness, the funeral, and the administration, including commissions, being first paid. Before any decree for sale is made, the devisees or heirs shall be made parties to the proceeding.

4. Jurisdiction.

1. In general.

A year's allowance to a widow and children in insolvent estates is a claim of next priority, is to be paid before creditors, and such allowance may be paid out of exempt personal property, in cases where the exempt property is disposed of by the will of a testator; in cases of intestacy, it descends as provided by statute, and, where administration is not necessary, is not subject to administrative expenses. 2. Expenses of last illness and funeral.

If estate be insolvent, expenses of last illness and funeral are preferred, but in determining solvency, exempt property is not considered. De Baum v. Hulett Undertaking Co., 169 Miss. 488, 153 So. 513, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 66 (Miss. 1934).

Where estate was insolvent, rent due landlord for store occupied by decedent before death, while claim superior to that of general creditors, was not preferred over claims for expenses of last illness, funeral, and administration, where administrator sold goods in store building under court order. Walker v. First Nat'l Bank, 168 Miss. 487, 151 So. 740, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 350 (Miss. 1934).

Expenses of last illness and funeral expenses constitute preference claim over enrolled judgment upon which execution has not been issued and levied. Dabney v. Continental Jewelry Co., 163 Miss. 1, 140 So. 338, 1932 Miss. LEXIS 9 (Miss. 1932).

Claim for expenses of funeral and last sickness not filed for examination pursuant to administrator's notice, though preference claims, not allowed except out of surplus left after payment of filed claims. Merchants' & Farmers Bank v. Kelleher, 119 Miss. 232, 80 So. 697, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 33 (Miss. 1919).

3. Attorney fees.

It was not an abuse of discretion to appoint attorneys representing a decedent's son appointed as temporary administrator of the decedent's estate a fee from the insolvent estate because the attorneys were creditors of the estate who were entitled to payment before any distributions to heirs. Flowers v. Flowers (In re Estate of Flowers), — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. App. LEXIS 2 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 2, 2018).

In their cross-appeal, the co-executrixes of an estate that was the center of a long, drawn-out dispute, argued that the chancellor had not followed proper procedure for determining that the estate was insolvent, as stated in Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-7-261 and 91-7-265. The appellate court ruled that the chancellor had not abused his discretion in denying the payment of attorney's fees from the estate assets. Lynn v. Lynn (In re Will of Lynn), 878 So. 2d 1052, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 695 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

4. Jurisdiction.

Creditor properly brought its claim before a justice court, and then appealed to the circuit court, even though a debtor's estate was still open, because creditor's action was purely a possessory action. Gandy v. Citicorp, 985 So. 2d 371, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 360 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

§ 91-7-267. Publication and claims presented in insolvent estate.

If an estate be declared insolvent after the executor or administrator has made publication to the creditors to present their claims and have them probated and registered, another publication to present claims shall not be necessary. If an estate be declared insolvent before the executor or administrator has made such publication, the court shall order the executor or administrator to make publication, requiring the creditors to present their claims within ninety (90) days and have them probated and registered. Any creditor who shall not register his claim by the day stated in the publication shall be forever barred.

When the time for probating and registering claims has elapsed, the court shall cause notice to be inserted for three successive weeks in some newspaper published in the county that at a time fixed the claims will be taken up for examination and adjudication by the court or by the clerk in vacation, as the order may designate, that all claims not required by law to be probated and registered must be filed with the clerk by the day named in the notice, and that all creditors may attend. At the time appointed the court shall examine into the validity of each claim which has been probated and registered and such other claims as may have been filed with the clerk. The executor or administrator or any creditor may object to any claim, and the court shall hear evidence in support of the objection, shall allow any claim that should be allowed, and shall reject in whole or in part any which is in whole or in part not well founded. It shall not be necessary for any creditor to refile with the clerk any claim which has been duly probated and registered within the time and in the manner required by law. All other claims, unless filed with the clerk by the day named in the notice, shall not be allowed; but lawful claims, not required to be probated and registered, which are not filed with the clerk by the day named in the notice shall not be barred as to any surplus that remains after paying in full all claims allowed by the court at the examination and adjudication named in the notice. Provided, however, that in cases where the executor or administrator shall have, prior to the adjudication of insolvency, paid any claim or claims, whether probated and registered or not, such executor or administrator shall have the right by the day named in the notice, to file with the clerk a verified itemized statement of the amount which has been paid thereon, and obtain allowance therefor in the same amount to which the creditor or creditors, whose claim or claims had been so paid, would have been entitled had such creditor filed the claim.

A personal representative is liable to suit on a claim arising from the alleged negligence of his decedent, notwithstanding the estate has been declared insolvent. Bullock v. Young, 243 Miss. 146, 137 So. 2d 777, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 326 (Miss. 1962).

Every executor or administrator, at least once in each year or oftener if required by the court, shall present under oath an account of his administration, showing the disbursements, every item of which and the amount thereof to be distinctly stated and supported by legal voucher, and it shall also show the receipts of money and from what sources. The failure to account annually shall be a breach of the administration bond, for which it may be put in suit, or the executor or administrator may be removed; but the court may, on application and on cause shown, extend the time for accounting. In the event that the account shall be presented by a federally regulated bank, thrift or trust company, and such account or the petition for the approval of same shall contain a statement under oath by an officer of said bank, thrift or trust company showing that the vouchers covering the disbursements in the account presented are on file with said bank, thrift or trust company, such bank, thrift or trust company shall not be required to file vouchers. Provided, however, that said bank, thrift or trust company shall produce said vouchers for inspection of any interested party or his or her attorney at any time during legal banking hours at the office of said bank, thrift or trust company and, provided further, that the court on its own motion or on the motion of any interested party may require that said vouchers be produced and inspected at the time of hearing of any objections that may be filed to any annual accounts of any executors or administrators. The court shall examine all such accounts and the vouchers required to be filed or produced for inspection, and if satisfied that the account is just and true, it shall decree the same approved and allowed as a correct annual settlement. If the decree allowing and approving the account of any executor or administrator shall affirmatively recite that the vouchers to support the disbursements shown in the account were exhibited to and approved by the court, it shall not be necessary to file the vouchers in the cause, but they shall be preserved by the executor or administrator until after the final accounting has been approved.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, any record, voucher, claim, check, draft, receipt, writing, account, statement, note or other evidence which may be furnished, filed, probated, presented or produced, or required to be produced, by a federally regulated bank, thrift or trust company shall be deemed to be an original admitted, furnished, filed, probated, presented, or produced for all purposes and with the same effect as the original, if such financial institution produces a copy of such evidence from a format of storage commonly used by financial institutions, whether electronic, imaged, magnetic, microphotographic or otherwise.

2. Failure to provide accounting.

1. In general.

Daughter did not show that the son had not made a sufficient accounting of estate assets, as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-277, and, thus, no additional accounting was required regarding them in a case where the daughter sought to challenge the will of the testator, who was the father of the daughter and son. The testator's will did not require the son to furnish any accounting to any court, file an inventory of property received by the beneficiaries, or to report to any court with respect to the duties imposed upon the beneficiaries or regarding the estate administration, and there was not evidence that the estate had been mismanaged. Ellzey v. McCormick, 17 So. 3d 583, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

The Chancellor properly removed an administrator under § 91-7-277, where the administrator failed to file sufficiently specific accountings and inventories. Kelly v. Shoemake, 460 So. 2d 811, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2019 (Miss. 1984).

The requirement of § 91-7-277 that annual accountings be made is mandatory and not simply advisory, and the fact that co-executors' failure to make annual accountings resulted in no loss to the estate was of no consequence. Abernathy v. Smith, 458 So. 2d 691 (Miss. 1984).

Statutory requirement that executor file vouchers for disbursements for annual accounts mandatory. Ridgeway v. Jones, 125 Miss. 22, 87 So. 461, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 103 (Miss. 1921).

Expenditures for funeral expenses and monument may be allowed if reasonable. Ridgeway v. Jones, 125 Miss. 22, 87 So. 461, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 103 (Miss. 1921).

2. Failure to provide accounting.

Finding against the executrix was appropriate because she mismanaged the decedent's estate and was thus accountable for her actions. She further failed to provide an accounting as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-277. Frazier v. Shackelford (In re Estate of Carter), 912 So. 2d 138, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 662 (Miss. 2005).

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Amount of fees.
3. Executor, administrator, or guardian acting as attorney.

1. In general.

Attorney's fees are not authorized where services are rendered for sole benefit of individual interested in estate; administratrix should not have been allowed attorney's fees, to be paid out of estate, where she was the only creditor of estate and record revealed that only pleading for motion filed by her not in furtherance of recovering her claim against estate was payment of outstanding funeral bill. Braxton v. Johnson, 514 So. 2d 1232 (1987).

The payment of attorneys' fees is an expense of the administration of a decedent's estate, and since such fees are incurred after testator's death, they do not have to be probated; the testator may waive the testatrix's duty to account, but upon a charge of the devisees of mismanagement by the executrix, the chancery court may properly require an accounting, with the result that an executrix may act at her peril in paying attorneys' fees without court approval. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Although attorney's fees are the personal obligation of the administrator or executor, they may be paid out of the estate as administration expenses. Scott v. Hollingsworth, 487 So. 2d 811, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2438 (Miss. 1986).

The supreme court would not require an estate to pay for legal services rendered by an attorney in the interest of the executrix in her individual capacity and which was of no benefit to the estate itself. Ruffin v. Burkhalter, 238 Miss. 358, 118 So. 2d 357, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 413 (Miss. 1960).

Attorney's fees in the management of statutory estates are not a charge upon the estate itself, but are personal obligations of the administrator or executor or guardian, and an allowance for attorney's fees must be done on the request or petition of the administrator or executor or guardian and not on the direct petition of the attorney himself. Hutton v. Gwin, 188 Miss. 763, 195 So. 486, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1940).

Where the testator prescribes that his wife should be the guardian of the person and estate of his minor son until he should become twenty-one years of age and should give a bond as guardian effective during that time, and that after the minor had reached his majority the guardian should thereupon become trustee and should furnish bond as such trustee until the son should attain thirty-one years old, at which time the balance of the estate was to be distributed, a period of minority constituted a statutory guardianship and attorney's fees for services rendered during that period could not be allowed on the direct petition of the attorney himself. Hutton v. Gwin, 188 Miss. 763, 195 So. 486, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1940).

Attorneys' fees incurred by the personal representative in the administration of an estate in his custody are his personal obligations, for which he may be reimbursed if the court be of the opinion that the services were necessary and rendered in good faith. Clarksdale Hospital v. Wallis, 187 Miss. 834, 193 So. 627, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1940).

Allowance for attorneys' fees is unauthorized where services are rendered for sole benefit of an individual, or group of individuals, interested in the estate, as against the others interested. Clarksdale Hospital v. Wallis, 187 Miss. 834, 193 So. 627, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1940).

Where hospital's claim to legacy was against the interest of all the other legatees and devisees under a will, and its successful termination resulted in decreasing their claims, the hospital was not entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in defending its rights to the legacy, notwithstanding that the decision as to the validity of the bequest involved a construction of the will which was of interest to all concerned. Clarksdale Hospital v. Wallis, 187 Miss. 834, 193 So. 627, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1940).

Attorney's fees held personal debts of administrator, and not of estate. Reedy v. Allen, 181 Miss. 471, 179 So. 569, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1938).

Ordinarily administrator is personally liable to attorney, and entitled, in connection with annual and final settlement, to credit for reasonable attorney's services on behalf of estate if court thinks they were proper and in good faith. Reedy v. Allen, 181 Miss. 471, 179 So. 569, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1938).

Chancellor had no authority to allow attorney's fees where there was no evidence of employment contract. Reedy v. Allen, 181 Miss. 471, 179 So. 569, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1938).

Order allowing attorney's fee in ex parte proceeding for services rendered predecessor of present administratrix and trustee could not be sustained on ground administratrix should have objected to filing petition, where neither petition nor proof showed any power in administratrix or trustee to bind estate, and it was not shown that predecessor was insolvent or out of state. Reedy v. Allen, 181 Miss. 471, 179 So. 569, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1938).

Where will empowered executor and trustee to employ persons necessary to manage trust estate, attorney's fees could be made charge against trust estate. Gwin v. Fountain, 159 Miss. 619, 126 So. 18, 132 So. 559, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 354 (Miss. 1930).

Ordinarily debts contracted by administrator are only personal obligations, and this is especially true of attorneys' fees. Howell v. Myer, 105 Miss. 771, 63 So. 233, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 261 (Miss. 1913).

Statute is intended to prevent necessity of suit by attorney against administrator to establish claim for services to estate; statute has no reference to claim which attorney seeks to enforce over administrator's protest. Murphy v. Harris, 93 Miss. 286, 48 So. 232, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 166 (Miss. 1908).

The funeral expenses of decedent and an administrator's attorney's fees are not debts against him, and the administrator may pay them with the proceeds of a life insurance policy which is exempt from liability for his debts. Dobbs v. Chandler, 84 Miss. 372, 36 So. 388, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1904).

2. Amount of fees.

The chancellor did not abuse his discretion by not allowing additional attorneys fees where the executrix was found in civil and criminal contempt for failing to abide by a previous court order and was subsequently jailed, and where the executrix received legal advice in connection with the contempt action from the same counsel whom she retained on behalf of the estate and thus did not have the purpose of benefiting the estate. In re Estate of Collins v. Collins, 742 So. 2d 147, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Lawyer should submit time sheet to chancellor listing hours spent serving estate and fee normally charged for such service when pursuing attorneys fees under § 91-7-281; attorney's fees are not recoverable from estate for services performed before appointment of administrator. Braxton v. Johnson, 514 So. 2d 1232 (1987).

The chancellor did not abuse his discretion in allowing the payment of attorney's fees for services rendered prior to the date the decedent's estate could and should have been closed, nor in surcharging the executrix for the balance of the legal fees incurred after that date. Harper v. Harper, 491 So. 2d 189, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2508 (Miss. 1986).

Award of $1500 as fees for attorney retained by an estate valued in excess of $229,000 was not so inadequate as to amount to an abuse of the chancellor's discretion. Scott v. Hollingsworth, 487 So. 2d 811, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2438 (Miss. 1986).

Where the proper management, handling, and preservation of funds of a decedent's estate in the sum of $13,750, derived from condemnation proceedings, required the executor and life tenant to seek the aid of the chancery court and to submit the matter to its jurisdiction for proper decrees in regard to the disposition of the funds, the allowance of an attorney's fee in the sum of $1,000 was justified. Bradley v. Bradley, 185 So. 2d 655, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1518 (Miss. 1966).

Allowance of compensation and attorney's fees to an administrator within the limits prescribed by statute is a matter addressed to the sound discretion of the chancery court, and the supreme court will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion except in cases of its manifest and flagrant abuse. Schwander v. Rubel, 221 Miss. 875, 75 So. 2d 45, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 603 (Miss. 1954).

Chancery court's allowance for attorney's fees which was slightly less than four per cent of estate, held not abuse of discretion. King v. Wade, 175 Miss. 72, 166 So. 327, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 8 (Miss. 1936).

Instead of paying attorneys and asking credit therefor, executrix may ask court to fix fees. Brown v. Franklin, 166 Miss. 899, 145 So. 752, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1933).

Amount allowable as attorney's fee for services rendered in administration of estate rests in sound discretion of chancery court. Brown v. Franklin, 166 Miss. 899, 145 So. 752, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1933).

Time is not the only element involved in fixing attorney's fee for services rendered executrix, since skill, responsibility, and amount involved must also be considered. Brown v. Franklin, 166 Miss. 899, 145 So. 752, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1933).

Opinions of attorneys concerning propriety of fee for services rendered to executrix were not binding on chancery court, which might act on its own knowledge. Brown v. Franklin, 166 Miss. 899, 145 So. 752, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1933).

Allowance of attorney's fee of $750 for services rendered executrix in estate amounting to $29,104.95, where litigation was carried to supreme court, held not abuse of discretion. Brown v. Franklin, 166 Miss. 899, 145 So. 752, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1933).

3. Executor, administrator, or guardian acting as attorney.

As long as no duplication of services is shown, an executor is not prevented from seeking payment for services rendered purely in his fiduciary capacity that may not necessarily involve legal work, while, at the same time, seeking additional compensation for other work of a purely legal nature in lieu of payment for those other discrete services as the fiduciary. Thomas v. Evans (In re Estate of Thomas), 740 So. 2d 332, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 117 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

There is no prohibition in this section that would prevent a fiduciary who is also an attorney from petitioning for some part of his itemized services to be paid under § 91-7-299, where his right to compensation would not necessarily be commensurate with prevailing legal fees; nor is there a prohibition for that same fiduciary, as to those separately identified services that were unquestionably performed in his capacity as an attorney, seeking compensation under this section, in lieu of being paid for those particular services under § 91-7-299. Thomas v. Evans (In re Estate of Thomas), 740 So. 2d 332, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 117 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

§ 91-7-283. Defaulters to be listed and cited.

Unless the court or chancellor has, by order entered on the minutes, designated another annual term for that purpose, it shall be the duty of the clerk at the first term of the chancery court of his county in each year to make up a complete and impartial list of all executors and administrators and guardians who have failed to present and settle their accounts within the year preceding. In each and every such case, the clerk shall enter the same on the motion docket and thereby move the court for an order on the defaulter; and the court shall, in each and every such case, order a citation to be issued for the defaulter and for the surety or sureties on his bond, returnable forthwith or at the next term of court. On the return thereof, unless sufficient cause be shown for such failure and that the same was not the result of negligence or contumacy, the court shall proceed against the delinquent executor, administrator, or guardian for a contempt, and may also remove him from office. If there be no such defaulter, the clerk shall so report and obtain an order reciting his said report to that effect, which order shall be entered on the minutes of the term. If there be any defaulter and the clerk shall fail to fully prepare the list and to enter the motions herein required, he shall not be entitled to any allowance for attendance on the term nor to any annual compensation for ex officio services to the court. Any allowance by the court contrary to the terms of this section may nevertheless be recovered from the said clerk on his bond by the state tax commission, or by any other office similarly empowered, for the benefit of the county treasury; in addition to which, the clerk shall be liable on his bond at the suit of any party in interest who has been damaged in any case by the said failure of the clerk.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Supreme court will not interfere with action of chancery court in removing trustee on its own motion, unless palpably unjust. Nutt v. State, 96 Miss. 473, 51 So. 401, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 171 (Miss. 1910).

§ 91-7-285. Process for derelict fiduciary.

Whenever it shall appear of record, or otherwise, that any executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, or fiduciary appointed by any chancery court is derelict in the performance of any duty required of him by law or the orders of the court or chancellor, or is liable to be punished or removed for any cause prescribed by law, then such court or the chancellor in vacation may, on the application of any interested party or of his or its own motion, order a citation for such executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, or other fiduciary, as the case may be, to be issued by the clerk of the court in which such cause or matter is pending, returnable forthwith or at such time and place, in term time or vacation, as may be specified in such order, to appear and show cause why he should not be removed or punished for contempt, either or both, as may be directed in such order. The citation shall be directed to the sheriff of the county of the residence of such fiduciary, if known to the clerk; otherwise, it shall be directed to the sheriff of the county where such matter or cause is pending, and shall be executed without advance payment of fees.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Notice.

1. In general.

In a father's petition to remove a conservator under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-285 and to set aside an allegedly fraudulent conveyance, a chancery court erred by dismissing based on a lack of standing because the father was an interested party due to the fact that his daughters were beneficiaries under their mother's will. Peyton v. Longo (In re Davis), 954 So. 2d 521, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

An administrator's failure to file sufficiently specific accountings and inventories and his admission that he had spent or lent large sums of funds taken from the estate for which he was unable to account formed a sufficient basis for the chancellor to remove him, under § 91-7-285, as executor of the estate. Kelly v. Shoemake, 460 So. 2d 811, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2019 (Miss. 1984).

2. Notice.

A conservator is entitled to notice and a hearing prior to his removal. Jackson v. Jackson, 732 So. 2d 916, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 54 (Miss. 1999).

§ 91-7-287. Publication of process for defaulter.

If the citation be returned unexecuted because such fiduciary cannot be found after diligent search by the sheriff to whom it is directed, then the clerk shall make and file among the papers in the cause an affidavit stating such information as he may have been able to ascertain after diligent inquiry concerning the whereabouts and post office address of such fiduciary. If by such affidavit it shall appear that the whereabouts of such fiduciary is unknown to the clerk or that he is a nonresident of, or absents himself from, this state, then the court or chancellor shall make an order directing the issuance and publication of an alias citation for such fiduciary to appear and show cause why he should not be removed, at a time and place specified therein, not less than thirty days from the date of such order. The sheriff of the county where such matter or cause is pending shall thereupon make publication of such citation by posting a true copy thereof at three public places in his county, one of which shall be at the courthouse, not less than twenty-one days before the return day thereof, and shall make return of the citation showing such publication and the date and places where such copies were posted. If the clerk's affidavit shall show the post office address of such fiduciary, then the clerk shall, at the time of issuing such alias citation for publication, mail postage prepaid a true copy thereof to him at such address and note the fact on his general docket in the same manner and with the same effect as in other like cases. On the return of such alias citation, executed by publication as aforesaid, the court or chancellor shall be as fully empowered to proceed as if such fiduciary had been personally served in this state.

§ 91-7-289. Hearing for derelict fiduciary.

Codes, 1942, § 637; Laws, 1936, ch. 239.

When the estate has been administered by payment of the debts and the collection of the assets, it shall be the duty of the executor or administrator, unless the court or chancellor, on cause shown, shall otherwise order, to make and file a final settlement of the administration by making out and presenting to the court, under oath, his final account, which shall contain a distinct statement of all the balances of the annual accounts, either as debits or credits, all other charges and disbursements supported by legal vouchers, amounts received and not contained in any previous annual account, and a statement of the kind and condition of all assets in his hands. In the event that the account shall be presented by a bank or trust company which is subject to the supervision of the department of bank supervision of the State of Mississippi or of the comptroller of the currency of the United States and such account, or the petition for the approval of same, shall contain a statement under oath by an officer of said bank or trust company showing that the vouchers covering the disbursements in the account presented are on file with the said bank or trust company, such bank or trust company shall not be required to file vouchers. Provided, however, that said bank or trust company shall produce said vouchers for inspection of any interested party or his or her attorney at any time during legal banking hours at the office of said bank or trust company; and provided, further, that the court on its own motion, or on the motion of any interested party, may require that said vouchers be produced and inspected at the time of hearing of any objections that may be filed to any final account.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

In a proceeding by a widow to reopen the estate of her deceased husband more than two years after entry of a final decree on the ground that the final account had never been filed and that the final decree was therefore a nullity, the trial court properly denied the petition where the transcript was a part of the record and it indicated that, although the final account had not be stamped "Filed" until three years later, there was no dispute that it had been presented to the court, that it had been a part of the record on presentation of same, and that the decree had been based upon said account and evidence heard for the approval thereof, and where there was no specific charge of fraud against the executor which would constitute a bar to the statute of limitations. Byrd v. Page, 384 So. 2d 1038, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 2015 (Miss. 1980).

Chancellor in vacation may approve executor's final account. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. State, 110 Miss. 16, 69 So. 1007, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 20 (Miss. 1915).

Administratrix de bonis non entitled to allowance for premium on special bond executed to collect money for land sold by predecessor under order of court. Davis v. Blumenberg, 107 Miss. 432, 65 So. 503, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 102 (Miss. 1914).

In a suit by a distributee to compel an accounting by the surviving executor it is proper upon the latter's application to make a personal representative of the deceased executor a party to the proceeding. Owens v. Owens' Estate, 84 Miss. 673, 37 So. 149, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1904).

Where executors deposited money collected in their own bank, where it remained for ten years credited to them as guardians, when they were not guardians, and rendered no accounts for more than two years, in the meantime lending money to the distributees at interest and selling them property, taking interest-bearing notes therefor, they are chargeable with interest at the legal rate during the time the money was in the bank. Owens v. Owens' Estate, 84 Miss. 673, 37 So. 149, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1904).

Where executors without excuse left money due the estate in the hands of the debtor for nearly fifteen years, not collecting it until compelled to do so in a proceeding for an accounting, they were chargeable with interest. Owens v. Owens' Estate, 84 Miss. 673, 37 So. 149, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1904).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Administratrix's duty to protect estate assets required administratrix to contest all claims against estate that may properly and in good faith be contested and to use reasonable diligence to ascertain potential heirs, and to file names of heirs in final account. Shepard v. Jones by & Through Jones (In re Estate of Stowers), 678 So. 2d 660, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 329 (Miss. 1996).

A chancery court did not have jurisdiction to hear a will contest where the executor failed to properly designate the beneficiaries as necessary parties, since the "interested and necessary parties" were not timely noticed and properly joined in the lawsuit; the chancellor should have joined all necessary and proper parties before exercising jurisdiction. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

In an action to probate a will, the chancellor erred in sustaining the executor's and beneficiaries' motions to dismiss a caveat against probate filed by will contestants on the ground that the will was not contested within 2 years as required by § 91-7-23 where the beneficiaries were not listed as interested parties on the petition to probate the will, since the beneficiaries were necessary parties entitled to notice of the action. Padron v. Martell (In re Estate of McClerkin), 651 So. 2d 1052, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1995).

An administratrix perpetrated a fraud on the court where she intentionally chose not to reveal the existence of a potential heir to the court, relying on her and her attorney's determination that an alleged illegitimate daughter of the decedent was not an heir, where the administratrix, who was the decedent's widow, claimed to be the sole heir at law and benefited from her silence regarding the existence of the illegitimate daughter. Smith v. Estate of King, 579 So. 2d 1250, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 250 (Miss. 1991).

An administratrix is under an affirmative duty to disclose to the court the existence of known potential heirs and claimants. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2287 (Miss. 1987).

This section [Code 1942, § 639], while it prescribed who are necessary parties to the final account of an administrator, does not preclude as proper parties those having an interest in the net amount to be distributed by the administrator. Stone v. Townsend, 190 Miss. 547, 1 So. 2d 237, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 81 (Miss. 1941).

Judgment creditors of the heirs of an intestate were proper parties to a proceeding involving the final account of the administrator. Stone v. Townsend, 190 Miss. 547, 1 So. 2d 237, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 81 (Miss. 1941).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

After the final account has been filed, it is the administratrix duty to cause summons to be issued for all parties interested as far as known to her at the hearing on the final account. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2287 (Miss. 1987).

A minor seeking to be declared an heir of the decedent as an illegitimate daughter and to share in the estate should have been allowed to amend her complaint to allege that the widow and former executrix knew of the existence of the minor as an illegitimate child of the decedent, but fraudulently failed to so inform the court, notwithstanding that the minor's petition was filed more than 90 days after the publication of notice to the creditors of the estate. Smith v. Estate of King, 501 So. 2d 1120, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2287 (Miss. 1987).

It is competent for the parties in interest to waive process and consent to the hearing of a final account. Pollock v. Buie, 43 Miss. 140, 1870 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1870).

§ 91-7-297. Hearing and adjudication of final account.

If process be returned executed, or publication has been made, the court shall examine the final account so presented and filed, hear the evidence in support of it, and the objections and evidence against it. If the court shall be satisfied that the account is correct and supported by legal vouchers where required to be filed or produced for inspection, it shall make a final decree of approval and allowance, and shall, at the same time, order the executor or administrator to make distribution of the property in his hands. ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Discharge of representative.

1. In general.

Executor should be surcharged in his final account with sum which he paid out of funds of estate in settlement of just claims against estate, which were required by law to be duly probated but which were not probated within six-month period after publication of first notice by executor to creditors of estate, as such expenditures are without authority of law unless claims had been probated. Oberst v. Mullens, 43 So. 2d 560 (Miss. 1949).

Liability of surety may not be fixed in proceeding for final accounting by executor. Walton v. Walton's Estate, 143 Miss. 666, 109 So. 707, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 306 (Miss. 1926).

Surviving partner administering partnership estate properly allowed credit in his final account for payment of partnership debt out of his individual funds. Byrd v. King, 120 Miss. 435, 82 So. 312, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 104 (Miss. 1919).

Decree directing distribution to heirs does not affect right to payment of probated claims; fact claimant was administrator who had filed his final account immaterial. Oliver v. Smith, 94 Miss. 879, 49 So. 1, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 1909).

Until an executor has finally accounted the statute of limitations does not run in his favor against a legatee even where under the will he was to own the entire estate as long as he remained single, and the legatee's right to the legacy accrued only upon his subsequent marriage. Edwards v. Kelly, 83 Miss. 144, 35 So. 418, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1903).

An administrator is not chargeable with property of which he had no knowledge, and is bound only to exercise the care of a prudent man in the management of his own business. O'Brian Bros. v. Wilson, 82 Miss. 93, 33 So. 946 (Miss. 1903).

2. Discharge of representative.

Where a decree made the discharge of the administrator of a decedent's estate conditioned on the administrator's filing of vouchers showing the distribution of all funds, payments of all debts, and all other expenses, and the administrator had not filed such vouchers and there was no showing that there had been a waiver of the filing of the vouchers with the consent and approval of the chancellor who issued the decree, the administrator had authority to act in an administrative capacity for all the heirs of the decedent and to institute a suit on a note against the defendant after the entry of the decree. Twilley v. McLain, 233 So. 2d 794, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1675 (Miss. 1970).

§ 91-7-299. Allowance to executor or administrator.

On the final settlement the court shall make allowance to the executor or administrator for the property or the estate which has been lost, or has perished or decreased in value, without his fault; and profit shall not be allowed him in consequence of increase. The court shall allow to an executor or administrator, as compensation for his trouble, either in partial or final settlements, such sum as the court deems proper considering the value and worth of the estate and considering the extent or degree of difficulty of the duties discharged by the executor or administrator; in addition to which the court may allow him his necessary expenses, including a reasonable attorney's fee, to be assessed out of the estate, in an amount to be determined by the court.

4. Continuing a business.
5. Executor, administrator, or guardian acting as attorney.
6. Allowance for necessary expenses.
7. Propriety of particular awards.
8. Miscellaneous.

1. In general.

Under this section [Code 1942, § 642] the executors are entitled to an allowance of compensation, which should be fixed within the limits of the statute on the gross personal estate actually accounted for by the executors in good faith. Schwander v. Rubel, 221 Miss. 875, 75 So. 2d 45, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 603 (Miss. 1954).

Acceptance by an executor or trustee of an appointment under a will, whether under a stated compensation or where none is provided, except where a statute fixes it, is conclusive of any right to an increased compensation. Barry v. Barry, 198 Miss. 677, 21 So. 2d 922, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1945).

An executor or trustee cannot accept his appointment and reject the condition as to compensation upon which it is made. Barry v. Barry, 198 Miss. 677, 21 So. 2d 922, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1945).

In fixing amount of compensation under this section [Code 1942, § 642], there are numerous elements to be considered, such as: the mechanical work of making out the reports and of collecting the money and of disbursing it; the skill, responsibility, and amount involved; skillful, prompt and efficient service in the speedy disposition of winding up and settling the estate, responsibility and skill being important elements. Ralston v. Bank of Clarksdale, 188 Miss. 345, 194 So. 923, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 1940).

Surviving partner not entitled to compensation for administering partnership estate, unless authorized by statute, partnership agreement, or some other valid understanding. Byrd v. King, 120 Miss. 435, 82 So. 312, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 104 (Miss. 1919).

2. Court's discretion.

The supreme court will not interfere with the chancery court's exercise of discretion in regard to the allowance of compensation for administrator's fees within the limits prescribed by this section [Code 1942, § 642], except in cases of its manifest and flagrant abuse. Bryan v. Quinn, 233 Miss. 366, 102 So. 2d 124, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1958).

The matter of the allowance of fees to executors and administrators for services rendered in the administration of an estate rests in the sound discretion of the chancery court, there being a minimum allowance of not less than one per cent and the maximum amount of seven per cent. Ralston v. Bank of Clarksdale, 188 Miss. 345, 194 So. 923, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 1940).

Unless the record discloses an abuse of discretion vested in the chancery court, the supreme court will not disturb the chancellor's action in fixing administrator's fees within the limits provided by this section [Code 1942, § 642]. Ralston v. Bank of Clarksdale, 188 Miss. 345, 194 So. 923, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 1940).

3. Compensation fixed by will.

Executor accepting appointment under will which fixes executor's compensation is entitled to no other compensation. Vicksburg Public Library v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 168 Miss. 88, 150 So. 755, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 183 (Miss. 1933).

Where will fixes executor's compensation, this section [Code 1942, § 642] does not apply. Vicksburg Public Library v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 168 Miss. 88, 150 So. 755, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 183 (Miss. 1933).

Where will appointed same corporation as executor and trustee, directed that "executor" be paid certain percentage of proceeds from sale of realty, and, for its services as "trustee," certain percentage of trust fund, and used words "executor" and "trustee" interchangeably, corporation held not entitled to executor's statutory compensation as to personal estate administered. Vicksburg Public Library v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 168 Miss. 88, 150 So. 755, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 183 (Miss. 1933).

4. Continuing a business.

Without authority from the chancery court to continue the business of a testator, the estate is not liable to an executor for his services upon any basis of quantum meruit. Barry v. Barry, 198 Miss. 677, 21 So. 2d 922, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1945).

In administering estates of decedents, operation of a mercantile business should not be made alluring to administrators by allowance of salaries or exorbitant commissions, estates being administered for benefit of parties in interest, creditors, and distributees. Crescent Furniture & Mattress Co. v. Morgan, 178 Miss. 824, 173 So. 290, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1937).

Administrator was not entitled to salary for conducting intestate's business in view of statute fixing compensation at not less than one or more than seven per cent of estate and necessary expenses. Crescent Furniture & Mattress Co. v. Morgan, 178 Miss. 824, 173 So. 290, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1937).

5. Executor, administrator, or guardian acting as attorney.

Where an executor, administrator, or guardian also acts as attorney for the estate, there is no potential for double compensation, at least in the circumstance where the fiduciary fully itemizes his services in order to show the extent and degree of difficulty of his work and any separate legal work is separately itemized. Thomas v. Evans (In re Estate of Thomas), 740 So. 2d 332, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 117 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

There is no prohibition in the statute that would prevent a fiduciary who is also an attorney from petitioning for some part of his itemized services to be paid under this section, where his right to compensation would not necessarily be commensurate with prevailing legal fees; nor is there a prohibition for that same fiduciary, as to those separately identified services that were unquestionably performed in his capacity as an attorney, seeking compensation under § 91-7-281, in lieu of being paid for those particular services under this section. Thomas v. Evans (In re Estate of Thomas), 740 So. 2d 332, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 117 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

6. Allowance for necessary expenses.

Where heirs to an estate were unable to agree among themselves as to being appraisers and later agreed on disinterested parties to appraise the estate, the chancellor correctly allowed the administrator reimbursement of allowance of appraiser's fees in amount of $5 each, to two appraisers. Hughes v. Box, 224 Miss. 513, 81 So. 2d 242, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1955).

Where at a sale of personal property an administrator employed an auctioneer and a bookkeeper and allowed them a total of $75 on the ground that their services were necessary and were to the best interests of the estate, the expense was properly allowed. Hughes v. Box, 224 Miss. 513, 81 So. 2d 242, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1955).

Where in the course of administration of an estate the heirs petitioned for sale of cotton gin property owned by decedent, and the court appointed an administrator as a special commissioner to make the sale and the administrator obtained allowances for services of a surveyor, auctioneer and bookkeeper, the total amount of these expenses being $114, and the cotton gin property brought $53,000 at a sale which far exceeded its appraised value, these items of expense were properly allowed to the administrator. Hughes v. Box, 224 Miss. 513, 81 So. 2d 242, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1955).

The allowance by the chancellor of payment by the administrator of a liberal commission to a broker for private sale of cattle was sustained hesitantly where the administrator was paid the maximum of seven per cent of the funds coming into his hands. Dabbs v. Fisher, 27 So. 2d 342 (Miss. 1946).

7. Propriety of particular awards.

Attorney fees granted to an executor's attorney were not excessive because the fees were reasonable and not out of line with the fees claimed by the trustee who challenged them. Carson Family Trust v. Carson (In re Estate of Carson), 986 So. 2d 1072, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 434 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

The chancery court properly denied executrix fees where the chancellor found that the estate was administered in a grossly negligent manner; in support of this finding of negligent administration, or maladministration, the chancellor cited the executrix's noncompliance with court orders that eventually culminated in her being found guilty of civil and criminal contempt. In re Estate of Collins v. Collins, 742 So. 2d 147, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 251 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

An administrator's fee, an attorney's fee, and accounting fees were excessive where (1) the $3.1 million estate was very simple, (2) the executor, attorney, and accountant had ready access to information which made their jobs considerably easier, and (3) the fees equated to approximately $1200 per hour for the administrator and attorney and $300 per hour for the accountant. Rich v. Moore (In re Estate of Johnson), 735 So. 2d 231, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 114 (Miss. 1999).

Absent maladministration, compensation for an executor of an estate with a gross value in excess of $229,000 should be awarded within the statutory guidelines, rather than at $1500 or 6/10 of one percent of the value of the estate. Scott v. Hollingsworth, 487 So. 2d 811, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2438 (Miss. 1986).

Where the decedent left an estate of the approximate value of $139,000, the allowance to the executrix of a fee of $5,000 was not a manifest and flagrant abuse of discretion by the chancellor. Bryan v. Quinn, 233 Miss. 366, 102 So. 2d 124, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 392 (Miss. 1958).

Allowance of $3,000 to executor as compensation for his services is not excessive when total assets of estate amounted to $48,126.43, total disbursements amounted to $42,109.05 and he was successful in making sale of 500 acres of land for sum of $36,000, which was $8,000 in excess of all prior offers. Oberst v. Mullens, 43 So. 2d 560 (Miss. 1949).

Allowance to administrator of $2,000 as his compensation for services rendered in an estate consisting of something over $65,000 did not indicate an abuse of discretion of the chancery court. Ralston v. Bank of Clarksdale, 188 Miss. 345, 194 So. 923, 1940 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 1940).

8. Miscellaneous.

Appellant's delay in closing the estate and his other indiscretions as executor, most notably his decision to borrow thousands of dollars from the estate without court approval, provided ample reason for the chancery court to refuse to reimburse appellant for his work as executor. Dodson v. Dodson (In re Estate of Dodson), 20 So. 3d 73, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Compensation allowed executor should not be reduced on ground that he did not comply with law as to payment of unprobated claims, when amounts expended by him without authority of law were restored by him to estate although claims were actually owed by testatrix and estate would have been liable had they been duly probated in time required by law. Oberst v. Mullens, 43 So. 2d 560 (Miss. 1949).

An executor who renders services to an estate beyond what his duties require and for which he had the right to employ another cannot receive additional compensation therefor, unless by agreement with the court or beneficiaries before he performed the service. Barry v. Barry, 198 Miss. 677, 21 So. 2d 922, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 239 (Miss. 1945).

Administrator was not entitled to commissions based upon that part of estate for which he did not account. Crescent Furniture & Mattress Co. v. Morgan, 178 Miss. 824, 173 So. 290, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1937).

Where it appeared that an executor intended to return his commission to the estate it was improper to treat his intention as a donation to a part of the distributees, as each was entitled to a share therein. Owens v. Owens' Estate, 84 Miss. 673, 37 So. 149, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1904).

§ 91-7-303. Distribution compelled.

Any person entitled to a distributive share of an intestate's estate, or to a legacy under a last will and testament, may, at any time after the expiration of six months from the grant of letters testamentary or of administration, petition the court therefor, setting forth his claim; and the administrator or executor and all persons interested as distributees or legatees shall be cited to appear. Upon return of summons executed or publication made, the court may order the administrator or executor to make the distribution or to pay the legacies according to the rights of the parties, as may be adjudged; but the administrator or executor shall not be compelled, before final settlement, to make distribution or to pay any legacy until bond, with sufficient sureties, be given by the distributee or legatee, conditioned to refund his proportionate part of any debts or demands that may afterwards appear against the estate, and the costs of recovering the same.

§ 91-7-305. Distribution of assets in kind to surviving spouse.

(1) Whenever under any last will and testament or trust indenture the executor, trustee, or other fiduciary is required to, or has an option to, satisfy a bequest, devise, or transfer in trust to or for the benefit of the surviving spouse of a decedent by a transfer of assets of the estate or trust in kind at the values as finally determined for federal estate tax purposes, the executor, trustee, or other fiduciary shall, in the absence of contrary provisions in such will or trust indenture, satisfy such bequest, devise, or transfer by the distribution of assets, including cash, fairly representative of the appreciation or depreciation in the value of all property available for distribution in satisfaction of such bequest, devise, or transfer.

(2) This section shall apply to wills of decedents dying before or after May 20, 1966, and to trust agreements executed before or after such date; provided, however, that this section shall not be applied so as to require repayment to the fiduciary of any distributions actually made prior to such date, nor to impose any obligation or liability upon the fiduciary by reason of distributions actually made prior to such date.

2. Applicability.

1. In general.

Chancellor did not err in dismissing a nephew's case against his uncles on the ground that his claim was time-barred pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 91-7-309 because if either the two-year statute of limitations under § 91-7-309 or the three-year statute of limitations for an action to set aside a deed based on fraud was applied, the nephew's claim was still time-barred; the statute of limitations began running against the nephew on November 26, 1999, his twenty-first birthday, but the nephew did not file his lawsuit until May 21, 2009, which was well outside of the statute of limitations. Walton v. Walton, 52 So. 3d 468, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 32 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

Decedent's grandson, who was not an heir at law, failed to set out in his complaint basic available information, such as the time of the alleged fraud on the part of the decedent's administrator; the allegation of fraud was not stated with the required particularity to overcome the two-year statute of limitations. McClendon v. Hudson (In re Estate of Hudson), 962 So. 2d 90, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 489 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a proceeding by a widow to reopen the estate of her deceased husband more than two years after entry of a final decree on the ground that the final account had never been filed and that the final decree was therefore a nullity, the trial court properly denied the petition where the transcript was a part of the record and it indicated that, although the final account had not be stamped "Filed" until three years later, there was no dispute that it had been presented to the court, that it had been a part of the record on presentation of same, and that the decree had been based upon said account and evidence heard for the approval thereof, and where there was no specific charge of fraud against the executor which would constitute a bar to the statute of limitations. Byrd v. Page, 384 So. 2d 1038, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 2015 (Miss. 1980).

The action of an administratrix of a decedent, attacking final decrees entered in her decedent's guardianship and in settlement of the decedent's deceased father's estate, claiming an interest in the after-acquired property of coheirs, was barred by the section [Code 1942, § 646] where no petition was filed to falsify the settlement of the two administrations within two years after the date of the decrees. Barrett v. Turner, 229 So. 2d 563, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1249 (Miss. 1969).

This provision does not apply to one entitled to participate in the distribution who was not made a party to the administration proceeding, where there was no statutory proceeding to determine heirs. Shepherd v. Townsend, 249 Miss. 383, 163 So. 2d 746, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1964).

Petition by war veteran's widow against administratrix and her bondsmen to review previous proceedings whereby administratrix distributed to various persons sums due to veteran under federal acts held not demurrable because distributees were not joined as parties, where money involved, under federal and state statutes, belonged to widow as sole distributee, and persons to whom administratrix distributed money were strangers to estate so far as widow's rights were concerned. Lewis v. Jefferson, 173 Miss. 657, 161 So. 669, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1935).

Since heirs under statute could challenge administrator's final steps until two years after final account was approved, judgment approving administrator's sale was interlocutory, and hence court at subsequent term could require administrator to charge himself with true value of merchandise sold and subsequently repurchased by administrator after fraudulently inducing widow not to bid. Rea v. Smith, 172 Miss. 238, 159 So. 845, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 132 (Miss. 1935).

Person interested in estate after dismissal of exception to account was without right to reopen, falsify, and surcharge account on same issue. Bright v. Bright, 156 Miss. 766, 126 So. 901, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 1930).

Where heir did not demand accounting, his heirs cannot do so after 30 years. Norris v. Burnett, 108 Miss. 407, 66 So. 332, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 174 (Miss. 1914).

2. Applicability.

Chancellor erred when he dismissed the contempt petition that the decedent's granddaughter filed in the decedent's conservatorship matter as her claims were not governed by the two-year statute of limitations as her claims were not premised on reopening or falsifying the conservator's final accounting; instead, the seven-year statute of limitations governed her contempt claim that the conservator disregarded the chancellor's order to transfer the balance of the decedent's account to the decedent's estate; and the granddaughter's remaining claims, including breach of the conservator's fiduciary duty and other claims related to opening the joint account, fell under the three-year "catch-all" statute of limitations. Fitzmaurice v. Vandevort (In re Margarette Smith), 237 So. 3d 852, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 447 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017), cert. denied, — So. 3d —, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 2018), cert. denied, 237 So. 3d 1268, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 120 (Miss. 2018).

§ 91-7-311. Bonds to be recorded; suits thereon.

All bonds required and given in the administration of estate, testate and intestate, and the bond or bonds of the county administrator shall be recorded in the office of the clerk of the chancery court of the county, in a book kept for that purpose, and may be put in suit by any person injured by a breach thereof, he being responsible for costs. Any such bond shall not be void upon the first recovery, but may be sued on from time to time until the whole penalty shall have been recovered. When the whole penalty shall be recovered, the chancery court shall apportion the recovery, according to the rights of parties.

§ 91-7-313. Suit for devastavit.

Parties interested in an estate as legatees, distributees, or creditors may, either jointly or severally, institute proceedings upon the bond of the executor or administrator or guardian for a devastavit against the principal and his surety without first having instituted suit against the executor or administrator or guardian to establish a devastavit. When any executor, administrator or guardian is a nonresident of, or shall absent himself from, or conceal himself within this state so that personal service of summons or citation or attachment cannot be made upon him, and such nonresident, absent or concealed executor, administrator, or guardian shall fail to file his accounts and make his settlements as required by law, or shall have unlawfully removed any of the property committed to his trust, or shall have been guilty of any misappropriation or devastavit, it shall be the duty of the court, on the motion of the clerk as elsewhere provided in this chapter, or on the motion of any party in interest, to proceed against the surety or sureties on the bond of said executor, administrator, or guardian, in respect to all of which matters the said surety or sureties shall be taken and held as principal. In proceeding as aforementioned, the default of the said executor, administrator, or guardian in failing to file and settle his accounts as required by law shall be taken as prima facie evidence that the said defaulter has misappropriated the money or property, or both, which may be disclosed by the inventory, appraisement, or by any other of the official papers in the case, or which may be shown by competent evidence outside of said record, to have come into the possession of said defaulter.

§ 91-7-315. New bond of executors and administrators may be required.

If the bond of an executor or an administrator, whether taken at the time of the grant of letters or afterwards, be insufficient, the court or chancellor or clerk may, on five days' notice to the executor or administrator, require him to give a new bond; and in default thereof the letters shall be revoked and administration de bonis non granted to some competent person. If such new bond be given, it shall be cumulative security and shall bind the obligors therein for past as well as future liabilities.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Certificate whereby defendant assumed liability for losses under administrator's bond arising out of acts committed after May 1, 1933, was not "new bond" so as to bind defendant under statute for past as well as future liability, but was merely written evidence of limited assumption of liability, and hence defendant was liable for amount wrongfully disbursed by administrator after May 1, 1933, but not for amounts wrongfully disbursed prior to that time. § 91-7-317. Relief of sureties and new bond.

A surety on any bond of an executor, administrator, county administrator, or any other administrator apprehending danger of loss because of his suretyship may petition the court, chancellor, or clerk to require the executor or administrator to give a new bond and that he may be discharged from further liability. The court, chancellor, or clerk, on five days' notice to the executor or administrator, shall grant such petition and require a new bond, within a reasonable time, to be prescribed. In case of refusal or failure to give such new bond, the executor or administrator shall be removed and administration de bonis non granted. The acts done by the executor or administrator, and all proceedings that may have been instituted against him, shall be treated and conducted by or against his successor, as in case of the death of an executor or administrator. If the executor or administrator shall give new bond as required, the original bond shall from that time cease to be operative in future, but not as to previous liabilities; and the effect of such new bond shall be to bind the obligors therein for past as well as future liabilities.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Under Miss. Code Section 91-7-321, court may "make such order for the safekeeping or secure investment of the fund as may be proper"; however, these funds are not public funds; rather they are private funds being held in trust for beneficiaries; as such, deposit into account of county treasury would not be appropriate. 1993 Miss. § 91-7-322. Payment of indebtedness or delivery of personal property of decedent to decedent's successor; affidavit of successor.

(1) Except as may be otherwise provided by Sections 81-5-63, 81-12-135, 81-12-137 and 91-7-323, at any time after thirty (30) days from the death of a decedent, any person indebted to the decedent or having possession of tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock, or chose in action belonging to the decedent shall make payment when due of the indebtedness or deliver the tangible personal property or an instrument evidencing a debt, obligation, stock, or chose in action to a person claiming to be the successor of the decedent, as defined herein, upon being presented an affidavit made by the successor stating:

(a) That the value of the entire estate of the decedent, wherever located, excluding all liens and encumbrances thereon, does not exceed Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00);

(b) That at least thirty (30) days have elapsed since the death of the decedent;

(c) That no application or petition for the appointment of a personal representative of the decedent is pending, nor has a personal representative of the decedent been appointed in any jurisdiction; and

(d) The facts of relationship establishing the affiant as a successor of the decedent.

(2) For the purposes of this section, "successor" means the decedent's spouse; or, if there is no surviving spouse of the decedent, then the adult with whom any minor children of the decedent are residing; or, if there is no surviving spouse or minor children of the decedent, then any adult child of the decedent; or, if there is no surviving spouse or children of the decedent, then either parent of the decedent.

(3) Any person who is the successor of the decedent, because the person is an adult with whom the minor children of the decedent are living, shall receive any property or payments of or for the decedent for the use and benefit of said children.

(4) The successor of a decedent, upon complying with the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, shall be empowered to negotiate, transfer ownership and exercise all other incidents of ownership with respect to the personal property and instruments described in subsection (1) of this section.

(5) Any person paying, delivering, transferring or issuing personal property or the evidence thereof pursuant to the provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall be discharged and released to the same extent as if such person had dealt with a personal representative of the decedent. Such person shall not be required to see to the proper application of the personal property or evidence thereof or to inquire into the truth of any statement in the affidavit. If any person to whom an affidavit is delivered, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, refuses to pay, deliver, transfer or issue any personal property or evidence thereof to the successor, such property or evidence thereof may be recovered or its payment, delivery, transfer or issuance compelled upon proof of the successor's right in a proceeding brought in chancery court for such purpose by or on behalf of the persons entitled thereto. Any person to whom payment, delivery, transfer or issuance is made shall be answerable and accountable to the personal representative of the estate, if any, or to any other person having a superior right.

§ 91-7-323. Wages due deceased employee.

When any person, male or female, shall die leaving wages, salary or other compensation due him, it shall be lawful for the debtor to pay said wages, salary or other compensation to the wife or husband, as the case may be, of said deceased creditor if he or she leaves a wife or husband, as the case may be, surviving him or her; and if he or she shall leave no wife or husband surviving him or her, then to his or her children if adults; and if he or she shall leave no children and no wife or husband surviving him or her, then to his or her mother; and if he or she shall leave no wife or husband or children or mother surviving him or her, then to his or her father; and if he or she shall leave no wife or children or husband or mother or father surviving him or her, then to his or her brothers and sisters if adults. If such creditor shall have left no wife, husband, children, nor brothers nor sisters, nor father nor mother surviving him or her, or if any of his or her children surviving him or her shall be minors, or if any of his or her brothers or sisters surviving him or her, entitled to inherit, shall be minors, then it shall be lawful for said debtor to pay said wages, salary or other compensation to the chancery clerk of the county in which said creditor resided at the time of his or her death, or of the county where he or she died.

§ 91-7-327. Duty of chancery clerk when wages paid to him.

Where such wages are paid to the chancery clerk as provided in Sections 91-7-323 and 91-7-325, it shall be the duty of the chancery clerk to pay that portion of the wages of such employee which may belong to the adult children or brothers and sisters of such deceased employe, and to report to the next term of the chancery court who are the minor brothers or sisters or children of said employe and how much is coming to each one of the heirs of said employe. Thereupon the chancery court shall enter an order upon the minutes of the court, directing the payment by the chancery clerk of the shares of such minor children or brothers and sisters of such deceased employe. In any case where the employer shall pay such wages to the chancery clerk, he shall be discharged from all further liability. For receiving and disbursing the wages which may be paid to him, the clerk shall receive the commissions allowed to administrators and executors for collecting and distributing moneys belonging to the estate of a decedent.

In this chapter:

(1) "Action," with respect to an act of a trustee, includes a failure to act.

(2) "Ascertainable standard" means a standard relating to an individual's health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of Section 2041(b)(1)(A) or 2514(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as in effect on July 1, 2014, or as later amended.

(3) "Beneficial interest" means a distribution interest or a remainder interest; provided, however, a beneficial interest specifically excludes a power of appointment or a power reserved by a settlor.

(4) "Beneficiary" means a person that:

(A) Has a present or future beneficial interest in a trust, vested or contingent; or

(B) In a capacity other than that of trustee, holds a power of appointment over trust property.

(5) "Beneficiary surrogate" means a person, including a trust protector or trust advisor, other than a trustee, designated by the settlor in the trust instrument or in a writing delivered to the trustee, or designated in a writing delivered to the trustee by a trust protector or trust advisor with power under the terms of the trust instrument to receive notices, information, and reports otherwise required to be provided to a beneficiary under Section 91-8-813(a) and (b), or to represent a beneficiary under Section 91-8-303(8).

(6) "Charitable trust" means a trust, or portion of a trust, created for a charitable purpose described in Section 91-8-405(a).

(7) "Conservator" means a person appointed by the court to administer the estate of a minor or adult individual pursuant to Section 93-13-251.

(8) "Directed trust" means a trust where through the terms of the trust, one or more persons are given the authority to direct or consent to a fiduciary's actual or proposed investment decision, distribution decision, or any other decision of the fiduciary.

(9) "Distribution interest" means:

(A) An interest, other than a remainder interest, held by an eligible distributee or permissible distributee under a trust and may be a current distribution interest or a future distribution interest;

(B) A distribution interest is classified as either a mandatory interest, a support interest or a discretionary interest; and although not the exclusive means to create each such respective distribution interest, absent clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, use of the example language accompanying the following definitions of each such respective distribution interest results in the indicated classification of distribution interest:

(i) A mandatory interest means a distribution interest in which the timing of any distribution must occur within one (1) year from the date the right to the distribution arises and the trustee has no discretion in determining whether a distribution shall be made or the amount of such distribution; example distribution language indicating a mandatory interest includes, but is not limited to:

a. All income shall be distributed to a named beneficiary; or

b. One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000.00) a year shall be distributed to a named beneficiary;

(ii) A support interest means a distribution interest that is not a mandatory interest but still contains mandatory language such as "shall make distributions" and is coupled with a standard capable of judicial interpretation; example distribution language indicating a support interest includes, but is not limited to:

a. The trustee shall make distributions for health, education, maintenance, and support;

b. Notwithstanding the distribution language used, if a trust instrument containing such distribution language specifically provides that the trustee exercise discretion in a reasonable manner with regard to a discretionary interest, then notwithstanding any other provision of this subparagraph defining distribution interests, the distribution interest shall be classified as a support interest;

(iii) A discretionary interest means any interest that is not a mandatory or a support interest and is any distribution interest where a trustee has any discretion to make or withhold a distribution; example distribution language indicating a discretionary interest includes, but is not limited to:

a. The trustee may, in the trustee's sole and absolute discretion, make distributions for health, education, maintenance, and support;

b. The trustee, in the trustee's sole and absolute discretion, shall make distributions for health, education, maintenance, and support;

c. The trustee may make distributions for health, education, maintenance, and support;

d. The trustee shall make distributions for health, education, maintenance, and support; however, the trustee may exclude any of the beneficiaries or may make unequal distributions among them; or

e. The trustee may make distributions for health, education, maintenance, support, comfort, and general welfare;

f. A discretionary interest may also be evidenced by:

1. Permissive distribution language such as "may make distributions";

2. Mandatory distribution language that is negated by the discretionary distribution language contained in the trust such as "the trustee shall make distributions in the trustee's sole and absolute discretion";

g. An interest that includes mandatory distribution language such as "shall" but is subsequently qualified by discretionary distribution language shall be classified as a discretionary interest and not as a support or a mandatory interest;

(C)(i) To the extent a trust contains distribution language indicating the existence of any combination of a mandatory, support and discretionary interest, that combined interest of the trust shall be divided and treated separately as follows:

a. The trust shall be a mandatory interest only to the extent of the mandatory distribution language;

b. The trust shall be a support interest only to the extent of such support distribution language; and

c. The remaining trust property shall be held as a discretionary interest;

(ii) For purposes of this subparagraph (C), a support interest that includes mandatory distribution language such as "shall" but is subsequently qualified by discretionary distribution language, shall be classified as a discretionary interest and not as a support interest.

(10) "Environmental law" means a federal, state, or local law, rule, regulation, or ordinance relating to protection of the environment.

(11) "Excluded fiduciary" means any trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector to the extent that, under the terms of a trust:

(A) The trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector is excluded from exercising a power, or is relieved of a duty; and

(B) The power or duty is granted or reserved to another person.

(12) "Fiduciary" means:

(A) A trustee, conservator, guardian, agent under any agency agreement or other instrument, an executor, personal representative or administrator of a decedent's estate, or any other party, including a trust advisor or a trust protector, who is acting in a fiduciary capacity for any person, trust, or estate;

(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), an agency agreement includes, but is not limited to, any agreement under which any delegation is made, either pursuant to Section 91-8-807 or by anyone holding a power or duty pursuant to Article 12;

(C) For purposes of the definition of fiduciary in Section 91-8-103, fiduciary does not mean any person who is an excluded fiduciary as such is defined in Section 91-8-103.

(13) "Guardian" means a person appointed by the court pursuant to Section 93-13-13 or a parent to make decisions regarding the support, care, education, health, and welfare of a minor or adult individual. The term does not include a guardian ad litem.

(14) "Interests of the beneficiaries" means the beneficial interests provided in the terms of the trust.

(15) "Internal Revenue Code" means the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as in effect on July 1, 2014, or as later amended.

(16) "Jurisdiction," with respect to a geographic area, includes a state or country.

(17) "Person" means an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, limited liability company, association, joint venture, government; governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality; public corporation, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(18) "Power of appointment" means:

(A) An inter vivos or testamentary power to direct the disposition of trust property, other than a distribution decision made by a trustee or other fiduciary to a beneficiary;

(B) Powers of appointment are held by the person to whom such power has been given, and not by a settlor in that person's capacity as settlor.

(19) "Power of withdrawal" means a presently exercisable general power of appointment other than a power: (A) exercisable by a trustee and limited by an ascertainable standard; or (B) exercisable by another person only upon consent of the trustee or a person holding an adverse interest.

(20) "Property" means anything that may be the subject of ownership, whether real or personal, legal or equitable, or any interest therein.

(21) "Qualified beneficiary" means a beneficiary who, on the date the beneficiary's qualification is determined:

(A) Is a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal;

(B) Would be a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal if the interests of the distributees described in subparagraph (A) terminated on that date without causing the trust to terminate; or

(C) Would be a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal if the trust terminated on that date.

(22) "Remainder interest" means an interest under which a trust beneficiary will receive property held by a trust outright at some time during the future.

(23) "Reserved power" means a power held by a settlor.

(24) "Revocable," as applied to a trust, means revocable by the settlor without the consent of the trustee or a person holding an adverse interest.

(25) "Settlor" means a person, including a testator, who creates, or contributes property to, a trust. If more than one (1) person creates or contributes property to a trust, each person is a settlor of the portion of the trust property attributable to that person's contribution except to the extent another person has the power to revoke or withdraw that portion.

(26) "Spendthrift provision" means a term of a trust which restrains both voluntary and involuntary transfer of a beneficiary's interest.

(27) "State" means a state of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, or any territory or insular possession subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. The term includes an Indian tribe or band recognized by federal law or formally acknowledged by a state.

(28) "Successors in interest" means the beneficiaries under the settlor's will, if the settlor has a will, or in the absence of an effective will provision, the settlor's heirs at law.

(29) "Terms of a trust" means the manifestation of the settlor's intent regarding a trust's provisions as expressed in the trust instrument or as may be established by other evidence that would be admissible in a judicial proceeding.

(30) "Trust advisor" means any person described in Section 91-8-1201(a).

(31) "Trust instrument" means an instrument executed by the settlor that contains terms of the trust, including any amendments thereto.

(32) "Trustee" includes an original, additional, and successor trustee, and a cotrustee.

(33) "Trust protector" means any person described in Section 91-8-1201(a).

§ 91-8-104. Knowledge.

(a) Subject to subsection (b), a person has knowledge of a fact if the person:

(1) Has actual knowledge of it;

(2) Has received a notice or notification of it; or

(3) From all the facts and circumstances known to the person at the time in question, has reason to know it.

(b) An organization that conducts activities through employees has notice or knowledge of a fact involving a trust only from the time the information was received by an employee having responsibility to act for the trust, or would have been brought to the employee's attention if the organization had exercised reasonable diligence. An organization exercises reasonable diligence if it maintains reasonable routines for communicating significant information to the employee having responsibility to act for the trust and there is reasonable compliance with the routines. Reasonable diligence does not require an employee of the organization to communicate information unless the communication is part of the individual's regular duties or the individual knows a matter involving the trust would be materially affected by the information.

§ 91-8-105. Default and mandatory rules.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in the terms of the trust, this chapter governs the duties and powers of a trustee or any other fiduciary under this chapter, relations among trustees and such other fiduciaries, and the rights and interests of a beneficiary. The terms of a trust may expand, restrict, eliminate, or otherwise vary the duties and powers of a trustee, any such other fiduciary, relations among any of them, and the rights and interests of a beneficiary; however, nothing contained in this subsection shall be construed to override or nullify the provisions of subsection (b). The rule of statutory construction that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be strictly construed shall have no application to this section. Except as restricted by subsection (b), pursuant to this section, courts shall give maximum effect to the principal of freedom of disposition and to the enforceability of trust instruments.

(b) The terms of a trust prevail over any provision of this chapter except:

(1) The requirements for creating a trust;

(2) The duty of a trustee to act in good faith in accordance with the terms and purposes of the trust and the interests of the beneficiaries;

(3) The requirement that a trust and its terms be for the benefit of its beneficiaries as the interests of such beneficiaries are defined under the terms of the trust, and that the trust have a purpose that is lawful and possible to achieve;

(4) The power of the court to modify or terminate a trust under Sections 91-8-410 through 91-8-416;

(5) The effect of a spendthrift provision and the rights of certain creditors and assignees to reach a trust as provided in the Family Trust Preservation Act, Section 91-9-501 et seq.;

(6) The power of the court under Section 91-8-702 to require, dispense with, or modify or terminate a bond;

(7) The power of the court under Section 91-8-708(b) to adjust a trustee's compensation specified in the terms of the trust which is unreasonably low or high;

(8) Subject to subsection (d), the duty under Section 91-8-813(b) to notify beneficiaries of an irrevocable trust (including anyone who holds a power of appointment) who have attained twenty-five (25) years of age that the trust has been established as set forth in that Section 91-8-813(b);

(9) Subject to subsection (d), the duty under Section 91-8-813(a)(1) and (2) to keep the beneficiaries (including anyone who holds a power of appointment) informed and to respond to the request of a beneficiary of an irrevocable trust for trustee's reports and other information reasonably related to the administration of the trust;

(10) The effect of an exculpatory term under Section 91-8-1008;

(11) The rights under Sections 91-8-1010 through 91-8-1013 of a person other than a trustee or beneficiary;

(12) Periods of limitation for commencing a judicial proceeding;

(13) The power of the court to take such action and exercise such jurisdiction as may be necessary in the interests of justice; and

(14) The subject-matter jurisdiction of the court and venue for commencing a proceeding as provided in Sections 91-8-203 and 91-8-204.

(c) Any purpose enunciated as a material purpose of a trust in that trust's trust instrument shall be treated as a material purpose of that trust for all purposes of this chapter.

(d) Notwithstanding subsection (b)(8) and (9) of this section, the duties of a trustee to give notice, information and reports under Section 91-8-813(a) and (b) may be waived or modified in the trust instrument or by the settlor of the trust, or a trust protector or trust advisor that holds the power to so direct, directs otherwise in a writing delivered to the trustee in any of the following ways:

(1) By waiving or modifying such duties as to all qualified beneficiaries during the lifetime of the settlor or the settlor's spouse;

(2) By specifying a different age at which a beneficiary or class of beneficiaries must be notified under Section 91-8-813(b); or

(3) With respect to one or more of the beneficiaries, by designating a beneficiary surrogate to receive such notice, information and reports who will act in good faith to protect the interests of the beneficiary or beneficiaries.

1. Accounting.
In light of Miss. Code Ann. § 91-8-105(a), a trustee of an educational trust did not have to agree to an accounting, and the chancery court could not compel it unless there was some evidence of mismanagement or fraud. While the accounting was not as thorough as it could be, it was sufficient to show that the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in ratifying it. Fuller v. Kelly (In re Fuller), 203 So. 3d 1147, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 733 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

§ 91-8-106. Common law of trusts; principles of equity.

The common law of trusts and principles of equity supplement this chapter, except to the extent modified by this chapter or another statute of this state.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 6, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-107. Governing law.

(a) The validity, construction and administration of a trust are determined by the law of the jurisdiction designated in the terms of the trust instrument.

(b) In the absence of a controlling designation in the terms of the trust, the laws of the jurisdiction where the trust was executed determine the validity of the trust, construction of the trust instrument and the laws of descent, while the laws of the principal place of administration determine the administration of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 7, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-108. Principal place of administration.

(a) Without precluding other means for establishing a sufficient connection with the designated jurisdiction, the terms of a trust designating the principal place of administration are valid and controlling if:

(1) A trustee's principal place of business is located in or a trustee is a resident of the designated jurisdiction;

(2) All or part of the administration occurs in the designated jurisdiction; administration includes, but is not limited to:

(A) Maintenance of some trust records physically in the designated jurisdiction;

(B) Wholly or partly preparing or arranging for the preparation, either on an exclusive or a nonexclusive basis, in the designated jurisdiction of an income tax return that must be filed for the trust; or

(3) Some or all of the trust assets are deposited in the designated jurisdiction or physical evidence of the assets is held in the designated jurisdiction and the trust is being administered by a person defined in subsection (a)(1). For purposes of this subsection (a)(3), "deposited in the designated jurisdiction," includes assets being held in any checking account, time deposit, certificate of deposit, brokerage account, trust company fiduciary account, or other similar account or deposit that is located in the designated jurisdiction.

(b) Except as otherwise expressly provided by the terms of a governing instrument specifically addressing the governing law for trust administration or by court order, the laws of this state shall govern the administration of a trust while the trust is administered in this state. Without precluding other means for establishing that a trust is administered in this state, if any of the activities described in subsection (a) occur in this state, the trust is administered in this state.

(c) A trustee shall administer the trust at a place appropriate to its purposes, its administration, and the interests of the beneficiaries; however, a trustee shall not be required, in the absence of a court order, to transfer the trust's principal place of administration to another state or to a jurisdiction outside the United States even though such other state or jurisdiction outside the United States could also be appropriate to its purposes, its administration, and the interests of the beneficiaries.

(d) Without precluding the right of the court to order, approve, or disapprove a transfer, the trustee may transfer the trust's principal place of administration to another state or to a jurisdiction outside the United States, if the transfer is to a place appropriate to the trust's purposes, its administration, and the interests of the beneficiaries.

(e) The trustee shall notify the qualified beneficiaries of a proposed transfer of a trust's principal place of administration to another state or to a jurisdiction outside the United States not less than sixty (60) days before initiating the transfer. The notice of proposed transfer must include:

(1) The name of the jurisdiction to which the principal place of administration is to be transferred;

(2) The address and telephone number at the new location at which the trustee can be contacted;

(3) An explanation of the reasons for the proposed transfer;

(4) The date on which the proposed transfer is anticipated to occur; and

(5) The date, not less than sixty (60) days after the giving of the notice, by which the qualified beneficiary must notify the trustee of an objection to the proposed transfer.

(f) The authority of a trustee under this section to transfer a trust's principal place of administration terminates if a majority of the qualified beneficiaries described in Section 91-8-103 notify the trustee of an objection to the proposed transfer on or before the date specified in the notice.

(g) In connection with a transfer of the trust's principal place of administration, the trustee may transfer some or all of the trust property to a successor trustee designated in the terms of the trust or appointed pursuant to Section 91-8-704.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 8, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-109. Methods and waiver of notice.

(a) Notice to a person under this chapter or the sending of a document to a person under this chapter must be accomplished in a manner reasonably suitable under the circumstances and likely to result in receipt of the notice or document. Permissible methods of notice or for sending a document include first-class mail, personal delivery, delivery to the person's last-known place of residence or place of business, or a properly directed electronic message.

(b) Notice otherwise required under this chapter or a document otherwise required to be sent under this chapter need not be provided to a person whose identity or location is unknown to and not reasonably ascertainable by the trustee.

(c) Notice under this chapter or the sending of a document under this chapter may be waived by the person to be notified or sent the document.

(d) Notice of a judicial proceeding must be given as provided in the applicable rules of civil procedure.

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 9, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-110. Others treated as qualified beneficiaries.

A charitable organization expressly designated to receive distributions under the terms of a charitable trust has the rights of a qualified beneficiary under this chapter if the charitable organization, on the date the charitable organization's qualification is being determined:

(1) Is a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal;

(2) Would be a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal if the interests of other distributees or permissible distributees then receiving or eligible to receive distributions terminated on that date without causing the trust to terminate; or

(3) Would be a distributee or permissible distributee of trust income or principal if the trust terminated on that date.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 10, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-111. Nonjudicial settlement agreements.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), the trustee and qualified beneficiaries may enter into a binding nonjudicial settlement agreement with respect to any matter involving a trust.

(b) A nonjudicial settlement agreement is valid only to the extent it does not violate a material purpose of the trust and includes terms and conditions that could be properly approved by the court under this chapter or other applicable law.

(c) Matters that may be resolved by a nonjudicial settlement agreement include:

(1) The interpretation or construction of the terms of the trust;

(2) The approval of a trustee's report or accounting;

(3) Direction to a trustee to refrain from performing a particular act or the grant to a trustee of any necessary or desirable power;

(4) The resignation or appointment of a trustee and the determination of a trustee's compensation;

(5) Transfer of a trust's principal place of administration;

(6) Liability of a trustee for an action relating to the trust;

(7) The extent or waiver of bond of a trustee;

(8) The governing law of the trust; and

(9) The criteria for distribution to a beneficiary where the trustee is given discretion.

(d) Any qualified beneficiary or trustee may request the court to approve a nonjudicial settlement agreement, to determine whether the representation as provided in Article 3 was adequate, and to determine whether the agreement contains terms and conditions the court could have properly approved.

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

Sec.
91-8-201. Role of court in administration of trust.
91-8-202. Jurisdiction over trustee and beneficiary.
91-8-203. Subject-matter jurisdiction.
91-8-204. Venue.
91-8-205. Judicial accountings and settlements.

§ 91-8-201. Role of court in administration of trust.

(a) The court may intervene in the administration of a trust to the extent its jurisdiction is invoked by an interested person or as provided by law.

(b) A trust is not subject to continuing judicial supervision unless ordered by the court.

(c) A judicial proceeding involving a trust may relate to any matter involving the trust's administration, including, but not limited to, a proceeding to:

(1) Request instructions;

(2) Determine the existence or nonexistence of any immunity, power, privilege, duty or right;

(3) Approve a nonjudicial settlement;

(4) Interpret or construe the terms of the trust;

(5) Determine the validity of a trust or of any of its terms;

(6) Approve a trustee's report or accounting or compel a trustee to report or account;

(7) Direct a trustee to refrain from performing a particular act or grant to a trustee any necessary or desirable power;

(8) Review the actions or approve the proposed actions of a trustee, including the exercise of a discretionary power;

(9) Accept the resignation of a trustee;

(10) Appoint or remove a trustee;

(11) Determine a trustee's compensation;

(12) Transfer a trust's principal place of administration or a trust's property to another jurisdiction;

(13) Determine the liability of a trustee for an action relating to the trust and compel redress of a breach of trust by any available remedy;

(14) Modify or terminate a trust;

(15) Combine trusts or divide a trust;

(16) Determine liability of a trust for debts of a beneficiary and living settlor;

(17) Determine liability of a trust for debts, expenses of administration, and statutory allowances chargeable against the estate of a deceased settlor;

(18) Determine the liability of a trust for claims, expenses and taxes in connection with the settlement of a trust that was revocable at the settlor's death; and

(19) Ascertain beneficiaries and determine to whom property will pass upon final or partial termination of a trust.

§ 91-8-202. Jurisdiction over trustee and beneficiary.

(a) By accepting the trusteeship of a trust having its principal place of administration in this state or by moving the principal place of administration to this state, the trustee submits personally to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state regarding any matter involving the trust.

(b) With respect to their interests in the trust, the beneficiaries of a trust having its principal place of administration in this state are subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state regarding any matter involving the trust. By accepting a distribution from such a trust, the recipient submits personally to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state regarding any matter involving the trust.

(c) This section does not preclude other methods of obtaining jurisdiction over a trustee, beneficiary, or other person receiving property from the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 14, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-203. Subject-matter jurisdiction.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), the chancery court has exclusive jurisdiction of proceedings in this state brought by a trustee or beneficiary concerning the administration of a trust.

(b) Any other court granted statutory equitable jurisdiction has concurrent jurisdiction with the chancery court in any proceedings in this state brought by a trustee or beneficiary concerning the administration of a trust.

(c) The chancery court has concurrent jurisdiction with other courts of this state in other proceedings involving a trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 15, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-204. Venue.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), venue for a judicial proceeding involving a trust is in the county of this state in which the trust's principal place of administration is or will be located and, if the trust is created by will and the estate is not yet closed, in the county in which the decedent's estate is being administered.

(b) If a trust has no trustee, venue for a judicial proceeding for the appointment of a trustee is in a county of this state in which a beneficiary resides, in a county in which any trust property is located, and if the trust is created by will, in the county in which the decedent's estate was or is being administered.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 16, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-205. Judicial accountings and settlements.

(a) A trustee may file an accounting of the trustee's administration of a trust in court at any time and seek a partial or final settlement thereof or, upon petition of an interested party, a court may order a trustee to render an accounting of the trustee's administration of a trust and require a partial or final settlement thereof. Notice of such judicial proceeding shall be provided to the trustee and each beneficiary, or representative thereof pursuant to Article 3, as provided by the applicable rules of civil procedure.

(b) A trust accounting must be a reasonably understandable report from the date of the last accounting or, if none, from the date upon which the trustee became accountable, or other such date the court may set, which provides reasonable detail of the transactions affecting the administration of the trust, and which adequately discloses the following information:

(1) The accounting must identify the trust, the trustee furnishing the accounting, and the time period covered by the accounting.

(2) The accounting must show all receipts and disbursements occurring during the accounting period. Gains and losses realized during the accounting period must also be shown.

(3) The accounting, to the extent feasible, must identify and value trust assets on hand at the close of the accounting period. For each asset or class of assets reasonably capable of valuation, the accounting shall contain two (2) values, (A) the asset acquisition value or carrying value, and (B) the estimated current value, if feasible. The accounting must identify each known noncontingent liability with an estimated current amount of the liability if known.

(4) To the extent feasible, the accounting must show the significant noncash transactions affecting the assets of the trust, including name changes in investment holdings, adjustments to carrying value, or stock splits.

(5) The accounting must reflect the allocation of receipts and disbursements between income and principal when the allocation affects the interest of any beneficiary of the trust.

(c) Any order or judgment of the court on such accounting and partial or final settlement shall be final and conclusive as to all matters occurring during the accounting period, and appeals therefrom shall and must be taken in the manner provided for from any other final judgment of the court.

91-8-304. Representation by person having substantially identical interest.
91-8-305. Appointment of representative.

§ 91-8-301. Representation: basic effect.

(a) Notice to a person who may represent and bind another person under this article has the same effect as if notice were given directly to the other person.

(b) The consent of a person who may represent and bind another person under this article is binding on the person represented unless the person represented objects to the representation before the consent would otherwise have become effective.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in Sections 91-8-411 and 91-8-602, a person who under this article may represent a settlor who lacks capacity may receive notice and give a binding consent on the settlor's behalf.

(d) A settlor may not represent and bind a beneficiary under this article with respect to the termination or modification of a trust under Section 91-8-411(a).

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 18, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-302. Representation by holder of power of appointment.

To the extent there is no material conflict of interest between the holder of a power of appointment and the persons represented with respect to the particular question or dispute, the holder may represent and bind persons whose interests, as permissible appointees, takers in default, or otherwise, are subject to the power.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 19, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-303. Representation by fiduciaries and parents.

To the extent there is no material conflict of interest between the representative and the person represented or among those being represented with respect to a particular question or dispute:

(1) A conservator or guardian may represent and bind the estate that the conservator or guardian controls;

(2) A conservator or guardian may represent and bind the ward if a conservator or guardian of the ward's estate has not been appointed;

(3) An agent having authority to act with respect to the particular question or dispute may represent and bind the principal;

(4) A trustee may represent and bind the beneficiaries of the trust;

(5) A personal representative of a decedent's estate may represent and bind persons interested in the estate;

(6) A parent may represent and bind the person's minor or unborn child if a conservator or guardian for the descendant has not been appointed;

(7) A grandparent may represent the grandparent's grandchild if that grandchild is not already represented by a parent under paragraph (6);

(8) A person designated by the settlor either in the trust instrument or in a writing delivered to the trustee, or designated in a writing delivered to the trustee by a trust protector or trust advisor with power under the terms of the trust instrument to represent the beneficiaries of the trust, may represent and bind the beneficiaries; and

(9) Any person acting in a fiduciary capacity shall exercise all rights and powers granted to a fiduciary under the Revised Uniform Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets Acts created under Chapter 23, Title 91.

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 20; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 3; Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 21, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

Amendment Notes —

The 2017 amendment added (9) and made related stylistic changes.

§ 91-8-304. Representation by person having substantially identical interest.

(a) Unless otherwise represented, a minor, incapacitated, or unborn individual, or a person whose identity or location is unknown and not reasonably ascertainable, may be represented by and bound by another having a substantially identical interest with respect to the particular question or dispute, but only to the extent there is no material conflict of interest between the representative and the person represented.

(b) Unless otherwise represented, whenever survivorship of another person is an express or implied condition of receiving property from a trust, the successor contingent remainder beneficiary may be represented and bound by the presumptive remainder beneficiary upon whose death the rights of the successor contingent remainder beneficiary depend, but only to the extent there is no material conflict of interest between the presumptive remainder beneficiary and the successor contingent remainder beneficiary.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 21, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-305. Appointment of representative.

(a) If the court determines that an interest is not represented under this article, or that the otherwise available representation might be inadequate, the court may appoint a guardian ad litem or other representative to receive notice, give consent, and otherwise represent, bind, and act on behalf of a minor, incapacitated, or unborn individual, or a person whose identity or location is unknown. A guardian ad litem or other representative may be appointed to represent several persons or interests.

(b) A guardian ad litem or other representative may act on behalf of the individual represented with respect to any matter arising under this chapter, whether or not a judicial proceeding concerning the trust is pending.

(c) In making decisions, a guardian ad litem or other representative may consider general benefit accruing to the living members of the individual's family.

§ 91-8-401. Methods of creating trust.

A trust may be created by:

(1) Transfer of property to another person as trustee or a transfer in the name of the trust during the settlor's lifetime or by will or other disposition taking effect upon the settlor's death;

(2) Declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds identifiable property as trustee;

(3) Exercise of a power of appointment in favor of a trustee;

(4) A court pursuant to its statutory or equitable powers; or

(5) By an agent or attorney-in-fact under a power of attorney that:

(A) Expressly grants authority to create the trust; or

(B) Grants the agent or attorney-in-fact the authority to act in the management and disposition of the principal's property that is as broad or comprehensive as the principal could exercise for himself or herself and that does not expressly exclude the authority to create a trust. An agent or attorney-in-fact may file a petition for the court to determine whether a power of attorney described in this section grants the agent or attorney-in-fact authority that is as broad or comprehensive as that which the principal could exercise for himself or herself.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 23; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 4, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-402. Requirements for creation.

(a) A trust is created only if:

(1) The settlor has capacity to create a trust;

(2) The settlor indicates an intention to create the trust;

(3) The trust has a definite beneficiary or is:

(A) A charitable trust;

(B) A trust for the care of an animal, as provided in Section 91-8-408; or

(C) A trust for a noncharitable purpose, as provided in Section 91-8-409;

(4) The trustee has duties to perform; and

(5) The same person is not the sole trustee and sole beneficiary.

(b) A beneficiary is definite if the beneficiary can be ascertained now or in the future, subject to any applicable rule against perpetuities.

(c) A power in a trustee to select a beneficiary from an indefinite class is valid. If the power is not exercised within a reasonable time, the power fails and the property subject to the power passes to the persons who would have taken the property had the power not been conferred.

(d) A settlor is deemed to have the capacity to create a trust if:

(1) The trust is created by an agent of the settlor under a power of attorney as described in Section 91-8-401(5); and

(2) The settlor had capacity to create a trust at the time the power of attorney was executed.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 24, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-403. Trusts created in other jurisdictions.

A trust not created by will is validly created if its creation complies with the law of the jurisdiction in which the trust instrument was executed, or the law of the jurisdiction in which, at the time of creation:

(1) The settlor was domiciled, had a place of abode, or was a national;

(2) A trustee was domiciled or had a place of business; or

(3) Any trust property was located.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 25, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-404. Trust purposes.

A trust may be created only to the extent its purposes are lawful and possible to achieve. A trust and its terms must be for the benefit of its beneficiaries as the interests of such beneficiaries are defined under the terms of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 26, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-405. Charitable purposes; enforcement.

(a) A charitable trust may be created for the relief of poverty, the advancement of education or religion, the promotion of health, governmental or municipal purposes, or other purposes the achievement of which is beneficial to the community.

(b) If the terms of a charitable trust do not indicate a particular charitable purpose or beneficiary, the court may select one or more charitable purposes or beneficiaries. The selection must be consistent with the settlor's intention to the extent it can be ascertained.

(c) The settlor of a charitable trust, among others, may maintain a proceeding to enforce the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 27, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-406. Creation of trust induced by fraud, duress, or undue influence.

A trust is void to the extent its creation was induced by fraud, duress, or undue influence.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 28, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-407. Evidence of oral trust; trust in land.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) and except as required by a statute other than this chapter, a trust need not be evidenced by a trust instrument, but the creation of an oral trust and its terms may be established only by clear and convincing evidence.

(b)(1) No trust of or in any real property can be created except by a written instrument signed by the party who declares or creates such trust (the "settlor"), or by his last will, in writing. Every writing declaring or creating a trust in real property, other than a last will, may be acknowledged and proved as other writing and filed for record with the clerk of the chancery court in which the real property, or part of it, is located, and the filing shall serve as constructive notice of the existence and terms of the trust from and after filing.

(2) In lieu of filing the trust instrument or other writing declaring or creating a trust in real property, there may be filed with the clerk of the chancery court in which the real property, or part of it, is located a memorandum of trust signed by the settlor, trustee, or successor trustee and acknowledged or proved as other writings and the filing of the memorandum of trust shall serve as constructive notice of the existence and terms of the trust from and after filing. The memorandum shall contain substantially all of the following information:

(A) The name of the trust;

(B) The street and mailing address of the office, and the name and street and mailing address and telephone number of the trustee;

(C) The name and street and mailing address and telephone number of the settlor of the trust;

(D) A legally sufficient description of all interests in real property owned by or conveyed to the trust;

(E) The anticipated date of termination of the trust or the event upon which the trust will be terminated; and

(F) The general powers granted to the trustee, which may be by reference to the statutory powers granted to the trustee under the terms of the trust instrument.

The memorandum may also contain the name and street and mailing address and telephone number of any successor trustee. The memorandum of trust may be filed with the clerk of the appropriate chancery court either before or after a deed of conveyance of real property to the trust or trustee, in his capacity as such. The memorandum need not comply with subparagraph (D) if filed before or contemporaneously with a conveyance of any real property to the trust or trustee in his capacity as such, and need not be amended upon a subsequent conveyance of real property to the trust or trustee in his capacity as such, so long as the deed of conveyance is recorded in the appropriate county, and the recording of the deed of conveyance to the trust or trustee, as the case may be, shall constitute compliance with subparagraph (D). In addition, the deed of conveyance may also serve as a memorandum of trust, or an amendment to the memorandum of trust, as the case may be, so long as the deed of conveyance contains the information required for a memorandum of trust as set forth in this subsection (b).

(3) The settlor may amend the memorandum if the trust to which it relates is subject to a power of amendment or revocation by the settlor; otherwise, only the then-serving trustee may amend the memorandum. The memorandum of amendment shall set forth the amendment to the original memorandum with particularity. The amended memorandum of trust may be made effective on a future date, which must be a date certain. The memorandum of amendment may be signed by the creator, trustee or successor trustee, as the case may be, and acknowledged or proved as other writings and filed for record with the clerk of the chancery court where the original memorandum is of record. The filing of the memorandum of amendment shall serve as constructive notice of the existence and terms of the amendment from and after filing.

(4) The provision of Sections 89-5-24 and 89-5-33 shall apply to any trust instrument, memorandum, or amendment that is to be recorded under this subsection (b).

(5) The provisions of this subsection (b) shall have no application to trusts of personal property, or to any trust arising or resulting by implication of law out of a conveyance of land. The failure to file a copy of the trust instrument, memorandum or deed of conveyance shall not affect the validity of the trust or the trust instrument.

(6) A certificate of trust containing the information set forth in Section 91-9-7 that was filed before July 1, 2014, shall be considered constructive notice of the existence and terms of the trust from and after its filing, and the filing of a memorandum of trust under this subsection (b) shall not be necessary.

(c)(1) All property originally brought into the trust or subsequently acquired by purchase or otherwise, on account of the trust, is trust property.

(2) Unless the contrary intention appears, property acquired with trust funds is trust property.

(3) Any estate in real property may be acquired in the trust name. Title so acquired can be conveyed in the trust name or by the trustees, as trustees of the trust.

(4) A conveyance to a trust in the trust name, though without words of inheritance, passes the entire interest in the property of the grantor unless the language of the conveyance reflects an intent to the contrary.

Joint Legislative Committee Note —

Pursuant to Section 1-1-109, the Joint Legislative Committee on Compilation, Revision and Publication of Legislation corrected a typographical error in (b)(6). The reference to "Section 91-8-407(b)" was changed to "this subsection (b)." The Joint Committee ratified the correction at its August 5, 2016, meeting.

Editor's Notes —

Section 91-9-7, referenced in this section, was included in former Article 1 of Chapter 9 and related to the filing of a certificate of trust agreement in lieu of an entire trust agreement. It was repealed by § 105 of Chapter 421, Laws of 2014, effective from and after July 1, 2014.

1. Constructive trust.
2. Express trust.
3. Resulting trust.

1. Constructive trust.

Trial court properly granted a church's motion for summary judgment because no express or implied trust existed between it and a Presbyterian denomination; no constructive trust was implied by law be-cause the church purchased the property at issue, and no evidence existed that the denomination invested any funds into the acquisition of any of the parcels of land. Presbytery of St. Andrew v. First Presbyterian Church PCUSA of Starkville, 240 So. 3d 399, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 163 (Miss. 2018).

2. Express trust.

Trial court properly granted a church's motion for summary judgment because no express or implied trust existed between it and a Presbyterian denomination; no traditional express trust nor any legally enforceable and separate traditional trust instrument existed or existed that would operate to vest a beneficial interest in and over the legally titled property of the church to the denomination because no reference existed in any deed to creation of a trust relationship. Presbytery of St. Andrew v. First Presbyterian Church PCUSA of Starkville, 240 So. 3d 399, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 163 (Miss. 2018).

3. Resulting trust.

Trial court properly granted a church's motion for summary judgment because no express or implied trust existed between it and a Presbyterian denomination; there was no evidence of a resulting trust because when the church was incorporation no intention to create a trust or create an express trust relationship existed, and the church opted out of a trust provision placed in the constitution when the denomination was formed. Presbytery of St. Andrew v. First Presbyterian Church PCUSA of Starkville, 240 So. 3d 399, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 163 (Miss. 2018).

§ 91-8-408. Trust for care of animal.

(a) A trust may be created to provide for the care of an animal alive during the settlor's lifetime. The trust terminates upon the death of the animal or, if the trust was created to provide for the care of more than one (1) animal alive during the settlor's lifetime, upon the death of the last surviving animal.

(b) A trust authorized by this section may be enforced by a person appointed in the terms of the trust or, if no person is so appointed, by a person appointed by the court. In addition, a person having a demonstrated interest in the welfare of the animal may request the court to appoint a person to enforce the trust or to remove a person appointed.

(c) Property of a trust authorized by this section may be applied only to its intended use, except to the extent the court determines that the value of the trust property exceeds the amount required for the intended use. Except as otherwise provided in the terms of the trust, property not required for the intended use must be distributed to the settlor, if then living, otherwise to the settlor's successors in interest.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 30, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-409. Noncharitable trust without ascertainable beneficiary.

Except as otherwise provided in Section 91-8-408, Section 41-43-51 or by another statute, the following rules apply:

(1) A trust may be created for a noncharitable purpose without a definite or definitely ascertainable beneficiary or for a noncharitable but otherwise valid purpose to be selected by the trustee. The trust may not be enforced for more than twenty-one (21) years;

(2) A trust authorized by this section may be enforced by a person appointed under the terms of the trust, or if no person is so appointed, by a person appointed by the court.

(3) Property of a trust authorized by this section may be applied only to its intended use, except to the extent the court determines that the value of the trust property exceeds the amount required for the intended use. Except as otherwise provided in the terms of the trust, property not required for the intended use must be distributed to the settlor, if then living, otherwise to the settlor's successors in interest.

§ 91-8-410. Modification or termination of trust; proceedings for approval or disapproval.

(a) In addition to the methods of termination prescribed by Sections 91-8-411 through 91-8-414, a trust terminates to the extent the trust is revoked or expires pursuant to its terms, no purpose of the trust remains to be achieved, or the purposes of the trust have become unlawful or impossible to achieve.

(b) A proceeding to approve or disapprove a proposed modification or termination under Sections 91-8-411 through 91-8-416, or trust combination or division under Section 91-8-417, may be commenced by a trustee or beneficiary. The settlor of a charitable trust may maintain a proceeding to modify the trust under Section 91-8-413.

(c) Nothing in this section or this chapter is intended to create or imply a duty for a trustee to make or seek approval of a modification, termination, combination or division, and a trustee is not liable for not making or seeking approval of a modification, termination, combination or division.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 32, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-411. Modification or termination of noncharitable irrevocable trust by consent.

(a) During the settlor's lifetime, a noncharitable irrevocable trust may be modified or terminated by the trustee upon consent of all qualified beneficiaries, even if the modification or termination is inconsistent with a material purpose of the trust if the settlor does not object to the proposed modification or termination. The trustee shall notify the settlor of the proposed modification or termination not less than sixty (60) days before initiating the modification or termination. The notice of modification or termination must include:

(1) An explanation of the reasons for the proposed modification or termination;

(2) The date on which the proposed modification or termination is anticipated to occur; and

(3) The date, not less than sixty (60) days after the giving of notice, by which the settlor must notify the trustee of an objection to the proposed modification or termination.

(b) Following the settlor's death, a noncharitable irrevocable trust may be terminated upon consent of all of the qualified beneficiaries if the court concludes that continuance of the trust is not necessary to achieve any material purpose of the trust. A noncharitable irrevocable trust may be modified upon consent of all of the qualified beneficiaries if the court concludes that modification is not inconsistent with a material purpose of the trust.

(c) Upon termination of a trust under subsection (a) or (b), the trustee shall distribute the trust property as agreed by the qualified beneficiaries.

(d) If not all of the qualified beneficiaries consent to a proposed modification or termination of the trust under subsection (a) or (b), the modification or termination may be approved by the court if the court is satisfied that:

(1) If all of the qualified beneficiaries had consented, the trust could have been modified or terminated under this section; and

(2) The interests of a qualified beneficiary who does not consent will be adequately protected.

(e) Solely for purposes of this section, the term "noncharitable irrevocable trust" refers to a trust that is not revocable by the settlor with respect to which:

(1) No federal or state income, gift, estate or inheritance tax charitable deduction was allowed upon transfers to the trust; and

(2) The value of all interests in the trust owned by charitable organizations does not exceed five percent (5%) of the value of the trust.

(f) Notwithstanding subsection (a), the trustee may seek court approval of a modification or termination.

§ 91-8-412. Modification or termination because of unanticipated circumstances or inability to administer trust effectively.

(a) The court may modify the administrative or dispositive terms of a trust or terminate the trust if, because of circumstances not anticipated by the settlor, modification or termination will further the purposes of the trust. To the extent practicable, the modification must be made in accordance with the settlor's probable intention.

(b) The court may modify the administrative terms of a trust if continuation of the trust on its existing terms would be impracticable or wasteful or impair the trust's administration.

(c) Upon termination of a trust under this section, the trustee shall distribute the trust property in a manner consistent with the purposes of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 34, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-413. Cy pres.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), if a particular charitable purpose becomes unlawful, impracticable, impossible to achieve, obsolete or ineffective:

(1) The trust does not fail, in whole or in part;

(2) The trust property does not revert to the settlor or the settlor's successors in interest; and

(3) The court may apply cy pres to modify or terminate the trust by directing that the trust property be applied or distributed, in whole or in part, in a manner that fulfills as nearly as possible the settlor's charitable intent and purposes.

(b) A provision in the terms of a charitable trust that would result in distribution of the trust property to a noncharitable beneficiary prevails over the power of the court under subsection (a) to apply cy pres to modify or terminate the trust only if, when the provision takes effect:

(1) The trust property is to revert to the settlor and the settlor is still living; or

(2) Fewer than twenty-one (21) years have elapsed since the date of the trust's creation.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 35, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-414. Modification or termination of uneconomic trust.

(a) After notice to the qualified beneficiaries, the trustee of a trust consisting of trust property having a total value less than One Hundred Fifty Thousand Dollars ($150,000.00) may terminate the trust if the trustee concludes that the value of the trust property is insufficient to justify the cost of administration.

(b) The court may modify or terminate a trust or remove the trustee and appoint a different trustee if it determines that the value of the trust property is insufficient to justify the cost of administration.

(c) Upon termination of a trust under this section, the trustee shall distribute the trust property to or for the benefit of the beneficiaries, in such shares as the trustee, or the court in a court proceeding, determines, after taking into account the interests of income and remainder beneficiaries so as to conform as nearly as possible to the intention of the settlor, but a trust that qualified for the marital deduction for tax purposes shall only be distributed to the spouse of the settlor for whom the trust was created.

(d) This section does not apply to an easement for conservation or preservation.

(e) This section shall not limit the right of a trustee, acting alone, to terminate a trust in accordance with applicable provisions of the governing instrument.

§ 91-8-415. Reformation to correct mistakes.

The court may reform the terms of a trust, even if unambiguous, to conform the terms to the settlor's intention if it is proved by clear and convincing evidence what the settlor's intention was and that the terms of the trust were affected by a mistake of fact or law, whether in expression or inducement.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 37, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-416. Modification to achieve settlor's tax objectives.

To achieve the settlor's tax objectives, the court may modify the terms of a trust in a manner that is not contrary to the settlor's probable intention. The court may provide that the modification has retroactive effect.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 38, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-417. Combination and division of trusts.

(a) After notice to the qualified beneficiaries, a trustee may combine two (2) or more trusts into a single trust or divide a trust into two (2) or more separate trusts, if the result does not impair the rights of any beneficiary or adversely affect achievement of the purposes of the trust. In addition to any other combination or division the result of which does not impair the rights of any beneficiary or adversely affect achievement of the purposes of the trust, a combination or division pursuant to subsection (d) of this section shall not be considered as impairing the rights of any beneficiary or adversely affecting the achievement of the purposes of the trust. If the trusts to be combined or divided have different trustees, the trustees may negotiate the terms of the combined or divided trusts, including which trusts will be the surviving trust or trusts, who will be the trustee or trustees of the surviving trust or trusts and any other matter relating to the operation of the surviving trust or trusts.

(b) In addition to combining two (2) or more trusts into a single trust or dividing a trust into two (2) or more separate trusts, a trustee, after notice to the qualified beneficiaries, may segregate by allocation to a separate account or trust a specific amount from, a portion of, or a specific asset included in the trust property of any trust to reflect a disclaimer, to reflect or result in differences in federal tax attributes, to satisfy any federal tax requirement, to make federal tax elections, to reduce potential generation-skipping transfer tax liability, or for any other tax planning purposes or other reasons.

(c) A separate trust created by severance or segregation must be treated as a separate trust for all purposes from the effective date in which the severance or segregation is effective. The effective date of the severance or segregation may be retroactive. In managing, investing, administering, and distributing the trust property of any separate account or trust and in making applicable tax elections, the trustee may consider the differences in federal tax attributes and all other factors the trustee believes pertinent and may make disproportionate distributions from the separate trusts or accounts created.

(d) A trust or account created by consolidation, severance, or segregation under this section shall not be considered as impairing the rights of a beneficiary if the trust is held on terms and conditions that are substantially equivalent to the terms of the trust before consolidation, severance, or segregation so that the aggregate interests of each beneficiary are substantially equivalent to the beneficiary's interests in the trust or trusts before consolidation, severance, or segregation. In determining whether a beneficiary's aggregate interests are substantially equivalent, the trustee shall consider the economic value of those interests to the extent they can be valued, considering actuarial factors as appropriate. If a beneficiary's interest cannot be valued with any reasonable degree of certainty because of the nature of the trust property, the terms of the trust, or other reasons, the trustee shall base the determination upon such other factors as are reasonable and appropriate under the facts and circumstances applicable to that particular trust, including the purposes of the trust. However, the terms of any trust before consolidation, severance or segregation which permit qualification of that trust for an applicable federal tax deduction, exclusion, election, exemption, or other special federal tax status must remain identical in the consolidated trust or in each of the separate trusts or accounts created by severance or segregation.

(e) A trustee who acts in good faith is not liable to any person for taking into consideration differences in federal tax attributes and other pertinent factors in administering trust property of any separate account or trust, in making tax elections, and making distributions pursuant to the terms of the separate trust.

(f) Income earned on a consolidated or severed or segregated amount, portion, or specific asset after the consolidation or severance is effective passes with that amount, portion or specific asset.

(g) This section applies to all trusts whenever created, whether before, on, or after July 1, 2014, and whether the trusts are inter vivos or testamentary, are created by the same or different instruments, by the same or different persons and without regard to where created or administered.

(h) This section does not limit the right of a trustee acting in accordance with the applicable provisions of the governing instrument to divide or consolidate trusts.

(i) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as granting to any trustee a general power of appointment over any trust not otherwise expressly granted in the trust instrument.

REVOCABLE TRUSTS.

Sec.
91-8-601. Capacity of settlor of revocable trust.
91-8-602. Revocation or amendment of revocable trust.
91-8-603. Settlor's powers; powers of withdrawal.
91-8-604. Limitation on action contesting validity of revocable trust; distribution of trust property.

§ 91-8-601. Capacity of settlor of revocable trust.

The capacity required to create, amend, revoke, or add property to a revocable trust, or to direct the actions of the trustee of a revocable trust, is the same as that required to make a will. To be effective as a post-death disposition of property transferred during the transferor's life or by the transferor's will to a trust of which the transferor is the settlor or deemed to be the settlor, neither a revocable nor an irrevocable trust existing on or executed after July 1, 2014, has to be executed with the formalities of a will.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 40, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-602. Revocation or amendment of revocable trust.

(a) Unless the terms of a trust expressly provide that the trust is irrevocable, the settlor may revoke or amend the trust. This subsection (a) does not apply to a trust created under an instrument executed before July 1, 2014.

(b) If a revocable trust is created or funded by more than one (1) settlor:

(1) To the extent the trust consists of community property, the trust may be revoked by either spouse acting alone but may be amended only by joint action of both spouses;

(2) To the extent the trust consists of property other than community property, each settlor may revoke or amend the trust with regard to the portion of the trust property attributable to that settlor's contribution;

(3) At the death of one (1) settlor, each surviving settlor shall have the right to revoke the trust as to the surviving settlor's portion of the trust as determined by the type of property in accordance with subsection (b) (1) or (2); and

(4) Upon the revocation or amendment of the trust by fewer than all of the settlors or upon the death of one (1) of the settlors, the trustee shall promptly notify the other settlors of the revocation, amendment or death.

(c) The settlor may revoke or amend a revocable trust:

(1) By substantial compliance with a method provided in the terms of the trust; or

(2) If the terms of the trust do not provide a method or the method provided in the terms is not expressly made exclusive, by:

(A) A later will or codicil that expressly refers to the trust or specifically devises property that would otherwise have passed according to the terms of the trust; or

(B) Any other method manifesting clear and convincing evidence of the settlor's intent; however, a written revocable trust may only be amended and revoked by a later written instrument delivered to the trustee.

(d) Upon revocation of a revocable trust, the trustee shall deliver the trust property as the settlor directs. However, with respect to community property under subsection (b) (1), the trustee shall deliver the property one-half (½) to each spouse unless the trust instrument specifically states otherwise.

(e) A settlor's powers with respect to revocation, amendment, or distribution of trust property may be exercised by an agent under a power of attorney only to the extent expressly authorized by the terms of the trust or the power.

(f) A conservator or guardian of the settlor may exercise a settlor's powers with respect to revocation, amendment, or distribution of trust property only with the approval of the court supervising the conservatorship or guardianship.

(g) A trustee who does not know that a trust has been revoked or amended is not liable to the settlor or settlor's successors in interest for distributions made and other actions taken on the assumption that the trust had not been amended or revoked.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 41, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-603. Settlor's powers; powers of withdrawal.

(a) While a trust is revocable rights of the beneficiaries are subject to the control of, and the duties of the trustee are owed exclusively to, the settlor.

(b) If a revocable trust has more than one (1) settlor, the duties of the trustee are owed to all of the settlors having capacity to revoke the trust.

(c) During the period the power may be exercised, the holder of a power of withdrawal has the rights of a settlor of a revocable trust under this section to the extent of the property subject to the power.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 42, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-604. Limitation on action contesting validity of revocable trust; distribution of trust property.

(a) A person may commence a judicial proceeding to contest the validity of all or part of the terms of a trust that was revocable at the settlor's death within the earlier of:

(1) Two (2) years after the settlor's death; or

(2) One hundred and twenty (120) days after the trustee sent the person a copy of the trust instrument and a notice informing the person of the trust's existence, of the trustee's name and address, and of the time allowed for commencing a proceeding.

(b) Upon the death of the settlor of a trust that was revocable at the settlor's death, the trustee may proceed to distribute the trust property in accordance with the terms of the trust. The trustee is subject to liability for doing so only if:

(1) The trustee knows of a pending judicial proceeding contesting the validity of all or part of the terms of the trust; or

(2) A potential contestant has notified the trustee of a possible judicial proceeding to contest the trust and a judicial proceeding is commenced within sixty (60) days after the contestant sent the notification.

(c) A beneficiary of a trust that is determined by a court proceeding to be invalid, in whole or in part, is liable to return to the court any distribution received for proper distribution to the extent that the invalidity applies to the distribution. If the beneficiary refuses to return the distribution after being ordered by the court, the beneficiary shall be liable for all costs incurred for recovery of the distribution.

91-8-714.	Directed trusts; resignation of fiduciary.
91-8-715.	Directed trusts; removal of fiduciary.

§ 91-8-701. Accepting or declining trusteeship.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), a person designated as trustee accepts the trusteeship:

(1) By substantially complying with a method of acceptance provided in the terms of the trust; or

(2) If the terms of the trust do not provide a method or the method provided in the terms is not expressly made exclusive, by accepting delivery of the trust property, exercising powers or performing duties as trustee, or otherwise indicating acceptance of the trusteeship.

(b) A person designated as trustee who has not yet accepted the trusteeship may reject the trusteeship. A designated trustee who does not accept the trusteeship within a reasonable time after knowing of the designation is deemed to have rejected the trusteeship.

(c) A person designated as trustee, without accepting the trusteeship, may:

(1) Act to preserve the trust property if, within a reasonable time after acting, the person sends a rejection of the trusteeship to the settlor or, if the settlor is dead or lacks capacity, to a qualified beneficiary; and

(2) Inspect or investigate trust property to determine potential liability under environmental or other law or for any other purpose.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 44, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-702. Trustee's bond.

(a) A trustee shall give bond to secure performance of the trustee's duties only if the court finds that a bond is needed to protect the interests of the beneficiaries or is required by the terms of the trust and the court has not dispensed with the requirement.

(b) The court may specify the amount of a bond, its liabilities, and whether sureties are necessary. The court may modify or terminate a bond at any time.

(c) A state or national bank, savings institution, or trust company authorized to exercise fiduciary powers and regulated by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Office of Thrift Supervision, the Mississippi Department of Banking and Consumer Finance, or equivalent state banking supervisors need not give bond, even if required by the terms of the trust.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 45, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-703. Cotrustees.

(a) Cotrustees who are unable to reach a unanimous decision after consultation among all the cotrustees may act by majority decision.

(b) If a vacancy occurs in a cotrusteeship, the remaining cotrustees may act for the trust.

(c) A cotrustee must participate in the performance of a trustee's function and consult with the other cotrustees unless the cotrustee is unavailable to perform the function because of absence, illness, disqualification under other law, or other temporary incapacity or the cotrustee has properly delegated the performance of the function to another trustee.

(d) If a cotrustee is unavailable to perform duties because of absence, illness, disqualification under other law, or other temporary incapacity, and prompt action is necessary to achieve the purposes of the trust or to avoid injury to the trust property, the remaining cotrustee or a majority of the remaining cotrustees may act for the trust.

(e) A trustee may delegate to a cotrustee the performance of a function other than a function that the terms of the trust instrument expressly require the trustees to perform jointly. Unless a delegation was irrevocable, a trustee may revoke a delegation previously made.

(f) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (g), a trustee who does not join in an action of another trustee is not liable for the action.

(g) Each trustee shall exercise reasonable care to:

(1) Prevent a cotrustee from committing a serious breach of trust; and

(2) Compel a cotrustee to redress a serious breach of trust.

(h) A dissenting trustee who joins in an action at the direction of the majority of the trustees and who notified any cotrustee of the dissent at or before the time of the action is not liable for the action unless the action is a serious breach of trust.

(i) A trustee, trust advisor and trust protector shall keep each cotrustee, trust advisor, trust protector and any other fiduciary reasonably informed about the administration of the trust, to the extent the trustee, trust advisor or trust protector has knowledge that each such cotrustee, trust advisor, trust protector or other fiduciary does not have knowledge of the trustee's, trust advisor's or trust protector's actions, or regarding other material information or the availability of such information, related to the administration of the trust that would be reasonably necessary for each cotrustee, trust advisor, trust protector or other fiduciary to perform his or her duties as a trustee, trust advisor, trust protector or other fiduciary of the trust.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 46; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 8, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-704. Vacancy in trusteeship; appointment of successor.

(a) A vacancy in a trusteeship occurs if:

(1) A person designated as trustee rejects the trusteeship;

(2) A person designated as trustee cannot be identified or does not exist;

(3) A trustee resigns;

(4) A trustee is disqualified or removed;

(5) A trustee dies; or

(6) A conservator or guardian is appointed for an individual serving as trustee.

(b) If one or more cotrustees remain in office, a vacancy in a trusteeship need not be filled. A vacancy in a trusteeship must be filled if the trust has no remaining trustee.

(c) A vacancy in a trusteeship of a noncharitable trust that is required to be filled must be filled in the following order of priority:

(1) By a person designated in the terms of the trust to act as successor trustee;

(2) By a person appointed by unanimous agreement of the qualified beneficiaries; or

(3) By a person appointed by the court.

(d) A vacancy in a trusteeship of a charitable trust that is required to be filled must be filled in the following order of priority:

(1) By a person designated in the terms of the trust to act as successor trustee;

(2) By a person selected by the unanimous agreement of the charitable organizations expressly designated to receive distributions under the terms of the trust if the Attorney General does not affirmatively object within thirty (30) days of receipt of notice of the person selected; or

(3) By a person appointed by the court.

(e) Whether or not a vacancy in a trusteeship exists or is required to be filled, the court may appoint an additional trustee or special fiduciary whenever the court considers the appointment necessary for the administration of the trust.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 47, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-705. Resignation of trustee.

(a) A trustee may resign:

(1) Upon at least thirty (30) days' notice to the qualified beneficiaries, the settlor, if living, and all cotrustees; or

(2) With the approval of the court.

(b) In approving a resignation, the court may issue orders and impose conditions reasonably necessary for the protection of the trust property.

(c) Any liability of a resigning trustee or of any sureties on the trustee's bond for acts or omissions of the trustee is not discharged or affected by the trustee's resignation.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 48, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-706. Removal of trustee.

(a) The settlor, a cotrustee, or a beneficiary may request the court to remove a trustee, or a trustee may be removed by the court on its own initiative.

(b) The court may remove a trustee if:

(1) The trustee has committed a serious breach of trust;

(2) Lack of cooperation among cotrustees substantially impairs the administration of the trust;

(3) Because of unfitness, unwillingness, or persistent failure of the trustee to administer the trust effectively, the court determines that removal of the trustee best serves the interests of the beneficiaries; or

(4) There has been a substantial change of circumstances or removal is requested by all of the qualified beneficiaries, the court finds that removal of the trustee best serves the interests of all of the beneficiaries and is not inconsistent with a material purpose of the trust, and a suitable cotrustee or successor trustee is available.

(c) Pending a final decision on a request to remove a trustee, or in lieu of or in addition to removing a trustee, the court may order such appropriate relief under Section 91-8-1001(b) as may be necessary to protect the trust property or the interests of the beneficiaries.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 49, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-707. Delivery of property by former trustee.

(a) Unless a cotrustee remains in office or the court otherwise orders, and until the trust property is delivered to a successor trustee or other person entitled to it, a trustee who has resigned or been removed has the duties of a trustee and the powers necessary to protect the trust property.

(b) A trustee who has resigned or been removed shall, within a reasonable time, deliver the trust property within the trustee's possession to the cotrustee, successor trustee, or other person entitled to it.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 50, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-708. Compensation of trustee, trust advisor and trust protector.

(a) If the terms of a trust do not specify the trustee's, trust advisor's, or trust protector's compensation, and if the settlor, if living, or otherwise a majority of the qualified beneficiaries as defined in Section 91-8-103, have not otherwise agreed with the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector, a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector is entitled to compensation that is reasonable under the circumstances.

(b) If the terms of a trust specify the trustee's, trust advisor's, or trust protector's compensation, the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector is entitled to be compensated as specified in the trust, but the court may allow more or less compensation if:

(1) The duties of the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector are substantially different from those contemplated when the trust was created; or

(2) The compensation specified by the terms of the trust would be unreasonably low or high.

(c) Factors for the court to consider in deciding upon a trustee's, trust advisor's, or trust protector's compensation shall include the size of the trust, the nature and number of the assets, the income produced, the time and responsibility required, the expertise required, any management or sale of real property or closely held business interests, any involvement in litigation to protect trust property, and other relevant factors.

(d) Subject to the court's authority as provided in subsection (b), regardless of its form of entity, the fees set forth in the published fee schedule of a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector that is regulated by the Mississippi Department of Banking and Consumer Finance, the equivalent regulatory agency of another state, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, or the Office of Thrift Supervision shall be presumed to be reasonable, unless otherwise provided by the terms of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 51, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-709. Reimbursement of expenses.

(a) A trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector is entitled to be reimbursed out of the trust property, with interest as appropriate, for:

(1) Expenses that were properly incurred in the administration of the trust, including the defense or prosecution of any action, whether successful or not, unless the trustee is determined to have willfully or wantonly committed a material breach of trust; and

(2) To the extent necessary to prevent unjust enrichment of the trust, expenses that were not properly incurred in the administration of the trust.

(b) An advance by the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector or by a person named in Section 91-8-701(c)(1) of money for the protection of the trust gives rise to a lien against trust property to secure reimbursement with reasonable interest.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 52, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-710. Directed trusts.

If the terms of the trust require a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector to follow the direction of a trust advisor or trust protector, and the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector acts in accordance with the direction, then the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector so directed shall be treated as an excluded fiduciary.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 53, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-711. Directed trusts; accepting or declining fiduciary appointment.

(a) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary other than a cotrustee, the cotrustee already being provided for in Section 91-8-701(a), may accept its appointment as the respective fiduciary in a like manner as provided for a trustee under Section 91-8-701(a).

(b) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary other than a cotrustee, the cotrustee already being provided for in Section 91-8-701(b), may reject its appointment as the respective fiduciary in a like manner as provided for a trustee under Section 91-8-701(b).

(c) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary other than a cotrustee, the cotrustee already being provided for in Section 91-8-701(c), may, without accepting its appointment as the respective fiduciary, carry out the appropriate activities relative to the respective fiduciary as are provided for a trustee under Section 91-8-701(c).

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 54, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-712. Directed trusts; fiduciary's bond.

(a) Section 91-8-702 applies to trust advisors, trust protectors, or other fiduciaries other than cotrustees, the cotrustees already being provided for in Section 91-8-702.

(b) When exercising its powers under this section, the court shall consider the powers, duties, and liabilities relative to the respective fiduciaries other than a cotrustee and whether any of the respective fiduciaries are excluded fiduciaries.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 55, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-713. Vacancy; directed trusts.

(a) Except as otherwise provided by the terms of the trust upon obtaining knowledge of a vacancy in the office of trust advisor or trust protector, the trustee shall be vested with any fiduciary power or duty that otherwise would be vested in the trustee but that by the terms of the trust was vested in the trust advisor or trust protector, until such time that the vacancy in the office of trust advisor or trust protector, as applicable, is filled.

(b) The vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as would a vacancy in trusteeship that is required to be filled, either as provided by Section 91-8-704(c) if the trust is a noncharitable trust, or as provided by Section 91-8-704(d) if the trust is a charitable trust. Section 91-8-704(e) shall also apply relative to trust advisors and trust protectors in the same manner as that subsection does to trustees and vacancies in trusteeship.

(c) Notwithstanding subsection (a), a trustee shall not be liable for failing to exercise or assume any power or duty held by a trust advisor or trust protector and conferred upon the trustee by subsection (a) for the one-hundred-twenty-day period immediately following the date the trustee obtains knowledge of the vacancy.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 56, eff from and after

§ 91-8-714. Directed trusts; resignation of fiduciary.

(a) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary other than a cotrustee, a cotrustee's resignation already being provided for in Section 91-8-705, may resign its appointment as the respective fiduciary in a like manner as provided for a trustee under Section 91-8-705.

(b) When exercising its powers under this section relative to resignation, the court shall consider the powers, duties, and liabilities relative to the respective fiduciaries other than a cotrustee and whether any of the respective fiduciaries are excluded fiduciaries.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 57, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-715. Directed trusts; removal of fiduciary.

(a) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary other than a cotrustee, a cotrustee's removal already being provided for in Section 91-8-706, may be removed as the respective fiduciary in a like manner as provided for a trustee under Section 91-8-706.

(b) When exercising its powers under this section relative to removal of the respective fiduciary, the court shall consider the powers, duties, and liabilities relative to the respective fiduciaries other than a cotrustee and whether any of the respective fiduciaries are excluded fiduciaries.

§ 91-8-801. Duty to administer trust.

Upon acceptance of a trusteeship, the trustee shall administer the trust until such time as the trust terminates or a successor trustee is appointed and all assets are delivered in good faith, in accordance with its terms and purposes and the interests of the beneficiaries, and in accordance with this chapter.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 59, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-802. Duty of loyalty.

(a) A trustee shall administer the trust solely in the interests of the beneficiaries.

(b) Subject to the rights of persons dealing with or assisting the trustee as provided in Section 91-8-1012 or as may otherwise be allowed under Mississippi law, a sale, encumbrance, or other transaction involving the investment or management of trust property entered into by the trustee for the trustee's own personal account or which is otherwise affected by a conflict between the trustee's fiduciary and personal interests is voidable by a beneficiary affected by the transaction unless:

(1) The transaction was authorized by the terms of the trust;

(2) The transaction was approved by the court;

(3) The beneficiary did not commence a judicial proceeding within the time allowed by Section 91-8-1005;

(4) The beneficiary consented to the trustee's conduct, ratified the transaction, or released the trustee in compliance with Section 91-8-1009; or

(5) The transaction involves a contract entered into or claim acquired by the trustee before the person became or contemplated becoming trustee.

(c) A sale, encumbrance, or other transaction involving the investment or management of trust property is presumed to be affected by a conflict between personal and fiduciary interests if it is entered into by the trustee with:

(1) The trustee's spouse;

(2) The trustee's descendants, siblings, parents, or their spouses;

(3) An agent or attorney of the trustee; or

(4) A corporation or other person or enterprise in which the trustee, or a person that owns a significant interest in the trustee, has an interest that might affect the trustee's best judgment.

(d) A transaction not concerning trust property in which the trustee engages in the trustee's individual capacity involves a conflict between personal and fiduciary interests if the transaction concerns an opportunity properly belonging to the trust.

(e) In addition to all other permissible investments and delegatable duties listed in this title, so long as they are fairly priced and in accordance with the interest of the beneficiaries and the interests of the fiduciary's appointment and otherwise comply with the Mississippi Uniform Prudent Investor Act or Article 12 of this chapter, a fiduciary may purchase, sell, hold or otherwise deal with an affiliate or an interest in an affiliated investment, as well as delegate to an affiliate or other agent associated with the fiduciary and, upon satisfaction of the conditions stated in subsection (g), the fiduciary may receive fiduciary compensation from the account at the same rate as the fiduciary would otherwise be entitled to be compensated. These activities shall occur without any presumption of a conflict between personal and fiduciary interests of the trustee or other fiduciary.

(f) As used in this section:

(1) "Affiliate" means any corporation or other entity that directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with the fiduciary.

(2) "Affiliated investment" means an investment for which the fiduciary or an affiliate of the fiduciary acts as adviser, administrator, distributor, placement agent, underwriter, broker or in any other capacity for which it receives or has received a fee or commission from the investment or an investment acquired or disposed of in a transaction for which the fiduciary or an affiliate of the fiduciary receives or has received a fee or commission. "Affiliated investment" also means an investment in an insurance contract purchased from an insurance agency owned by, or affiliated with, the fiduciary, or any of its affiliates.

(3) "Delegate to an affiliate or associated agent" means a proper delegation of any duty of the fiduciary to any person or entity that is affiliated with, or associated with, the fiduciary. The action of doing any of the above shall be known as a "delegation to an affiliate or associated agent."

(4) "Fee or commission" means compensation paid to a fiduciary or an affiliate thereof on account of its services to or on behalf of an investment.

(5) For purposes of this section, "fiduciary" means any fiduciary as defined in Section 91-8-103, as well as any other fiduciary.

(6) "Investment" shall mean any security as defined in Section 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933, any contract of sale of a commodity for future delivery within the meaning of Section 2(i) of the Commodity Exchange Act, or any other asset permitted for fiduciary accounts pursuant to the terms of the Mississippi Uniform Prudent Investor Act or by the terms of the governing instrument, including by way of illustration and not limitation: shares or interests in a public or private investment fund, including, but not limited to, a public or private investment fund organized as a limited partnership, limited liability company, statutory or common-law business trust, real estate investment trust, joint venture or other general or limited partnership, or an open-end or closed-end management type investment company or investment trust registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

(g) A fiduciary seeking compensation pursuant to subsection (e) shall, as is applicable relative to the fiduciary's particular appointment, disclose either: to those persons entitled to be kept informed about the administration of a trust under Section 91-8-813(a), subject to the provisions of Sections 91-8-813(d) and 91-8-105(d); to each principal in an agency relationship; or to all current recipients of statements of any other fiduciary account not described above; all fees or commissions paid or to be paid by the account, or received or to be received by an affiliate arising from such affiliated investment or delegation to an affiliate or associated agent. The disclosure required under this subsection (g) may be given either in a copy of the prospectus or any other disclosure document prepared for the affiliated investment under federal or state securities laws or in a written summary that includes all fees or commissions received or to be received by the fiduciary or any affiliate of the fiduciary and an explanation of the manner in which such fees or commissions are calculated, either as a percentage of the assets invested or by some other method. The disclosure shall be made at least annually unless there has been no increase in the rate at which fees or commissions are calculated since the most recent disclosure. Notwithstanding this subsection (g), no such disclosure is required if the governing instrument or a court order expressly authorizes the fiduciary to invest the fiduciary account in affiliated investments or to perform the delegation to an affiliate or associated agent.

(h) A fiduciary that has complied with subsection (g), whether by making the applicable disclosure or by relying on the terms of a governing instrument or court order, shall have full authority to administer an affiliated investment, including the authority to vote proxies thereon, without regard to the affiliation between the fiduciary and the investment or the fiduciary and delegatee, as the case may be.

(i) In voting shares of stock or in exercising powers of control over similar interests in other forms of enterprise, the trustee shall act in the best interests of the beneficiaries. If the trust is the sole owner of a corporation or other form of enterprise, the trustee shall elect or appoint directors or other managers who will manage the corporation or enterprise in the best interests of the beneficiaries.

(j) The following transactions, if fairly priced and in accordance with the interest of the beneficiaries and the purposes of the trust, are not presumed to be affected by a conflict between the trustee's personal and fiduciary interest if any investment made pursuant to the transaction otherwise complies with the Mississippi Prudent Investor Act:

(1) An agreement between a trustee and a beneficiary relating to the appointment or compensation of the trustee, or any of its affiliates;

(2) Payment of reasonable compensation to the trustee, or any of its affiliates;

(3) A transaction between a trust and another trust, decedent's estate, guardianship, or conservatorship of which the trustee is a fiduciary or in which a beneficiary has an interest;

(4) A deposit of trust money in a regulated financial-service institution operated by the trustee or an affiliate;

(5) An advance by the trustee of money for the protection of the trust;

(6) An investment by a trustee in securities of an investment company or investment trust to which the trustee, or its affiliates, provides services in a capacity other than as a trustee provided that any investment made pursuant to the transaction otherwise complies with the Mississippi Prudent Investor Act;

(7) The placing of securities transactions by a trustee through a securities broker that is part of the same company as the trustee, is owned by the trustee, or is affiliated with the trustee;

(8) Any loan from the trustee or its affiliate;

(9) An investment in an insurance contract purchased from an insurance agency owned by, or affiliated with the trustee, or any of its affiliates; or

(10) A delegation and any transaction made pursuant to the delegation from a trustee to an agent that is affiliated or associated with the trustee.

(k) The court may appoint a special fiduciary to make a decision with respect to any proposed transaction that might violate this section if entered into by the trustee.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Applicability.
Trustee's withdrawals from separate irrevocable trusts were done before the enactment of Mississippi Uniform Trust Code, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-8-101 to 91-8-1206. Provisions from that Code could not be applied retroactively to any acts made by the trustee prior to that date when the chancery court entered its amended final judgment finding that the trustee breached a fiduciary duty of loyalty to the other beneficiaries of the trusts. Cassibry v. Cassibry, 217 So. 3d 698, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 40 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

§ 91-8-803. Impartiality.

If a trust has two (2) or more beneficiaries, the trustee shall act impartially in investing, managing, and distributing the trust property, giving due regard to the beneficiaries' respective interests and the purposes of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 61, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-804. Prudent administration.

A trustee shall administer the trust as a prudent person would, by considering the purposes, terms, distributional requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 62, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-805. Costs of administration.

In administering a trust, the trustee may incur only costs that are reasonable in relation to the trust property, the purposes of the trust, and the skills of the trustee.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 63, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-806. Trustee's skills.

A trustee who has special skills or expertise, or is named trustee in reliance upon the trustee's representation that the trustee has special skills or expertise, shall use those special skills or expertise.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 64, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-807. Delegation by trustee.

(a) A trustee may delegate duties and powers that a prudent trustee could properly delegate under the circumstances. The trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution in:

(1) Selecting an agent;

(2) Establishing the scope and terms of the delegation, consistent with the purposes and terms of the trust; and

(3) Periodically reviewing the agent's actions in order to monitor the agent's performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation.

(b) In performing a delegated function, an agent owes a duty to the trust to exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution to comply with the terms of the delegation.

(c) A trustee who complies with subsection (a) is not liable to the beneficiaries or to the trust for an action or inaction of the agent to whom the function was delegated.

(d) By accepting a delegation of powers or duties from the trustee of a trust that is subject to the law of this state, an agent submits to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 65, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-808. Powers to direct.

(a) While a trust is revocable, the trustee may follow a direction of the settlor that is contrary to the terms of the trust or contrary to the normal practice of the trustee in regard to the action requested.

(b) If the terms of a trust confer upon a person other than the settlor of a revocable trust power to direct certain actions of the trustee, the trustee shall act in accordance with an exercise of the power.

(c) The terms of a trust may confer upon a trustee or other person a power to direct the modification or termination of the trust.

(d) If a person holds a power to direct pursuant to Article 12 of this chapter, that person is a trust advisor, trust protector, or both. The power holder is subject to all the provisions of Article 12, including any duties prescribed by Article 12 and any provisions that make the power holder a fiduciary. Any trustee or other person that under Article 12 is relieved of any duty or any liability, or is otherwise protected under Article 12, shall be so relieved and otherwise protected.

§ 91-8-809. Control and protection of trust property.

A trustee shall take reasonable steps to take control of and protect the trust property.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 67, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-810. Recordkeeping and identification of trust property.

(a) A trustee shall keep adequate records of the administration of the trust.

(b) A trustee shall keep trust property separate from the trustee's own property.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d), a trustee shall cause the trust property to be designated so that the interest of the trust, to the extent feasible, appears in records maintained by a party other than a trustee or beneficiary.

(d) If the trustee maintains records clearly indicating the respective interests, a trustee may invest as a whole the property of two (2) or more separate trusts.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 68, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-811. Enforcement and defense of claims.

(a) A trustee shall take reasonable steps to enforce claims of the trust and to defend claims against the trust.

(b) A trustee may abandon or assign any claim that it believes is unreasonable to enforce to one or more of the beneficiaries of the trust holding the claim.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 69, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-812. Collecting trust property.

A trustee shall take reasonable steps to compel a former trustee or other person to deliver trust property to the trustee, and to redress a breach of trust known to the trustee to have been committed by a former trustee. No successor trustee appointed after the examination of the accounts of a trustee or the waiver of the examination by the beneficiaries shall be responsible for the acts and omissions of the prior trustee.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 70, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-813. Duty to inform and report.

(a)(1) A trustee shall keep the beneficiaries of the trust that are current mandatory or permissible distributees of trust income or principal, or both, reasonably informed about the administration of the trust and of the material facts necessary for them to protect their interests.

(2) Unless unreasonable under the circumstances, a trustee shall respond in a reasonable amount of time to a qualified beneficiary's request for information related to the administration of the trust. Additionally, a qualified beneficiary shall reimburse the trustee for any reasonable expenses incurred in responding to requests for information.

(3) The requirements of subsection (a) shall also apply to the benefit of anyone who, in a capacity other than that of a fiduciary, holds a power of appointment.

(b) The trustee of an irrevocable or nongrantor trust within sixty (60) days after the acceptance and funding of a trust, excluding nominal funding for the trust to have corpus or the depositing of insurance policies on the life of a living person, shall notify each current income beneficiary, each vested ultimate beneficiary of a remainder interest and anyone who, in a capacity other than that of a fiduciary, holds a power of appointment, that the trust has been established.

(1) The required notice shall:

(A) Be sent by first-class mail or personal delivery; and

(B) Consist of either a complete copy of the document establishing the trust together with the trustee's name, address and telephone number or an abstract of the trust, as the trustee, in the trustee's absolute discretion, may choose.

(2) The abstract shall contain:

(A) The name, address and telephone number of each trustee; and

(B) If for a current income beneficiary:

(i) The number of other current income beneficiaries;

(ii) Whether distributions of income are required or discretionary; and

(iii) Whether distributions of principal are permitted and, if so, for what purpose or purposes; and

(C) If for a remainder beneficiary:

(i) The number of other remainder beneficiaries; and

(ii) The conditions that must be met before the beneficiary's share is distributable.

(D) If for anyone who, in a capacity other than that of a fiduciary, holds a power of appointment, all of the information required by subsection (b) necessary or beneficial for that person to effectively determine whether or not to exercise that power of appointment.

(c) Upon the termination of an interest of any one or more of the current income beneficiaries:

(1) The trustee shall similarly notify the income beneficiaries who are takers of the terminated interest of their interest by sending or delivering them the notice required in subsection (b); and

(2) If at that time the period described in subsection (b) has lapsed, the trustee shall similarly notify anyone who, in a capacity other than that of a fiduciary, holds a power of appointment by sending or delivering to the person the notice required in subsection (b).

(d) A beneficiary may waive the right to a trustee's report or other information otherwise required to be furnished under this section. A beneficiary, with respect to future reports and other information, may withdraw a waiver previously given. Anyone who, in a capacity other than that of a fiduciary, holds a power of appointment has the same power as provided a beneficiary in this subsection to waive reports and other information and to withdraw a waiver previously given.

(e) Subsections (a) and (b) shall not apply to the extent that those provisions are waived or modified in accordance with Section 91-8-105(d).

(f) Subsection (a)(1) and subsection (b) do not apply to a trust created under a trust agreement that became irrevocable before July 1, 2014. Trust law in effect before July 1, 2014, regarding the subject matter of subsection (a)(1) and subsection (b) shall continue to apply to those trusts.

(g) If the trustee of a trust is bound by any written confidentiality restrictions with respect to an asset of a trust, a trustee may require that any beneficiary who is eligible to receive information pursuant to this or any other section of this chapter about the asset shall agree in writing to be bound by the confidentiality restrictions that bind the trustee before receiving the information from the trustee.

(h) A trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary designated by the terms of the trust shall keep each excluded fiduciary designated by the terms of the trust reasonably informed about:

(1) The administration of the trust with respect to any specific duty or function being performed by the trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary to the extent that the duty or function would normally be performed by the excluded fiduciary or to the extent that providing the information to the excluded fiduciary is reasonably necessary for the excluded fiduciary to perform its duties; and

(2) Any other material information that the excluded fiduciary would be required to disclose to the specified beneficiaries under subsection (a) without regard to whether the terms of the trust relieve the excluded fiduciary from providing the information to qualified beneficiaries. Neither the performance nor the failure to perform of a trust advisor, trust protector, or other fiduciary designated by the terms of the trust as provided in this subsection shall affect the limitation on the liability of any excluded fiduciary provided by Article 12 of this chapter.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 71, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-814. Exercise of powers over discretionary and other interests; tax savings.

(a) Relative to exercise of powers over discretionary and other interests:

(1) "Improper motive" means to demonstrate action such as the following:

(A) A trustee refusing to make or limiting distributions to beneficiaries other than the trustee due to the trustee's self-interest when the trustee also holds a beneficial interest subject to a discretionary interest; or

(B) A trustee making a distribution in excess of an ascertainable standard to himself or herself as beneficiary when the trustee is restricted by an ascertainable standard in the trust.

(2) Unless otherwise provided in the trust:

(A) If the settlor's spouse is named as a beneficiary, the settlor is still living and the trust is classified as a support trust, then the trustee shall consider the resources of the settlor's spouse, including the settlor's obligation of support, before making a distribution; and

(B) In all other cases, unless otherwise provided in the trust, the trustee need not consider the beneficiary's resources in determining whether a distribution should be made.

(b) The following provisions apply only to discretionary interests:

(1) A discretionary interest is neither a property interest nor an enforceable right; it is a mere expectancy;

(2) A court may review a trustee's distribution discretion only if the trustee acts dishonestly, acts with an improper motive, or fails to act, if under a duty to do so;

(3) A reasonableness standard shall not be applied to the exercise of discretion by the trustee with regard to a discretionary interest;

(4) Other than for the three (3) circumstances listed in subsection (b)(2), a court has no jurisdiction to review the trustee's discretion or to force a distribution; and

(5) Absent express language in the trust instrument to the contrary, if the distribution language in a discretionary interest permits unequal distributions between beneficiaries or distributions to the exclusion of other beneficiaries, the trustee may distribute all of the accumulated, accrued, or undistributed income and principal to one (1) beneficiary in the trustee's discretion.

(c) The following provisions apply only to mandatory or support interests:

(1) A beneficiary of a mandatory or a support interest has an enforceable right to a distribution pursuant to a court's review;

(2) A trustee's distribution decision may be reviewed for unreasonableness, dishonesty, improper motivation, or failure to act, if under a duty to do so; and

(3) In the case of a support interest, nothing in this section shall raise a beneficiary's support interest to the level of a property interest.

(d) Unless otherwise provided in subsection (f), and unless the terms of the trust expressly indicate that a rule in this subsection does not apply:

(1) A person other than a settlor who is a beneficiary and trustee of a trust that confers on the trustee a power to make discretionary distributions to or for the trustee's personal benefit may exercise the power only in accordance with an ascertainable standard; and

(2) A trustee may not exercise a power to make discretionary distributions to satisfy a legal obligation of support that the trustee personally owes another person.

(e) A power that is limited or prohibited by subsection (d) may be exercised by a majority of the remaining trustees whose exercise of the power is not so limited or prohibited. If the power of all trustees is so limited or prohibited, the court may appoint a special fiduciary with authority to exercise the power.

(f) Subsection (d) shall not apply to:

(1) A power held by the settlor's spouse who is the trustee of a trust for which a marital deduction, as defined in Section 2056(b) (5) or 2523(e) of the Internal Revenue Code, was previously allowed;

(2) Any trust during any period that the trust may be revoked or amended by its settlor; or

(3) A trust if contributions to the trust qualify for the annual exclusion under Section 2503(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

§ 91-8-815. General powers of trustee.

(a) A trustee, without authorization by the court, may exercise:

(1) Powers conferred by the terms of the trust; and

(2) Except as limited by the terms of the trust:

(A) All powers over the trust property which an unmarried competent owner has over individually owned property;

(B) Any other powers appropriate to achieve the proper investment, management, and distribution of the trust property; and

(C) Any other powers conferred by this chapter.

(b) The exercise of a power is subject to the fiduciary duties prescribed by this article.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 73, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-816. Specific powers of trustee.

(a) Any references contained in a will or trust incorporating by reference the powers enumerated in Section 91-9-101 et seq. will incorporate by reference the powers contained in this section.

(b) Unless the terms of the instrument expressly provide otherwise and without limiting the authority conferred by Section 91-8-815, a trustee may:

(1) Collect trust property and accept or reject additions to the trust property from a settlor or any other person;

(2) Acquire or sell property, for cash or on credit, at public or private sale;

(3) Exchange, partition, or otherwise change the character of trust property;

(4) Deposit trust money in an account in a regulated financial-service institution;

(5) Borrow money, with or without security, and mortgage or pledge trust property for a period within or extending beyond the duration of the trust;

(6) With respect to an interest in a proprietorship, partnership, limited liability company, business trust, corporation, or other form of business or enterprise, continue the business or other enterprise and take any action that may be taken by shareholders, members, or property owners, including merging, dissolving, or otherwise changing the form of business organization or contributing additional capital;

(7) With respect to stocks or other securities, exercise the rights of an absolute owner, including the right to:

(A) Vote, or give proxies to vote, with or without power of substitution, or enter into or continue a voting trust agreement;

(B) Hold a security in the name of a nominee or in other form without disclosure of the trust so that title may pass by delivery;

(C) Pay calls, assessments, and other sums chargeable or accruing against the securities, and sell or exercise stock subscription or conversion rights; and

(D) Deposit the securities with a depository or other regulated financial-service institution;

(8) With respect to an interest in real property, construct or make ordinary or extraordinary repairs to, alterations to, or improvements in, buildings or other structures, demolish improvements, raze existing or erect new party walls or buildings, subdivide or develop land, dedicate land to public use or grant public or private easements, and make or vacate plats and adjust boundaries;

(9) Enter into a lease for any purpose as lessor or lessee, including a lease or other arrangement for exploration and removal of natural resources, with or without the option to purchase or renew, for a period within or extending beyond the duration of the trust;

(10) Grant an option involving a sale, lease, or other disposition of trust property or acquire an option for the acquisition of property, including an option exercisable beyond the duration of the trust, and exercise an option so acquired;

(11) Insure the property of the trust against damage or loss and insure the trustee, the trustee's agents, and beneficiaries against liability arising from the administration of the trust;

(12) Abandon or decline to administer property of no value or of insufficient value to justify its collection or continued administration;

(13) With respect to possible liability for violation of environmental law:

(A) Inspect or investigate property the trustee holds or has been asked to hold, or property owned or operated by an organization in which the trustee holds or has been asked to hold an interest, for the purpose of determining the application of environmental law with respect to the property;

(B) Take action to prevent, abate, or otherwise remedy any actual or potential violation of any environmental law affecting property held directly or indirectly by the trustee, whether taken before or after the assertion of a claim or the initiation of governmental enforcement;

(C) Decline to accept property into trust or disclaim any power with respect to property that is or may be burdened with liability for violation of environmental law;

(D) Compromise claims against the trust which may be asserted for an alleged violation of environmental law; and

(E) Pay the expense of any inspection, review, abatement, or remedial action to comply with environmental law;

(14) Pay or contest any claim, settle a claim by or against the trust, and release, in whole or in part, a claim belonging to the trust;

(15) Pay taxes, assessments, compensation of the trustee and of employees and agents of the trust, and other expenses incurred in the administration of the trust;

(16) Exercise elections with respect to federal, state, and local taxes, including allocating capital gains to distributable net income;

(17) Select a mode of payment under any employee benefit or retirement plan, annuity, or life insurance payable to the trustee, exercise rights thereunder, including exercise of the right to indemnification for expenses and against liabilities, and take appropriate action to collect the proceeds;

(18) Make loans out of trust property, including loans to a beneficiary on terms and conditions the trustee considers to be fair and reasonable under the circumstances, where the trustee has a lien on future distributions for repayment of those loans;

(19) Pledge trust property to guarantee loans made by others to the beneficiary;

(20) Appoint a trustee to act in another jurisdiction with respect to trust property located in the other jurisdiction, confer upon the appointed trustee all of the powers and duties of the appointing trustee, require that the appointed trustee furnish security, and remove any trustee so appointed;

(21) Pay an amount distributable to a beneficiary who is under a legal disability or who the trustee reasonably believes is incapacitated, by paying it directly to the beneficiary or applying it for the beneficiary's benefit, or by:

(A) Paying it to the conservator or guardian of the beneficiary's estate or, if there is no conservator or guardian of the beneficiary's estate, to the conservator or guardian of the beneficiary;

(B) Paying it to the beneficiary's custodian under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, and, for that purpose, creating a custodianship or custodial trust;

(C) If the trustee does not know of a conservator, guardian, custodian, or custodial trustee, paying it to an adult relative or other person having legal or physical care or custody of the beneficiary, to be expended on the beneficiary's behalf; or

(D) Managing it as a separate fund on the beneficiary's behalf, subject to the beneficiary's continuing right to withdraw the distribution;

(22) On distribution of trust property or the division or termination of a trust, make distributions in divided or undivided interests, allocate particular assets in proportionate or disproportionate shares, value the trust property for those purposes, and adjust for resulting differences in valuation and basis for income tax purposes;

(23) Resolve a dispute concerning the interpretation of the trust or its administration by mediation, arbitration, or other procedure for alternative dispute resolution;

(24) Prosecute or defend an action, claim, or judicial proceeding in any jurisdiction to protect trust property and the trustee in the performance of the trustee's duties;

(25) Sign and deliver contracts and other instruments that are useful to achieve or facilitate the exercise of the trustee's powers;

(26) On termination of the trust, exercise the powers appropriate to windup the administration of the trust and distribute the trust property to the persons entitled to it;

(27) Employ persons, including attorneys, auditors, investment advisors or agents, even if they are associated with the trustee, to advise or assist the trustee in the performance of his administrative duties; to act without independent investigation upon their recommendations; and instead of acting personally, to employ one or more agents to perform any act of administration, whether or not discretionary; and

(28)(A) A trustee may insure the life of any person in which the trustee of the trust has an insurable interest as set forth in Section 83-5-251.

(B) A trustee may retain any life insurance policy contributed to a trust by a settlor, or purchased by the trustee upon the request of the settlor, as an asset of the trust without regard to any lack of diversification caused thereby and without regard to the terms and conditions of the life insurance policy. The trustee shall not be liable for lack of diversification to any beneficiary of a trust for the trustee's retention of the life insurance policy.

(C) With respect to a life insurance policy owned by the trust a trustee may:

(i) Borrow funds from any party, including an insurance company, for the purpose of paying premiums on any policy of insurance owned by the trust and enter into a "split dollar" or other similar arrangement;

(ii) Collaterally assign any policy to a creditor of the trust;

(iii) Exercise any and all rights under any life insurance policy, including the power to pay, forego or adjust the amount of any premium payments, adjust the type and amount of death benefit, receive or apply dividends to premiums or purchase additional insurance, and allocate policy values among any subaccounts available under any variable or similar policy; and

(iv) With the consent of the insured, to sell any policy to a third party in a life settlement or viatical settlement transaction.

§ 91-8-817. Distribution upon termination.

(a) Upon termination or partial termination of a trust, the trustee may send to the beneficiaries a proposal for distribution. The right of any beneficiary to object to the proposed distribution terminates if the beneficiary does not notify the trustee of an objection within thirty (30) days after the proposal was sent but only if the proposal informed the beneficiary of the right to object and of the time allowed for objection. For the purpose of determining the date a proposed distribution was sent, if exact confirmation is unavailable it can be assumed it was received five (5) days after the date of mailing.

(b) Upon the occurrence of an event terminating or partially terminating a trust, the trustee shall proceed expeditiously to distribute the trust property to the persons entitled to it, subject to the right of the trustee to retain a reasonable reserve for the payment of debts, expenses, and taxes.

(c) A release by a beneficiary of a trustee from liability for breach of trust is invalid to the extent:

(1) It was induced by improper conduct of the trustee; or

(2) The beneficiary, at the time of the release, did not know of the material facts relating to the alleged breach and the trustee had actual knowledge of the facts relating to the alleged breach.

§ 91-8-1001. Remedies for breach of trust.

(a) A violation by a trustee of a duty the trustee owes to a beneficiary is a breach of trust.

(b) To remedy a breach of trust that has occurred or may occur, the court may:

(1) Compel the trustee to perform the trustee's duties;

(2) Enjoin the trustee from committing a breach of trust;

(3) Compel the trustee to redress a breach of trust by paying money, restoring property, or other means;

(4) Order a trustee to account;

(5) Appoint a special fiduciary to take possession of the trust property and administer the trust;

(6) Suspend the trustee;

(7) Remove the trustee as provided in Section 91-8-706;

(8) Reduce or deny compensation to the trustee;

(9) Subject to Section 91-8-1012, void an act of the trustee, impose a lien or a constructive trust on trust property, or trace trust property wrongfully disposed of and recover the property or its proceeds; or

(10) Order any other appropriate relief whether provided elsewhere in this chapter, available at common law or under equity principles.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 77, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1002. Damages for breach of trust.

(a) A trustee who commits a breach of trust is liable to the beneficiaries affected for:

(1) The greater of:

(A) The amount required to restore the value of the trust property and trust distributions to what they would have been had the breach not occurred; or

(B) The profit the trustee made by reason of the breach; and

(2) Any measure of damages otherwise provided by law.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection (b), if more than one (1) trustee is liable to the beneficiaries for a breach of trust, a trustee is entitled to contribution from the other trustee or trustees. A trustee is not entitled to contribution if the trustee was substantially more at fault than another trustee or if the trustee committed the breach of trust in bad faith or with reckless indifference to the purposes of the trust or the interests of the beneficiaries. A trustee who received a benefit from the breach of trust is not entitled to contribution from another trustee to the extent of the benefit received.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 78, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1003. Damages in absence of breach.

Absent a breach of trust, a trustee is not liable to a beneficiary for a loss or depreciation in the value of trust property or for not having made a profit.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 79, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1004. Attorney's fees and costs.

(a) In a judicial proceeding involving the administration of a trust, the court, as justice and equity may require, may award costs and expenses, including reasonable attorney's fees, to any party, to be paid by another party or from the trust that is the subject of the controversy.

(b) In a nonjudicial proceeding involving the administration of a trust, the trustee may pay fees, other reasonable costs, and expenses from trust assets where all of the parties to the proceeding agree in writing.

(c) In a mediation or arbitration proceeding involving the administration of a trust, the mediator or arbitrator may award fees, other reasonable costs, and expenses against the assets of the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 80, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1005. Limitation of action against trustee by a beneficiary, a trustee, trust advisor or trust protector.

(a) A beneficiary may not commence a proceeding against a trustee for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the beneficiary or a representative of the beneficiary was sent a report that adequately disclosed the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(b) A report adequately discloses the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the beneficiary or beneficiary's representative knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(c) If subsection (a) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a beneficiary against a trustee for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the trustee;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(d) A trustee may not commence a proceeding against a cotrustee or a former trustee for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the trustee or a representative of the trustee was sent a report that adequately disclosed facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(e) A report adequately discloses facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the trustee or the trustee's representative knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(f) If subsection (d) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a trustee against a cotrustee or former trustee for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the cotrustee or a former trustee;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(g) A trust advisor or trust protector may not commence a proceeding against a trustee or a former trustee for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the trust advisor or trust protector or the respective representative of each was sent a report that adequately disclosed facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(h) A report adequately discloses facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the trust advisor or trust protector or the respective representative of each knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(i) If subsection (g) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a trust advisor or trust protector against a trustee or former trustee for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the trustee or a former trustee;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(j) Notwithstanding subsections (d) through (i), no trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector may commence a proceeding against a trustee or a former trustee if, under subsections (a) through (c) of this section, none of the beneficiaries may commence a proceeding against the cotrustee or former trustee for the breach of trust.

Editor's Notes —

Pursuant to Section 1-1-109, the Joint Legislative Committee on Compilation, Revision and Publication of Legislation corrected an error in a statutory reference in (j) by substituting "subsections (a) through (c) of this section" for "Section 91-8-1005(a) through (c)." The Joint Committee ratified the correction at its July 24, 2014, meeting.

§ 91-8-1006. Reliance on trust instrument.

A trustee who acts in reasonable reliance on the terms of the trust as expressed in the trust instrument is not liable to a beneficiary for a breach of trust to the extent the breach resulted from the reliance.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 82, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1007. Event affecting administration or distribution.

If the happening of an event, including marriage, divorce, performance of educational requirements, or death, affects the administration or distribution of a trust, a trustee who has exercised reasonable care to ascertain the happening of the event is not liable for a loss resulting from the trustee's lack of knowledge.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 83, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1008. Exculpation of trustee.

(a) A provision of a trust relieving a trustee of liability for breach of trust is unenforceable to the extent that it:

(1) Relieves the trustee of liability for breach of trust committed in bad faith or with reckless indifference to the purposes of the trust or the interests of the beneficiaries; or

(2) Was inserted as the result of an abuse by the trustee of a fiduciary or confidential relationship to the settlor.

(b) Except for provisions intended to provide protection for carrying out a stated purpose in the trust instrument, an exculpatory provision drafted or caused to be drafted by the trustee is invalid as an abuse of a fiduciary or confidential relationship unless the trustee proves that the exculpatory provision is fair under the circumstances and that its existence and contents were adequately communicated to the settlor.

§ 91-8-1009. Beneficiary's consent, release, or ratification.

A trustee is not liable to a beneficiary for breach of trust if the beneficiary consented to the conduct constituting the breach, released the trustee from liability for the breach, or ratified the transaction constituting the breach, unless:

(1) The consent, release, or ratification of the beneficiary was induced by improper conduct of the trustee; or

(2) At the time of the consent, release, or ratification, the beneficiary did not know of the material facts relating to the breach and the trustee had actual knowledge of the facts relating to the alleged breach.

Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 85, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1010. Limitation on personal liability of trustee.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in the contract, a trustee is not personally liable on a contract properly entered into in the trustee's fiduciary capacity in the course of administering the trust if the trustee in the contract disclosed the fiduciary capacity.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (a) or (c), the debts, obligations and liabilities incurred by a trustee by reason of the ownership, management, or control of trust property in the trustee's fiduciary capacity, shall be enforceable solely against the trust and its property, without any obligation or liability personally being borne by any trustee of the trust.

(c) Except as otherwise limited by state law, a trustee is personally liable for torts committed in the course of administering a trust only if the trustee is personally at fault.

(d) A claim based on a contract entered into by a trustee in the trustee's fiduciary capacity, on an obligation arising from ownership or control of trust property, or on a tort committed in the course of administering a trust, may be asserted in a judicial proceeding against the trustee in the trustee's fiduciary capacity, whether or not the trustee is personally liable for the claim.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 86, eff from and after
July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1011. Interest as general partner.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) or unless personal liability is imposed in the contract, a trustee who holds an interest as a general partner in a general or limited partnership is not personally liable on a contract entered into by the partnership after the trust's acquisition of the interest if the fiduciary capacity was disclosed in the contract or in a statement previously filed pursuant to the Uniform Partnership Act, Title 79, Chapter 13, Mississippi Code of 1972, or the Mississippi Limited Partnership Act, Title 79, Chapter 14, Mississippi Code of 1972.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), a trustee who holds an interest as a general partner is not personally liable for torts committed by the partnership or for obligations arising from ownership or control of the interest unless the trustee is personally at fault.

(c) The immunity provided by this section does not apply if an interest in the partnership is held by the trustee in a capacity other than that of trustee.

(d) If the trustee of a revocable trust holds an interest as a general partner, the settlor is personally liable for contracts and other obligations of the partnership as if the settlor were a general partner.

§ 91-8-1012. Protection of person dealing with trustee.

(a) A person other than a beneficiary who in good faith assists a trustee, or who in good faith and for value deals with a trustee, without actual knowledge that the trustee is exceeding or improperly exercising the trustee's powers is protected from liability as if the trustee properly exercised the power.

(b) A person other than a beneficiary who in good faith assists a trustee or deals with a trustee is not required to inquire into the extent of the trustee's powers or the propriety of their exercise.

(c) A person who in good faith delivers assets to a trustee need not ensure their proper application.

(d) A person other than a beneficiary who in good faith assists a former trustee, or who in good faith and for value deals with a former trustee, without actual knowledge that the trusteeship has terminated, is protected from liability as if the former trustee were still a trustee.

(e) Comparable protective provisions of other laws relating to commercial transactions or transfer of securities by fiduciaries prevail over the protection provided by this section.

§ 91-8-1013. Certification of trust.

(a) Instead of furnishing a copy of the trust instrument to any person to evidence the existence and validity of the trust, the trustee may furnish to the person a certification of trust, signed by the trustee or trustees having signature authority as identified in paragraph (6) of this subsection, attested by a notary public, and shall contain the following:

(1) An affirmation of the current existence of the trust and the date on which the trust came into existence;

(2) The identity of the settlor or settlors;

(3) The identity and address of the currently acting trustee or trustees and may contain the identity and address of the named successor trustee or trustees or a statement that no successor is named;

(4) The administrative or managerial powers of the trustee in a pending transaction or relevant to the request;

(5) The revocability or irrevocability of the trust and the identity of any person holding a power to revoke the trust;

(6) When there are multiple trustees or multiple successor trustees, the signature authority of the trustees indicating whether all or less than all of the currently acting trustees are required to sign in order to exercise various powers of the trustee;

(7) Where there are successor trustees designated, a statement detailing the conditions for their succession or a statement that a third party may rely on the authority of one or more successors without proof of their succession;

(8) The trust's Taxpayer Identification Number, whether a social security number or Employer Identification Number, but only if the trust's identification number is essential to the transaction for which the request for the trust document is made;

(9) The name in which title to trust property may be taken; and

(10) A statement that, to the best of the trustee's knowledge, the trust has not been revoked, modified, or amended in any manner that would cause the representations contained in the certification of trust to be incorrect.

(b) The certification of trust shall not be required to contain the dispositive provisions of a trust that set forth the distribution of the trust estate.

(c) The trustee offering the certification of trust may provide copies of all or any part of the trust document and amendments, if any. Nothing in this section is intended to require or imply an obligation to provide dispositive provisions of the trust or a copy of the entire trust documents and amendments.

(d) A person who acts in reliance upon a certification of trust without knowledge that the representations contained therein are incorrect is not liable to any person for so acting. A person who does not have actual knowledge that the facts contained in the certification of trust are incorrect may assume without inquiry the existence of the facts contained in the certification. Actual knowledge shall not be inferred solely from the fact that a copy of all or part of the trust instrument is held by the person relying on the trust certification. Nothing contained in this section shall limit the rights of the beneficiaries of the trust against the trustee. Any person relying on the certification of trust shall be indemnified from the assets of the trust to the extent of the share of the trust attributable to the beneficiary or beneficiaries bringing any action against the person for any costs, damage, attorney fees, or other expenses incurred in defending any action against the person arising for the transaction to which a certification of trust related.

(e) A person's failure to request a certification of trust does not affect the protections provided that person in this section. No inference that the person has not acted in good faith or that the person was negligent may be drawn from the failure of the person to request a certification of trust. Nothing in this section is intended to create an implication that a person is liable for acting in reliance on a certification of trust under circumstances where the requirements of this section are not satisfied.

(f) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require a third party, when presented with a trust certificate, to enter into a contract with a trustee relating to trust assets or obligations, or to preclude a third party from demanding as a precondition to any contract that the trustee provide additional information in order to clarify any ambiguities or inconsistencies in the trust certificate.

(g) This section does not limit the right of a person to obtain a copy of the trust instrument in a judicial proceeding concerning the trust.

§ 91-8-1014. Enforcement of no-contest, in terrorem or forfeiture provisions.

(a) For the purposes of this section, "no-contest provision" includes a "no-contest provision," "in terrorem provision" or "forfeiture provision" of a trust instrument. A "no-contest provision" means a provision that, if given effect, would reduce or eliminate the interest of any beneficiary of the trust who, directly or indirectly, initiates or otherwise pursues:

(1) Any action to contest the validity of the trust or the terms of the trust;

(2) Any action to set aside or vary the terms of the trust;

(3) Any action to challenge the acts of the trustee or other fiduciary of the trust in the performance of the trustee's or other fiduciary's duties as described in the terms of the trust; or

(4) Any other act or proceedings to frustrate or defeat the settlor's intent as expressed in the terms of the trust.

(b) With regard to whether the beneficiary sought, received or relied upon legal counsel, a no-contest provision shall be enforceable according to the express terms of the no-contest provision without regard to the beneficiary's good or bad faith in taking the action that would justify the complete or partial forfeiture of the beneficiary's interest in the trust under the terms of the no-contest provision unless probable cause exists for the beneficiary taking such action on the grounds of:

(1) Fraud;

(2) Duress;

(3) Revocation;

(4) Lack of testamentary capacity;

(5) Undue influence;

(6) Mistake;

(7) Forgery; or

(8) Irregularity in the execution of the trust instrument.

(c) Subsection (b) shall not apply to:

(1) Any action brought solely to challenge the acts of the trustee or other fiduciary of the trust to the extent that the trustee or other fiduciary has committed a breach of fiduciary duties or breach of trust;

(2) Any action brought by the trustee or any other fiduciary serving under the terms of the trust, unless the trustee or other fiduciary is a beneficiary against whom the no-contest provision is otherwise enforceable;

(3) Any agreement among the beneficiaries and any other interested persons in settlement of a dispute or resolution of any other matter relating to the trust, including, without limitation, any nonjudicial settlement agreement;

(4) Any action to determine whether a proposed or pending motion, petition, or other proceeding constitutes a contest within the meaning of a no-contest provision;

(5) Any action brought by a beneficiary or on behalf of any such beneficiary for a construction or interpretation of the terms of the trust; or

(6) Any action brought by the Attorney General for a construction or interpretation of a charitable trust or a trust containing a charitable interest if a provision exists in a trust purporting to penalize a charity or charitable interest for contesting the trust if probable cause exists for instituting proceedings.

(d) Pursuant to this section, courts shall enforce the settlor's intent as reflected in a no-contest provision to the greatest extent possible.

1. Applicability.
Trustee's withdrawals from separate irrevocable trusts were done before the enactment of Mississippi Uniform Trust Code, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 91-8-101 to 91-8-1206. Provisions from that Code could not be applied retroactively to any acts made by the trustee prior to that date when the chancery court entered its amended final judgment finding that the trustee breached a fiduciary duty of loyalty to the other beneficiaries of the trusts. Cassibry v. Cassibry, 217 So. 3d 698, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 40 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

§ 91-8-1107. Alter ego.

(a) Absent clear and convincing evidence, no settlor of an irrevocable trust may be deemed to be the alter ego of a trustee of such trust.

(b) None of the following factors, by themselves or in combination, may be considered sufficient evidence for a court to conclude that the settlor controls a trustee, or is the alter ego of a trustee of such trust:

(1) Any combination of the factors listed in Section 91-8-1108 regarding dominion and control over a trust;

(2) Isolated occurrences where the settlor has signed checks, made disbursements, or executed other documents related to the trust as a trustee, a trust advisor or a trust protector, when in fact the settlor was not a trustee, trust advisor or trust protector;

(3) Making any requests for distributions on behalf of beneficiaries; or

(4) Making any requests to the trustee to hold, purchase, or sell any trust property.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 95, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1108. Dominion and control over a trust.

In the event a person challenges a settlor's or a beneficiary's influence over a trust, none of the following factors, alone or in combination, shall enter into a determination that dominion and control over a trust exists:

(1) The settlor or a beneficiary is serving as a trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector, or other fiduciary as described in this Title 91;

(2) The settlor or a beneficiary holds an unrestricted power to remove or replace a trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector, or other fiduciary;

(3) The settlor or a beneficiary is a trust administrator, a general partner of a partnership, a manager of a limited liability company, an officer of a corporation, or holds any other managerial function relative to any type of entity specified in this section, or relative to any other type of entity not so specified, and part or all of the trust property consists of an interest in such entity;

(4) A person related by blood or adoption to the settlor or a beneficiary is appointed as a trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector, or other fiduciary;

(5) The settlor's or a beneficiary's agent, accountant, attorney, financial advisor, or friend is appointed as a trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector, or other fiduciary;

(6) A business associate is appointed as a trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector, or other fiduciary;

(7) A beneficiary holds any power of appointment over any or all of the trust property;

(8) The settlor holds a power to substitute property of equivalent value for property held by the trust, regardless of whether such power is:

(A) Held in a fiduciary or nonfiduciary capacity;

(B) Exercisable with or without the approval of any person in a fiduciary capacity; or

(C) Exercisable with or without the approval of any person having an interest adverse to such settlor;

(9) A trustee, a trust advisor, a trust protector or other fiduciary has the power to loan trust property to the settlor for less than a full and adequate rate of interest or without adequate security;

(10) Any language relative to the power to make any distribution provides for any discretion relative to such distribution;

(11) The trust has only one (1) beneficiary eligible for current distributions; or

(12) The beneficiary is serving as a cotrustee, or as a trust advisor or trust protector under Article 12, or as any other fiduciary.

TRUST ADVISORS AND TRUST PROTECTORS.

Sec.
91-8-1201.	Powers of trust advisors and trust protectors.
91-8-1202.	Trust advisors and trust protectors as fiduciaries.
91-8-1203.	Trust advisor and trust protector subject to court jurisdiction.
91-8-1204.	No duty to review actions of trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector.
91-8-1205.	Fiduciary's liability for action or inaction of trustee, trust advisor, and trust protector.
91-8-1206.	Limitation of action against trust advisor or trust protector.

§ 91-8-1201. Powers of trust advisors and trust protectors.

(a) A trust protector or trust advisor is any person, and may be a committee of more than one (1) person, other than a trustee, who under the terms of the trust has a power or duty with respect to a trust, including, but not limited to, one or more of the following powers:

(1) The power to modify or amend the trust instrument to achieve favorable tax status or respond to changes in any applicable federal, state, or other tax law affecting the trust, including, but not limited to, any rulings, regulations, or other guidance implementing or interpreting such laws;

(2) The power to amend or modify the trust instrument to take advantage of changes in the rule against perpetuities, laws governing restraints on alienation, or other state laws restricting the terms of the trust, the distribution of trust property, or the administration of the trust;

(3) The power to appoint a successor trust protector or trust advisor;

(4) The power to review and approve a trustee's trust reports or accountings;

(5) The power to change the governing law or principal place of administration of the trust;

(6) The power to remove and replace any trust advisor or trust protector for the reasons stated in the trust instrument;

(7) The power to remove a trustee, cotrustee, or successor trustee, for the reasons stated in the trust instrument, and appoint a successor;

(8) The power to consent to a trustee's or cotrustee's action or inaction in making distributions to beneficiaries;

(9) The power to increase or decrease any interest of the beneficiaries in the trust, to grant a power of appointment to one or more trust beneficiaries, or to terminate or amend any power of appointment granted in the trust;

(10) The power to perform a specific duty or function that would normally be required of a trustee or cotrustee;

(11) The power to advise the trustee or cotrustee concerning any beneficiary;

(12) The power to consent to a trustee's or cotrustee's action or inaction relating to investments of trust assets;

(13) The power to direct the acquisition, disposition, or retention of any trust investment;

(14) The power to terminate all or part of a trust;

(15) The power to veto or direct all or part of any trust distribution;

(16) The power to borrow money with or without security, and mortgage or pledge trust property for a period within or extending beyond the duration of the trust;

(17) The power to make loans out of trust property, including, but not limited to, loans to a beneficiary on terms and conditions, including without interest, considered to be fair and reasonable under the circumstances;

(18) The power to vote proxies and exercise all other rights of ownership relative to securities and business entities held by the trust;

(19) The power to select one or more investment advisors, managers or counselors, including, but not limited to, a trustee, and delegate to them any of its powers;

(20) The power to direct the trustee with respect to any additional powers and discretions over investment and management of trust assets provided in the trust instrument;

(21) The power to receive notices, information, and reports otherwise required to be provided to a beneficiary under Section 91-8-813(a) and (b);

(22) The power to represent and bind a beneficiary under Section 91-8-303(8) to the extent there is not material conflict of interest between the trust protector or trust advisor and the beneficiary; and

(23) The power to designate someone to represent and bind a beneficiary under Section 91-8-303(8) to the extent there is no material conflict of interest between the person designated and the beneficiary.

(b) The exercise of a power by a trust advisor or a trust protector shall be exercised in the sole and absolute discretion of the trust advisor or trust protector and shall be binding on all other persons.

(c) Any power of a trust advisor or trust protector to directly or indirectly modify a trust may be granted notwithstanding the provisions of Sections 91-8-410 through 91-8-412 and 91-8-414.

(d) An excluded fiduciary may continue to follow the direction of a trust protector or trust advisor upon the incapacity or death of the grantor of a trust to the extent provided in the trust instrument.

(e) Notwithstanding anything in this section to the contrary, no modification, amendment, or grant of a power of appointment with respect to a trust, all of whose beneficiaries are charitable organizations, may authorize a trust protector or trust advisor to grant a beneficial interest in the trust to any noncharitable interest or purpose.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 98; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 11, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1202. Trust advisors and trust protectors as fiduciaries.

(a) A trust advisor or trust protector, other than a beneficiary, is a fiduciary with respect to each power granted to the trust advisor or trust protector. In exercising any power or refraining from exercising any power, a trust advisor or trust protector shall act in good faith and in accordance with the terms and purposes of the trust and the interests of the beneficiaries.

(b) A trust advisor or trust protector is an excluded fiduciary with respect to each power granted or reserved exclusively to any one or more other trustees, trust advisors, or trust protectors.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 99, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1203. Trust advisor and trust protector subject to court jurisdiction.

By accepting appointment to serve as a trust advisor or trust protector, the trust advisor or the trust protector submits personally to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state even if investment advisory agreements or other related agreements provide otherwise, and the trust advisor or trust protector may be made a party to any action or proceeding relating to a decision, action, or inaction of the trust advisor or trust protector.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 100, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1204. No duty to review actions of trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector.

(a) Whenever, pursuant to the terms of a trust, an excluded fiduciary is to follow the direction of a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector with respect to investment decisions, distribution decisions, or other decisions of the nonexcluded fiduciary, then, except to the extent that the terms of the trust provide otherwise, the excluded fiduciary shall have no duty to:

(1) Review, evaluate, perform investment reviews, suitability reviews, inquiries, or investigations, or in any other way monitor the conduct of the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector;

(2) Make recommendations or evaluations or in any way provide advice to the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector or consult with the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector; or

(3) Communicate with or warn or apprise any beneficiary or third party concerning instances in which the excluded fiduciary would or might have exercised the excluded fiduciary's own discretion in a manner different from the manner directed by the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector.

(b) Absent provisions in the trust instrument to the contrary, the actions of the excluded fiduciary pertaining to matters within the scope of the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector's authority, including, but not limited to, confirming that the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector's directions have been carried out and recording and reporting actions taken at the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector's direction or other information pursuant to Section 91-8-813, shall be deemed to be administrative actions taken by the excluded fiduciary solely to allow the excluded fiduciary to perform those duties assigned to the excluded fiduciary under the terms of the trust; those administrative actions, as well as any communications made by the excluded fiduciary to the trust advisor, trust protector, or any of their agents or persons they have selected to provide services to the trust, shall not be deemed to constitute an undertaking by the excluded fiduciary to monitor the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector or otherwise participate in actions within the scope of the trustee's, trust advisor's, or trust protector's authority.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 101, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1205. Fiduciary's liability for action or inaction of trustee, trust advisor, and trust protector.

An excluded fiduciary is not liable, either individually or as a fiduciary, for:

(1) Any loss resulting from compliance with a direction of a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector, including, but not limited to, any loss from the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector breaching fiduciary responsibilities or acting beyond the trustee's, trust advisor's, or trust protector's scope of authority;

(2) Any loss resulting from any action or inaction of a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector; or

(3) Any loss that results from the failure of a trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector to take any action proposed by the excluded fiduciary where the action requires the authorization of the trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector, if an excluded fiduciary who had a duty to propose the action timely sought but failed to obtain the authorization.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 421, § 102, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-8-1206. Limitation of action against trust advisor or trust protector.

(a) A beneficiary may not commence a proceeding against a trust advisor or trust protector for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the beneficiary or a representative of the beneficiary was sent a report that adequately disclosed facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(b) A report adequately discloses facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the beneficiary or the beneficiary's representative knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(c) If subsection (a) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a beneficiary against a trust advisor or trust protector for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the trust advisor or trust protector;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(d) A trustee may not commence a proceeding against a trust advisor or trust protector for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the trustee or a representative of the trustee was sent a report that adequately disclosed facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(e) A report adequately discloses facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the trustee or the trustee's representative knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(f) If subsection (d) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a trustee against a trust advisor or trust protector for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the trust advisor or trust protector;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(g) A trust advisor or trust protector may not commence a proceeding against another trust advisor or another trust protector for breach of trust more than one (1) year after the date the trust advisor or trust protector or the respective representative of each was sent a report that adequately disclosed facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust.

(h) A report adequately discloses facts indicating the existence of a potential claim for breach of trust if it provides sufficient information so that the trust advisor or trust protector or the respective representative of each knows of the potential claim or has sufficient information to be presumed to know of it, or to be put on notice to inquire into its existence.

(i) If subsection (g) does not apply, a judicial proceeding by a trust advisor or trust protector against another trust advisor or another trust protector for breach of trust must be commenced within three (3) years after the first to occur of:

(1) The removal, resignation, or death of the other trust advisor or other trust protector;

(2) The termination of the beneficiary's interest in the trust; or

(3) The termination of the trust.

(j) Notwithstanding subsections (d) through (i), no trustee, trust advisor, or trust protector may commence a proceeding against a trust advisor or trust protector or another trust advisor or another trust protector if, under either subsections (a) through (c) or Section 91-8-1005(a) through (c), none of the beneficiaries may commence a proceeding against the trust advisor or trust protector for such breach of trust.

ARTICLE 9.

ADMINISTRATION OF PRIVATE FOUNDATION TRUSTS, CHARITABLE TRUSTS, AND SPLIT-INTEREST TRUSTS.

Sec.
91-9-401. Prohibited acts.
91-9-403. Distribution of amounts to avoid tax liability.
91-9-405. Applicability of Sections 91-9-401 and 91-9-403 when contrary to trust instrument.
91-9-407. Amendment of trust instrument to exclude application of Sections 91-9-401 and 91-9-403.
91-9-409. Rights and powers of courts and attorney general.
91-9-411. References to United States Internal Revenue Code.

§ 91-9-401. Prohibited acts.

In the administration of any trust which is a "private foundation," as defined in Section 509 of the United States Internal Revenue Code, a "charitable trust," as defined in Section 4947(a)(1) of the United States Internal Revenue Code, or a "split-interest trust," as defined in Section 4947(a)(2) of the United States Internal Revenue Code, the following acts shall be prohibited:

(a) Engaging in any act of "self-dealing," as defined in Section 4941(d) of the United States Internal Revenue Code, which would give rise to any liability for the tax imposed by Section 4941(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code;

(b) Retaining any "excess business holdings," as defined in Section 4943(c) of the United States Internal Revenue Code, which would give rise to any liability for the tax imposed by Section 4943(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code;

(c) Making any investments which would jeopardize the carrying out of any of the exempt purposes of the trust, within the meaning of Section 4944 of the United States Internal Revenue Code, so as to give rise to any liability for the tax imposed by Section 4944(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code; and

(d) Making any "taxable expenditures," as defined in Section 4945(d) of the United States Internal Revenue Code, which would give rise to any liability for the tax imposed by Section 4945(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code.

This section shall not apply either to those split-interest trusts or to amounts thereof which are not subject to the prohibitions applicable to private foundations by reason of the provisions of Section 4947 of the United States Internal Revenue Code.

HISTORY:

Codes, 1942, § 672-201; Laws, 1972, ch. 423, § 1, eff from and after passage (approved April 28, 1972).

Editor's Notes —

Laws, 1972, ch. 423 § 6, provides as follows:

"SECTION 6. Because the requirements of the Federal Tax Reform Act of 1969 require charitable nonprofit foundations, whether trusts or corporations, to change their governing instruments to comply with said federal act or the state to adopt legislation which complies in lieu of each trust or corporation changing its instrument and because failure to comply by the deadline set in said federal act will result in the loss of tax exemption by such trusts and corporations, the immediate effectiveness of this act is necessary to relieve nonprofit corporations and trusts of the concern about changing their governing instruments and retaining the tax exempt status for such Mississippi organizations; therefore, this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

FAMILY TRUST PRESERVATION ACT OF 1998.

Sec.
91-9-501.	Definitions.
91-9-503.	Beneficiary's interests not subject to transfer; restrictions on transfers and enforcements of money judgments.
91-9-505.	Trust monies designated for education or support of beneficiary; restrictions on transfers and enforcements of money judgments.
91-9-507.	Trust monies designated for payments in trustee's discretion; restrictions and liability on payments to transferees or creditors; beneficiary's right to compel payments by trustee.
91-9-509.	Settlor as beneficiary of own trust; invalid restraint on transfers; payments for education or support at trustee's discretion; maximum amount accessible by transferees or creditors.
91-9-511.	Application of act; date of trust creation.

§ 91-9-501. Definitions.

The following words and phrases shall have the meanings ascribed herein unless the context clearly indicates otherwise:

(a) "Trust" means the following:

(i) An express trust, private or charitable, with additions thereto, wherever and however created; or

(ii) A trust created or determined by a judgment or decree under which the trust is to be administered in the manner of an express trust.

(b) "Trust" excludes the following:

(i) Constructive trusts, other than those described in paragraph (a)(ii) of this section, and resulting trusts;

(ii) Guardianships and conservatorships;

(iii) Executors and administrators of decedent's estates;

(iv) Totten trust accounts;

(v) Custodial arrangements pursuant to the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act of any state;

(vi) Business trusts that are taxed as partnerships or corporations;

(vii) Investment trusts subject to regulation under the laws of this state or any other jurisdiction;

(viii) Common trust funds;

(ix) Voting trusts;

(x) Security arrangements;

(xi) Transfers in trust for purpose of suit or enforcement of a claim of right;

(xii) Liquidation trusts; or

(xiii) Any arrangement under which a person is nominee or escrowee for another.

(c) "Trustee" means an original, additional, or successor trustee, whether or not appointed or confirmed by a court.

(d) "Trust instrument" means a written instrument which creates, defines or determines a trust, including, but not limited to, a last will and testament of a decedent.

HISTORY:

Laws, 1998, ch. 460, § 1, eff from and after passage (approved March 23, 1998).

§ 91-9-503. Beneficiary's interests not subject to transfer; restrictions on transfers and enforcements of money judgments.

Except as provided in Section 91-9-509, if the trust instrument provides that a beneficiary's interest in income or principal or both of a trust is not subject to voluntary or involuntary transfer, the beneficiary's interest in income or principal or both under the trust may not be transferred and is not subject to the enforcement of a money judgment until paid to the beneficiary.

HISTORY:

Laws, 1998, ch. 460, § 2; Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 13; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 12, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-505. Trust monies designated for education or support of beneficiary; restrictions on transfers and enforcements of money judgments.

Except as provided in Section 91-9-509, if the trust instrument provides that the trustee shall pay income or principal or both of a trust for the education or support of a beneficiary, the beneficiary's interest in income or principal or both under the trust, to the extent the income or principal or both is necessary for the education or support of the beneficiary, may not be transferred and is not subject to the enforcement of a money judgment until paid to the beneficiary. This section shall not be applied or construed to limit or otherwise diminish a restraint on transfer that is valid under Section 91-9-503.

HISTORY:
Laws, 1998, ch. 460, § 3; Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 14; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 18, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-507. Trust monies designated for payments in trustee's discretion; restrictions and liability on payments to transferees or creditors; beneficiary's right to compel payments by trustee.

(1) Except as provided in Section 91-9-509, if the trust instrument provides that the trustee shall pay to or for the benefit of a beneficiary so much of the income or principal or both of a trust as the trustee in the trustee's discretion sees fit to pay, a transferee or creditor of the beneficiary may not compel the trustee to pay any amount from the trust that may be paid only in the exercise of the trustee's discretion. This subsection shall not be applied or construed to limit or otherwise diminish a restraint on transfer that is valid under Section 91-9-503.

(2) If the trustee has knowledge of a transfer of a beneficiary's interest in a trust or has been served with process in a proceeding for garnishment or attachment or the like by a judgment creditor seeking to reach a beneficiary's interest in a trust, and the trustee pays to or for the benefit of the beneficiary any part of the income or principal of the trust that may be paid only in the exercise of the trustee's discretion, the trustee is liable to the transferee or creditor to the extent that the payment to or for the benefit of the beneficiary impairs the right of the transferee or creditor. This subsection does not apply if the beneficiary's interest in the trust is subject to a restraint on transfer that is valid under Section 91-9-503.

(3) This section applies regardless of whether the trust instrument provides a standard for the exercise of the trustee's discretion.

(4) Nothing in this section limits any right the beneficiary may have to compel the trustee to pay to or for the benefit of the beneficiary all or part of the income or principal of a trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 1998, ch. 460, § 4; Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 15; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 14, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-509. Settlor as beneficiary of own trust; invalid restraint on transfers; payments for education or support at trustee's discretion; maximum amount accessible by transferees or creditors.

(1) Except as provided in Sections 91-9-701 through 91-9-723, if the settlor is a beneficiary of a trust created by the settlor and the settlor's interest in the trust is subject to a provision restraining the voluntary or involuntary transfer of the settlor's interest, the restraint is invalid against transferees or creditors of the settlor. The invalidity of the restraint on transfer does not affect the validity of the trust.

(2) Except as provided in Sections 91-9-701 through 91-9-723, if the settlor is a beneficiary of a trust created by the settlor and the trust instrument provides that the trustee shall pay income or principal, or both, of the trust for the education or support of the beneficiary, or gives the trustee discretion to determine the amount of income or principal, or both, of the trust to be paid to or for the benefit of the settlor, a transferee or creditor of the settlor may reach the maximum amount of the trust that the trustee could pay to or for the benefit of the settlor under the trust instrument, not exceeding the amount of the settlor's proportionate contribution to the trust.

§ 91-9-601. Prudent investor rule.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), a trustee who invests and manages trust assets owes a duty to the beneficiaries of the trust to comply with the prudent investor rule set forth in this article.

(b) The prudent investor rule, a default rule, may be expanded, restricted, eliminated, or otherwise altered by the provisions of a trust. A trustee is not liable to a beneficiary to the extent that the trustee acted in reasonable reliance on the provisions of the trust.

§ 91-9-603. Standard of care; portfolio strategy; risk and return.

(a) A trustee shall invest and manage trust assets as a prudent investor would, by considering the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust. In satisfying this standard, the trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution.

(b) A trustee's investment and management decisions respecting individual assets must be evaluated not in isolation but in the context of the trust portfolio as a whole and as a part of an overall investment strategy having risk and return objectives reasonably suited to the trust.

(c) Among circumstances that a trustee shall consider in investing and managing trust assets are such of the following as are relevant to the trust or its beneficiaries:

(1) General economic conditions;

(2) The possible effect of inflation or deflation;

(3) The expected tax consequences of investment decisions or strategies;

(4) The role that each investment or course of action plays within the overall trust portfolio, which may include financial assets, interests in closely held enterprises, tangible and intangible personal property, and real property;

(5) The expected total return from income and the appreciation of capital;

(6) Other resources of the beneficiaries;

(7) Needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation or appreciation of capital; and

(8) An asset's special relationship or special value, if any, to the purposes of the trust or to one or more of the beneficiaries.

(d) A trustee shall make a reasonable effort to verify facts relevant to the investment and management of trust assets.

(e) A trustee may invest in any kind of property or type of investment consistent with the standards of this article.

(f) A trustee who has special skills or expertise, or is named trustee in reliance upon the trustee's representation that the trustee has special skills or expertise, has a duty to use those special skills or expertise.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 2, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-605. Diversification.

A trustee shall diversify the investments of the trust unless the trustee reasonably determines that, because of special circumstances, the purposes of the trust are better served without diversifying.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 3, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-607. Duties at inception of trusteeship.

Within a reasonable time after accepting a trusteeship or receiving trust assets, a trustee shall review the trust assets and make and implement decisions concerning the retention and disposition of assets, in order to bring the trust portfolio into compliance with the purposes, terms, distribution requirements, and other circumstances of the trust, and with the requirements of this article.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 4, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-609. Loyalty.

A trustee shall invest and manage the trust assets solely in the interest of the beneficiaries.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 5, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Duty of loyalty.

Trustee's withdrawals or "loans" from separate irrevocable trusts constituted a breach of his duty of loyalty as a fiduciary because his withdrawals depleted the trusts and proximately caused injury to the other beneficiaries of the trusts. Moreover, it could not be determined that a beneficiary gave the trustee permission to make withdrawals from one of the trusts before the death of the beneficiary. Cassibry v. Cassibry, 217 So. 3d 698, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 40 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

§ 91-9-611. Impartiality.

If a trust has two (2) or more beneficiaries, the trustee shall act impartially in investing and managing the trust assets, taking into account any differing interests of the beneficiaries.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 6, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-613. Investment costs.

In investing and managing trust assets, a trustee may only incur costs that are appropriate and reasonable in relation to the assets, the purposes of the trust, and the skills of the trustee.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 7, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-615. Reviewing compliance.

Compliance with the prudent investor rule is determined in light of the facts and circumstances existing at the time of a trustee's decision or action and not by hindsight.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 8, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-617. Delegation of investment and management.

(a) A trustee may delegate investment and management functions that a prudent trustee of comparable skills could properly delegate under the circumstances. The trustee shall exercise reasonable care, skill, and caution in:

(1) Selecting an agent;

(2) Establishing the scope and terms of the delegation, consistent with the purposes and terms of the trust; and

(3) Periodically reviewing the agent's actions in order to monitor the agent's performance and compliance with the terms of the delegation.

(b) The investment agent shall comply with the scope and terms of the delegation and shall exercise the delegated function with reasonable care, skill and caution and shall be liable to the trust for failure to do so. An investment agent who represents that he has special investment skills shall exercise those skills.

(c) A trustee who complies with the requirements of subsection (a) is not liable to the beneficiaries or to the trust for the decisions or actions of the agent to whom the function was delegated.

(d) By accepting the delegation of a trust function from the trustee of a trust that is subject to the law of this state, an agent submits to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state.

(e) A cofiduciary may delegate investment and management functions to another cofiduciary if the delegating cofiduciary reasonably believes that the other cofiduciary has greater investment skills than the delegating cofiduciary with respect to those functions. The delegating cofiduciary shall not be responsible for the investment decisions or actions of the other cofiduciary to which the investment functions are delegated if the delegating cofiduciary exercises reasonable care, skill and caution in establishing the scope and specific terms of the delegation and in reviewing periodically the other cofiduciary's actions in order to monitor the cofiduciary's performance and compliance with the scope and specific terms of the delegation.

(f) Investment in a mutual fund is not a delegation of investment function, and neither the mutual fund nor its advisor is an investment agent.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 9, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-619. Language invoking standard of article.

The following terms or comparable language in the provisions of a trust, unless otherwise limited or modified, authorizes any investment or strategy permitted under this article: “Investments permissible by law for investment of trust funds,” “legal investments,” “authorized investments,” “using the judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing that persons of prudence, discretion, and intelligence exercise in the management of their own affairs, not in regard to speculation but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income as well as the probable safety of their capital,” “prudent man rule,” “prudent trustee rule,” “prudent person rule,” and “prudent investor rule.”

HISTORY:
Laws, 2006, ch. 474, § 10, eff from and after July 1, 2006.

§ 91-9-621. Application to existing trusts.

§ 91-9-701. Short title.

This article shall be known and may be cited as the Mississippi Qualified Disposition in Trust Act.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 1, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-703. Definitions.

As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Claim" means a right to payment, whether or not the right is reduced to judgment, liquidated, unliquidated, fixed, contingent, matured, unmatured, disputed, undisputed, legal, equitable, secured, or unsecured.

(b) "Creditor" means, with respect to a transferor, a person who has a claim.

(c) "Debt" means liability on a claim.

(d) "Disposition" means a transfer, conveyance or assignment of property, including a change in the legal ownership of property occurring upon the substitution of one (1) trustee for another or the addition of one or more new trustees. "Disposition" also includes the exercise of a power so as to cause a transfer of property to a trustee or trustees, but shall not include the release or relinquishment of an interest in property that, until the release or relinquishment, was the subject of a qualified disposition.

(e) "Investment advisor" means a person given authority by the terms of a qualified disposition trust to direct, consent to or disapprove a trustee's actual or proposed investment decision.

(f) "Investment decision" means the retention, purchase, sale, exchange, tender, or other transaction affecting the ownership of or rights in investments.

(g) "Person" means an individual, a corporation, an organization, or other legal entity.

(h) "Property" includes real property, personal property, and interests in real or personal property.

(i) "Qualified affidavit" means a sworn affidavit signed by the transferor before making a qualified disposition. In the event of a disposition by a transferor who is a trustee, the affidavit shall be signed by the transferor who made the original disposition to the trustee, or a predecessor trustee, in a form that meets the requirements of subsection (n)(2) and (3) of this section and shall state facts as of the time of the original disposition.

(j) "Qualified disposition" means a disposition by or from a transferor to a qualified trustee or qualified trustees, with or without consideration, by means of a qualified disposition trust, after the transferor executes a qualified affidavit.

(k) "Qualified trustee" means a person who:

(1) In the case of a natural person, is a resident of this state, or, in all other cases, is authorized by the law of this state to act as a trustee and whose activities are subject to supervision by the Mississippi Department of Banking and Consumer Finance, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, or the Office of Thrift Supervision or any successor to them;

(2) Maintains or arranges for custody in this state of some or all of the property that is the subject of the qualified disposition, maintains records for the trust on an exclusive or nonexclusive basis, prepares or arranges for the preparation of required income tax returns for the trust, or otherwise materially participates in the administration of the trust; and

(3) Is not the transferor.

(l) "Spouse" or "former spouse" means only persons to whom the transferor was legally married at, or before, the time the qualified disposition is made.

(m) "Transferor" means a person who, directly or indirectly, makes a disposition or causes a disposition to be made in such person's capacity:

(1) As an owner of property;

(2) As a holder of a power of appointment that authorizes the holder to appoint in favor of the holder, the holder's creditors, the holder's estate or the creditors of the holder's estate; or

(3) As a trustee.

(n) "Qualified disposition trust" means a trust instrument appointing a qualified trustee or qualified trustees for the property that is the subject of a disposition, which instrument:

(1) Expressly incorporates the law of this state to govern the validity, construction and administration of the trust;

(2) Is irrevocable; and

(3) Provides that the interest of the transferor or other beneficiary in the trust property or the income from the trust property may not be transferred, assigned, pledged or mortgaged, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, before the qualified trustee or qualified trustees actually distribute the property or income from the property to the beneficiary.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 2; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 16, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-705. Qualified affidavit; contents.

A qualified affidavit shall state that:

(a) The transferor has full right, title, and authority to transfer the assets to the trust;

(b) The transfer of the assets to the trust will not render the transferor insolvent;

(c) The transferor does not intend to defraud a creditor by transferring the assets to the trust;

(d) The transferor does not have any pending or threatened court actions against the transferor, except for those court actions identified by the transferor on an attachment to the affidavit;

(e) The transferor is not involved in any administrative proceedings, except for those administrative proceedings identified on an attachment to the affidavit;

(f) The transferor does not contemplate filing for relief under the provisions of the federal bankruptcy code;

(g) The assets being transferred to the trust were not derived from unlawful activities; and

(h) The transferor is a named insured of a general liability insurance policy and, if applicable, a professional liability insurance policy, with policy limits of at least One Million Dollars ($1,000,000.00) for each respective policy.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 3, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-707. Claims or actions against property subject to qualified disposition; claims or actions against trustees.

(a) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, no action of any kind, including, but not limited to, an action to enforce a judgment entered by a court or other body having adjudicative authority, shall be brought at law or in equity for an attachment or other provisional remedy against property that is the subject of a qualified disposition or for the avoidance of a qualified disposition, unless the action is brought pursuant to the provisions of the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, Section 15-3-101 et seq., and unless the qualified disposition was also made with actual intent to defraud the creditor.

(b)(1) Notwithstanding Section 15-3-115, a creditor's claim under subsection (a) shall be extinguished:

(A) If the person is a creditor when the qualified disposition to a qualified disposition trust is made, unless the action is commenced within the later of two (2) years after the qualified disposition is made or six (6) months after the person discovers or reasonably should have discovered the qualified disposition; or

(B) If the person becomes a creditor after the qualified disposition to a qualified disposition trust is made, unless the action is commenced within two (2) years after the qualified disposition is made;

(2) If subsection (b) (1) applies:

(A) A person shall be deemed to have discovered the existence of a qualified disposition to a qualified disposition trust at the time any public record is made of any transfer of property relative to the qualified disposition, including, but not limited to, the conveyance of real property that is recorded in the office of the chancery clerk of the county in which the property is located or the filing of a financing statement under Chapter 9, Title 75, Mississippi Code of 1972, or the equivalent recording or filing of either with the appropriate person or official under the laws of a jurisdiction other than this state; and

(B) No creditor shall bring an action with respect to property that is the subject of a qualified disposition unless that creditor proves by clear and convincing evidence that the settlor's transfer of the property was made with the intent to defraud that specific creditor.

(c) For purposes of this article, a qualified disposition that is made by means of a disposition by a transferor who is a trustee shall be deemed to have been made as of the time, whether before, on, or after July 1, 2014, the property that is the subject of the qualified disposition was originally transferred to the transferor acting in the capacity of trustee, or any predecessor trustee, in a form that meets the requirements of Section 91-9-703(n)(2) and (3).

(d) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, a creditor, including a creditor whose claim arose before or after a qualified disposition, or any other person shall have only the rights with respect to a qualified disposition as are provided in this section and Section 91-9-711, and neither a creditor nor any other person shall have any claim or cause of action against the trustee, an advisor of a trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition, or against any person involved in the counseling, drafting, preparation, execution, or funding of a trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition. For purposes of this section, counseling, drafting, preparation, execution or funding of a trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition includes the counseling, drafting, preparation, execution and funding of a limited partnership or a limited liability company if interests in the limited partnership or limited liability company are subsequently transferred to the trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition.

(e) Notwithstanding any law to the contrary, no action of any kind, including, but not limited to, an action to enforce a judgment entered by a court or other body having adjudicative authority, shall be brought at law or in equity against a trustee or an advisor of a trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition, or against any person involved in the counseling, drafting, preparation, execution or funding of a trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition, if, as of the date the action is brought, an action by a creditor with respect to the qualified disposition would be barred under this section.

(f) In circumstances where more than one (1) qualified disposition is made by means of the same qualified disposition trust, then:

(1) The making of a subsequent qualified disposition shall be disregarded in determining whether a creditor's claim with respect to a prior qualified disposition is extinguished as provided in subsection (b); and

(2) Any distribution to a beneficiary shall be deemed to have been made from the latest qualified disposition.

(g) If, in any action brought against a trustee of a trust that is the result of a qualified disposition, a court takes any action whereby the court declines to apply the law of this state in determining the effect of a spendthrift provision of the trust, the trustee of the trust shall immediately upon the court's action and without the further order of any court, cease in all respects to be trustee of the trust and a successor trustee shall succeed as trustee in accordance with the terms of the trust or, if the trust does not provide for a successor trustee and the trust would otherwise be without a trustee, a court of this state, upon the application of any beneficiary of the trust, shall appoint a successor trustee upon the terms and conditions it determines to be consistent with the purposes of the trust and this article. Upon the trustee's ceasing to be trustee, the trustee shall have no power or authority other than to convey the trust property to the successor trustee named in the trust in accordance with this section.

(h) A trust that is the subject of a qualified disposition shall be subject to this section whether or not the transferor retains any or all of the powers and rights described in Section 91-9-709 or serves as an investment advisor pursuant to Section 91-9-717.

(i)(1) Notwithstanding any provision of subsection (a) or (b) to the contrary, the limitations on actions by creditors in law or equity shall not apply and the creditors' claims shall not be extinguished if the transferor is indebted on account of an agreement, judgment, or order of a court for the payment of one or more of the following:

(A) To any person to whom the transferor is indebted on account of an agreement or order of court for the payment of support or alimony in favor of the transferor's spouse, former spouse or children, or for a division or distribution of property in favor of the transferor's spouse or former spouse, but only to the extent of such debt;

(B) To any person who suffers death, personal injury, or property damage on or before the date of a qualified disposition by a transferor, if the death, personal injury, or property damage is at any time determined to have been caused, in whole or in part, by the tortious act or omission of either the transferor or by another person for whom the transferor is or was vicariously liable, but only to the extent of the claim against the transferor or other person for whom the transferor is or was vicariously liable;

(C) To the State of Mississippi or any political subdivision thereof, including, but not limited to, court-ordered restitution in a criminal matter; or

(D) To any creditor in an amount not to exceed One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($1,500,000.00) if the transferor failed to maintain a One Million Dollar ($1,000,000.00) umbrella policy as required by subsection (l).

(2)(A) A claim provided under this subsection (i) shall be asserted against a trustee only:

(i) Upon a final nonappealable determination of a Mississippi court or a fully domesticated, final nonappealable order of a court of another state that the debt is past due; and

(ii) After the court has determined that the claimant has made reasonable attempts to collect the debt from any other sources of the transferor or that any attempt would be futile.

(B) Nothing in this subsection (i)(2) shall be construed to prohibit the court from making the findings required in subsection (i)(2)(A) in the same proceeding and order.

(j) Subsection (i) shall not apply to any claim for forced heirship, legitime or elective share.

(k) In addition to provisions of subsection (j), to the extent subsection (j) applies to the laws of any foreign country:

(1) Neither a qualified disposition trust nor any disposition made subject to the terms of the qualified disposition trust is subject to the laws of any foreign country, nor is any such qualified disposition trust or the disposition void, voidable, liable to be set aside, or defective in any manner for any reason including, but not limited to:

(A) The law of any foreign country prohibits or does not recognize the concept of a qualified disposition trust; or

(B) The qualified disposition trust or disposition avoids or defeats any right, claim, or interest conferred by the law of a foreign country upon any person by reason of a personal relationship to the settlor or by way of heirship rights or contravenes any rule or law of a foreign country or any foreign country's judicial or administrative order or action intended to recognize, protect, enforce, or give effect to the right, claim, or interest.

(2) Relative to any foreign country or any interest in property arising or originating under the laws of any foreign country:

(A) No form of forced heirship, legitime, forced share or any similar heirship rights or form of transmission or transfer of property from a decedent or from a living person, or any restrictions on transmission or transfer of property from a decedent or a living person is recognized by this state; or

(B) No heirship rights described in subsection (k) (2) (A) conferred under the law of a foreign country shall constitute an obligation or liability, the transfer, conveyance or devise of which, would violate Chapter 3, Title 15, Mississippi Code of 1972; and

(C) Subsection (k) (1) shall apply to all realty or other forms of immovable property physically in this state, as well as to all personal or movable property wherever situated if owned by a qualified disposition trust containing a state jurisdiction provision designating that the law of this state controls the qualified disposition trust;

(3) No judgment or other holding of any judicial body of any foreign country, including, but not limited to, any court, administrative body or other entity or organization purportedly having the power to make judicial or administrative decisions of any foreign country, shall be recognized or enforced or give rise to any equitable forms of relief, including, but not limited to, estoppel, to the extent the judgment or other holding concerns a qualified disposition trust containing a state jurisdiction provision designating that the law of this state controls the qualified disposition trust or to the extent the judgment or other holding concerns property held by the qualified disposition trust.

(4) Subsection (a) applies in addition to all other provisions of this article.

(l) The transferor shall obtain a general liability policy and, if applicable, a professional liability policy, and each policy must have a policy limit of at least One Million Dollars ($1,000,000.00). Policy premiums must be paid by the transferor.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 4; Laws, 2016, ch. 396, § 17, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-709. Transferor's powers and rights.

A transferor shall have only the powers and rights conferred by the qualified disposition trust. The powers and rights conferred by the qualified disposition trust upon the transferor are personal powers and rights that may not be exercised by a creditor or any other person, except as expressly permitted by the trust. Except as permitted by Sections 91-9-717 and 91-9-721, the transferor shall have no rights or authority with respect to the corpus of the trust or the income from the trust, and any agreement or understanding purporting to grant or permit the retention of any greater rights or authority shall be void.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 5, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-711. Avoidance of qualified disposition.

(a) A qualified disposition shall be avoided only to the extent necessary to satisfy the transferor's debt to the creditor at whose instance the disposition had been avoided, together with costs, including attorneys' fees, that the court may allow.

(b) In the event any qualified disposition shall be avoided as provided in subsection (a), then:

(1) If the court is satisfied that a qualified trustee has not acted in bad faith in accepting or administering the property that is the subject of the qualified disposition:

(A) The qualified trustee shall have a first and paramount lien against the property that is the subject of the qualified disposition in an amount equal to the entire cost, including attorneys' fees, properly incurred by the qualified trustee in the defense of the action or proceedings to avoid the qualified disposition;

(B) The qualified disposition shall be avoided subject to the proper fees, costs, preexisting rights, claims and interests of the qualified trustee and of any predecessor qualified trustee that has not acted in bad faith; and

(C) For purposes of this subsection (b)(1), it shall be presumed that the qualified trustee did not act in bad faith merely by accepting the property; and

(2) If the court is satisfied that a beneficiary of a trust has not acted in bad faith, the avoidance of the qualified disposition shall be subject to the right of the beneficiary to retain any distribution made upon the exercise of a trust power or discretion vested in the qualified trustee or qualified trustees, which power or discretion was properly exercised prior to the creditor's commencement of an action to avoid the qualified disposition. For purposes of this subsection (b)(2), it shall be presumed that the beneficiary, including a beneficiary who is also a transferor of the trust, did not act in bad faith merely by creating the trust or by accepting a distribution made in accordance with the terms of the trust.

(c) A disposition by a trustee that is not a qualified trustee to a trustee that is a qualified trustee shall not be treated as other than a qualified disposition solely because the trust instrument fails to meet the requirements of Section 91-9-703(n)(1).

(d) In the case of a disposition to more than one (1) trustee, a disposition that is otherwise a qualified disposition shall not be treated as other than a qualified disposition solely because not all of the recipient trustees are qualified trustees.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 6, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-713. Spendthrift restriction.

A spendthrift provision as described in Section 91-9-703(n)(3) shall be deemed to be a restriction on the transfer of the transferor's beneficial interest in the trust that is enforceable under applicable nonbankruptcy law within the meaning of Section 541(c)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, codified in 11 USCS, Section 541(c)(2), or any successor provision.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 7, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-715. Qualified trustees; advisors.

(a) For purposes of this article, neither the transferor nor any other natural person who is a nonresident of this state nor an entity that is not authorized by the law of this state to act as a trustee or whose activities are not subject to supervision as provided in Section 91-9-703(k)(1) shall be considered a qualified trustee; however, nothing in this article shall preclude a transferor from appointing one (1) or more advisors, including, but not limited to:

(1) Advisors who have authority under the terms of the trust instrument to remove and appoint qualified trustees or trust advisors;

(2) Advisors who have authority under the terms of the trust instrument to direct, consent to or disapprove distributions from the trust; and

(3) Investment advisors, whether or not the advisors would meet the requirements imposed by Section 91-9-703(k).

(b) For purposes of subsection (a), "advisor" includes a trust "protector" or any other person who, in addition to a qualified trustee, holds one or more trust powers.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 8, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-717. Investment advisors; service.

A person may serve as an investment advisor notwithstanding that the person is the transferor of the qualified disposition, but the person may not otherwise serve as advisor to a trust that is a qualified disposition trust except with respect to the retention of the veto right permitted by Section 91-9-721(a).

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 9, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-719. Failure to meet requirements; qualified trustees.

If a qualified trustee of a qualified disposition trust ceases to meet the requirements of Section 91-9-703(k)(1), and there remains no trustee that meets the requirements, the qualified trustee shall be deemed to have resigned as of the time of that cessation, and thereupon the successor qualified trustee provided for in the qualified disposition trust shall become a qualified trustee of the qualified disposition trust, or in the absence of any successor qualified trustee provided for in the qualified disposition trust, then a court of this state shall, upon application of any interested party, appoint a successor qualified trustee.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2014, ch. 513, § 10, eff from and after July 1, 2014.

§ 91-9-721. Revocation.

A qualified disposition trust shall not be deemed revocable on account of its inclusion of one or more of the following:

(a) A transferor's power to veto a distribution from the trust;

(b) A power of appointment, other than a power to appoint to the transferor, the transferor's creditors, the transferor's estate or the creditors of the transferor's estate, exercisable by will or other written instrument of the transferor effective only upon the transferor's death;

(c) The transferor's potential or actual receipt of income, including rights to the income retained in the trust;

(d) The transferor's potential or actual receipt of income or principal from a charitable remainder unitrust or charitable remainder annuity trust as those terms are defined in Section 664 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, codified in 26 USCS Section 664, and any successor provision;

(e) The transferor's receipt each year of an amount specified in the trust instrument, the amount not to exceed five percent (5%) of the initial value of the trust or its value determined, from time to time, pursuant to the trust;

(f) The transferor's potential or actual receipt or use of principal if the potential or actual receipt or use of principal would be the result of a qualified trustee's or qualified trustees' acting:

(1) In the qualified trustee's or qualified trustees' discretion. For purposes of this section, a qualified trustee is presumed to have discretion with respect to the distribution of principal unless the discretion is expressly denied to the trustee by the terms of the trust;

(2) Pursuant to a standard that governs the distribution of principal and does not confer upon the transferor a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of the transferor, unless the power of the transferor is limited by an ascertainable standard relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of Section 2041(b)(1)(A) or Section 2514(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, codified in 26 USCS Section 2041(b)(1)(A) or 26 USCS Section 2514(c)(1), as in effect on July 1, 2014, or as later amended; or

(3) At the direction of an advisor described in Section 91-9-715 who is acting:

(i) In the advisor's discretion; or

(ii) Pursuant to a standard that governs the distribution of principal and does not confer upon the transferor a power to consume, invade, or appropriate property for the benefit of the transferor, unless the power of the transferor is limited by an ascertainable standard relating to the health, education, support, or maintenance within the meaning of Section 2041(b)(1)(A) or Section 2514(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, 26 USCS Section 2041(b)(1)(A) or 26 USCS Section 2514(c)(1), as in effect on July 1, 2010, or as later amended;

(g) The transferor's right to remove a trustee or advisor and to appoint a new trustee or advisor; however, the right shall not include the appointment of a person who is a related or subordinate party with respect to the transferor within the meaning of Section 672(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, 26 USCS Section 672(c), and any successor provision;

(h) The transferor's potential or actual use of real property held under a qualified personal residence trust within the meaning of the term as described in Section 2702(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, codified in 26 USCS Section 2702(c), and any successor provision;

(i) The transferor's potential or actual receipt of income or principal to pay, in whole or in part, income taxes due on income of the trust if the potential or actual receipt of income or principal is pursuant to a provision in the qualified disposition trust that expressly permits a distribution to the transferor as reimbursement for the taxes and if the distribution would be the result of a qualified trustee's or qualified trustees' acting:

(1) In the qualified trustee's or qualified trustees' discretion or pursuant to a mandatory direction in the qualified disposition trust; or

(2) At the direction of an advisor described in Section 91-9-717, who is acting in the advisor's discretion;

(j) The ability, whether pursuant to direction in the qualified disposition trust or discretion of a qualified trustee to pay, after the death of the transferor, all or any part of the debts of the transferor outstanding at the time of the transferor's death, the expenses of administering the transferor's estate, or any estate or inheritance tax imposed on or with respect to the transferor's estate; and

(k) A qualified trustee's or qualified trustees' authority to make distributions to pay taxes in lieu of or in addition to the power to make a distribution for taxes pursuant to subsection (c), (f), (i), or (j) by direct payment to the taxing authorities.

§ 91-11-3. Definitions.

In this chapter, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Assignment" includes any written stock power, bond power, bill of sale, deed, declaration of trust, or other instrument of transfer.

(b) "Claim of beneficial interest" includes a claim of any interest by a decedent's legatee, distributee, heir, or creditor, a beneficiary under a trust, a ward, a beneficial owner of a security registered in the name of a nominee, a minor owner of a security registered in the name of a custodian, or a claim of any similar interest, whether the claim is asserted by the claimant or by a fiduciary or by any other authorized person on his behalf, and includes a claim that the transfer would be in breach of fiduciary duties.

(c) "Corporation" means a private or public corporation, association, or trust issuing a security.

(d) "Fiduciary" means an executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, committee, conservator, curator, tutor, custodian, or nominee.

(e) "Person" includes an individual, a corporation, government or governmental subdivision or agency, business trust, estate, trust, partnership or association, two or more persons having a joint or common interest, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(f) "Security" includes any share of stock, bond, debenture, note, or other security issued by a corporation which is registered as to ownership on the books of the corporation.

(g) "Transfer" means a change on the books of a corporation in the registered ownership of a security.

(h) "Transfer agent" means a person employed or authorized by a corporation to transfer securities issued by the corporation.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-31; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 1, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-5. Registration in name of fiduciary.

A corporation or transfer agent registering a security in the name of a person who is a fiduciary or who is described as a fiduciary is not bound to inquire into the existence, extent, or correct description of the fiduciary relationship. Thereafter the corporation and its transfer agent may assume without inquiry that the newly registered owner continues to be the fiduciary until the corporation or transfer agent receives written notice that the fiduciary is no longer acting as such with respect to the particular security.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-32; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 2, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-7. Assignment by fiduciary.

Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, a corporation or transfer agent making a transfer of a security pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary:

(a) may assume without inquiry that the assignment, even though to the fiduciary himself or to his nominee, is within his authority and capacity and is not in breach of his fiduciary duties;

(b) may assume without inquiry that the fiduciary has complied with any controlling instrument and with the law of the jurisdiction governing the fiduciary relationship, including any law requiring the fiduciary to obtain court approval of the transfer; and

(c) is not charged with notice of and is not bound to obtain or examine any court record or any recorded or unrecorded document relating to the fiduciary relationship or the assignment, even though the record or document is in its possession.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-33; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 3, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-9. Evidence of appointment or incumbency.

A corporation or transfer agent making a transfer pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary who is not the registered owner shall obtain the following evidence of appointment or incumbency:

(a) In the case of a fiduciary appointed or qualified by a court, a certificate issued by or under the direction or supervision of that court or an officer thereof and dated within sixty (60) days before the transfer; or

(b) In any other case, a copy of a document showing the appointment or a certificate issued by or on behalf of a person reasonably believed by the corporation or transfer agent to be responsible or, in the absence of such document or certificate, other evidence reasonably deemed by the corporation or transfer agent to be appropriate. Corporations and transfer agents may adopt standards with respect to evidence of appointment or incumbency under this subsection (b) provided such standards are not manifestly unreasonable. Neither the corporation nor transfer agent is charged with notice of the contents of any document obtained pursuant to this subsection (b) except to the extent that the contents relate directly to the appointment or incumbency.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-34; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 4, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-11. Adverse claims.

(1) A person asserting a claim of beneficial interest adverse to the transfer of a security pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary may give the corporation or transfer agent written notice of the claim. The corporation or transfer agent is not put on notice unless the written notice identifies the claimant, the registered owner, and the issue of which the security is a part, provides an address for communications directed to the claimant, and is received before the transfer. Nothing in this chapter relieves the corporation or transfer agent of any liability for making or refusing to make the transfer after it is so put on notice, unless it proceeds in the manner authorized in subsection (2).

(2) As soon as practicable after the presentation of a security for transfer pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary, a corporation or transfer agent which has received notice of a claim of beneficial interest adverse to the transfer may send notice of the presentation by registered or certified mail to the claimant at the address given by him. If the corporation or transfer agent so mails such a notice, it shall withhold the transfer for thirty days after the mailing and shall then make the transfer unless restrained by a court order.

Codes, 1942, § 5359-35; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 5, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-13. Non-liability of corporation and transfer agent.

A corporation or transfer agent incurs no liability to any person by making a transfer or otherwise acting in a manner authorized by this chapter.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-36; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 6, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-15. Non-liability of third persons.

(1) No person who participates in the acquisition, disposition, assignment, or transfer of a security by or to a fiduciary, including a person who guarantees the signature of the fiduciary, is liable for participation in any breach of fiduciary duty by reason of failure to inquire whether the transaction involves such a breach unless it is shown that he acted with actual knowledge that the proceeds of the transaction were being or were to be used wrongfully for the individual benefit of the fiduciary, or that the transaction was otherwise in breach of duty.

(2) If a corporation or transfer agent makes a transfer pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary, a person who guaranteed the signature of the fiduciary is not liable on the guarantee to any person to whom the corporation or transfer agent by reason of this chapter incurs no liability.

(3) This section does not impose any liability upon the corporation or its transfer agent.

HISTORY:
Codes, 1942, § 5359-37; Laws, 1960, ch. 266, § 7, eff from and after passage (approved May 11, 1960).

§ 91-11-17. Territorial application.

(1) The rights and duties of a corporation and its transfer agents in registering a security in the name of a fiduciary, or in making a transfer of a security pursuant to an assignment by a fiduciary, are governed by the law of the jurisdiction under whose laws the corporation is organized.

(2) This chapter applies to the rights and duties of a person other than the corporation and its transfer agents with regard to acts and omissions in this state in connection with the acquisition, disposition, assignment, or transfer of a security by or to a fiduciary, and of a person who guarantees in this state the signature of a fiduciary in connection with such a transaction.

HISTORY:

§ 91-13-3. Authority to prudently invest in all property.

In acquiring, investing, reinvesting, exchanging, retaining, selling, and managing property held in fiduciary capacity, the fiduciary shall exercise the judgment and care under the circumstances then prevailing which men of prudence, discretion, and intelligence exercise in the management of their own affairs, not in regard to speculation, but in regard to the permanent disposition of their funds, considering the probable income as well as the probable safety of their capital.

Within the limitations of the foregoing standard, a fiduciary is authorized to acquire and retain every kind of property, real, personal, or mixed, and every kind of investment, specifically including, but not by way of limitation, shares or interests in common trust funds, securities of any open-end or closed-end management type investment company or investment trust registered under the Federal Investment Company Act of 1940, as from time to time amended and, in addition, bonds, preferred stocks, or common stocks listed on a national securities exchange registered with the securities and exchange commission, which men of prudence, discretion, and intelligence acquire or retain for their own account. Within the limitations of the foregoing standard, a fiduciary may retain property properly acquired, without limitation as to time and without regard to its suitability for original purchase.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Even though an estate lost money, there was no breach of fiduciary duty on the part of an administratrix under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-13-3 because, other than filing a petition to consolidate certain stocks, she relied on the estate's professionals in making decisions. Moreover, she was not a guarantor of the estate's assets. Longmire v. Harveston (In re Estate of McGee), 982 So. 2d 428, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 703 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 237 (Miss. 2008).

Although there is no per se duty to place estate funds in an interest-bearing account, the failure to so place estate funds can constitute an imprudent management of estate funds. McNeil v. Hester, 753 So. 2d 1057, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 23 (Miss. 2000).

§ 91-15-3. Definitions.

When used in this chapter, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Power" includes any power to appoint or designate to whom property shall go, any power to invade property, any power to alter, amend, or revoke any instrument under which an estate or trust is held or created or to terminate any right or interest thereunder, and any power remaining where one or more partial releases have heretofore or hereafter been made with respect to a power, whether heretofore or hereafter created or reserved, whether vested, contingent, or conditional, and whether classified in law or known as a power in gross, a power appendant, a power appurtenant, a collateral power, a general, special, or limited power, exclusive or nonexclusive power, or otherwise, and irrespective of when, in what manner, or in whose favor it may be exercised.

(b) "Donee" means any person, whether resident or nonresident of this state, who, either alone or with another, has the right to exercise a power.

(c) "Objects" when used in connection with a power means the person in whose favor the power may be exercised.

(d) "Property" when used in connection with a power means any and all property, whether real or personal, any and all interest in property, and any and all income from property, which is subject to the power, and includes any part of the property, any part of the interest in property, and any part of the income from property.

(e) "Release" means renunciation, relinquishment, surrender, refusal to accept, extinguishment, and any other form of release.

§ 91-15-5. Right to release.

Unless the instrument creating the power specifically provides to the contrary, the donee of a power, whether now existing or hereafter created, may:

(a) At any time completely release his power.

(b) At any time or times release his power: (one) as to any property which is subject thereto; (two) as to any one or more of the objects thereof; or (three) so as to limit in any other respect the extent to which it may be exercised.

§ 91-15-7. Manner of effecting release.

A release of a power, whether partial or complete, shall be valid and effective with or without a consideration when the donee executes an instrument evidencing an intent to make the release, signed and acknowledged in the manner prescribed for the execution of deeds, and delivers the instrument or causes it to be delivered, either:

(a) To an adult person who may take any of the property which is subject to the power in the event of its non-exercise, or to one in whose favor it may be exercised after such partial release; or

(b) To any trustee or any co-trustee of the property which is subject to the power; or

(c) By filing the same for recordation in the chancery clerk's office in the county and judicial district thereof in which any of the property is located, or in which either the donee or the trustee in control of the property resides, or in which the trustee has its principal office, or in which the instrument creating the power is probated or recorded.

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-102. Definitions.

In this chapter:

(1) "Accounting period" means a calendar year unless another twelve-month period is selected by a fiduciary. The term includes a portion of a calendar year or other twelve-month period that begins when an income interest begins or ends when an income interest ends.

(2) "Beneficiary" includes, in the case of a decedent's estate, an heir, legatee, and devisee and, in the case of a trust, an income beneficiary and a remainder beneficiary.

(3) "Fiduciary" means a personal representative or a trustee. The term includes an executor, administrator, successor personal representative, special administrator, and a person performing substantially the same function.

(4) "Income" means money or property that a fiduciary receives as current return from a principal asset. The term includes a portion of receipts from a sale, exchange, or liquidation of a principal asset, to the extent provided in Article 4.

(5) "Income beneficiary" means a person to whom net income of a trust is or may be payable.

(6) "Income interest" means the right of an income beneficiary to receive all or part of net income, whether the terms of the trust require it to be distributed or authorize it to be distributed in the trustee's discretion.

(7) "Mandatory income interest" means the right of an income beneficiary to receive net income that the terms of the trust require the fiduciary to distribute.

(8) "Net income" means the total receipts allocated to income during an accounting period minus the disbursements made from income during the period, plus or minus transfers under this chapter to or from income during the period.

(9) "Person" means an individual, corporation, business trust, estate, trust, partnership, limited liability company, association, joint venture, government; governmental subdivision, agency, or instrumentality; public corporation, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(10) "Principal" means property held in trust for distribution to a remainder beneficiary when the trust terminates.

(11) "Remainder beneficiary" means a person entitled to receive principal when an income interest ends.

(12) "Terms of a trust" means the manifestation of the intent of a settlor or decedent with respect to the trust, expressed in a manner that admits of its proof in a judicial proceeding, whether by written or spoken words or by conduct.

(13) "Trustee" includes an original, additional, or successor trustee, whether or not appointed or confirmed by a court.

Uniform Principal and Income Law controls over common law, when seeking definitions of terms in trust instruments. Hynson v. Jeffries, 697 So. 2d 792, 1997 Miss. App. LEXIS 544 (Miss. Ct. App. 1997).

§ 91-17-103. Fiduciary duties; general principles.

(a) In allocating receipts and disbursements to or between principal and income, and with respect to any matter within the scope of Articles 2 and 3, a fiduciary:

(1) Shall administer a trust or estate in accordance with the terms of the trust or the will, even if there is a different provision in this chapter;

(2) May administer a trust or estate by the exercise of a discretionary power of administration given to the fiduciary by the terms of the trust or the will, even if the exercise of the power produces a result different from a result required or permitted by this chapter;

(3) Shall administer a trust or estate in accordance with this chapter if the terms of the trust or the will do not contain a different provision or do not give the fiduciary a discretionary power of administration; and

(4) Shall add a receipt or charge a disbursement to principal to the extent that the terms of the trust and this chapter do not provide a rule for allocating the receipt or disbursement to or between principal and income.

(b) In exercising the power to adjust under Section 91-17-104(a) or a discretionary power of administration regarding a matter within the scope of this chapter, whether granted by the terms of a trust, a will, or this chapter, a fiduciary shall administer a trust or estate impartially, based on what is fair and reasonable to all of the beneficiaries, except to the extent that the terms of the trust or the will clearly manifest an intention that the fiduciary shall or may favor one or more of the beneficiaries. A determination in accordance with this chapter is presumed to be fair and reasonable to all of the beneficiaries.

Uniform Principal and Income Law applied to marital deduction trust that contained producing oil and gas properties, and royalties from those minerals were to be divided between principal and income in accordance with statute's provisions. Hynson v. Jeffries, 697 So. 2d 792, 1997 Miss. App. LEXIS 544 (Miss. Ct. App. 1997).

§ 91-17-104. Trustee's power to adjust.

(a) A trustee may adjust between principal and income to the extent the trustee considers necessary if the trustee invests and manages trust assets as a prudent investor, the terms of the trust describe the amount that may or must be distributed to a beneficiary by referring to the trust's income, and the trustee determines, after applying the rules in Section 91-17-103(a), that the trustee is unable to comply with Section 91-17-103(b).

(b) In deciding whether and to what extent to exercise the power conferred by subsection (a), a trustee shall consider all factors relevant to the trust and its beneficiaries, including the following factors to the extent they are relevant:

(1) The nature, purpose, and expected duration of the trust;

(2) The intent of the settlor;

(3) The identity and circumstances of the beneficiaries;

(4) The needs for liquidity, regularity of income, and preservation and appreciation of capital;

(5) The assets held in the trust; the extent to which they consist of financial assets, interests in closely held enterprises, tangible and intangible personal property, or real property; the extent to which an asset is used by a beneficiary; and whether an asset was purchased by the trustee or received from the settlor;

(6) The net amount allocated to income under the other sections of this chapter and the increase or decrease in the value of the principal assets, which the trustee may estimate as to assets for which market values are not readily available;

(7) Whether and to what extent the terms of the trust give the trustee the power to invade principal or accumulate income or prohibit the trustee from invading principal or accumulating income, and the extent to which the trustee has exercised a power from time to time to invade principal or accumulate income;

(8) The actual and anticipated effect of economic conditions on principal and income and effects of inflation and deflation; and

(9) The anticipated tax consequences of an adjustment.

(c) A trustee may not make an adjustment:

(1) That diminishes the income interest in a trust that requires all of the income to be paid at least annually to a spouse and for which an estate tax or gift tax marital deduction would be allowed, in whole or in part, if the trustee did not have the power to make the adjustment;

(2) That reduces the actuarial value of the income interest in a trust to which a person transfers property with the intent to qualify for a gift tax exclusion;

(3) That changes the amount payable to a beneficiary as a fixed annuity or a fixed fraction of the value of the trust assets;

(4) From any amount that is permanently set aside for charitable purposes under a will or the terms of a trust unless both income and principal are so set aside;

(5) If possessing or exercising the power to make an adjustment causes an individual to be treated as the owner of all or part of the trust for income tax purposes, and the individual would not be treated as the owner if the trustee did not possess the power to make an adjustment;

(6) If possessing or exercising the power to make an adjustment causes all or part of the trust assets to be included for estate tax purposes in the estate of an individual who has the power to remove a trustee or appoint a trustee, or both, and the assets would not be included in the estate of the individual if the trustee did not possess the power to make an adjustment;

(7) If the trustee is a beneficiary of the trust; or

(8) If the trustee is not a beneficiary, but the adjustment would benefit the trustee directly or indirectly.

(d) If subsection (c)(5), (6), (7), or (8) applies to a trustee and there is more than one (1) trustee, a cotrustee to whom the provision does not apply may make the adjustment unless the exercise of the power by the remaining trustee or trustees is not permitted by the terms of the trust.

(e) A trustee may release the entire power conferred by subsection (a) or may release only the power to adjust from income to principal or the power to adjust from principal to income if the trustee is uncertain about whether possessing or exercising the power will cause a result described in subsection (c)(1) through (6) or (c)(8) or if the trustee determines that possessing or exercising the power will or may deprive the trust of a tax benefit or impose a tax burden not described in subsection (c). The release may be permanent or for a specified period, including a period measured by the life of an individual.

(f) Terms of a trust that limit the power of a trustee to make an adjustment between principal and income do not affect the application of this section unless it is clear from the terms of the trust that the terms are intended to deny the trustee the power of adjustment conferred by subsection (a).

(g)(1) For purposes of this section, and subject to subsection (c) of this section, from time to time a trustee may make a safe-harbor adjustment to increase net trust accounting income up to and including an amount equal to six percent (6%) of the trust's value as defined in subsection (g)(2). If a trustee determines to make this safe-harbor adjustment, the propriety of this adjustment shall be conclusively presumed. Nothing in this subsection (g) prohibits any other type of adjustment authorized under any provision of this section.

(2) A trust's value under subsection (g)(1) shall be calculated as follows:

(i) For trusts in existence for three (3) years or more, the value shall be the average fair market value of the trust assets over the past three (3) years;

(ii) For trusts in existence for at least two (2) years but less than three (3) years, the value shall be the average fair market value of the trust assets over the past two (2) years; and

(iii) For trusts in existence less than two (2) years, the value shall be the fair market value of the trust assets on December 31 of the preceding year.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-105. Judicial control of discretionary power.

(a) The court may not order a fiduciary to change a decision to exercise or not to exercise a discretionary power conferred by this chapter unless it determines that the decision was an abuse of the fiduciary's discretion. A fiduciary's decision is not an abuse of discretion merely because the court would have exercised the power in a different manner or would not have exercised the power.

(b) The decisions to which subsection (a) applies include:

(1) A decision under Section 91-17-104(a) as to whether and to what extent an amount should be transferred from principal to income or from income to principal.

(2) A decision regarding the factors that are relevant to the trust and its beneficiaries, the extent to which the factors are relevant, and the weight, if any, to be given to those factors, in deciding whether and to what extent to exercise the discretionary power conferred by Section 91-17-104(a).

(c) If the court determines that a fiduciary has abused the fiduciary's discretion, the court may place the income and remainder beneficiaries in the positions they would have occupied if the discretion had not been abused, according to the following rules:

(1) To the extent that the abuse of discretion has resulted in no distribution to a beneficiary or in a distribution that is too small, the court shall order the fiduciary to distribute from the trust to the beneficiary an amount that the court determines will restore the beneficiary, in whole or in part, to the beneficiary's appropriate position.

(2) To the extent that the abuse of discretion has resulted in a distribution to a beneficiary which is too large, the court shall place the beneficiaries, the trust, or both, in whole or in part, in their appropriate positions by ordering the fiduciary to withhold an amount from one or more future distributions to the beneficiary who received the distribution that was too large or ordering that beneficiary to return some or all of the distribution to the trust.

(3) To the extent that the court is unable, after applying paragraphs (1) and (2), to place the beneficiaries, the trust, or both, in the positions they would have occupied if the discretion had not been abused, the court may order the fiduciary to pay an appropriate amount from its own funds to one or more of the beneficiaries or the trust or both.

(d) Upon petition by the fiduciary, the court having jurisdiction over a trust or estate shall determine whether a proposed exercise or nonexercise by the fiduciary of a discretionary power conferred by this chapter will result in an abuse of the fiduciary's discretion. If the petition describes the proposed exercise or nonexercise of the power and contains sufficient information to inform the beneficiaries of the reasons for the proposal, the facts upon which the fiduciary relies, and an explanation of how the income and remainder beneficiaries will be affected by the proposed exercise or nonexercise of the power, a beneficiary who challenges the proposed exercise or nonexercise has the burden of establishing that it will result in an abuse of discretion.

DECEDENT'S ESTATE OR TERMINATING INCOME INTEREST.

Sec.

91-17-201.	Determination and distribution of net income.
91-17-202.	Distribution to residuary and remainder beneficiaries.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-201. Determination and distribution of net income.

After a decedent dies, in the case of an estate, or after an income interest in a trust ends, the following rules apply:

(1) A fiduciary of an estate or of a terminating income interest shall determine the amount of net income and net principal receipts received from property specifically given to a beneficiary under the rules in Articles 3 through 5 which apply to trustees and the rules in paragraph (5). The fiduciary shall distribute the net income and net principal receipts to the beneficiary who is to receive the specific property.

(2) A fiduciary shall determine the remaining net income of a decedent's estate or a terminating income interest under the rules in Articles 3 through 5 which apply to trustees and by:

(A) Including in net income all income from property used to discharge liabilities;

(B) Paying from income or principal, in the fiduciary's discretion, fees of attorneys, accountants, and fiduciaries; court costs and other expenses of administration; and interest on death taxes, but the fiduciary may pay those expenses from income of property passing to a trust for which the fiduciary claims an estate tax marital or charitable deduction only to the extent that the payment of those expenses from income will not cause the reduction or loss of the deduction; and

(C) Paying from principal all other disbursements made or incurred in connection with the settlement of a decedent's estate or the winding-up of a terminating income interest, including debts, funeral expenses, disposition of remains, family allowances, and death taxes and related penalties that are apportioned to the estate or terminating income interest by the will, the terms of the trust, or applicable law.

(3) A fiduciary shall distribute to a beneficiary who receives a pecuniary amount outright the interest or any other amount provided by the will, the terms of the trust, or applicable law from net income determined under paragraph (2) or from principal to the extent that net income is insufficient. If a beneficiary is to receive a pecuniary amount outright and no interest or other amount is provided for by the will or by the terms of the trust, and if the pecuniary amount is not distributed to the beneficiary within one (1) year of the date of death of the testator or the date the income interest ends, then the fiduciary shall distribute to the beneficiary interest on any amount that remains undistributed after the one-year anniversary until the pecuniary amount is distributed in full. The interest rate shall be the IRS midterm applicable federal rate in effect on the date the interest begins to accrue.

(4) A fiduciary shall distribute the net income remaining after distributions required by paragraph (3) in the manner described in Section 91-17-202 to all other beneficiaries, including a beneficiary who receives a pecuniary amount in trust, even if the beneficiary holds an unqualified power to withdraw assets from the trust or other presently exercisable general power of appointment over the trust.

(5) A fiduciary may not reduce principal or income receipts from property described in paragraph (1) because of a payment described in Section 91-17-501 or 91-17-502 to the extent that the will, the terms of the trust, or applicable law requires the fiduciary to make the payment from assets other than the property or to the extent that the fiduciary recovers or expects to recover the payment from a third party. The net income and principal receipts from the property are determined by including all of the amounts the fiduciary receives or pays with respect to the property, whether those amounts accrued or became due before, on, or after the date of a decedent's death or an income interest's terminating event, and by making a reasonable provision for amounts that the fiduciary believes the estate or terminating income interest may become obligated to pay after the property is distributed.

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-202. Distribution to residuary and remainder beneficiaries.

(a) Each beneficiary described in Section 91-17-201(4) is entitled to receive a portion of the net income equal to the beneficiary's fractional interest in undistributed principal assets, using values as of the distribution date. If a fiduciary makes more than one (1) distribution of assets to beneficiaries to whom this section applies, each beneficiary, including one who does not receive part of the distribution, is entitled, as of each distribution date, to the net income the fiduciary has received after the date of death or terminating event or earlier distribution date but has not distributed as of the current distribution date.

(b) In determining a beneficiary's share of net income, the following rules apply:

(1) The beneficiary is entitled to receive a portion of the net income equal to the beneficiary's fractional interest in the undistributed principal assets immediately before the distribution date, including assets that later may be sold to meet principal obligations.

(2) The beneficiary's fractional interest in the undistributed principal assets must be calculated without regard to property specifically given to a beneficiary and property required to pay pecuniary amounts not in trust.

(3) The beneficiary's fractional interest in the undistributed principal assets must be calculated on the basis of the aggregate value of those assets as of the distribution date without reducing the value by any unpaid principal obligation.

(4) The distribution date for purposes of this section may be the date as of which the fiduciary calculates the value of the assets if that date is reasonably near the date on which assets are actually distributed.

(c) If a fiduciary does not distribute all of the collected but undistributed net income to each person as of a distribution date, the fiduciary shall maintain appropriate records showing the interest of each beneficiary in that net income.

(d) A fiduciary may apply the rules in this section, to the extent that the fiduciary considers it appropriate, to net gain or loss realized after the date of death or terminating event or earlier distribution date from the disposition of a principal asset if this section applies to the income from the asset.

APPORTIONMENT AT BEGINNING AND END OF INCOME INTEREST.

Sec.
91-17-301. When right to income begins and ends.
91-17-302. Apportionment of receipts and disbursements when decedent dies or income interest begins.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-301. When right to income begins and ends.

(a) An income beneficiary is entitled to net income from the date on which the income interest begins. An income interest begins on the date specified in the terms of the trust or, if no date is specified, on the date an asset becomes subject to a trust or successive income interest.

(b) An asset becomes subject to a trust:

(1) On the date it is transferred to the trust in the case of an asset that is transferred to a trust during the transferor's life;

(2) On the date of a testator's death in the case of an asset that becomes subject to a trust by reason of a will, even if there is an intervening period of administration of the testator's estate; or

(3) On the date of an individual's death in the case of an asset that is transferred to a fiduciary by a third party because of the individual's death.

(c) An asset becomes subject to a successive income interest on the day after the preceding income interest ends, as determined under subsection (d), even if there is an intervening period of administration to wind up the preceding income interest.

(d) An income interest ends on the day before an income beneficiary dies or another terminating event occurs, or on the last day of a period during which there is no beneficiary to whom a trustee may distribute income.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-302. Apportionment of receipts and disbursements when decedent dies or income interest begins.

(a) A trustee shall allocate an income receipt or disbursement other than one to which Section 91-17-201(1) applies to principal if its due date occurs before a decedent dies in the case of an estate or before an income interest begins in the case of a trust or successive income interest.

(b) A trustee shall allocate an income receipt or disbursement to income if its due date occurs on or after the date on which a decedent dies or an income interest begins and it is a periodic due date. An income receipt or disbursement must be treated as accruing from day to day if its due date is not periodic or it has no due date. The portion of the receipt or disbursement accruing before the date on which a decedent dies or an income interest begins must be allocated to principal and the balance must be allocated to income.

(c) An item of income or an obligation is due on the date the payer is required to make a payment. If a payment date is not stated, there is no due date for the purposes of this chapter. Distributions to shareholders or other owners from an entity to which Section 91-17-401 applies are deemed to be due on the date fixed by the entity for determining who is entitled to receive the distribution or, if no date is fixed, on the declaration date for the distribution. A due date is periodic for receipts or disbursements that must be paid at regular intervals under a lease or an obligation to pay interest or if an entity customarily makes distributions at regular intervals.

§ 91-17-303. Apportionment when income interest ends.

(a) In this section, "undistributed income" means net income received before the date on which an income interest ends. The term does not include an item of income or expense that is due or accrued or net income that has been added or is required to be added to principal under the terms of the trust.

(b) When a mandatory income interest ends, the trustee shall pay to a mandatory income beneficiary who survives that date, or the estate of a deceased mandatory income beneficiary whose death causes the interest to end, the beneficiary's share of the undistributed income that is not disposed of under the terms of the trust unless the beneficiary has an unqualified power to revoke more than five percent (5%) of the trust immediately before the income interest ends. In the latter case, the undistributed income from the portion of the trust that may be revoked must be added to principal.

(c) When a trustee's obligation to pay a fixed annuity or a fixed fraction of the value of the trust's assets ends, the trustee shall prorate the final payment if and to the extent required by applicable law to accomplish a purpose of the trust or its settlor relating to income, gift, estate, or other tax requirements.

PART 1

RECEIPTS FROM ENTITIES

§ 91-17-401. Character of receipt.

(a) In this section, "entity" means a corporation, partnership, limited liability company, regulated investment company, real estate investment trust, common trust fund, or any other organization in which a trustee has an interest other than a trust or estate to which Section 91-17-402 applies, a business or activity to which Section 91-17-403 applies, or an asset-backed security to which Section 91-17-415 applies.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in this section, a trustee shall allocate to income money received from an entity.

(c) A trustee shall allocate the following receipts from an entity to principal:

(1) Property other than money;

(2) Money received in one (1) distribution or a series of related distributions in exchange for part or all of a trust's interest in the entity;

(3) Money received in total or partial liquidation of the entity; and

(4) Money received from an entity that is a regulated investment company or a real estate investment trust if the money distributed is a capital gain dividend for federal income tax purposes.

(d) Money is received in partial liquidation:

(1) To the extent that the entity, at or near the time of a distribution, indicates that it is a distribution in partial liquidation; or

(2) If the total amount of money and property received in a distribution or series of related distributions is greater than twenty percent (20%) of the entity's gross assets, as shown by the entity's year-end financial statements immediately preceding the initial receipt.

(e) Money is not received in partial liquidation, nor may it be taken into account under subsection (d)(2), to the extent that it does not exceed the amount of income tax that a trustee or beneficiary must pay on taxable income of the entity that distributes the money.

(f) A trustee may rely upon a statement made by an entity about the source or character of a distribution if the statement is made at or near the time of distribution by the entity's board of directors or other person or group of persons authorized to exercise powers to pay money or transfer property comparable to those of a corporation's board of directors.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-402. Distribution from trust or estate.

A trustee shall allocate to income an amount received as a distribution of income from a trust or an estate in which the trust has an interest other than a purchased interest, and shall allocate to principal an amount received as a distribution of principal from such a trust or estate. If a trustee purchases an interest in a trust that is an investment entity, or a decedent or donor transfers an interest in such a trust to a trustee, Section 91-17-401 or 91-17-415 applies to a receipt from the trust.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-403. Business and other activities conducted by trustee.

(a) If a trustee who conducts a business or other activity determines that it is in the best interest of all the beneficiaries to account separately for the business or activity instead of accounting for it as part of the trust's general accounting records, the trustee may maintain separate accounting records for its transactions, whether or not its assets are segregated from other trust assets.

(b) A trustee who accounts separately for a business or other activity may determine the extent to which its net cash receipts must be retained for working capital, the acquisition or replacement of fixed assets, and other reasonably foreseeable needs of the business or activity, and the extent to which the remaining net cash receipts are accounted for as principal or income in the trust's general accounting records. If a trustee sells assets of the business or other activity, other than in the ordinary course of the business or activity, the trustee shall account for the net amount received as principal in the trust's general accounting records to the extent the trustee determines that the amount received is no longer required in the conduct of the business.

(c) Activities for which a trustee may maintain separate accounting records include:

(1) Retail, manufacturing, service, and other traditional business activities;
(2) Farming;
(3) Raising and selling livestock and other animals;
(4) Management of rental properties;
(5) Extraction of minerals and other natural resources;
(6) Timber operations; and
(7) Activities to which Section 91-17-414 applies.

PART 2

RECEIPTS NOT NORMALLY APPORTIONED

§ 91-17-404. Principal receipts.

A trustee shall allocate to principal:

(1) To the extent not allocated to income under this chapter, assets received from a transferor during the transferor's lifetime, a decedent's estate, a trust with a terminating income interest, or a payer under a contract naming the trust or its trustee as beneficiary;

(2) Money or other property received from the sale, exchange, liquidation, or change in form of a principal asset, including realized profit, subject to this article;

(3) Amounts recovered from third parties to reimburse the trust because of disbursements described in Section 91-17-502(a) (7) or for other reasons to the extent not based on the loss of income;

(4) Proceeds of property taken by eminent domain, but a separate award made for the loss of income with respect to an accounting period during which a current income beneficiary had a mandatory income interest is income;

(5) Net income received in an accounting period during which there is no beneficiary to whom a trustee may or must distribute income; and

(6) Other receipts as provided in Part 3 of this article.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —
This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-405. Rental property.

To the extent that a trustee accounts for receipts from rental property pursuant to this section, the trustee shall allocate to income an amount received as rent of real or personal property, including an amount received for cancellation or renewal of a lease. An amount received as a refundable deposit, including a security deposit or a deposit that is to be applied as rent for future periods, must be added to principal and held subject to the terms of the lease and is not available for distribution to a beneficiary until the trustee's contractual obligations have been satisfied with respect to that amount.

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —
This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-406. Obligation to pay money.

(a) An amount received as interest, whether determined at a fixed, variable, or floating rate, on an obligation to pay money to the trustee, including an amount received as consideration for prepaying principal, must be allocated to income without any provision for amortization of premium.

(b) A trustee shall allocate to principal an amount received from the sale, redemption, or other disposition of an obligation to pay money to the trustee more than one (1) year after it is purchased or acquired by the trustee, including an obligation whose purchase price or value when it is acquired is less than its value at maturity. If the obligation matures within one (1) year after it is purchased or acquired by the trustee, an amount received in excess of its purchase price or its value when acquired by the trust must be allocated to income.

(c) This section does not apply to an obligation to which Section 91-17-409, 91-17-410, 91-17-411, 91-17-412, 91-17-414, or 91-17-415 applies.

§ 91-17-407. Insurance policies and similar contracts.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), a trustee shall allocate to principal the proceeds of a life insurance policy or other contract in which the trust or its trustee is named as beneficiary, including a contract that insures the trust or its trustee against loss for damage to, destruction of, or loss of title to a trust asset. The trustee shall allocate dividends on an insurance policy to income if the premiums on the policy are paid from income, and to principal if the premiums are paid from principal.

(b) A trustee shall allocate to income proceeds of a contract that insures the trustee against loss of occupancy or other use by an income beneficiary, loss of income, or, subject to Section 91-17-403, loss of profits from a business.

(c) This section does not apply to a contract to which Section 91-17-409 applies.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

PART 3

RECEIPTS NORMALLY APPORTIONED

§ 91-17-408. Insubstantial allocations not required.

If a trustee determines that an allocation between principal and income required by Section 91-17-409, 91-17-410, 91-17-411, 91-17-412, or 91-17-415 is insubstantial, the trustee may allocate the entire amount to principal unless one (1) of the circumstances described in Section 91-17-104(c) applies to the allocation. This power may be exercised by a cotrustee in the circumstances described in Section 91-17-104(d) and may be released for the reasons and in the manner described in Section 91-17-104(e). An allocation is presumed to be insubstantial if:

(1) The amount of the allocation would increase or decrease net income in an accounting period, as determined before the allocation, by less than ten percent (10%); or

(2) The value of the asset producing the receipt for which the allocation would be made is less than ten percent (10%) of the total value of the trust's assets at the beginning of the accounting period.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-409. Deferred compensation, annuities, and similar payments.

(a) In this section:

(1) "Payment" means a payment that a trustee may receive over a fixed number of years or during the life of one or more individuals because of services rendered or property transferred to the payer in exchange for future payments. The term includes a payment made in money or property from the payer's general assets or from a separate fund created by the payer. For purposes of subsections (d), (e), (f), and (g), the term also includes any payment from any separate fund, regardless of the reason for the payment.

(2) "Separate fund" includes a private or commercial annuity, an individual retirement account, and a pension, profit-sharing, stock-bonus, or stock-ownership plan.

(b) To the extent that a payment is characterized as interest, or a dividend, or a payment made in lieu of interest or a dividend, a trustee shall allocate the payment to income. The trustee shall allocate to principal the balance of the payment and any other payment received in the same accounting period that is not characterized as interest, a dividend, or an equivalent payment.

(c) If no part of a payment is characterized as interest, a dividend, or an equivalent payment, and all or part of the payment is required to be made, a trustee shall allocate to income ten percent (10%) of the part that is required to be made during the accounting period and the balance to principal. If no part of a payment is required to be made or the payment received is the entire amount to which the trustee is entitled, the trustee shall allocate the entire payment to principal. For purposes of this subsection, a payment is not "required to be made" to the extent that it is made because the trustee exercises a right of withdrawal.

(d) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (e), subsections (f) and (g) apply, and subsections (b) and (c) do not apply, in determining the allocation of a payment made from a separate fund to:

(1) A trust to which an election to qualify for a marital deduction under Section 2056(b)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, has been made; or

(2) A trust that qualifies for the marital deduction under Section 2056(b)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

(e) Subsections (d), (f), and (g) do not apply if and to the extent that the series of payments would, without the application of subsection (d), qualify for the marital deduction under Section 2056(b)(7)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.

(f) A trustee shall determine the internal income of each separate fund for the accounting period as if the separate fund were a trust subject to this chapter. Upon request of the surviving spouse, the trustee shall demand that the person administering the separate fund distribute the internal income to the trust. The trustee shall allocate a payment from the separate fund to income to the extent of the internal income of the separate fund and distribute that amount to the surviving spouse. The trustee shall allocate the balance of the payment to principal. Upon request of the surviving spouse, the trustee shall allocate principal to income to the extent the internal income of the separate fund exceeds payments made from the separate fund to the trust during the accounting period.

(g) If a trustee cannot determine the internal income of a separate fund but can determine the value of the separate fund, the internal income of the separate fund is deemed to equal four percent (4%) of the fund's value, according to the most recent statement of value preceding the beginning of the accounting period. If the trustee can determine neither the internal income of the separate fund nor the fund's value, the internal income of the fund is deemed to equal the product of the interest rate and the present value of the expected future payments, as determined under Section 7520 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended, for the month preceding the accounting period for which the computation is made.

(h) This section does not apply to a payment to which Section 91-17-410 applies.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-410. Liquidating asset.

(a) In this section, "liquidating asset" means an asset whose value will diminish or terminate because the asset is expected to produce receipts for a period of limited duration. The term includes a leasehold, patent, copyright, royalty right, and right to receive payments during a period of more than one (1) year under an arrangement that does not provide for the payment of interest on the unpaid balance. The term does not include a payment subject to Section 91-17-409, resources subject to Section 91-17-411, timber subject to Section 91-17-412, an activity subject to Section 91-17-414, an asset subject to Section 91-17-415, or any asset for which the trustee establishes a reserve for depreciation under Section 91-17-503.

(b) A trustee shall allocate to income ten percent (10%) of the receipts from a liquidating asset and the balance to principal.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-411. Minerals, water, and other natural resources.

(a) To the extent that a trustee accounts for receipts from an interest in minerals or other natural resources pursuant to this section, the trustee shall allocate them as follows:

(1) If received as nominal delay rental or nominal annual rent on a lease, a receipt must be allocated to income.

(2) If received from a production payment, a receipt must be allocated to income if and to the extent that the agreement creating the production payment provides a factor for interest or its equivalent. The balance must be allocated to principal.

(3) If an amount received as a royalty, shut-in-well payment, take-or-pay payment, bonus, or delay rental is more than nominal, ninety percent (90%) must be allocated to principal and the balance to income.

(4) If an amount is received from a working interest or any other interest not provided for in paragraph (1), (2), or (3), ninety percent (90%) of the net amount received must be allocated to principal and the balance to income.

(b) An amount received on account of an interest in water that is renewable must be allocated to income. If the water is not renewable, ninety percent (90%) of the amount must be allocated to principal and the balance to income.

(c) This chapter applies whether or not a decedent or donor was extracting minerals, water, or other natural resources before the interest became subject to the trust.

(d) If a trust owns an interest in minerals, water, or other natural resources on January 1, 2013, the trustee may allocate receipts from the interest as provided in this chapter or in the manner used by the trustee before January 1, 2013. If the trust acquires an interest in minerals, water, or other natural resources after January 1, 2013, the trustee shall allocate receipts from the interest as provided in this chapter.

Annuitants vested with a remainder interest in testator's estate upon the death of the life tenant are not restricted only to that interest in royalties derived from oil leases to which the life tenant was entitled, but their interests in such royalties are governed by those terms of the testator's will dealing with the annuitants themselves. D'Evereaux Hall Orphan Asylum v. Green, 226 So. 2d 725, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1311 (Miss. 1969).

A life tenant who executes oil leases subsequent to the death of the grantor of the life estate is entitled only to the interest derived from any investment of the royalty gained from such lease. D'Evereaux Hall Orphan Asylum v. Green, 226 So. 2d 725, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1311 (Miss. 1969).

§ 91-17-412. Timber.

(a) To the extent that a trustee accounts for receipts from the sale of timber and related products pursuant to this section, the trustee shall allocate the net receipts:

(1) To income to the extent that the amount of timber removed from the land does not exceed the rate of growth of the timber during the accounting periods in which a beneficiary has a mandatory income interest;

(2) To principal to the extent that the amount of timber removed from the land exceeds the rate of growth of the timber or the net receipts are from the sale of standing timber;

(3) To or between income and principal if the net receipts are from the lease of timberland or from a contract to cut timber from land owned by a trust, by determining the amount of timber removed from the land under the lease or contract and applying the rules in paragraphs (1) and (2); or

(4) To principal to the extent that advance payments, bonuses, and other payments are not allocated pursuant to paragraph (1), (2), or (3).

(b) In determining net receipts to be allocated pursuant to subsection (a), a trustee shall deduct and transfer to principal a reasonable amount for depletion.

(c) This chapter applies whether or not a decedent or transferor was harvesting timber from the property before it became subject to the trust.

(d) If a trust owns an interest in timberland on January 1, 2013, the trustee may allocate net receipts from the sale of timber and related products as provided in this chapter or in the manner used by the trustee before January 1, 2013. If the trust acquires an interest in timberland after January 1, 2013, the trustee shall allocate net receipts from the sale of timber and related products as provided in this chapter.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-413. Property not productive of income.

(a) If a marital deduction is allowed for all or part of a trust whose assets consist substantially of property that does not provide the spouse with sufficient income from or use of the trust assets, and if the amounts that the trustee transfers from principal to income under Section 91-17-104 and distributes to the spouse from principal pursuant to the terms of the trust are insufficient to provide the spouse with the beneficial enjoyment required to obtain the marital deduction, the spouse may require the trustee to make property productive of income, convert property within a reasonable time, or exercise the power conferred by Section 91-17-104(a). The trustee may decide which action or combination of actions to take.

(b) In cases not governed by subsection (a), proceeds from the sale or other disposition of an asset are principal without regard to the amount of income the asset produces during any accounting period.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-414. Derivative and options.

(a) In this section, "derivative" means a contract or financial instrument or a combination of contracts and financial instruments which gives a trust the right or obligation to participate in some or all changes in the price of a tangible or intangible asset or group of assets, or changes in a rate, an index of prices or rates, or other market indicator for an asset or a group of assets.

(b) To the extent that a trustee does not account under Section 91-17-403 for transactions in derivatives, the trustee shall allocate to principal receipts from and disbursements made in connection with those transactions.

(c) If a trustee grants an option to buy property from the trust, whether or not the trust owns the property when the option is granted, grants an option that permits another person to sell property to the trust, or acquires an option to buy property for the trust or an option to sell an asset owned by the trust, and the trustee or other owner of the asset is required to deliver the asset if the option is exercised, an amount received for granting the option must be allocated to principal. An amount paid to acquire the option must be paid from principal. A gain or loss realized upon the exercise of an option, including an option granted to a settlor of the trust for services rendered, must be allocated to principal.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-415. Asset-backed securities.

(a) In this section, "asset-backed security" means an asset whose value is based upon the right it gives the owner to receive distributions from the proceeds of financial assets that provide collateral for the security. The term includes an asset that gives the owner the right to receive from the collateral financial assets only the interest or other current return or only the proceeds other than interest or current return. The term does not include an asset to which Section 91-17-401 or 91-17-409 applies.

(b) If a trust receives a payment from interest or other current return and from other proceeds of the collateral financial assets, the trustee shall allocate to income the portion of the payment which the payer identifies as being from interest or other current return and shall allocate the balance of the payment to principal.

(c) If a trust receives one or more payments in exchange for the trust's entire interest in an asset-backed security in one (1) accounting period, the trustee shall allocate the payments to principal. If a payment is one of a series of payments that will result in the liquidation of the trust's interest in the security over more than one (1) accounting period, the trustee shall allocate ten percent (10%) of the payment to income and the balance to principal.

This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-501. Disbursements from income.

A trustee shall make the following disbursements from income to the extent that they are not disbursements to which Section 91-17-201(2)(B) or (C) applies:

(1) One-half (½) of the regular compensation of the trustee and of any person providing investment advisory or custodial services to the trustee;

(2) One-half (½) of all expenses for accountings, judicial proceedings, or other matters that involve both the income and remainder interests;

(3) All of the other ordinary expenses incurred in connection with the administration, management, or preservation of trust property and the distribution of income, including interest, ordinary repairs, regularly recurring taxes assessed against principal, and expenses of a proceeding or other matter that concerns primarily the income interest; and

(4) Recurring premiums on insurance covering the loss of a principal asset or the loss of income from or use of the asset.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —
This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-502. Disbursements from principal.

(a) A trustee shall make the following disbursements from principal:

(1) The remaining one-half (½) of the disbursements described in Section 91-17-501(1) and (2);

(2) All of the trustee's compensation calculated on principal as a fee for acceptance, distribution, or termination, and disbursements made to prepare property for sale;

(3) Payments on the principal of a trust debt;

(4) Expenses of a proceeding that concerns primarily principal, including a proceeding to construe the trust or to protect the trust or its property;

(5) Premiums paid on a policy of insurance not described in Section 91-17-501(4) of which the trust is the owner and beneficiary;

(6) Estate, inheritance, and other transfer taxes, including penalties, apportioned to the trust; and

(7) Disbursements related to environmental matters, including reclamation, assessing environmental conditions, remedying and removing environmental contamination, monitoring remedial activities and the release of substances, preventing future releases of substances, collecting amounts from persons liable or potentially liable for the costs of those activities, penalties imposed under environmental laws or regulations and other payments made to comply with those laws or regulations, statutory or common-law claims by third parties, and defending claims based on environmental matters.

(b) If a principal asset is encumbered with an obligation that requires income from that asset to be paid directly to the creditor, the trustee shall transfer from principal to income an amount equal to the income paid to the creditor in reduction of the principal balance of the obligation.

HISTORY:

§ 91-17-503. Transfers from income to principal for depreciation.

(a) In this section, "depreciation" means a reduction in value due to wear, tear, decay, corrosion, or gradual obsolescence of a fixed asset having a useful life of more than one (1) year.

(b) A trustee may transfer to principal a reasonable amount of the net cash receipts from a principal asset that is subject to depreciation, but may not transfer any amount for depreciation:

(1) Of that portion of real property used or available for use by a beneficiary as a residence or of tangible personal property held or made available for the personal use or enjoyment of a beneficiary;

(2) During the administration of a decedent's estate; or

(3) Under this section if the trustee is accounting under Section 91-17-403 for the business or activity in which the asset is used.

(c) An amount transferred to principal need not be held as a separate fund.

Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —
This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-504. Transfers from income to reimburse principal.

(a) If a trustee makes or expects to make a principal disbursement described in this section, the trustee may transfer an appropriate amount from income to principal in one or more accounting periods to reimburse principal or to provide a reserve for future principal disbursements.

(b) Principal disbursements to which subsection (a) applies include the following, but only to the extent that the trustee has not been and does not expect to be reimbursed by a third party:

(1) An amount chargeable to income but paid from principal because it is unusually large, including extraordinary repairs;

(2) A capital improvement to a principal asset, whether in the form of changes to an existing asset or the construction of a new asset, including special assessments;

(3) Disbursements made to prepare property for rental, including tenant allowances, leasehold improvements, and broker's commissions;

(4) Periodic payments on an obligation secured by a principal asset to the extent that the amount transferred from income to principal for depreciation is less than the periodic payments; and

(5) Disbursements described in Section 91-17-502(a)(7).

(c) If the asset whose ownership gives rise to the disbursements becomes subject to a successive income interest after an income interest ends, a trustee may continue to transfer amounts from income to principal as provided in subsection (a).

HISTORY:
Laws, 2012, ch. 351, § 1, eff from and after Jan. 1, 2013.

Editor's Notes —
This chapter was enacted by Laws of 2012, ch. 351, § 1, effective from and after January 1, 2013, to replace §§ 91-17-1 through 91-17-31, which were repealed by § 2 of the same act, effective from and after January 1, 2013.

§ 91-17-505. Income taxes.

(a) A tax required to be paid by a trustee based on receipts allocated to income must be paid from income.

(b) A tax required to be paid by a trustee based on receipts allocated to principal must be paid from principal, even if the tax is called an income tax by the taxing authority.

(c) A tax required to be paid by a trustee on the trust's share of an entity's taxable income must be paid:

(1) From income to the extent that receipts from the entity are allocated only to income;

(2) From principal to the extent that receipts from the entity are allocated only to principal;

(3) Proportionately from principal and income to the extent that receipts from the entity are allocated to both income and principal; and

(4) From principal to the extent that the tax exceeds the total receipts from the entity.

(d) After applying subsections (a) through (c), the trustee shall adjust income or principal receipts to the extent that the trust's taxes are reduced because the trust receives a deduction for payments made to a beneficiary.

§ 91-17-506. Adjustments between principal and income because of taxes.

A fiduciary may make adjustments between principal and income to offset the shifting of economic interests or tax benefits between income beneficiaries and remainder beneficiaries which arise from:

(1) Elections and decisions, that the fiduciary makes from time to time regarding tax matters;

(2) An income tax or any other tax that is imposed upon the fiduciary or a beneficiary as a result of a transaction involving or a distribution from the estate or trust; or

(3) The ownership by an estate or trust of an interest in an entity whose taxable income, whether or not distributed, is includable in the taxable income of the estate, trust, or a beneficiary.

HISTORY:

Laws, 1994, ch. 416, § 1, eff from and after January 1, 1995.

Editor's Notes —

Laws, 1994, ch. 416, § 26, provides as follows:

"SECTION 26. Sections 91-19-1, 91-19-3, 91-19-5, 91-19-7, 91-19-9, 91-19-11, 91-19-13, 91-19-15, 91-19-17 and 91-19-19, Mississippi Code of 1972, entitled the 'Mississippi Uniform Gifts to Minors Law,' which regulate the manner of making certain gifts to minors, are repealed. To the extent that this act, by virtue of Section 23(2), does not apply to transfers made in a manner prescribed in the Mississippi Uniform Gifts to Minors Law or to the powers, duties and immunities conferred by transfers in that manner upon custodians and persons dealing with custodians, the repeal of Sections 91-19-1 through 91-19-19 does not affect those transfers or those powers, duties and immunities."

§ 91-20-5. Applicability of chapter; jurisdiction.

(1) This chapter applies to a transfer that refers to this chapter in the designation under Section 91-20-19(1) by which the transfer is made if at the time of the transfer, the transferor, the minor or the custodian is a resident of this state or the custodial property is located in this state. The custodianship so created remains subject to this chapter despite a subsequent change in residence of a transferor, the minor or the custodian or the removal of custodial property from this state.

(2) A person designated as custodian under this chapter is subject to personal jurisdiction in this state with respect to any matter relating to the custodianship.

(3) A transfer that purports to be made and which is valid under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or a substantially similar act of another state is governed by the law of the designated state and may be executed and is enforceable in this state if at the time of the transfer, the transferor, the minor or the custodian is a resident of the designated state or the custodial property is located in the designated state.

§ 91-20-7. Nomination of custodian.

(1) A person having the right to designate the recipient of property transferable upon the occurrence of a future event may revocably nominate a custodian to receive the property for a minor beneficiary upon the occurrence of the event by naming the custodian followed in substance by the words: "As custodian for ________ (name of minor) under the Mississippi Uniform Transfers to Minors Act." The nomination may name one or more persons as substitute custodians to whom the property must be transferred, in the order named, if the first nominated custodian dies before the transfer or is unable, declines or is ineligible to serve. The nomination may be made in a will, a trust, a deed, an instrument exercising a power of appointment or in a writing designating a beneficiary of contractual rights which is registered with or delivered to the payor, issuer or other obligor of the contractual rights.

(2) A custodian nominated under this section must be a person to whom a transfer of property of that kind may be made under Section 91-20-19(1).

(3) The nomination of a custodian under this section does not create custodial property until the nominating instrument becomes irrevocable or a transfer to the nominated custodian is completed under Section 91-20-19. Unless the nomination of a custodian has been revoked, upon the occurrence of the future event the custodianship becomes effective and the custodian shall enforce a transfer of the custodial property pursuant to Section 91-20-19.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Effects of transfer.

Cross-defendant refinancing bank was not entitled to equitable subrogation to step into the original lender's shoes for priority over four cross-defendant judgment creditors because the property was in the debtor/borrower's infant daughter's name until the day of closing and if the bank had inquired of liens under the debtor's name, the judgment creditors' liens would have been found; the fact that the property was titled in the minor daughter's name under the Mississippi Uniform Transfers to Minors Act would have been a "red flag" because a transfer of real property made under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-20-19 was irrevocable, and under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-20-23(2), such custodial property was indefeasibly vested in the minor with the custodian being required to act as a prudent person in dealing with the property under Miss. Code Ann. § 91-20-25, such that the custodial property could not be returned by the custodian indiscriminately. Shavers v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. (In re Shavers), 418 B.R. 589, 2009 Bankr. § 91-20-25. Powers and duties of custodian; standard of care; records.

(1) A custodian shall:

(a) Take control of custodial property;

(b) Register or record title to custodial property if appropriate; and

(c) Collect, hold, manage, invest and reinvest custodial property.

(2) In dealing with custodial property, a custodian shall observe the standard of care that would be observed by a prudent person dealing with property of another and is not limited by any other statute restricting investments by fiduciaries. If a custodian has a special skill or expertise or is named custodian on the basis of representations of a special skill or expertise, the custodian shall use that skill or expertise. However, a custodian, in the custodian's discretion and without liability to the minor or the minor's estate, may retain any custodial property received from a transferor.

(3) A custodian may invest in or pay premiums on life insurance or endowment policies on (a) the life of the minor only if the minor or the minor's estate is the sole beneficiary, or (b) the life of another person in whom the minor has an insurable interest only to the extent that the minor, the minor's estate, or the custodian in the capacity of custodian, is the irrevocable beneficiary.

(4) A custodian at all times shall keep custodial property separate and distinct from all other property in a manner sufficient to identify it clearly as custodial property of the minor. Custodial property consisting of an undivided interest is so identified if the minor's interest is held as a tenant in common and is fixed. Custodial property subject to recordation is so identified if it is recorded, and custodial property subject to registration is so identified if it is either registered, or held in an account designated, in the name of the custodian, followed in substance by the words: "as a custodian for ________________ (name of minor) under the Mississippi Uniform Transfers to Minors Act."

(5) A custodian shall keep records of all transactions with respect to custodial property, including information necessary for the preparation of the minor's tax returns, and shall make them available for inspection at reasonable intervals by a parent or legal representative of the minor or by the minor if the minor has attained the age of fourteen (14) years.

§ 91-20-35. Assertion of claim against custodial property; personal liability of custodian or minor.

(1) A claim based on (a) a contract entered into by a custodian acting in a custodial capacity, (b) an obligation arising from the ownership or control of custodial property, or (c) a tort committed during the custodianship, may be asserted against the custodial property by proceeding against the custodian in the custodial capacity, whether or not the custodian or the minor is personally liable therefor.

(2) A custodian is not personally liable:

(a) On a contract properly entered into in the custodial capacity unless the custodian fails to reveal that capacity and to identify the custodianship in the contract; or

(b) For an obligation arising from control of custodial property or for a tort committed during the custodianship unless the custodian is personally at fault.

(3) A minor is not personally liable for an obligation arising from ownership of custodial property or for a tort committed during the custodianship unless the minor is personally at fault.

§ 91-20-37. Declination to serve or resignation as custodian; nomination of substitute custodian; designation of successor custodian; transfer of property.

(1) A person nominated under Section 91-20-7 or designated under Section 91-20-19 as custodian may decline to serve by delivering a valid disclaimer to the person who made the nomination or to the transferor or the transferor's legal representative. If the event giving rise to a transfer has not occurred and no substitute custodian able, willing and eligible to serve was nominated under Section 91-20-7, the person who made the nomination may nominate a substitute custodian under Section 91-20-7; otherwise the transferor or the transferor's legal representative shall designate a substitute custodian at the time of the transfer, in either case from among the persons eligible to serve as custodian for that kind of property under Section 91-20-19(1). The custodian so designated has the rights of a successor custodian.

(2) A custodian at any time may designate a trust company or an adult other than a transferor under Section 91-20-9 as successor custodian by executing and dating an instrument of designation before a subscribing witness other than the successor. If the instrument of designation does not contain or is not accompanied by the resignation of the custodian, the designation of the successor does not take effect until the custodian resigns, dies, becomes incapacitated or is removed.

(3) A custodian may resign at any time by delivering written notice to the minor if the minor has attained the age of fourteen (14) years and to the successor custodian and by delivering the custodial property to the successor custodian.

(4) If a custodian is ineligible, dies or becomes incapacitated without having effectively designated a successor and the minor has attained the age of fourteen (14) years, the minor may designate as successor custodian, in the manner prescribed in subsection (2), an adult member of the minor's family, a conservator of the minor or a trust company. If the minor has not attained the age of fourteen (14) years or fails to act within sixty (60) days after the ineligibility, death or incapacity, the conservator of the minor becomes successor custodian. If the minor has no conservator or the conservator declines to act, the transferor, the legal representative of the transferor or of the custodian, an adult member of the minor's family, or any other interested person may petition the court to designate a successor custodian.

(5) A custodian who declines to serve under subsection (1) or resigns under subsection (3) or the legal representative of a deceased or incapacitated custodian, as soon as practicable, shall put the custodial property and records in the possession and control of the successor custodian. The successor custodian by action may enforce the obligation to deliver custodial property and records and becomes responsible for each item as received.

(6) A transferor, the legal representative of a transferor, an adult member of the minor's family, a guardian of the person of the minor, the conservator of the minor, or the minor if the minor has attained the age of fourteen (14) years may petition the court to remove the custodian for cause and to designate a successor custodian other than a transferor under § 91-20-9 or to require the custodian to give appropriate bond.

§ 91-20-39. Petition for accounting or determination of responsibility for claims; accounting upon removal of custodian.

(1) A minor who has attained the age of fourteen (14) years, the minor's guardian of the person or legal representative, an adult member of the minor's family, a transferor or a transferor's legal representative may petition the court (a) for an accounting by the custodian or the custodian's legal representative, or (b) for a determination of responsibility, as between the custodial property and the custodian personally, for claims against the custodial property unless the responsibility has been adjudicated in an action under Section 91-20-35 to which the minor or the minor's legal representative was a party.

(2) A successor custodian may petition the court for an accounting by the predecessor custodian.

(3) The court, in a proceeding under this chapter or in any other proceeding, may require or permit the custodian or the custodian's legal representative to account.

(4) If a custodian is removed under Section 91-20-37(6), the court shall require an accounting and order delivery of the custodial property and records to the successor custodian and the execution of all instruments required for transfer of the custodial property.

§ 91-21-3. Definitions.

In this chapter, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Beneficiary form" means a registration of a security which indicates the present owner of the security and the intention of the owner regarding the person who will become the owner of the security upon the death of the owner.

(b) "Devisee" means any person designated in a will to receive a disposition of real or personal property.

(c) "Heirs" mean those persons, including the surviving spouse, who are entitled under the statutes of intestate succession to the property of a decedent.

(d) "Person" means an individual, a corporation, an organization or other legal entity.

(e) "Personal representative" includes executor, administrator, successor personal representative, special administrator, and persons who perform substantially the same function under the law governing their status.

(f) "Property" includes both real and personal property or any interest therein and means anything that may be the subject of ownership.

(g) "Register," including its derivatives, means to issue a certificate showing the ownership of a certificated security or, in the case of an uncertificated security, to initiate or transfer an account showing ownership of securities.

(h) "Registering entity" means a person who originates or transfers a security title by registration, and includes a broker maintaining security accounts for customers and a transfer agent or other person acting for or as an issuer of securities.

(i) "Security" means a share, participation, or other interest in property, in a business or in an obligation of an enterprise or other issuer and includes a certificated security, an uncertificated security, and a security account.

(j) "Security account" means:

(i) A reinvestment account associated with a security, a securities account with a broker, a cash balance in a brokerage account, cash, cash equivalents, interest, earnings, or dividends earned or declared on a security in an account, a reinvestment account or a brokerage account, whether or not credited to the account before the owner's death;

(ii) An investment or custody account with a trust company or trust division of a bank with trust powers, including the securities in the account, a cash balance in the account and cash, cash equivalents, interest, earnings or dividends earned or declared on a security in the account, whether or not credited to the account before the owner's death; or

(iii) A cash balance or other property held for or due to the owner of a security as a replacement for or product of an account security, whether or not credited to the account before the owner's death.

(k) "State" includes any state of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and any territory or possession subject to the legislative authority of the United States.

§ 91-21-15. Ownership on death of owner.

On death of a sole owner or the last to die of all multiple owners, ownership of securities registered in beneficiary form passes to the beneficiary or beneficiaries who survive all owners. On proof of death of all owners and compliance with any applicable requirements of the registering entity, a security registered in beneficiary form may be reregistered in the name of the beneficiary or beneficiaries who survived the death of all owners. Until division of the security after the death of all owners, multiple beneficiaries surviving the death of all owners hold their interests as tenants in common. If no beneficiary survives the death of all owners, the security belongs to the estate of the deceased sole owner or the estate of the last to die of all multiple owners.

§ 91-21-17. Protection of registering entity.

(1) A registering entity is not required to offer or to accept a request for security registration in beneficiary form. If a registration in beneficiary form is offered by a registering entity, the owner requesting registration in beneficiary form assents to the protections given to the registering entity by this chapter.

(2) By accepting a request for registration of a security in beneficiary form, the registering entity agrees that the registration will be implemented on death of the deceased owner as provided in this chapter.

(3) A registering entity is discharged from all claims to a security by the estate, creditors, heirs or devisee of a deceased owner if it registers a transfer of the security in accordance with Section 91-21-15 and does so in good faith reliance (a) on the registration, (b) on this chapter, and (c) on information provided to it by affidavit of the personal representative of the deceased owner, or by the surviving beneficiary or by the surviving beneficiary's representatives, or other information available to the registering entity. The protections of this chapter do not extend to a reregistration or payment made after a registering entity has received written notice from any claimant to any interest in the security objecting to implementation of a registration in beneficiary form. No other notice or other information available to the registering entity affects its right to protection under this chapter.

(4) The protection provided by this chapter to the registering entity of a security does not affect the rights of beneficiaries in disputes between themselves and other claimants to ownership of the security transferred or its value or proceeds.

§ 91-21-21. Terms, conditions, and forms for registration.

(1) A registering entity offering to accept registrations in beneficiary form may establish the terms and conditions under which it will receive requests (a) for registrations in beneficiary form, and (b) for implementation of registrations in beneficiary form, including requests for cancellation of previously registered TOD beneficiary designations and requests for reregistration to effect a change of beneficiary. The terms and conditions so established may provide for proving death, avoiding or resolving any problems concerning fractional shares, designating primary and contingent beneficiaries, and substituting a named beneficiary's descendants to take in the place of the named beneficiary in the event of the beneficiary's death. Substitution may be indicated by appending to the name of the primary beneficiary the letters LDPS, standing for "lineal descendants per stirpes." This designation substitutes a deceased beneficiary's descendants who survive the owner for a beneficiary who fails to so survive, the descendants to be identified and to share in accordance with the law of the beneficiary's domicile at the owner's death governing inheritance by descendants of an intestate. Other forms of identifying beneficiaries who are to take on one or more contingencies, and rules for providing proofs and assurances needed to satisfy reasonable concerns by registering entities regarding conditions and identities relevant to accurate implementation of registration beneficiary form, may be contained in a registering entity's terms and conditions.

(2) The following are illustrations of registrations in beneficiary form which a registering entity may authorize:

(a) Sole owner-sole beneficiary: John S Brown TOD (or POD) John S Brown Jr.

(b) Multiple owners-sole beneficiary: John S Brown Mary B Brown JT TEN TOD John S Brown Jr.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 2, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-5. Applicability.

(1) This chapter applies to:

(a) A fiduciary acting under a will or power of attorney executed before, on, or after July 1, 2017;

(b) A personal representative acting for a decedent who died before, on, or after July 1, 2017;

(c) A conservatorship proceeding commenced before, on, or after July 1, 2017; and

(d) A trustee acting under a trust created before, on, or after July 1, 2017.

(2) This chapter applies to a custodian if the user resides in this state or resided in this state at the time of the user's death.

(3) This chapter does not apply to a digital asset of an employer used by an employee in the ordinary course of the employer's business.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 3, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-7. User direction for disclosure of digital assets.

(1) A user may use an online tool to direct the custodian to disclose to a designated recipient or not to disclose some or all of the user's digital assets, including the content of electronic communications. If the online tool allows the user to modify or delete a direction at all times, a direction regarding disclosure using an online tool overrides a contrary direction by the user in a will, trust, power of attorney or other record.

(2) If a user has not used an online tool to give direction under subsection (1) or if the custodian has not provided an online tool, the user may allow or prohibit in a will, trust, power of attorney, or other record, disclosure to a fiduciary of some or all of the user's digital assets, including the content of electronic communications sent or received by the user.

(3) A user's direction under subsection (1) or (2) overrides a contrary provision in a terms-of-service agreement that does not require the user to act affirmatively and distinctly from the user's assent to the terms of service.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 4, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-9. Terms-of-service agreement.

(1) This chapter does not change or impair a right of a custodian or a user under a terms-of-service agreement to access and use digital assets of the user.

(2) This chapter does not give a fiduciary or designated recipient any new or expanded rights other than those held by the user for whom, or for whose estate, the fiduciary or designated recipient acts or represents.

(3) A fiduciary's or designated recipient's access to digital assets may be modified or eliminated by a user, by federal law, or by a terms-of-service agreement if the user has not provided direction under Section 91-23-7.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 5, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-11. Procedure for disclosing digital assets.

(1) When disclosing digital assets of a user under this chapter, the custodian may at its sole discretion:

(a) Grant a fiduciary or designated recipient full access to the user's account;

(b) Grant a fiduciary or designated recipient partial access to the user's account sufficient to perform the tasks with which the fiduciary or designated recipient is charged; or

(c) Provide a fiduciary or designated recipient a copy in a record of any digital asset that, on the date the custodian received the request for disclosure, the user could have accessed if the user were alive and had full capacity and access to the account.

(2) A custodian may assess a reasonable administrative charge for the cost of disclosing digital assets under this chapter.

(3) A custodian need not disclose under this chapter a digital asset deleted by a user.

(4) If a user directs or a fiduciary requests a custodian to disclose under this chapter some, but not all, of the user's digital assets, the custodian need not disclose the assets if segregation of the assets would impose an undue burden on the custodian. If the custodian believes the direction or request imposes an undue burden, the custodian or fiduciary may seek an order from the court to disclose:

(a) A subset limited by date of the user's digital assets;

(b) All of the user's digital assets to the fiduciary or designated recipient;

(c) None of the user's digital assets; or

(d) All of the user's digital assets to the court for review in camera.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 6, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-13. Disclosure of content of electronic communications of deceased user.

If a deceased user consented or a court directs disclosure of the contents of electronic communications of the user, the custodian shall disclose to the personal representative of the estate of the user the content of an electronic communication sent or received by the user if the representative gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) A certified copy of the death certificate of the user;

(c) A certified copy of letters of administration or letters testamentary of the representative;

(d) Unless the user provided direction using an online tool, a copy of the user's will, trust, power of attorney or other record evidencing the user's consent to disclosure of the content of electronic communications; and

(e) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the user's account;

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the user; or

(iii) A finding by the court that:

1. The user had a specific account with the custodian, identifiable by the information specified in subparagraph (i);

2. Disclosure of the content of electronic communications of the user would not violate 18 USC Section 2701 et seq., 47 USC Section 222, or other applicable law;

3. Unless the user provided direction using an online tool, the user consented to disclosure of the content of electronic communications; or

4. Disclosure of the content of electronic communications of the user is reasonably necessary for administration of the estate.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 7, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-15. Disclosure of other digital assets of deceased user.

Unless the user prohibited disclosure of digital assets or the court directs otherwise, a custodian shall disclose to the personal representative of the estate of a deceased user a catalogue of electronic communications sent or received by the user and digital assets, other than the content of electronic communications, of the user, if the representative gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) A certified copy of the death certificate of the user;

(c) A certified copy of letters of administration or letters testamentary of the representative; and

(d) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address, or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the user's account;

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the user;

(iii) An affidavit stating that disclosure of the user's digital assets is reasonably necessary for administration of the estate; or

(iv) A finding by the court that:

1. The user had a specific account with the custodian, identifiable by the information specified in subparagraph (i); or

2. Disclosure of the user's digital assets is reasonably necessary for administration of the estate.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 8, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-17. Disclosure of content of electronic communications of principal.

To the extent a power of attorney expressly grants an agent authority over the content of electronic communications sent or received by the principal and unless directed otherwise by the principal or the court, a custodian shall disclose to the agent the content if the agent gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) An original or copy of the power of attorney expressly granting the agent authority over the content of electronic communications of the principal;

(c) A certification by the agent, under penalty of perjury, that the power of attorney is in effect; and

(d) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the principal's account; or

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the principal.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 9, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-19. Disclosure of other digital assets of principal.

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, directed by the principal or provided by a power of attorney, a custodian shall disclose to an agent with specific authority over digital assets or general authority to act on behalf of a principal a catalogue of electronic communications sent or received by the principal and digital assets, other than the content of electronic communications, of the principal if the agent gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) An original or a copy of the power of attorney that gives the agent specific authority over digital assets or general authority to act on behalf of the principal;

(c) A certification by the agent, under penalty of perjury, that the power of attorney is in effect; and

(d) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the principal's account; or

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the principal.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 10, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-21. Disclosure of digital assets held in trust when trustee is original user.

Unless otherwise ordered by the court or provided in a trust, a custodian shall disclose to a trustee that is an original user of an account any digital asset of the account held in trust, including a catalogue of electronic communications of the trustee and the content of electronic communications.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 11, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-23. Disclosure of contents of electronic communications held in trust when trustee not original user.

Unless otherwise ordered by the court, directed by the user, or provided in a trust, a custodian shall disclose to a trustee that is not an original user of an account the content of an electronic communication sent or received by an original or successor user and carried, maintained, processed, received, or stored by the custodian in the account of the trust if the trustee gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) A certified copy of the trust instrument or a certification of the trust under Section 91-8-1013 that includes consent to disclosure of the content of electronic-communications to the trustee;

(c) A certification by the trustee, under penalty of perjury, that the trust exists and the trustee is a currently acting trustee of the trust; and

(d) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address, or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the trust's account; or

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 12, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-25. Disclosure of other digital assets held in trust when trustee not original user.

Disclosure of other digital assets held in trust when trustee not original user. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, directed by the user, or provided in a trust, a custodian shall disclose, to a trustee that is not an original user of an account, a catalogue of electronic communications sent or received by an original or successor user and stored, carried or maintained by the custodian in an account of the trust and any digital assets, other than the content of electronic communications, in which the trust has a right or interest if the trustee gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) A certified copy of the trust instrument or a certification of the trust under Section 91-8-1013;

(c) A certification by the trustee, under penalty of perjury, that the trust exists and the trustee is a currently acting trustee of the trust; and

(d) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the trust's account; or

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the trust.

HISTORY:
Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 13, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-27. Disclosure of digital assets to conservator of protected person.

(1) After an opportunity for a hearing under Chapter 13, Title 93, Mississippi Code of 1972, the court may grant a conservator access to the digital assets of a protected person.

(2) Unless otherwise ordered by the court or directed by the user, a custodian shall disclose to a conservator the catalogue of electronic communications sent or received by a protected person and any digital assets, other than the content of electronic communications, in which the protected person has a right or interest if the conservator gives the custodian:

(a) A written request for disclosure in physical or electronic form;

(b) A certified copy of the court order that gives the conservator authority over the digital assets of the protected person; and

(c) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the account of the protected person; or

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the protected person.

(3) A conservator with general authority to manage the assets of a protected person may request a custodian of the digital assets of the protected person to suspend or terminate an account of the protected person for good cause. A request made under this section must be accompanied by a certified copy of the court order giving the conservator authority over the protected person's property.

HISTORY:

Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 14, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-29. Fiduciary duty and authority.

(1) The legal duties imposed on a fiduciary charged with managing tangible property apply to the management of digital assets, including:

(a) The duty of care;

(b) The duty of loyalty; and

(c) The duty of confidentiality.

(2) A fiduciary's or designated recipient's authority with respect to a digital asset of a user:

(a) Except as otherwise provided in Section 91-23-7, is subject to the applicable terms of service;

(b) Is subject to other applicable law, including copyright law;

(c) In the case of a fiduciary, is limited by the scope of the fiduciary's duties; and

(d) May not be used to impersonate the user.

(3) A fiduciary with authority over the property of a decedent, protected person, principal or settlor has the right to access any digital asset in which the decedent, protected person, principal or settlor had a right or interest and that is not held by a custodian or subject to a terms-of-service agreement.

(4) A fiduciary acting within the scope of the fiduciary's duties is an authorized user of the property of the decedent, protected person, principal or settlor for the purpose of applicable computer fraud and unauthorized computer access laws, including Section 97-45-3.

(5) A fiduciary with authority over the tangible, personal property of a decedent, protected person, principal or settlor:

(a) Has the right to access the property and any digital asset stored in it; and

(b) Is an authorized user for the purpose of computer fraud and unauthorized computer access laws, including Section 97-45-3.

(6) A custodian may disclose information in an account to a fiduciary of the user when the information is required to terminate an account used to access digital assets licensed to the user.

(7) A fiduciary of a user may request a custodian to terminate the user's account. A request for termination must be in writing, in either physical or electronic form, and accompanied by:

(a) If the user is deceased, a certified copy of the death certificate of the user;

(b) A certified copy of the letters of administration or letters testamentary of the representative, court order, power of attorney, or trust giving the fiduciary authority over the account; and

(c) If requested by the custodian:

(i) A number, username, address or other unique subscriber or account identifier assigned by the custodian to identify the user's account;

(ii) Evidence linking the account to the user; or

(iii) A finding by the court that the user had a specific account with the custodian, identifiable by the information specified in subparagraph (i) of this paragraph (c).

HISTORY:

Laws, 2017, ch. 419, § 15, eff from and after July 1, 2017.

§ 91-23-31. Custodian compliance and immunity.

(1) Not later than sixty (60) days after receipt of the information required under Sections 91-23-13 through 91-23-29, a custodian shall comply with a request under this chapter from a fiduciary or designated recipient to disclose digital assets or terminate an account. If the custodian fails to comply, the fiduciary or designated recipient may apply to the court for an order directing compliance.

(2) An order under subsection (1) directing compliance must contain a finding that compliance is not in violation of 18 USC Section 2702.

(3) A custodian may notify the user that a request for disclosure or to terminate an account was made under this chapter.

(4) A custodian may deny a request under this chapter from a fiduciary or designated recipient for disclosure of digital assets or to terminate an account if the custodian is aware of any lawful access to the account following the receipt of the fiduciary's request.

(5) This chapter does not limit a custodian's ability to obtain or require a fiduciary or designated recipient requesting disclosure or termination under this chapter to obtain a court order which:

(a) Specifies that an account belongs to the protected person or principal;

(b) Specifies that there is sufficient consent from the protected person or principal to support the requested disclosure; and

(c) Contains a finding required by law other than this chapter.

(6) A custodian and its officers, employees and agents are immune from liability for an act or omission done in good faith in compliance with this chapter.

MARRIAGE

Sec.

93-1-1. Certain marriages declared incestuous and void.
93-1-3. Unlawful marriage; effect of marrying outside of and returning to state.
93-1-5. Conditions precedent to issuance of license; penalty for noncompliance.
93-1-7. Repealed.
93-1-9. Noncompliance with §§ 93-1-5 and 93-1-7 not to affect validity of solemnized marriage followed by cohabitation.
93-1-11. Hours for issuance of licenses.
93-1-13. License essential.
93-1-15. License and solemnization required for valid marriage.
93-1-17. By whom marriages may be solemnized.
93-1-18. Validation of certain marriages performed by mayors.
93-1-19. Marriage may be solemnized according to religious customs.
93-1-21. Repealed.
93-1-23. Custodian of records relating to marriage licenses.
93-1-25. Solicitation of marriage ceremony unlawful; penalty.

§ 93-1-1. Certain marriages declared incestuous and void.

(1) The son shall not marry his grandmother, his mother, or his stepmother; the brother his sister; the father his daughter, or his legally adopted daughter, or his grand-daughter; the son shall not marry the daughter of his father begotten of his stepmother, or his aunt, being his father's or mother's sister, nor shall the children of brother or sister, or brothers and sisters intermarry being first cousins by blood. The father shall not marry his son's widow; a man shall not marry his wife's daughter, or his wife's daughter's daughter, or his wife's son's daughter, or the daughter of his brother or sister; and the like prohibition shall extend to females in the same degrees. All marriages prohibited by this subsection are incestuous and void.

(2) Any marriage between persons of the same gender is prohibited and null and void from the beginning. Any marriage between persons of the same gender that is valid in another jurisdiction does not constitute a legal or valid marriage in Mississippi.

Editor's Notes —

On June 26, 2015, the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Obergefell v. Hodges (2015 U.S. LEXIS 4250), held that under the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment, same-sex couples have a fundamental right to marry, and that since same-sex couples can exercise the fundamental right to marry in all states, there is no lawful basis for a state to refuse to recognize a lawful same-sex marriage performed in another state on the ground of its same-sex character.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Constitutionality.

1. In general.

Mississippi's same-sex marriage ban violated the Fourteenth Amendment Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses as it deprived same-sex couples and their children of equal dignity under the law, and gay and lesbian citizens could not be subjected to second-class citizenship. Campaign for Southern Equal. v. Bryant, 64 F. Supp. 3d 906, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165913 (S.D. Miss. 2014), aff'd, 791 F.3d 625, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 11581 (5th Cir. Miss. 2015), in part, 197 F. Supp. 3d 905, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83036 (S.D. Miss. 2016).

Same-sex couples had standing to challenge Mississippi's same-sex marriage ban as they were all residents of Mississippi, where they were subject to laws which denied the first couple the right to marry and denied recognition of the second couple's out-of-state marriage, and Mississippi law caused them other substantial harms affecting their and their children's lives; a gay and lesbian advocacy group had standing to sue on behalf of its members, which allegedly suffered the same injuries as the couples, plus additional injuries. Campaign for Southern Equal. v. Bryant, 64 F. Supp. 3d 906, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 165913 (S.D. Miss. 2014), aff'd, 791 F.3d 625, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 11581 (5th Cir. Miss. 2015), in part, 197 F. Supp. 3d 905, 2016 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83036 (S.D. Miss. 2016).

A chancellor properly set aside a separate maintenance agreement where the parties' marriage was void under § 93-1-1 because they were uncle and niece; equitable estoppel was not available, since the parties had equal access to all the facts and ample opportunity to investigate the legality of the marriage, and public policy prevented validation of the void marriage by the doctrine of estoppel. Weeks v. Weeks, 654 So. 2d 33, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 200 (Miss. 1995).

In prosecution for incest, rule of construction is one of strictness in favor of defendant, and court may not impose punishment upon one not within strict letter of law. State ex rel. District Attorney v. Winslow, 208 Miss. 753, 45 So. 2d 574, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1950).

Construing Code 1942, §§ 457, 458, as setting forth conditions under which marriages are prohibited as incestuous under Code 1942, § 2234, there is no provision which clearly deals with the specific act of a son-in-law in marrying his mother-in-law, and order sustaining demurrer to indictment should be affirmed. State ex rel. District Attorney v. Winslow, 208 Miss. 753, 45 So. 2d 574, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1950).

2. Constitutionality.

District court correctly granted an injunction barring enforcement of Miss. Const. art. 14, § 263A and Miss. Code Ann. § 93-1-1(2), because same-sex couples may exercise the fundamental right to marry and there is no lawful basis for a State to refuse to recognize a lawful same-sex marriage performed in another State. Campaign Southern Equal. v. Bryant, 791 F.3d 625, 2015 U.S. App. LEXIS 11581 (5th Cir. Miss. 2015).

§ 93-1-5. Conditions precedent to issuance of license; penalty for noncompliance.

(1) Every male who is at least seventeen (17) years old and every female who is at least fifteen (15) years old shall be capable in law of contracting marriage. However, males and females under the age twenty-one (21) years must furnish the circuit clerk satisfactory evidence of consent to the marriage by the parents or guardians of the parties. It shall be unlawful for the circuit court clerk to issue a marriage license until the following conditions precedent have been complied with:

(a) Application for the license is to be made in writing to the clerk of the circuit court of any county in the State of Mississippi. The application shall be sworn to by both applicants and shall include:

(i) The names, ages and addresses of the parties applying;

(ii) The names and addresses of the parents of the applicants, and, for applicants under the age of twenty-one (21), if no parents, then names and addresses of the guardian or next of kin;

(iii) The signatures of witnesses; and

(iv) Any other data that may be required by law or the State Board of Health.

(b) Proof of age shall be presented to the circuit court clerk in the form of either a birth certificate, baptismal record, armed service discharge, armed service identification card, life insurance policy, insurance certificate, school record, driver's license, or other official document evidencing age. The document substantiating age and date of birth shall be examined by the circuit court clerk before whom application is made, and the circuit court clerk shall retain in his file with the application the document or a certified or photostatic copy of the document.

(c) Applicants under the age of twenty-one (21) must submit affidavits showing the age of both applying parties made by either the father, mother, guardian or next of kin of each of the contracting parties and filed with the clerk of the circuit court along with the application.

(d) If the male applicant is under seventeen (17) years of age or the female is under fifteen (15) years of age, and satisfactory proof is furnished to the judge of any circuit, chancery or county court that sufficient reasons exist and that the parties desire to be married to each other and that the parents or other person in loco parentis of the person or persons so under age consent to the marriage, then the judge of any such court in the county where either of the parties resides may waive the minimum age requirement and by written instrument authorize the clerk of the court to issue the marriage license to the parties if they are otherwise qualified by law. Authorization shall be a part of the confidential files of the clerk of the court, subject to inspection only by written permission of the judge.

(e) In no event shall a license be issued by the circuit court clerk when it appears to the circuit court clerk that the applicants are, or either of them is:

(i) Intoxicated; or

(ii) Suffering from a mental illness or an intellectual disability to the extent that the clerk believes that the person does not understand the nature and consequences of the application for a marriage license.

(2) Any circuit clerk shall be liable under his official bond because of noncompliance with the provisions of this section.

(3) Any circuit court clerk who issues a marriage license without complying with the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than Fifty Dollars ($50.00) and not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Where decedent and his alleged surviving widow, in good faith and with the bona fide intention of becoming man and wife, had entered into a ceremonial marriage, thinking that his first wife was dead, when, in fact, she did not die until 1923, such marriage became lawful and valid upon the death of the first wife, without any new or different understanding or intention between them, so that second wife was his lawful widow and their offspring became and were legitimate children, entitled to share in his estate with the offspring of the first marriage. Johnson v. Johnson, 196 Miss. 768, 17 So. 2d 805, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 255 (Miss. 1944).

Marriage of parties who had right to marry without consent of anyone held not invalidated because of noncompliance with statute in that father of the wife, and a kinsman of the husband had obtained the license for the marriage, in view of manifest purpose of statute to prevent runaway marriages by juveniles below the age of consent. Zeigler v. Zeigler, 174 Miss. 302, 164 So. 768, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1935).

Marriage license issued by circuit court clerk held valid, though female did not reside in such county. Hunt v. Hunt, 172 Miss. 732, 161 So. 119, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 172 (Miss. 1935).

Brother and sister of deceased, allegedly insane at time of marriage, could not after his death, in suit to have themselves declared heirs, collaterally attack marriage which was merely voidable. White v. Williams, 159 Miss. 732, 132 So. 573, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 82 (Miss. 1931).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Female applicant under age of twenty-one is required to file application for marriage license in county of her residence which is defined by State Supreme Court as being county of residence of her parents or guardian. 1990 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 163.

A circuit clerk may issue a marriage license to a couple who have met the statutory conditions precedent. 1998 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 2.

A medical certificate expires in 30 days for purposes of filing an application for a marriage license. 1998 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 638.

If two applicants for a marriage license present the application and proper medical certificate dated within 30 days prior to the application and return after the 30 day period has expired to obtain the license, the circuit clerk may issue the license, and the applicants will not be required to obtain a new medical certificate and present a new application. 1998 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 638.

The fact that proffered documents are issued by a foreign government has no effect on the ability of an applicant to secure a marriage license. 2002 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 167.

A circuit clerk must make the factual determination that a document does substantiate an applicant's age and date of birth before a marriage license may be lawfully issued, and it is left to the discretion of the circuit clerk as to what steps are appropriate in making such determinations. 2002 Miss. Op. Att'y Gen. 167.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Common-law marriages.

1. In general.

Legal relationship of husband and wife may be created only in conformity with procedures authorized by statute. Pickens v. Pickens, 490 So. 2d 872, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2503 (Miss. 1986).

This section [Code 1942, § 465] and paragraph (14) of Code 1942, § 6998-02, which defines "widow" for the purposes of the workmen's compensation law, must be construed together. South Cent. Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Dependents of Campbell, 219 So. 2d 140, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1413 (Miss. 1969).

Where decedent and his alleged surviving widow, in good faith and with the bona fide intention of becoming man and wife, had entered into a ceremonial marriage in 1896 under a regular license, thinking that his first wife was dead, when, in fact, she did not die until 1923, such marriage became lawful and valid upon the death of the first wife, without any new or different understanding or intention between them, so that second wife was his lawful widow and their offspring became and were legitimate children, entitled to share in his estate with the offspring of the first marriage. Johnson v. Johnson, 196 Miss. 768, 17 So. 2d 805, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 255 (Miss. 1944).

Marriage of parties who had right to marry without consent of anyone held not invalidated because of noncompliance with statute in that father of the wife, and a kinsman of the husband, had obtained the license for the marriage, in view of manifest purpose of statute to prevent runaway marriages by juveniles below the age of consent. Zeigler v. Zeigler, 174 Miss. 302, 164 So. 768, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1935).

Marriage of girl of thirteen years and ten months of age followed by cohabitation held not voidable on account of girl's age alone. Hunt v. Hunt, 172 Miss. 732, 161 So. 119, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 172 (Miss. 1935).

2. Common-law marriages.

Cohabitation which had not ripened into a common law marriage prior to April 5, 1956 is wholly inoperative to vest marital rights to either party thereto. Pickens v. Pickens, 490 So. 2d 872, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2503 (Miss. 1986).

A new agreement between persons who continued to cohabit after the removal of an impediment which rendered a ceremonial marriage invalid, is not necessary to a valid common-law marriage. In re Estate of Barker, 236 Miss. 436, 110 So. 2d 615, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 337 (Miss. 1959).

If the parties are in good repute, cohabitation and reputation have more weight as proof of the common-law marriage. Butler's Estate v. McQuarters, 210 Miss. 86, 48 So. 2d 617, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 324 (Miss. 1950).

A common-law marriage, that is an agreement between a man and woman who then and there become a husband and wife followed by cohabitation is recognized in this state. Butler's Estate v. McQuarters, 210 Miss. 86, 48 So. 2d 617, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 324 (Miss. 1950).

There is strong presumption in favor of validity of ceremonial marriage as against prior alleged common law marriage. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

Law favors marriage, and, when once solemnized according to forms of law, will not declare its nullity upon anything less than clear and certain testimony, especially after it has been dissolved by death of one of the parties. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

A common-law marriage in this state is as valid and binding as the statutory ceremonial marriage. D'Antonio v. State, 187 Miss. 648, 191 So. 281, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 78 (Miss. 1939).

Evidence that a man and woman lived and cohabited together as man and wife for several months and openly proclaimed that relationship, constitutes a valid common-law marriage. D'Antonio v. State, 187 Miss. 648, 191 So. 281, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 78 (Miss. 1939).

Evidence that the defendant had lived with a distant cousin for several months as man and wife and that they openly proclaimed that relationship, at a time prior to his ceremonial marriage to another, sustained a conviction for bigamy, notwithstanding the failure of the state to allege and prove ceremonial marriage as regards defendant's first marriage. D'Antonio v. State, 187 Miss. 648, 191 So. 281, 1939 Miss. LEXIS 78 (Miss. 1939).

Attempted common-law marriage alleged to have been contracted in Mississippi before adoption of amendment providing that requirement should not invalidate any marriage good at common law was void. Olivari v. Clark, 175 Miss. 883, 168 So. 465, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 1936).

§ 93-1-15. License and solemnization required for valid marriage.

(1) No marriage contracted after April 5, 1956 shall be valid unless the contracting parties shall have obtained a marriage license as otherwise required by law, and unless also the marriage, after such license shall have been duly issued therefor, shall have been performed by or before any person, religious society, institution, or organization authorized by Sections 93-1-17 and 93-1-19 to solemnize marriages. Failure in any case to comply with both prerequisites aforesaid, which shall also be construed as mandatory and not merely directory, shall render the purported marriage absolutely void and any children born as a result thereof illegitimate.

(2) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to affect the validity of any marriage, either ceremonial or common law, contracted prior to April 5, 1956.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Common-law marriage.

1. In general.

Decedent's survivors sought to recover proceeds from a bank account that a joint tenant shared with decedent; because the two were cohabitating and were not married, a confidential relationship existed, which led to a presumption of undue influence. The joint tenant failed to rebut the presumption. Dean v. Kavanaugh, 920 So. 2d 528, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 71 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where the mother and father cohabited for many years, the mother was not entitled to an equitable distribution of property upon the termination of their relationship, because the parties never married pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-1-1 et seq., or purported to have married. Nichols v. Funderburk, 881 So. 2d 266, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1036 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd, 883 So. 2d 554, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1198 (Miss. 2004).

Legal relationship of husband and wife may be created only in conformity with procedures authorized by statute. Pickens v. Pickens, 490 So. 2d 872, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2503 (Miss. 1986).

Cohabitation which had not ripened into a common law marriage prior to April 5, 1956 is wholly inoperative to vest marital rights to either party thereto. Pickens v. Pickens, 490 So. 2d 872, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2503 (Miss. 1986).

Where one party claims a valid common-law marriage but both of the parties to the claimed common-law marriage subsequently enter into ceremonial marriages without securing a divorce, such parties are estopped to claim there was a mutual agreement to become common-law husband and wife. Enis v. State, 408 So. 2d 486, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2470 (Miss. 1981).

If a valid common-law marriage was celebrated in Georgia, it will be recognized in Mississippi even though common-law marriages are no longer permitted under § 93-1-15. George v. George, 389 So. 2d 1389, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 2134 (Miss. 1980).

Since the burden rested upon a wife, in attacking the validity of her second marriage, to establish by a search of the records in the city where her first husband had lived following their separation, or by other competent evidence, that there had been no divorce, in the absence of such showing the presumption of the validity of the wife's ceremonial marriage to the second husband prevailed, thus defeating her claim as the common law dependent wife of an alleged third husband contracted during the second husband's lifetime. Dale Polk Constr. Co. v. White, 287 So. 2d 278, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1332 (Miss. 1973).

It was not error to permit, in a manslaughter trial, the alleged common law husband of the defendant to testify against her for the reason that he had a living wife and could not contract another marriage, there being nothing in the record to show that the defendant and her alleged common law husband agreed to be man and wife under the common law rule, and, moreover, under the provisions of Code 1942, § 465.5, common law marriages had been abolished in Mississippi before defendant began to cohabit with the alleged common-law husband. Gaines v. State, 272 So. 2d 919, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1554 (Miss. 1973).

This section [Code 1942, § 465.5] and paragraph (14) of Code 1942, § 6998-02, which defines "widow" for the purposes of the workmen's compensation law, must be construed together. South Cent. Heating & Plumbing Co. v. Dependents of Campbell, 219 So. 2d 140, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1413 (Miss. 1969).

In order to establish the existence of a common-law marriage entered into prior to the enactment of this section [Code 1942, § 465.5] it was necessary to show an agreement between the parties that they intended to be husband and wife, and that this agreement was followed by cohabitation. Stutts v. Estate of Stutts, 194 So. 2d 229, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1405 (Miss. 1967), rev'd, 529 So. 2d 177, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1988).

A claim of the existence of a common-law marriage allegedly entered into prior to the enactment of this section [Code 1942, § 465.5] is regarded with suspicion and will be closely scrutinized, and the burden is on one who asserts the claim of the existence of such relationship to establish the existence of all essential elements. Stutts v. Estate of Stutts, 194 So. 2d 229, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1405 (Miss. 1967), rev'd, 529 So. 2d 177, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1988).

Where one of the parties to an alleged common-law marriage is dead, the essential elements of its existence must be shown by clear, consistent, and convincing evidence. Stutts v. Estate of Stutts, 194 So. 2d 229, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1405 (Miss. 1967), rev'd, 529 So. 2d 177, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1988).

An alleged common-law marriage between petitioner and one who died September 30, 1956, if established, would not have been affected by this section [Code 1942, § 465.5] under which common-law marriages are thereafter invalidated. Ladnier v. Estate of Ladnier, 235 Miss. 374, 109 So. 2d 338, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 439 (Miss. 1959).

2. Common-law marriage.

Claimant's request for life insurance benefits under a policy governed by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, 29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq., was properly denied because the claimant and the insured, who was the claimant's putative common law spouse, were not legally married, as Miss. Code Ann. § 93-1-15 indicated that Mississippi did not recognize common law marriages, and the policy provided dependent coverage only for lawful spouses. Price v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 68063 (N.D. Miss. Sept. 8, 2008).

§ 93-1-17. By whom marriages may be solemnized.

Any minister of the gospel ordained according to the rules of his church or society, in good standing; any Rabbi or other spiritual leader of any other religious body authorized under the rules of such religious body to solemnize rites of matrimony and being in good standing; any judge of the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, circuit court, chancery court or county court may solemnize the rites of matrimony between any persons anywhere within this state who shall produce a license granted as herein directed. Justice court judges and members of the boards of supervisors may likewise solemnize the rites of matrimony within their respective counties. Any marriages performed by a mayor of a municipality prior to March 14, 1994 are valid provided such marriages satisfy the requirements of Section 93-1-18.

1. Validity of marriage in general.
2. Validity of second marriage.
3. —Presumptions.
4. —Burden of proof.
5. —Evidence.
6. Annulment of marriage.

1. Validity of marriage in general.

The Universal Life Church is enough of a "religious body" and a minister of that church is enough of a "spiritual leader" to qualify to perform rights of matrimony under § 93-1-17. In re Last Will & Testament of Blackwell, 531 So. 2d 1193, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 411 (Miss. 1988).

Every presumption will be indulged in favor of the validity of a marriage solemnized according to the forms of law. Alabama & V. R. Co. v. Beardsley, 79 Miss. 417, 30 So. 660, 1901 Miss.

LEXIS 57 (Miss. 1901); Ladner v. Pigford, 138 Miss. 461, 103 So. 218, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 64 (Miss. 1925).

2. Validity of second marriage.

Presumption of validity attaching to a ceremonial marriage and the burden resting on one who assails it as bigamous to prove not only a former marriage but also that it was then subsisting, is supported by sound public policy. Matthews v. Jones, 149 F.2d 893, 1945 U.S. App. LEXIS 2711 (5th Cir. Miss. 1945).

3. —Presumptions.

Ceremonial marriage raises presumption that any former marriages of either party have been dissolved either by death or divorce and burden of overcoming such presumption rests on party asserting invalidity of subsequent marriage. Wallace v. Herring, 207 Miss. 658, 43 So. 2d 100, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 377 (Miss. 1949).

Presumption arising from subsequent ceremonial marriage that prior marriages have been dissolved by divorce is one of the strongest presumptions known to law and will prevail unless overcome by competent evidence to contrary. Wallace v. Herring, 207 Miss. 658, 43 So. 2d 100, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 377 (Miss. 1949).

There is strong presumption in favor of validity of ceremonial marriage as against prior alleged common law marriage. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

Presumption of marriage from cohabitation and reputation is rebutted or overcome by proof of subsequent ceremonial or actual marriage, since presumption of validity of such marriage is stronger than presumption of previous marriage from cohabitation and reputation. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

Marriage presumed valid though former husband still living. McAllum v. Spinks, 129 Miss. 237, 91 So. 694, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 1922).

The presumption that a marriage solemnized according to law is valid is superior to the presumption of life. Sullivan v. Grand Lodge, K. P., 97 Miss. 218, 52 So. 360, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1910); Ladner v. Pigford, 138 Miss. 461, 103 So. 218, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 64 (Miss. 1925).

4. —Burden of proof.

Burden of proof is upon the person attacking the validity of a marriage. Sullivan v. Grand Lodge, K. P., 97 Miss. 218, 52 So. 360, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1910); Buscaglia v. Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., 149 F.2d 493, 1945 U.S. App. LEXIS 4241 (1st Cir. P.R. 1945).

5. —Evidence.

Law favors marriage, and, when once solemnized according to forms of law, will not declare its nullity upon anything less than clear and certain testimony, especially after it has been dissolved by death of one of the parties. Whitman v. Whitman, 206 Miss. 838, 41 So. 2d 22, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1949).

Acts and declarations of the parties, general repute in the family, and declarations of deceased relatives may be used to establish the fact of marriage. McAllum v. Spinks, 129 Miss. 237, 91 So. 694, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 1922).

Testimony held sufficient to establish validity of a second marriage in the absence of opposing testimony that the first husband was not dead. Taylor v. Garrett, 101 Miss. 660, 57 So. 658, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1911).

Where evidence shows that insured was not divorced from his first wife a second marriage was invalid. Sullivan v. Grand Lodge, K. P., 97 Miss. 218, 52 So. 360, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1910).

Where plaintiff lived with her first husband most of the time but not continuously in the county of their marriage until plaintiff's second marriage, the jury may find, from the fact that the records of such county did not show a divorce and from other testimony, that there was no divorce from the first marriage. Colored Knights of Pythias v. Tucker, 92 Miss. 501, 46 So. 51, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 197 (Miss. 1908).

The jury must determine whether the presumption of the validity of a second marriage was overcome by the evidence that no divorce had been obtained from the first. Colored Knights of Pythias v. Tucker, 92 Miss. 501, 46 So. 51, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 197 (Miss. 1908).

6. Annulment of marriage.

Unratified contract of marriage may be annulled on the ground of duress. Marsh v. Whittington, 88 Miss. 400, 40 So. 326, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 106 (Miss. 1906).

The clerk or keeper of the minutes, proceedings, or other books of the religious society wherein such marriage shall be had and solemnized, shall make a true and faithful register of all marriages solemnized in the society, in a book kept by him for that purpose, and return a certificate of the same to the clerk of the circuit court of the county, to be by him recorded, under the penalty prescribed in Section 93-1-21.

HUSBAND AND WIFE

Sec.
93-3-1. Disability of coverture abolished; cause of action for loss of consortium of husband.
93-3-3. May sue each other.
93-3-5. Dower and curtesy abolished.
93-3-7. Restrictions on contracts between husband and wife.
93-3-9. Validity of conveyance or lease between spouses.
93-3-11. Removal of disabilities of minority of certain married persons with respect to homestead transactions; presumption of occupancy.
93-3-13. Liability of husband for property or income of wife.

§ 93-3-1. Disability of coverture abolished; cause of action for loss of consortium of husband.

Married women are fully emancipated from all disability on account of coverture; and the common law as to the disabilities of married women and its effect on the rights of property of the wife, is totally abrogated, and marriage shall not impose any disability or incapacity on a woman as to the ownership, acquisition, or disposition of property of any sort, or as to her capacity to make contracts and do all acts in reference to property which she could lawfully do if she were not married. Every woman not married, or hereafter to be married shall have the same capacity to acquire, hold, manage, control, use, enjoy and dispose of all property, real and personal, in possession or expectancy, and to make any contract in reference to it, and to bind herself personally, and to sue and be sued, with all the rights and liabilities incident thereto, as if she were not married. A married woman shall have a cause of action for loss of consortium through negligent injury of her husband.

1. Marriage in general.

Where the parties were separated several years and the husband won $ 2,600,000 in a lottery shortly before the divorce but did not disclose this, in the wife's modification action for alimony and an equitable division of property, a remand was required for a determination under the applicable case law of whether the lottery ticket constituted marital property under Hemsley, and if so, for an equitable division pursuant to Ferguson; in light of the husband's failure to disclose the winnings, and in light of Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05, the chancery court also erred in denying the wife's motion for contempt. Kalman v. Kalman, 905 So. 2d 760, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1101 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Father argued that the award of the marital home to the mother was an affront to basic principles of equity, primarily because of her adulterous relationship. However, the mother had primarily "maintained the marital home," it was close to her extended family, and in fact, it had been given to the parties by the mother's father; further, the father was awarded sole possession of his retirement benefits, and therefore, there was no inequity. Sandlin v. Sandlin, 906 So. 2d 39, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1115 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Mother asserted the chancellor erred in his division of the marital property because she was left with a deficit, that the father's income was almost three times that of her own, and that she should have been awarded alimony. However, the denial of alimony certainly did not leave the mother destitute, the property division was otherwise equitable, and there was no error in the chancellor's decision to deny alimony. Sandlin v. Sandlin, 906 So. 2d 39, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1115 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Under void marriage husband paying off encumbrance on wife's land acts as mere volunteer, and thereby acquires no lien or other right in wife's property. Brown v. Brown, 90 Miss. 410, 43 So. 178, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 47 (Miss. 1907).

2. Domicile.

The domicile of the husband is that of the wife. She cannot, to suit her convenience or pleasure, adopt a different home by refusing to reside in the domicile of his choice. Suter v. Suter, 72 Miss. 345, 16 So. 673, 1894 Miss. LEXIS 106 (Miss. 1894).

3. Duty to support.

In the absence of any express agreement, where a married woman shall obtain necessities, whether in the form of goods or services, for her own personal use or benefit, under circumstances which, if she had not been married, would give rise by implication to a contract on her part to pay for such goods or services, she shall be liable, jointly with her husband, for the value of such goods or services, and recovery therefor may be had from her separate estate. Cooke v. Adams, 183 So. 2d 925, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1455 (Miss. 1966).

Duty of husband to support wife arises out of marital relationship and continues during existence of that relationship. Henderson v. Henderson, 208 Miss. 98, 43 So. 2d 871, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1950).

Husband's duty to support his wife requires him to provide her with place of abode as a suitable home, measured in light of modern standards of civilization as pertains to health, comfort and welfare, the normal living of persons of their social rank and standard of living, within means and earning power of husband. Henderson v. Henderson, 208 Miss. 98, 43 So. 2d 871, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1950).

Decree against wife in favor of husband for sum of money expended by husband in making repairs on house owned by wife, which were necessary to put house in livable condition and in which parties lived until husband deserted wife is erroneous when the repair was within means of husband and he was not required himself to acquire and make available a home for his wife. Henderson v. Henderson, 208 Miss. 98, 43 So. 2d 871, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1950).

Husband's primary liability for necessities is determined at the time the expense was incurred, unaffected by subsequent separation. McLemore v. Riley's Hospital, Inc., 197 Miss. 317, 20 So. 2d 67, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 302 (Miss. 1944), overruled, Cooke v. Adams, 183 So. 2d 925, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1455 (Miss. 1966).

4. Alimony, right to.

This section [Code 1942, § 451] does not deprive a woman of her right to alimony. Verner v. Verner, 62 Miss. 260, 1884 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1884).

5. Antenuptial contracts.

An antenuptial contract between husband and wife as to her property is rescindable at their joint pleasure, and is rescinded pro tanto by their joint conveyance of part of the property. Stevenson v. Renardet, 83 Miss. 392, 35 So. 576, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1904), limited, Cole v. Cole, 99 Miss. 335, 54 So. 953, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 30 (Miss. 1910).

6. Transactions between spouses generally.

Married woman may enter partnership with husband. Jones v. Jones, 99 Miss. 600, 55 So. 361, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1911).

A contract between a husband and wife, upon sufficient consideration, by which the wife relinquished all claims against her husband's estate is valid. Wyatt v. Wyatt, 81 Miss. 219, 32 So. 317, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 111 (Miss. 1902).

7. Agency of husband.

To charge wife's separate estate, seller has burden of proving goods purchased by husband were for use of wife's estate. McGahey v. McGraw, 100 Miss. 295, 56 So. 397, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 34 (Miss. 1911).

Husband's authority to sign release of landlord's lien for wife question for jury. Holden v. Rice Mercantile Co., 96 Miss. 425, 51 So. 895, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 200 (Miss. 1910).

Wife's property not liable for material purchased by her husband without her consent, for the erection of a building on her land. Schiaffino v. Christ, 96 Miss. 801, 51 So. 546, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 185 (Miss. 1910).

A wife is not liable to the penalty prescribed by Code 1892, § 1590, for selling or giving away liquors unlawfully, because her husband, without her knowledge and contrary to her express orders and his promise to refrain from so doing, sells intoxicating liquors in her grocery store, although he be the general manager of her business. Thurman v. Adams, 82 Miss. 204, 33 So. 944, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1903).

8. Title to property in general.

Wife of guardian could not acquire title to property of ward which guardian could not acquire. Brandau v. Greer, 95 Miss. 100, 48 So. 519, 1909 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1909).

Sale for taxes not invalidated solely because purchaser is wife of collector making sale. Means v. Haley, 86 Miss. 557, 38 So. 506, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 56 (Miss. 1905).

Where a husband before marriage fraudulently acquired a claim of title to land his widow cannot under a conveyance from him during coverture hold the land as against the defrauded owner, nor can she recover of such owner the money paid to him by her husband in attempting to hide his fraud. Hamblet v. Harrison, 80 Miss. 118, 31 So. 580, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1902).

9. Transfers and conveyances in general.

Conveyance to "Pink Boutwell and wife" created tenancy in common. Conn v. Boutwell, 101 Miss. 353, 58 So. 105, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 1912).

Deed to grantee and his wife, and to "his" heirs and assigns, with habendum clause to "his" heirs and assigns conveyed an estate to the husband and wife by entireties, clerical errors being immaterial. W. C. Ellis Co. v. Walker, 101 Miss. 326, 58 So. 97, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 151 (Miss. 1912).

A deed executed by a wife to a county, purporting to convey her land in payment of a sum due by her husband as a defaulting officer, is void if the same be coerced by declarations of the district attorney to the effect that her husband would be sent to the penitentiary if it were not executed. Allen v. Leflore County, 78 Miss. 671, 29 So. 161, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 136 (Miss. 1900).

Fraud on marital rights cannot be predicated of a voluntary conveyance by either husband or wife made to prevent the other from inheriting. Jones v. Somerville, 78 Miss. 269, 28 So. 940, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 119 (Miss. 1900).

10. Co-tenancy.

Purchase by wife of one of co-tenants, at sale under deed of trust given by former owner, enures to benefit of all co-tenants. Beaman v. Beaman, 90 Miss. 762, 44 So. 987, 1907 Miss. LEXIS 126 (Miss. 1907).

That the husband of a co-tenant occupied the joint estate with her, and that he under the law is the recognized head of the family does not limit her liability for compensation to the other co-tenants for her use and occupation of the estate. Walker v. Williams, 84 Miss. 392, 36 So. 450, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 1904).

11. Transfers by husband to wife.

A conveyance from a husband to his wife, reciting a legal consideration, is prima facie valid and the burden of proof to show it is fraudulent is on the creditor of the husband who assails it. Virden v. Dwyer, 78 Miss. 763, 30 So. 45, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 153 (Miss. 1901).

12. Contracts.

The denial to a wife of separate maintenance and the custody of the children in no way invalidated claims for debt, which the wife may have against the husband as a result of contract, either express or implied. Tobias v. Tobias, 225 Miss. 392, 83 So. 2d 638, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 596 (Miss. 1955).

A married woman is bound by a contract to pay her own medical bills. Montgomery Ward & Co. v. Nickens, 203 Miss. 195, 33 So. 2d 815, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 250 (Miss. 1948).

Statute providing that husband and wife shall not contract with each other so as to entitle one to claim compensation from other for work or labor held not in conflict with statute emancipating women from disability on account of coverture and providing that married women should have capacity to own, control, and contract with reference to property. Martin v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Miss. 338, 164 So. 896, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1936).

Where evidence established that goods were furnished to wife under express contract between seller and wife, and solely on her credit, wife was personally liable. Skehan v. Davidson Co., 164 Miss. 518, 145 So. 247, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1933).

Husband does not become surety where wife defaults in performance of her contracts. Skehan v. Davidson Co., 164 Miss. 518, 145 So. 247, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1933).

Where it was not shown that husband's allowance to wife was not wholly adequate to her proper support, husband was not liable on wife's account for goods furnished. Skehan v. Davidson Co., 164 Miss. 518, 145 So. 247, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1933).

Where goods were furnished to wife solely on her credit, and wife did not create debt impliedly as husband's agent, husband was not liable. Skehan v. Davidson Co., 164 Miss. 518, 145 So. 247, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1933).

13. Torts.

Common law unity concept which prohibited suits between spouses for any claim is no longer viable and doctrine of interspousal tort immunity cannot be maintained. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Abrogation of rule of interspousal tort immunity required reversal of decision of trial judge dismissing complaint by wife against her husband for alleged assault and battery. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Exclusive remedy provisions of Workers' Compensation Act, § 71-3-9, preclude action by wife of injured employee for loss of consortium. West v. Plastifax, Inc., 505 So. 2d 1026, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2497 (Miss. 1987).

Wife who has suffered substantial loss of conjugal rights as direct proximate result of injury to her husband caused by negligence of his employer is entitled to recover compensation. Walters v. Inexco Oil Co., 511 F. Supp. 21, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12763 (S.D. Miss. 1979), aff'd, 632 F.2d 891, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 12555 (5th Cir. Miss. 1980).

A father's negligence which contributed to the injury sustained by his son, and which the trial court held under the Mississippi comparative negligence statute justified a substantial reduction in the award originally made by the court for the son's injuries, could not be made the basis for a reduction in the non-negligent wife's award for loss of consortium and past and subsequent services to her paraplegic son. Wright v. Standard Oil Co., 470 F.2d 1280, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6335 (5th Cir. Miss. 1972), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 938, 93 S. Ct. 2772, 37 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 2112 (U.S. 1973).

In an action for injuries sustained as result of drinking a portion of bottled beverage containing foreign substance, an instruction which authorized the jury, in assessing damages, to take into consideration hospital, doctors and drug bills necessarily created for her treatment as the result of drinking the beverage, should have used to word "incurred" rather than "created", but the error was not misleading nor prejudicial in view of the fact that the plaintiff's wife was an adult and could contract for payment of such bills. Laurel Coca Cola Bottling Co. v. Hankins, 222 Miss. 297, 75 So. 2d 731, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 646 (Miss. 1954).

A judgment denying recovery in a wife's action for personal injuries was not res judicata and did not constitute a bar to the husband's action for loss of services. Palmer v. Clarksdale Hospital, 213 Miss. 611, 57 So. 2d 476, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 403 (Miss. 1952).

Husband's connection with and participation in wife's suit for personal injuries in employing an attorney to prosecute such suit, conferring with the attorney, appearing as a witness in his wife's behalf, paying some of the expenses incurred in the suit, and taking part in negotiations for settlement, were not of such nature as to bind him by the judgment rendered in such suit, where he had no proprietary or financial interest in, or control over, his wife's suit, he had no lawful interest in or legal title to the claim on which his wife was suing, and his participation in the suit was not for the promotion or protection of any interest of his own. Palmer v. Clarksdale Hospital, 213 Miss. 611, 57 So. 2d 476, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 403 (Miss. 1952).

In personal injury action, evidence as to plaintiff's earning capacity as trained nurse held admissible, notwithstanding that plaintiff may have been supported by her husband. Mississippi C. R. Co. v. Smith, 176 Miss. 306, 168 So. 604, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 129 (Miss. 1936).

Husband entitled to recover for loss of consortium of injured wife. Brahan v. Meridian L. & R. Co., 121 Miss. 269, 83 So. 467, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 163 (Miss. 1919).

14. Actions against wife.

In view of the provisions of statutes enabling a married woman to have a separate estate, a creditor suing her must, in his bill in equity or declaration at law, aver that she has such an estate, and that the debt is a charge upon it or ought to be paid out of it. Canal Bank v. Partee, 99 U.S. 325, 25 L. Ed. 390, 1878 U.S. LEXIS 1545 (U.S. 1879).

15. Actions between spouses.

A wife was entitled to proceed in Chancery Court against her husband for partition of jointly held property as an incident to her action for divorce. Johnson v. Johnson, 550 So. 2d 416, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 454 (Miss. 1989).

Common law unity concept which prohibited suits between spouses for any claim is no longer viable and doctrine of interspousal tort immunity cannot be maintained. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Abrogation of rule of interspousal tort immunity required reversal of decision of trial judge dismissing complaint by wife against her husband for alleged assault and battery. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

In view of the provisions of §§ 11-21-3, 93-3-1 and 93-3-3, § 89-1-29 did not preclude a wife, who held real property as joint tenant with husband from whom she was separated but not divorced, from maintaining an action to partition the property, notwithstanding that husband continued to reside on the property and claimed it as his homestead. Trigg v. Trigg, 498 So. 2d 334, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2779 (Miss. 1986).

Husband cannot convert his wife into his money debtor by performing his legal duty to support her. Henderson v. Henderson, 208 Miss. 98, 43 So. 2d 871, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1950).

Section 94 of the Constitution of 1890, and §§ 1940 and 1941 of the Code of 1930 (Code 1942, §§ 451, 452), emancipating married women from the common-law disabilities of coverture, do not have the effect of removing the common-law disability of husband and wife to sue each other for a personal tort, and therefore the common-law rule stands that neither husband nor wife can maintain such a suit. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

Although wife can sue her husband, she has no cause of action in tort against him for injuries inflicted upon her by the negligence of her husband. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

Wife, injured as result of alleged negligence of husband in automobile accident, could not maintain action against husband's liability insurer, since tort claimant cannot maintain direct action against insurer but must first sue the insured, obtain judgment, and otherwise exhaust his remedies against the insured, and wife has no cause of action against husband for personal tort. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

In absence of statute, right of action against husband arising out of automobile accident, existing in wife before marriage, held extinguished by marriage. Scales v. Scales, 168 Miss. 439, 151 So. 551, 1934 Miss. LEXIS 334 (Miss. 1934), overruled, Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Neither husband nor wife can sue the other for personal torts. Austin v. Austin, 136 Miss. 61, 100 So. 591, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 109 (Miss. 1924), overruled, Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

16. —Limitations.

The statute of limitations bars the wife's causes of action against her husband as if they were not married. Wyatt v. Wyatt, 81 Miss. 219, 32 So. 317, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 111 (Miss. 1902).

17. Witness, competency as.

The law gives a defendant accused of crime the right, at his option, to introduce or not to introduce his wife as a witness. Cole v. State, 75 Miss. 142, 21 So. 706, 1897 Miss. LEXIS 90 (Miss. 1897).

The husband and wife are competent witnesses for each other in all cases. Saffold v. Horne, 72 Miss. 470, 18 So. 433, 1894 Miss. LEXIS 146 (Miss. 1894).

18. Consortium.

Married couple's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 50 was denied with respect to the jury's determination that the wife was not entitled to recover for loss of consortium under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-3-1 because, in light of the husband's testimony, the jury had a basis to conclude that his ability to engage in the same leisure activities, such as fishing, he enjoyed before he became sick undercut his and his wife's assertions that he was unable to engage in the same conjugal activities he pursued before he became sick. Further, the wife testified that the husband retained the ability to cook meals, mow the lawn, and so on, which provide a basis for the jury to conclude that normal aging explained his inability to engage in certain conjugal activities and that his activity level had not diminished to the extent that the couple claimed; and, while the wife pointed to many activities, including conjugal ones, that the husband no longer pursues, she did not provide testimony for determining a baseline with respect to the prior level of most of those activities, or when exactly they began to fade away. Jowers v. BOC Group, Inc., 608 F. Supp. 2d 724, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28806 (S.D. Miss. 2009), vacated, in part, 617 F.3d 346, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 17862 (5th Cir. Miss. 2010).

Trial court erred in awarding a wife loss of consortium damages pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-3-1 because the evidence offered was insufficient to support the wife's claim; she failed to show how her husband's injuries affected his relationship with her such that she suffered a compensable injury. Coho Res., Inc. v. McCarthy, 829 So. 2d 1, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 208 (Miss. 2002).

An action for loss of consortium survives the death of the party asserting it, and may be brought as any other action by the executor or administrator or personal representative of the deceased party. Flight Line, Inc. v. Tanksley, 608 So. 2d 1149, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1992).

When a loss resulting from injury to a person may be recovered by either the injured person or another person, e.g., for loss of consortium, a judgment for or against the injured party has preclusive effect on any such other person's claim for the loss to the same extent as upon the injured person. A judgment for or against any such other person precludes recovery by or on behalf of the injured person of any loss that could have been recovered in the first action. When a person with a family relationship to one suffering personal injury has a claim for loss to himself or herself resulting from the injury, the determination of issues in an action by the injured person to recover for his or her injuries is preclusive against the family member, unless the judgment was based on a defense that is unavailable against the family member in the second action. McCoy v. Colonial Baking Co., 572 So. 2d 850, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 714 (Miss. 1990).

A defense available against a plaintiff in his or her personal injury action is available against the spouse's derivative consortium action. Byrd v. Matthews, 571 So. 2d 258, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 698 (Miss. 1990).

A loss of consortium action is derivative, and contributory negligence applies, because the action lies on account of injuries to the other spouse. Thus, an award to a wife for loss of consortium should have been reduced by the contributory negligence of her husband. Choctaw, Inc. v. Wichner, 521 So. 2d 878, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 120 (Miss. 1988).

Exclusivity provisions of Workers' Compensation Act preclude consortium claim by wife of injured claimant in actions falling within scope of Act. Stevens v. FMC Corp., 515 So. 2d 928, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2883 (Miss. 1987).

The loss of consortium is the loss of any or all of the wife's rights to society, companionship, love, affection, aid, services, support, sexual relations and the comfort of her husband as special rights and duties growing out of the marriage covenant, the right to live together in the same house, to eat at the same table, and to participate together in the activities, duties and responsibilities necessary to make a home. Tribble v. Gregory, 288 So. 2d 13, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1835 (Miss. 1974).

The damages recoverable by a wife in an action for loss of consortium under Code 1972 § 93-3-1 must be limited to avoid double recovery for the same damages by both husband and wife. Tribble v. Gregory, 288 So. 2d 13, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1835 (Miss. 1974).

Consortium does not consist alone of intangible mental and emotional elements, but may include services performed by the husband for the wife which have a monetary value. Tribble v. Gregory, 288 So. 2d 13, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1835 (Miss. 1974).

The recovery allowable under Code 1972 § 93-3-1 is limited so as to eliminate recovery by the wife for loss of financial support by the husband, recovery for nursing services and recovery for pain and suffering of the husband because these are items that may be recovered by the husband in his suit. Tribble v. Gregory, 288 So. 2d 13, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1835 (Miss. 1974).

Where wife testified that she and her husband had had sexual relations about once a week before his injuries, but none since then, that she was deprived of his physical assistance in the usual and ordinary duties in and about the home and grounds, that they were not able to engage in activities after his injuries such as attending picture shows, church suppers, picnics and visiting friends, that her husband had a bed wetting problem, that without his assistance most of her time off from her job was spent in household duties, and that she was more nervous since the accident because of having to stay at home and wait on her husband, an award of $20,000 for loss of consortium was not so large that it evinced bias and prejudice on the part of the jury. Tribble v. Gregory, 288 So. 2d 13, 1974 Miss. LEXIS 1835 (Miss. 1974).

Whatever may be left of interspousal immunity in the tort field, § 93-3-3 has interred it forever with respect to property rights. Trigg v.

Trigg, 498 So. 2d 334, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2779 (Miss. 1986).

Section 94 of the Constitution of 1890, and Code 1930, §§ 1940, 1941 [Code 1942, §§ 451, 452], emancipating married women from the common-law disabilities of coverture, do not have the effect of removing the common-law disability of husband and wife to sue each other for a personal tort, and therefore the common-law rule stands that neither husband nor wife can maintain such a suit. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

Where wife intervened and claimed diamond ring sought to be replevied by husband from mother-in-law, judgment for wife did not entitle husband to reversal because no judgment rendered against mother-in-law. Lee v. Patterson, 92 Miss. 357, 45 So. 980 (Miss. 1908).

2. Suits for personal injury.

Abrogation of rule of interspousal tort immunity required reversal of decision of trial judge dismissing complaint by wife against her husband for alleged assault and battery. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Common law unity concept which prohibited suits between spouses for any claim is no longer viable and doctrine of interspousal tort immunity cannot be maintained. Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Doctrine of interspousal immunity bars personal injury lawsuit by one spouse against other which is filed subsequent to divorce and based upon cause of action arising prior to marriage. Matthews v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 471 So. 2d 1223, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2128 (Miss. 1985), overruled, Burns v. Burns, 518 So. 2d 1205, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1988).

Where wife died in an automobile accident as a result of the negligent operation of vehicle by her husband, she could not have sued the husband in tort even if she had survived. Durham v. Durham, 227 Miss. 76, 85 So. 2d 807, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 656 (Miss. 1956).

Although wife can sue her husband, she has no cause of action in tort against him for injuries inflicted upon her by his negligence. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

Wife, injured as result of alleged negligence of husband in automobile accident, could not maintain action against husband's liability insurer, since tort claimant cannot maintain direct action against insurer but must first sue the insured, obtain judgment, and otherwise exhaust his remedies against the insured, and wife has no cause of action against husband for personal tort. Burke v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co., 19 So. 2d 647 (La.App. 1 Cir. 1944), aff'd, 24 So. 2d 875, 1946 La. LEXIS 707 (La. 1946).

3. Divorce, alimony and support.

A wife was entitled to proceed in Chancery Court against her husband for partition of jointly held property as an incident to her action for divorce. Johnson v. Johnson, 550 So. 2d 416, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 454 (Miss. 1989).

Upon finding that wife was entitled to separate maintenance, chancellor was bound by equitable principles to award her an amount sufficient to maintain her standard of living in accord with husband's estate and ability to provide for her well being. Gray v. Gray, 484 So. 2d 1032, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2407 (Miss. 1986).

The denial to a wife of separate maintenance and the custody of the children in no way invalidated claims for debt, which the wife may have against the husband as a result of contract, either express or implied. Tobias v. Tobias, 225 Miss. 392, 83 So. 2d 638, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 596 (Miss. 1955).

Wife may sue in chancery court for support and maintenance against husband whether or not divorce is sought. Boyett v. Boyett, 152 Miss. 201, 119 So. 299, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 262 (Miss. 1928).

A divorce will be granted the wife on final hearing, if she is entitled to it, without reference to her purposes in suing. Bradford v. Bradford, 80 Miss. 467, 31 So. 963, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 277 (Miss. 1902).

Where the real purpose of the suit is to coerce the conveyance of property, her application for alimony and attorneys' fee to be paid by the husband pending the suit should be denied. Bradford v. Bradford, 80 Miss. 467, 31 So. 963, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 277 (Miss. 1902).

§ 93-3-7. Restrictions on contracts between husband and wife.

Husband and wife shall not contract with each other, so as to entitle the one to claim or receive any compensation from the other for work and labor, and any contract between them whereby one shall claim or shall receive compensation from the other for services rendered, shall be void. It shall not be lawful for the husband to rent the wife's plantation, houses, horses, mules, wagons, carts, or other implements, and with them, or with any of her means, to operate and carry on business in his own name or on his own account, but all business done with the means of the wife by the husband shall be deemed and held to be on her account and for her use, and by the husband as her agent and manager in business, as to all persons dealing with him without notice, unless the contract between the husband and wife which changes this relation, be evidenced by writing, subscribed by them, duly acknowledged, and filed with the chancery clerk of the county where such business may be done, to be recorded as other instruments.

2. Contracts.
3. Conveyances.
4. Use of wife's property or means by husband generally.
5. Agency of husband.
6. Notice to third persons.
7. Release or waiver.

1. Validity.

An indigent accused under sentence for aggravated assault would be entitled to appointment of counsel to represent him on appeal. Killingsworth v. State, 490 So. 2d 849, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2481 (Miss. 1986), overruled in part, Turner v. State, 818 So. 2d 1186, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 146 (Miss. 2001).

This provision, in prohibiting husband and wife from contracting with each other so as to entitle one to claim or receive compensation from other for work or labor is not violative of constitutional provision relating to emancipation of married women. Martin v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Miss. 338, 164 So. 896, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1936).

2. Contracts.

This section [Code 1942, § 454] was inapplicable to an action by a divorced wife against her former husband for an accounting as to rents, revenue and receipts derived from the operation of the land, on the partition of property, where under the bill and the wife's evidence, adopted by the court, the operation of the co-tenancy lands was a joint operation and there was not involved a contract between the husband and wife for work and labor. Horton v. Boatright, 231 Miss. 666, 97 So. 2d 637, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 553 (Miss. 1957).

Where a husband and wife made a partnership agreement and the consideration for the contract was founded on work and labor of the wife in the business, the partnership contract was not invalid and this section [Code 1942, § 454] had no application. McGehee v. McGehee, 227 Miss. 170, 85 So. 2d 799, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 670 (Miss. 1956).

Contract by wife in favor of husband for legal services to be rendered by him for her in recovery of her separate property held not enforceable by husband's assignee, since contract was void. Martin v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Miss. 338, 164 So. 896, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1936).

Contract between wife and husband for erection of a building on her separate property in consideration of payment to him as contractor was a nullity, and wife was liable for material furnished, and a lien therefor might be established against her property. Banks & Co. v. Pullen, 113 Miss. 632, 74 So. 424, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 134 (Miss. 1917).

3. Conveyances.

Where a husband acquires by fraud, before marriage, a claim of title to land, his widow cannot, under a conveyance from him during coverture, hold the land as against the defrauded owner; nor can she recover the money paid by her husband in attempting to hide the fraud. Hamblet v. Harrison, 80 Miss. 118, 31 So. 580, 1902 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1902).

Where a husband has conveyed land to his wife, although confessedly in fraud of his creditors, and they continue, as before, to occupy it together as their home, their joint possession will be referred to her title, and after her death he cannot claim, as against her heirs, that his possession was adverse to her. Claughton v. Claughton, 70 Miss. 384, 12 So. 340, 1892 Miss. LEXIS 121 (Miss. 1892).

Where a husband buys land, taking the title in the wife's name and his own jointly, and afterwards makes improvements thereon, the presumption is of a gift to her of half interest in both the land and improvements. Kripperdorf v. Wolfe, 70 Miss. 81, 12 So. 26 (Miss. 1892).

4. Use of wife's property or means by husband generally.

The statute does not apply where only the money of the wife is used by the husband. Leinkauf v. Barnes, 66 Miss. 207, 5 So. 402, 1888 Miss. LEXIS 91 (Miss. 1889).

5. Agency of husband.

One furnishing husband as general manager means for operating plantation, without knowledge that husband was acting for wife, could recover from wife. Rivers v. Eastman Cotton Oil Co., 159 Miss. 361, 132 So. 327, 1931 Miss. LEXIS 50 (Miss. 1931).

Wife held liable for goods husband, operating wife's plantation and his logging business with her means, purchased for family and logging business. Rivers v. Wade Hardware Co., 151 Miss. 163, 117 So. 259, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 271 (Miss. 1928).

Directed verdict proper where evidence fails to show defendant's husband was doing business with her property. Teasley v. Roberson, 149 Miss. 188, 115 So. 211, 1928 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1928).

Contract between wife and husband under which husband contracted for a consideration to erect a building on her separate property was a nullity, and wife's property was liable for materials furnished husband on credit on theory that husband was the wife's statutory agent. Banks & Co. v. Pullen, 113 Miss. 632, 74 So. 424, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 134 (Miss. 1917).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 454] a creditor may subject cotton raised on the wife's plantation to the payment of debts incurred for plantation and family supplies furnished the husband and used on the place. Dean v. Boyd, 86 Miss. 204, 38 So. 297, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1905).

A wife may, by her conduct, extend the scope of her husband's statutory agency as limited by this section [Code 1942, § 454] and make herself liable to persons dealing with him without notice for debts contracted in the course of such business. Johnson v. Jones, 82 Miss. 483, 34 So. 83, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 136 (Miss. 1903).

6. Notice to third persons.

Where recorded instruments showed that wife leased plantation to husband for 1917 and again for 1921, wife's testimony that husband held over from year to year and was her holdover tenant held not admissible as far as rights of third persons were concerned, to show an implied tenancy, in view of purposes and language of statute relating to contracts evidencing a business relationship between husband and wife which require a recorded lease covering the specific year or years in issue to establish the relationship of landlord and tenant. Chapman v. Chase Nat'l Bank, 178 Miss. 401, 173 So. 455, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 1937).

Wife held not estopped to assert that contract executed by her in favor of husband for payment of fee for legal services to be rendered by him for wife in recovery of her separate property was unenforceable as against bank which took pledge of fee with knowledge that contract was void as to wife. Martin v. First Nat'l Bank, 176 Miss. 338, 164 So. 896, 1936 Miss. LEXIS 96 (Miss. 1936).

7. Release or waiver.

The taking of security upon the property of the husband is not a waiver of the right given under this section [Code 1942, § 454]. Dean v. Boyd, 86 Miss. 204, 38 So. 297, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1905).

1. In general.

Where a husband assigned to his wife all his future earnings by an instrument which was not acknowledged and not recorded and neither the judgment creditor nor the garnishee had notice of the document until the garnishee was notified by counsel for the wife, this instrument was invalid as against the judgment creditor. Reynolds v. Smith, 226 Miss. 666, 85 So. 2d 178, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1956).

The intent and purpose of this section [Code 1942, § 455] is to render invalid secret transfers and conveyances by a debtor as against the claims of a creditor, or any other third person whose interest might be affected by the unreported conveyance and seeks to prevent a secret transfer from being used as a means of a divestment of title. Detrio v. Boylan, 190 F.2d 40, 1951 U.S. App. LEXIS 2375 (5th Cir. Miss. 1951).

2. Ownership of property involved.

Presumption as to separate ownership of personal property on premises occupied by husband and wife living together, is in husband. Federal Reserve Bank v. Wall, 138 Miss. 204, 103 So. 5, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1924).

A husband who manages his wife's farm under a verbal understanding with her that he is to own the crops is not the owner of the cotton produced thereon, under the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 455]. Williams v. Yazoo & M. V. R. Co., 82 Miss. 659, 35 So. 169, 1903 Miss. LEXIS 187 (Miss. 1903).

3. Validity of transfers.

A mineral deed executed by a defendant to his wife was invalid under § 93-3-9, as to creditors, where the deed was recorded after the debtor-creditor relationships arose. Morgan v. Sauls, 413 So. 2d 370, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 1881 (Miss. 1982).

A conveyance between husband and wife is valid or invalid for the same reasons as between other persons, and the validity of such conveyances must be tested by the same principals as a conveyance by the debtor to a stranger, when brought into question as fraudulent against creditors though conveyances between husband and wife should be carefully scrutinized on account of the temptation to give an unfair advantage to the wife over other creditors. Detrio v. Boylan, 190 F.2d 40, 1951 U.S. App. LEXIS 2375 (5th Cir. Miss. 1951).

Landlord had no lien upon trucks which he attached and which were sold by tenant to his wife prior to attachment. Rollings v. Rosenbaum, 166 Miss. 499, 148 So. 384, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 1933).

Unrecorded conditional sale of automobile by husband to wife is valid against third person, unless latter has valid claim, in absence of sale. Federal Credit Co. v. Scoggins, 158 Miss. 275, 130 So. 153, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 37 (Miss. 1930).

A transfer by a husband to his wife before he was adjudged a bankrupt was void as to the trustee in bankruptcy where the transfer was not recorded until after the trustee's appointment. Stockstill v. Brooks, 142 Miss. 691, 107 So. 888, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1926).

Conveyance between husband and wife held valid or invalid for same reason as between other persons. Burks v. Moody, 141 Miss. 370, 106 So. 528, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 429 (Miss. 1926).

Deed from husband to wife in good faith for value is valid as against creditor of husband in suit pending at time of conveyance. Burks v. Moody, 141 Miss. 370, 106 So. 528, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 429 (Miss. 1926).

Conveyance of interest in land by husband to wife void as to creditors existing prior to filing for record. Carberry v. Lann-Carter Hardware Co., 126 Miss. 293, 88 So. 769, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1921).

Conveyance from husband to wife properly set aside where grantor shown to be indebted at time of recordation. McCrory v. Donald, 119 Miss. 256, 80 So. 643, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 31 (Miss. 1919).

A conveyance for value and in good faith by a husband to his wife cannot be avoided by a creditor of the husband whose debt was unsecured at the time. Green & Sons v. Weems, 85 Miss. 566, 38 So. 551, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 196 (Miss. 1904).

4. —Leases.

Verbal lease between husband and wife held void as to creditors of husband. Dorsett v. Breithaupt, 133 Miss. 457, 97 So. 756, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 149 (Miss. 1923).

An agreement whereby a husband sublet a part of his leasehold to his wife is not within the condemnation of this section [Code 1942, § 455]. Underwood v. Ainsworth, 72 Miss. 328, 18 So. 379, 1894 Miss. LEXIS 141 (Miss. 1894).

5. —Gifts.

Although the deed transferring appellee husband's property to his wife was executed prior to the accident out of which appellant judgment creditor's lien arose, the deed was void as to the appellant and the appellant was entitled to subject this property to execution under his judgment where the deed in question was not supported by valuable consideration but was a gift to the wife, and it was not filed for record until after appellant's claim arose. Hudson v. Allen, 313 So. 2d 401, 1975 Miss. LEXIS 1674 (Miss. 1975).

The heirs at law of a decedent are not "third" persons as contemplated by this statute where the surviving widow claims certain personal property as gifts from the decedent. Reedy v. Alexander, 202 Miss. 80, 30 So. 2d 599, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1947).

Gift of chattels by husband to wife need not be in writing; husband's heirs not being "third persons" within statute requiring such transfer to be recorded. Self v. King, 124 Miss. 874, 87 So. 489, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 192 (Miss. 1921).

Gift of necessary wearing apparel and personal ornaments by husband to wife not within this section [Code 1942, § 455]. Kennington v. Hemingway, 101 Miss. 259, 57 So. 809, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 133 (Miss. 1912).

6. —Property purchased with means of other spouse.

Where wife gave to her husband proceeds from the sale of her house and lot for use in his business upon his oral promise that when his business permitted he would build her a home of her choice, but the husband's business did not prosper, and it was not shown that the husband used any of the wife's money in the purchase of the home, the husband did not hold title to the home in trust for the wife. Howell v. General Contract Corp., 229 Miss. 687, 91 So. 2d 831, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 1957).

Purchase of automobile by husband for wife with her money held valid as against husband's creditors. Dorsett v. Breithaupt, 133 Miss. 457, 97 So. 756, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 149 (Miss. 1923).

7. —Pending or threatened suit, effect of.

A transfer by a husband to his wife in payment of a just debt due the wife, evidenced by a writing acknowledged and recorded as required by the section [Code 1942, § 455], is not fraudulent because of actions threatening or pending against the husband. Donoghue v. Shull, 85 Miss. 404, 37 So. 817, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 1904).

A transfer of property from a husband to his wife, otherwise valid, is not rendered invalid by the fact that suits were threatened or pending against the husband at the time it was made. Donoghue v. Shull, 85 Miss. 404, 37 So. 817, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 1904).

8. Consideration.

Conveyance does not violate statute where it was not voluntary conveyance and there was consideration. Barbee v. Pigott, 507 So. 2d 77, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2475 (Miss. 1987).

Where a husband orally agreed to reconvey property to his wife which she had conveyed to him for the use of the security for the payment of certain notes, this was sufficient consideration to support a conveyance to the wife which was executed and recorded before the creditors of the husband secured a lien on his property. Detrio v. Boylan, 190 F.2d 40, 1951 U.S. App. LEXIS 2375 (5th Cir. Miss. 1951).

Recital of valid consideration in deed held prima facie true, burden of showing falsity of recital of valid consideration is on party attacking deed for fraud on creditors. Virden v. Dwyer, 78 Miss. 763, 30 So. 45, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 153 (Miss. 1901).

9. Persons protected.

Rollings v. Rosenbaum, 166 Miss. 499, 148 So. 384, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 1933).

The third persons against whom an unrecorded conveyance between husband and wife is void are such as claim an interest in, or right to, the property conveyed through or against the husband or wife, as the case may be, which claim would be valid in event that the conveyance had not been made. Federal Credit Co. v. Scoggins, 158 Miss. 275, 130 So. 153, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 37 (Miss. 1930).

Assignee of unrecorded conditional sale contract between husband and wife and seller's interest held entitled to possession as against third person, unless latter's possession is under superior claim. Federal Credit Co. v. Scoggins, 158 Miss. 275, 130 So. 153, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 37 (Miss. 1930).

Trustee may avoid transfer by bankrupt to his wife before he was adjudged bankrupt, but which was not filed for record until after trustee's appointment. Stockstill v. Brooks, 142 Miss. 691, 107 So. 888, 1926 Miss. LEXIS 130 (Miss. 1926).

Both antecedent and subsequent creditors of wife may attack her verbal transfer of store and stock of goods to husband. McCabe v. Guido, 116 Miss. 858, 77 So. 801, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 363 (Miss. 1917).

Insurance company was not a "third party" within the purview of this section [Code 1942, § 455] and was not prejudiced by fact that deed of wife conveying the property to husband, insured, was unrecorded, such conveyance being operative to invest title in husband within the meaning of the "unconditional and sole ownership" clause of a fire insurance policy. Groce v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 94 Miss. 201, 48 So. 298, 1908 Miss. LEXIS 45 (Miss. 1908).

A transfer of property from a husband to his wife, made with intent to defraud existing creditors, is valid as to his subsequent creditors unless made to defraud them. Donoghue v. Shull, 85 Miss. 404, 37 So. 817, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 1904).

10. Evidence.

A husband and wife are not competent witnesses against each other in a suit by a creditor to vacate a conveyance from the husband to the wife. Virden v. Dwyer, 78 Miss. 763, 30 So. 45, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 153 (Miss. 1901).

Neither the transfer nor notice to third parties can be established by parol proof. Montgomery v. Scott, 61 Miss. 409, 1883 Miss. LEXIS 149 (Miss. 1883).

11. Extraterritorial application.

This section [Code 1942, § 455], requiring transfers from the husband to the wife, and from her to him, to be recorded, has no application to property situated out of this state. Davis v. Williams, 73 Miss. 708, 19 So. 352 (Miss. 1896).

Property of the husband that he has removed to another state, and there transferred to the wife by a sale valid under the laws of such state, is not subject to the demands of his creditors on being brought back to the county in this state in which the husband and wife resided at the time of the removal of the property and have continued to reside, although the transfer to the wife has not been recorded in said county as required by this section [Code 1942, § 455]. Davis v. Williams, 73 Miss. 708, 19 So. 352 (Miss. 1896).

This section [Code 1942, § 455] does not affect a transfer by non-residents made out of the state, in case the property is subsequently brought into the state on removal of the parties to the state. Willis v. Memphis Grocery Co., 19 So. 101 (Miss. 1896).

A statute of Alabama, under which an unrecorded transfer between husband and wife, though good as between the parties, is void as to creditors and purchasers, cannot have any operation as to transactions made after the removal of the parties and property to this state. Walker v. Marseilles, 70 Miss. 283, 12 So. 211, 1892 Miss. LEXIS 108 (Miss. 1892).

12. Actions.

Tenant's wife who showed deed of sale to her reciting valid consideration for tenant's trucks attached by landlord made prima facie case, and landlord had burden to establish fraud or other defense. Rollings v. Rosenbaum, 166 Miss. 499, 148 So. 384, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 1933).

In action by tenant's wife to replevy trucks which were attached by landlord as tenant's, whether wife was entitled to replevy held for jury. Rollings v. Rosenbaum, 166 Miss. 499, 148 So. 384, 1933 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 1933).

A husband and wife are not competent witnesses against each other in a suit by a creditor of the husband to vacate a conveyance from the husband to the wife. Virden v. Dwyer, 78 Miss. 763, 30 So. 45, 1901 Miss. LEXIS 153 (Miss. 1901).

§ 93-3-11. Removal of disabilities of minority of certain married persons with respect to homestead transactions; presumption of occupancy.

The disabilities of minority of any married minor having attained the age of eighteen (18) are hereby removed solely for the purpose of executing, signing, or acknowledging contracts of purchase or sale, deeds, promissory notes, deeds of trust or mortgages, other negotiable or nonnegotiable instruments, assignments, or other transfers, homestead declarations, or homestead exemption applications, or other legal documents pertaining solely to the property occupied or to be occupied as the actual place of residence of such married minors. To assure validity and enforceability according to their terms of any legal documents executed by such married minors pursuant to this section, occupancy of, or intention to occupy, property as the place of residence of such married minors shall be conclusively presumed from the execution by them of such documents. The removal of disabilities provided under this section shall be supplemental and cumulative of other laws, but shall not be construed so as to apply to any transaction other than transactions pertaining to the residences or intended residences of such minors.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

The statute of limitations provided by this section [Code 1942, § 456] was inapplicable to a divorced wife's action against her former husband for an accounting on the partition of property, where under the allegations of the amended bill and the wife's evidence, which the court adopted, the husband did not appropriate to his own use the property of his wife or the income thereof, but the co-tenancy land was jointly operated by the parties and revenues arrived at from it was jointly applied to the discharge of the joint obligations. Horton v. Boatright, 231 Miss. 666, 97 So. 2d 637, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 553 (Miss. 1957).

The limitation of one year after receipt against proceedings to hold a husband or his representative accountable to his wife for the income or profits of her estate under this section [Code 1942, § 456], has no application to a proceeding by a widow to recover money in bank, being such income and profits deposited by her deceased husband in his own name, her purpose being the recovery of her own money and not the establishment of a claim against her husband's estate. Hendricks v. Peavy, 78 Miss. 316, 28 So. 944, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 121 (Miss. 1900).

Where a husband, having conveyed land to a trustee to hold in trust for his wife, afterwards, under alleged authority from the trustee, makes an unauthorized sale thereof, the fact that he applied part of the purchase money to discharge an encumbrance on the property made by the wife, will not estop her to recover the land. Edwards v. Hillier, 70 Miss. 803, 13 So. 692, 1893 Miss. LEXIS 63 (Miss. 1893).

Where, after the death of his wife, the husband sells the land of which she died seized, the heirs joining in the conveyance, with the agreement that they are to receive the purchase money, which, however, he appropriates, he is answerable to them for the same, regardless of any express promise to pay. Martin v. Tillman, 70 Miss. 614, 13 So. 251, 1910 Miss. LEXIS 2 (Miss. 1893).

93-5-34. Child custody and visitation when a parent receives temporary duty, deployment or mobilization orders from the military.

§ 93-5-1. Causes for divorce.

Divorces from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed to the injured party for any one or more of the following twelve (12) causes:

First. Natural impotency.

Second. Adultery, unless it should appear that it was committed by collusion of the parties for the purpose of procuring a divorce, or unless the parties cohabited after a knowledge by complainant of the adultery.

Third. Being sentenced to any penitentiary, and not pardoned before being sent there.

Fourth. Willful, continued and obstinate desertion for the space of one (1) year.

Fifth. Habitual drunkenness.

Sixth. Habitual and excessive use of opium, morphine or other like drug.

Seventh. Habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, including spousal domestic abuse.

Spousal domestic abuse may be established through the reliable testimony of a single credible witness, who may be the injured party, and includes, but is not limited to:

That the injured party's spouse attempted to cause, or purposely, knowingly or recklessly caused bodily injury to the injured party, or that the injured party's spouse attempted by physical menace to put the injured party in fear of imminent serious bodily harm; or

That the injured party's spouse engaged in a pattern of behavior against the injured party of threats or intimidation, emotional or verbal abuse, forced isolation, sexual extortion or sexual abuse, or stalking or aggravated stalking as defined in Section 97-3-107, if the pattern of behavior rises above the level of unkindness or rudeness or incompatibility or want of affection.

Eighth. Having mental illness or an intellectual disability at the time of marriage, if the party complaining did not know of that infirmity.

Ninth. Marriage to some other person at the time of the pretended marriage between the parties.

Tenth. Pregnancy of the wife by another person at the time of the marriage, if the husband did not know of the pregnancy.

Eleventh. Either party may have a divorce if they are related to each other within the degrees of kindred between whom marriage is prohibited by law.

Twelfth. Incurable mental illness. However, no divorce shall be granted upon this ground unless the party with mental illness has been under regular treatment for mental illness and causes thereof, confined in an institution for persons with mental illness for a period of at least three (3) years immediately preceding the commencement of the action. However, transfer of a party with mental illness to his or her home for treatment or a trial visit on prescription or recommendation of a licensed physician, which treatment or trial visit proves unsuccessful after a bona fide effort by the complaining party to effect a cure, upon the reconfinement of the party with mental illness in an institution for persons with mental illness, shall be regular treatment for mental illness and causes thereof, and the period of time so consumed in seeking to effect a cure or while on a trial visit home shall be added to the period of actual confinement in an institution for persons with mental illness in computing the required period of three (3) years confinement immediately preceding the beginning of the action. No divorce shall be granted because of mental illness until after a thorough examination of the person with mental illness by two (2) physicians who are recognized authorities on mental diseases. One (1) of those physicians shall be either the superintendent of a state psychiatric hospital or institution or a veterans hospital for persons with mental illness in which the patient is confined, or a member of the medical staff of that hospital or institution who has had the patient in charge. Before incurable mental illness can be successfully proven as a ground for divorce, it shall be necessary that both of those physicians make affidavit that the patient is a person with mental illness at the time of the examination, and both affidavits shall be made a part of the permanent record of the divorce proceedings and shall create the prima facie presumption of incurable mental illness, such as would justify a divorce based on that ground. Service of process shall be made on the superintendent of the hospital or institution in which the defendant is a patient. If the patient is in a hospital or institution outside the state, process shall be served by publication, as in other cases of service by publication, together with the sending of a copy by registered mail to the superintendent of the hospital or institution. In addition, process shall be served upon the next blood relative and guardian, if any. If there is no legal guardian, the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem to represent the interest of the person with mental illness. The relative or guardian and superintendent of the hospital or institution shall be entitled to appear and be heard upon any and all issues. The status of the parties as to the support and maintenance of the person with mental illness shall not be altered in any way by the granting of the divorce.

However, in the discretion of the chancery court, and in those cases as the court may deem it necessary and proper, before any such decree is granted on the ground of incurable mental illness, the complainant, when ordered by the court, shall enter into bond, to be approved by the court, in such an amount as the court may think just and proper, conditioned for the care and keeping of the person with mental illness during the remainder of his or her natural life, unless the person with mental illness has a sufficient estate in his or her own right for that purpose.

Joint Legislative Committee Note —

Pursuant to Section 1-1-109, the Joint Legislative Committee on Compilation, Revision and Publication of Legislation corrected an error in the eighth sentence of the Twelfth clause. The word "an" preceding "hospital or institution" was changed to "a" so that "If the patient is in an hospital or institution" reads "If the patient is in a hospital or institution." The Joint Committee ratified the correction at its August 5, 2008, meeting.

Amendment Notes —

The 2017 amendment, in the Seventh cause, added "including spousal domestic abuse" at the end of the first paragraph, and added the second through fourth paragraphs.

1. In general.

In a no-fault divorce, the record showed that the line of questioning at issue (primarily cross-examination of the husband), was not intended to establish that he had abandoned the wife by his leaving the marital home before the marriage, but was for the purpose of establishing time lines and the financial contributions of the parties. The questioning was also to determine how the payments of the wife's vehicle were being made, not to establish fault; there was no indication that the husband's having left the marital home was the driving factor in establishing the alimony award to the wife, and in any event, the fact that both spouses agreed to a divorce did not eliminate the consideration of the fault factor. Patterson v. Patterson, 917 So. 2d 111, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 432 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 921 So. 2d 1279, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 812 (Miss. 2005).

A chancellor erred in granting a divorce where the chancellor concluded that the parties had not proved any grounds for divorce but they were not going to be able to live together, since a chancellor does not have the authority to grant a divorce unless the facts and the law warrant it. Lewis v. Lewis, 602 So. 2d 881, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1992).

The fact that a divorced plaintiff continued to live under the same roof with the defendant after filing the complaint is a heavy factor to be weighed in considering whether he or she has a valid cause, though it does not in and of itself compel a denial of divorce; it is conceivably possible for valid grounds for divorce to exist despite this. Lawyers representing persons seeking a divorce have the obligation to advise and warn them about the undesirability of continuing to live in the same household following the filing of the suit, and they have the obligation to seek and press for a temporary hearing before the chancellor to secure alimony pendente lite and temporary support money. Jethrow v. Jethrow, 571 So. 2d 270, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 700 (Miss. 1990).

The problem with § 93-5-2 is that it requires all financial matters incident to the divorce to be resolved by voluntary agreement. Section 93-5-2 blithely proceeds on the premise that parties having irreconcilable differences regarding their marriage will somehow be able to reconcile their differences on financial matters. What is needed is a simple amendment to § 93-5-1 providing for a thirteenth ground for divorce: irreconcilable differences. That ground for divorce should be subject to proof as any other. The defendant's denial should have no more effect than his or her denial in the case of any of the other 12 grounds for divorce. That one spouse out of blindness, obstinance or nostalgia refuses to recognize it hardly means that a marriage may not in fact be irretrievably broken. Most important, the defending spouse's refusal to agree on financial matters would be no bar to the granting of a divorce because of irreconcilable differences. Wilson v. Wilson, 547 So. 2d 803, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. 1989).

There was no reversible error in the granting of a divorce on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment rather than adultery, even though the court could just as easily have found grounds for divorce based on adultery as it did for habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, since any error was cured by the granting of the divorce. Robinson v. Irwin, 546 So. 2d 683, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 321 (Miss. 1989).

The chancery court acted beyond its statutory authority in awarding divorce on ground of irreconcilable differences where there was no written agreement of the parties regarding property rights, and husband had filed cross-complaint against wife whose complaint sought a divorce on grounds of adultery, habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, and, in the alternative, irreconcilable differences. Alexander v. Alexander, 493 So. 2d 978, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2636 (Miss. 1986).

If chancellor finds that husband in divorce proceeding, or agents on husband's behalf, have intimidated witnesses of wife, chancellor should impose doctrine of clean hands to deny husband relief from chancery court, and wife should not be penalized for inability to provide corroborating witnesses in face of intimidation. Shelton v. Shelton, 477 So. 2d 1357, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2279 (Miss. 1985).

The statute does not make mandatory the awarding of alimony. Anderson v. Anderson, 249 Miss. 1, 162 So. 2d 853, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. 1964).

One who marries a woman believing himself to be the cause of her pregnancy may not obtain a divorce on learning it to have been caused by another. Burdine v. Burdine, 236 Miss. 886, 112 So. 2d 522, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 387 (Miss. 1959).

Affidavits to bill for divorce, "that the causes for divorce stated in said bill are true as stated," did not cover allegation in the bill as to the defendant's non-residence and post-office address, since nonresidence is not a ground for divorce, and consequently there was no affidavit on which publication for the defendant could have been made. Evans v. Brown, 198 Miss. 237, 21 So. 2d 588, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 189 (Miss. 1945).

Decree in separate maintenance suit is conclusive, as res judicata, in a subsequent divorce suit so far as concerns any issue which was litigated between the parties in the separate maintenance suit; and, if the issue were decided in favor of the wife, it bars the husband in a subsequent divorce suit brought by him predicated on facts which were in existence at the time of the maintenance decree and which were put in issue and decided in favor of the wife. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945); Van Norman v. Van Norman, 205 Miss. 114, 38 So. 2d 452, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 1949).

There is no legal duty upon wife to live with husband who persists in causes for divorce, such as habitual drunkenness and cruel and inhuman treatment. Hemphill v. Hemphill, 197 Miss. 783, 20 So. 2d 79, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1944).

This section [Code 1942, § 2735] in providing for divorce on ground of insanity is in derogation of common law, and should be strictly construed. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Divorce not granted for acts during insanity. Walker v. Walker, 140 Miss. 340, 105 So. 753, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 1925), overruled, Davis v. Davis, 194 Miss. 343, 12 So. 2d 435, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 75 (Miss. 1943).

Acts need not be malicious to constitute ground for divorce. McNeill v. McNeill, 125 Miss. 277, 87 So. 645, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1921).

This statute must be strictly complied with. Humber v. Humber, 109 Miss. 216, 68 So. 161, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 137 (Miss. 1915).

2. Impotency.

Van Norman v. Van Norman, 205 Miss. 114, 38 So. 2d 452, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 1949).

Evidence held not to support husband's allegations of wife's natural impotency as ground for divorce. Sarphie v. Sarphie, 180 Miss. 313, 177 So. 358, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1937).

3. Adultery.

In a divorce action, a chancellor was well within her discretion in granting a divorce to a wife on the grounds of adultery, although the husband asserted that the wife also had adulterous affairs of her own, where there was abundant evidence of the husband's adultery and where the husband failed to prove that the wife committed adultery prior to the parties' separation. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 34 So. 3d 637, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 202 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Divorce on the ground of adultery was properly granted because a tape recorded conversation between the husband and wife wherein the husband admitted to having engaged in two adulterous relationships was sufficient to support the chancellor's finding that the wife proved adultery by clear and convincing evidence. Rodriguez v. Rodriguez, 2 So. 3d 720, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 25 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where a wife presented evidence that, inter alia, the husband and the husband's secretary spent an excessive amount of time together, the husband let the secretary drive company vehicles, and the secretary began staying at the husband's house shortly after the secretary left her own husband, it was not error to grant a divorce to the wife on the ground of uncondoned adultery by the husband, because the facts were sufficient to establish that the husband had an infatuation with the secretary sufficient to be an adulterous inclination and there was sufficient testimony that they had opportunities to consummate that inclination. Lister v. Lister, 981 So. 2d 340, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 288 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

There was testimony that the husband and his female friend lived in the same apartment complex and that they spent a substantial amount of time together, and there was testimony that the girlfriend allegedly left the husband's apartment in her robe, and that their vehicles were often parked side by side over night, though the identity of the girlfriend's vehicle was controverted. The record also showed the chancellor focused on the lunches shared by the husband and his female friend, in which they would meet at the park, feed the ducks, and eat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches while discussing life's problems; needless to say, the appellate court held the evidence presented did not rise above mere suspicion of adultery, and the chancellor's grant of a divorce on said ground (where the parties had refused to agree to an irreconcilable differences divorce), and on the ground of habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment, where the record showed only repeated arguments between the couple, was reversed. Spence v. Spence, 930 So. 2d 415, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 547 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a divorce case, while the chancellor failed to make specific findings of fact, there was sufficient evidence in the record, beginning with the wife's admission of at least one act of extramarital intercourse, to support the grant of a divorce on the ground of adultery. In addition to the wife's admission, the husband testified that the wife's brother told him about the extramarital affair between his sister and another man, and the wife's ex-sister-in-law testified that the wife and the other man had a relationship during the time the parties were living together. McClelland v. McClelland, 879 So. 2d 1096, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 760 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a husband admitted committing adultery, his wife was entitled to a divorce on the grounds of uncondoned adultery; that the husband's adultery did not cause the wife to file for divorce was immaterial. Davis v. Davis, 832 So. 2d 492, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 2002).

The wife's own adultery did not prevent her from obtaining a divorce from the husband on the basis of his adultery where she testified that she did not meet her subsequent lover until after she and her husband had separated, that her "marriage was over," and that her subsequent lover did nothing to contribute to the breakup of her marriage. Harmon v. Harmon, 757 So. 2d 305, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Adultery need not be causally related to the final separation of the parties to be a valid basis for granting a divorce. Talbert v. Talbert, 759 So. 2d 1105, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1999).

Evidence sustained a finding of adultery where (1) two witnesses testified to seeing the husband with a woman on various occasions, (2) a witness took photographs and video of the husband's vehicle parked at the woman's home overnight on two occasions, and (3) the husband admitted staying overnight with the woman but denied having sexual intercourse with her and maintained that they only talked about his marital problems. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 755 So. 2d 467, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 79 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Where allegations of adultery are raised as grounds for divorce, chancellor is required to make findings of fact. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Adultery may be grounds for divorce based either on infatuation for particular person of the opposite sex or on spouse's generally adulterous nature. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

There must be evidence of spouse's infatuation with another or of spouse's generally adulterous nature before divorce may be granted on grounds of adultery. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Spouse seeking divorce on grounds of adultery must show, by clear and convincing evidence, both an adulterous inclination and a reasonable opportunity to satisfy that inclination. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Circumstantial evidence may be used to prove adultery, and, in light of secretive nature of adultery, spouse seeking divorce on those grounds need not present direct testimony as to the events at issue; nevertheless, the evidence must be logical, must tend to prove the facts charged, and must be inconsistent with a reasonable theory of innocence. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Adultery may be shown either by evidence or by admissions. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Divorce based on adultery was supported by evidence that husband telephoned "close friend," that friend had stayed in husband's travel trailer and kept her things there, that husband had stayed in friend's home, that friend had addressed husband as her husband-to-be, that husband and friend had walked around a car show arm-in-arm, and that husband admitted that he and friend had kissed, hugged and danced, that he cared about her, and that marriage had been discussed. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

The evidence was sufficient to provide clear and convincing proof of a husband's adultery where he gave another woman numerous gifts, he admitted to sexual activity after leaving the wife, and he admitted that he loved the other woman, slept with her, lived with her, and kissed and embraced her, even though he maintained that his relationship with the woman was only one of friendship and that he was incapable of sexual intercourse because he was impotent. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

The evidence was insufficient to support the granting of a divorce on the ground of the wife's adultery since the proof did not rise above mere suspicion of adultery where the evidence consisted primarily of photographs of the wife and her alleged paramour which were not inconsistent with a reasonable theory of innocence. McAdory v. McAdory, 608 So. 2d 695, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 600 (Miss. 1992).

A wife did not condone her husband's adultery as a matter of law by continuing to live in the same house with him and sleep in the same bed while waiting for a second indiscretion as proof of adultery after the initial indiscretion, which was not conclusive. Cheatham v. Cheatham, 537 So. 2d 435, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1988).

Chancellor was not manifestly wrong in granting divorce to husband on ground of adultery, which may be shown by either evidence or admissions, either of which is sufficient to support decree of divorce, where evidence showed wife had sexual intercourse with another man and her acts of adultery were uncondoned. Jordan v. Jordan, 510 So. 2d 131, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2628 (Miss. 1987).

Filing of second complaint by husband, grounded on wife's adultery, which was inconsistent with first complaint based upon irreconcilable differences, constituted an effective withdrawal from and objection to the first complaint and, since wife had adequate notice, chancellor could grant divorce and custody of minor child to husband on second complaint, notwithstanding the parties' earlier execution of child custody, child support, and property settlement agreements. McCleave v. McCleave, 491 So. 2d 522, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2517 (Miss. 1986).

A wife's constant association with a man other than her husband, her acceptance of valuable gifts from him, and her statement that she intended to marry this man if she could obtain a divorce from her husband and he from his wife, was sufficient when considered with other evidence to sustain a charge of adultery. Hodge v. Hodge, 186 So. 2d 748, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1326 (Miss. 1966).

Adultery on part of husband as ground of divorce is one involving moral turpitude and proof must be clear and convincing. McCraney v. McCraney, 208 Miss. 105, 43 So. 2d 872, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 232 (Miss. 1950).

Where decree, in action by husband against wife first charging habitual cruel and inhuman treatment and later amended to charge adultery, failed to state the grounds upon which it was rendered, the supreme court would sustain the decree on the ground of adultery, where the evidence amply supported such charge. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss. 391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

The fact of adultery may be shown by proof or by admissions, the latter being sufficiently of record where a husband refused to answer a direct question whether it was true that he cohabited with a named co-respondent and his counsel stated that the allegation of adultery in the cross bill was not disputed. Oberlin v. Oberlin, 201 Miss. 228, 29 So. 2d 82, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 389 (Miss. 1947).

4. —Evidence.

A chancellor erroneously evaluated the evidence of a husband's alleged adultery under an incorrect quantum of proof where he found proof of adultery by a "preponderance of the evidence," rather than the higher quantum of evidence, "clear and convincing evidence," which is required to prove adultery. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not err in denying a wife a divorce on the ground of adultery where the only evidence of the husband's alleged "generally adulterous nature" was the wife's testimony that he frequently cheated on her. Lewis v. Lewis, 602 So. 2d 881, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 401 (Miss. 1992).

Chancellor was not manifestly wrong in granting divorce to husband on ground of adultery, which may be shown by either evidence or admissions, either of which is sufficient to support decree of divorce, where evidence showed wife had sexual intercourse with another man and her acts of adultery were uncondoned. Jordan v. Jordan, 510 So. 2d 131, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2628 (Miss. 1987).

Where one spouse relies on circumstantial evidence as proof for allegations of adulterous activity on the part of the other spouse, he or she retains the burden of presenting satisfactory evidence sufficient to lead the trier of fact to the conclusion of guilt, but such evidence need not prove the alleged acts beyond a reasonable doubt. Dillon v. Dillon, 498 So. 2d 328, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2749 (Miss. 1986).

Wife was entitled to a divorce on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where wife testified that husband had hit her 15 or 20 times during course of their marriage, had cursed her on several occasions, had frequently questioned her fidelity to him, and had occasionally stayed out overnight, and wife's testimony was supported in most important aspects by the testimony of the daughter and the son of the parties, where nothing in the record would substantiate a finding that the testimony of wife, son and daughter was incredible and unbelievable. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 493 So. 2d 1310, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2627 (Miss. 1986).

Husband's testimony, excluding that pertaining to alleged adultery, would not support a divorce on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, where he testified that wife had cursed him on several occasions, that their sex life had decreased in frequency, that wife had been cold toward him since their reconciliation, and that he was suspicious of wife's relation with another man. Moreover, with respect to the alleged adultery, since the alleged act occurred in the interim between an earlier divorce decree and the revocation of that decree, the wife was then a single woman and could not have committed adultery against her marital status with husband. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 493 So. 2d 1310, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2627 (Miss. 1986).

Where the husband's evidence as to wife's improper relationship with another man was sufficient to sustain the relief granted while, although she denied the existence of the circumstances complained about, the wife's frank admissions were strong against her, the supreme court could not declare that the chancellor's decree awarding the husband a divorce was manifestly wrong. Williams v. Williams, 250 Miss. 223, 164 So. 2d 898, 1964 Miss. LEXIS 457 (Miss. 1964).

Refusal to admit evidence of events occurring prior to wife's previous suit which was dismissed following reconciliation and which was brought two years prior to the present action by the husband for divorce was not prejudicial even if erroneously rejected, since its probative value was not sufficient to support the cross bill or to effectively challenge the evidence supporting the original bill. Rogers v. Rogers, 39 So. 2d 778 (Miss. 1949).

In guardian's suit to annul ward's marriage on ground of insanity, that witnesses at time of marriage observed nothing abnormal in ward held of but little weight, where evidence established that ward was then incurably insane. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

In guardian's suit to annul marriage of ward on ground of insanity, evidence supported finding that defendant married ward with knowledge that he was inmate of institution for treatment of insane persons, and that ward was mentally incompetent of assuming marital relation. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Circumstances, introduced in support of the defense of adultery, must be proved with reasonable certainty, and such conclusion must follow logically from the facts. Banks v. Banks, 118 Miss. 783, 79 So. 841, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 115 (Miss. 1918).

5. Spouse sentenced to penitentiary.

This section [Code 1942, § 2735], authorizing granting of divorce in case offending party had been sentenced to the penitentiary refers only to penitentiary of State of Mississippi, and husband's sentence to federal penitentiary in another state did not entitle wife to divorce. Daughdrill v. Daughdrill, 180 Miss. 589, 178 So. 106, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 22 (Miss. 1938).

6. Desertion.

If the desertion occurred, the year period would have ceased a year after the husband left the marital home, and although the wife testified that she asked the husband to resume the marriage, the husband testified otherwise and the chancellor found the husband more credible; substantial evidence supported the chancellor's decision to deny the wife's petition for divorce on the grounds of desertion. Brown v. Brown, 142 So. 3d 425, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), cert. denied, 141 So. 3d 947, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 335 (Miss. 2014).

Chancellor did not err in granting a wife a divorce on the ground of desertion because (1) the chancellor determined that the husband offered no testimony to contradict the wife's assertion that the husband left the marital home and failed to return or resume any marital duties; and (2) the husband offered no proof that his failure to return to the home was the wife's fault. Gardner v. Gardner, 130 So. 3d 1162, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 624 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Judgment dismissing the wife's divorce action for failing to meet the burden of proof was affirmed because the wife's uncorroborated testimony was insufficient to convince the chancellor that the husband's conduct made the marriage unendurable, or dangerous to life, health or safety. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 21 So. 3d 705, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 769 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

A bill for divorce, charging in the language of the statute, that the wife was guilty of wilful, continuous and obstinate desertion of the husband for the space of more than one year, sufficiently stated a charge of desertion. Thrasher v. Thrasher, 229 Miss. 536, 91 So. 2d 543, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 637 (Miss. 1956).

7. —Particular circumstances as constituting.

A conditional effort at reconciliation on the part of a husband and its refusal by the wife is not sufficient to make her separation the equivalent of desertion. Criswell v. Criswell, 254 Miss. 746, 182 So. 2d 587, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1573 (Miss. 1966).

Where, under conflicting evidence, it appeared that the wife had left her husband's home in California under the guise of returning to the state to see a sick sister taking with her money which the parties had saved and borrowed to buy a home, and for three years the husband had provided the wife with funds for the support of the children, and that at no time did the wife say anything about returning to the husband although he would have received her back prior to the time of filing suit, and it was undisputed that the wife had been in the state for almost five years, the chancellor was justified in awarding husband a divorce on the ground of the wife's wilful, continued, and obstinate desertion of her husband for more than 12 months, and in concluding that the wife was a bona fide resident of the state. Carter v. Carter, 231 Miss. 662, 97 So. 2d 529, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 552 (Miss. 1957).

Where, in wife's earlier action for divorce, the court had found that the husband was not guilty of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, but that the wife had wilfully deserted the husband without lawful cause, and on the afternoon of the day of the trial the wife sent the sheriff to see the husband with the message that she and her 17-year-old son by a former marriage would be back home the next day, and the husband told the sheriff that he would talk to his lawyer about the son returning, and on the next day the husband left town for a vacation, and while he was away the wife went to this home twice, each time finding no one there, but thereafter made no effort to communicate with the husband in any manner, and subsequently left the community, the chancellor, in husband's action for divorce upon the ground of desertion, was justified in finding that no good faith offer of reconciliation had been made by the wife and whether made in good faith or otherwise, the husband had not rejected it. Thrasher v. Thrasher, 229 Miss. 536, 91 So. 2d 543, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 637 (Miss. 1956).

8. —Constructive desertion.

Record contained substantial, credible evidence which supported the trial court's finding that the course of conduct by the wife amounted to constructive desertion. Deen v. Deen, 856 So. 2d 736, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 937 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In deciding whether to award a divorce to a husband on the ground of constructive desertion, the chancellor should have determined whether the husband sufficiently demonstrated that the wife's conduct reasonably rendered the continuation of their marriage unendurable to the point that he was forced to leave and seek peace and safety elsewhere, and therefore the chancellor erred in denying a divorce on the ground of constructive desertion on the basis that the evidence was insufficient to show that the husband was "in fear of life, health, safety, or limb." Benson v. Benson, 608 So. 2d 709, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 687 (Miss. 1992).

A husband's charge of desertion in a divorce complaint, which stated that the wife had been guilty of willful, continued, and constructive desertion for the past 12 years, having abandoned all marital relations with the husband without his consent, without just cause or excuse and without the intention of returning to the husband, was sufficiently stated in the language of the statute to set out a ground for divorce with respect to desertion. Handshoe v. Handshoe, 560 So. 2d 182, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 199 (Miss. 1990).

The doctrine of constructive desertion is recognized in Mississippi. Day v. Day, 501 So. 2d 353, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2260 (Miss. 1987).

In an action for divorce on grounds of constructive desertion, where the parties have been living apart under a separate maintenance decree granted to one of the parties, the plaintiff can show that, since the judgment for separate maintenance in favor of the defendant, the conditions have changed and the plaintiff has made efforts of reconciliation with the defendant with no avail, and hence the defendant is now a deserter and plaintiff is entitled to a divorce for desertion. Day v. Day, 501 So. 2d 353, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2260 (Miss. 1987).

Constructive desertion is a ground for divorce in this state but the doctrine will not be applied except in extreme cases. Griffin v. Griffin, 207 Miss. 500, 42 So. 2d 720, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1949).

Constructive desertion as ground for divorce arises where either spouse by reason of misconduct or cruelty drives the other away, in which case the former, and not the latter, is the deserter or is guilty of desertion. Griffin v. Griffin, 207 Miss. 500, 42 So. 2d 720, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1949).

Where husband refused or failed to work, was indigent and improvident without cause, so that family was without sufficient food or shelter and was forced to live largely off the neighbors, and the wife left the husband to earn her own living, husband, and not wife, was guilty of desertion under the circumstances. Griffin v. Griffin, 207 Miss. 500, 42 So. 2d 720, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 358 (Miss. 1949).

9. Addiction, substance abuse.

Chancellor did not err in dismissing the husband's complaint for a divorce on the ground of habitual and excessive drug use as the record did not compel a finding that the wife's use of prescription drugs was excessive in light of her serious health issues or that she misused the prescription drugs because the husband's proof showed that the medication had been prescribed by a doctor for the wife's very legitimate health problems; neither the pharmacy and medical records nor the testimony established that the wife had been diagnosed with an addiction to prescription pain medications or indicated that the wife's drug use was excessive; and the evidence did not indicate that the wife was over-prescribed pain medication. Booker v. Booker, 205 So. 3d 1122, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 123 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016), cert. denied, 207 So. 3d 1238, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 7 (Miss. 2017).

Finding against the husband in his divorce action alleging habitual cruel and inhuman treatment and habitual and excessive use of opium, morphine, or other like drug, was inappropriate regardless of whether the affirmative defense of condonation was available to the wife because condonation of the wife's drug use by sexual intercourse between the parties was conditioned on her ceasing to abuse drugs. The wife's subsequent overdosing evidenced an intent not to abide by such condition. Ashburn v. Ashburn, 970 So. 2d 204, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 799 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancery court's determination that the wife's drug abuse undermined and negatively impacted the marital relationship and was a proper ground for divorce enjoyed substantial support in the record. Lawson v. Lawson, 821 So. 2d 142, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 381 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

A wife seeking a divorce from her husband on the grounds of excessive drug use, pursuant to § 93-5-1, sufficiently proved that her husband's use of drugs was habitual on the basis that it was customarily and frequently indulged, that her husband's drug use was so excessive that he did not have the ability to control his appetite for drugs, and that the drugs used were morphine or opium or comparable to morphine or opium in effect, where the evidence indicated that the husband used drugs daily from 1976 to the time of separation in 1980, as brought out by the pharmacist's records, that the husband abused his prescribed drug dosage, at one time receiving prescriptions from more than one doctor to satisfy his needs, while making misrepresentations regarding usage and activities to his physicians, and that the effect produced upon the husband by his drug use was similar to that produced by morphine or opium, including extremes of hyperactivity or of stupidity, and adverse effects in his work habits and social, and family relationships. Ladner v. Ladner, 436 So. 2d 1366, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2808 (Miss. 1983).

Complainant who separated from his wife because she was addicted to habitual and excessive use of narcotics, but did not file his bill for divorce until after she had overcome such habit and regained her normal condition of body and mind, was not entitled to divorce. Smithson v. Smithson, 113 Miss. 146, 74 So. 149, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1916), modified, 113 Miss. 644, 74 So. 609, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1917) but see Smithson v. Smithson, 113 Miss. 644, 74 So. 609, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1917).

10. Cruel and inhuman treatment.

Judgment dismissing the wife's divorce action for failing to meet the burden of proof was affirmed because (1) the chancellor applied the appropriate legal standard in denying the wife a divorce on ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment; and (2) though the wife claimed she sought medical attention during the marriage for conditions that improved after she and the husband separated, she presented no medical evidence. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 21 So. 3d 705, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 769 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Sexual indignity can rise to the level of being so repugnant to the non-offending spouse so as to render impossible the discharge of marital duties, thereby defeating the whole purpose of the marriage. Jones v. Jones, 43 So. 3d 465, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. 2010).

Cumulative impact of the offensive and even repugnant behaviors over a long period of time might constitute cruelty, while similar conduct for a shorter time, or with fewer factors might not be cruelty. Jones v. Jones, 43 So. 3d 465, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. 2010).

Court properly granted a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment because the wife was involved in a shoving match with the husband shortly after he had been so ill that she "thought he was having a heart attack." Moreover, the court of appeals noted the impropriety of the wife's act of forging the husband's name to the savings bonds, cashing them without notifying him before doing so, and pretending to help him look for them afterward. McIntosh v. McIntosh, 977 So. 2d 1257, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Divorce was properly granted in favor of the wife where the husband's habitual cruel and inhuman treatment was the precipitating cause of the deterioration of the parties' marital relationship and the wife's adultery occurred at least one year after she filed for divorce; the parties' marital assets were equitably divided and the husband was held in contempt where he did not demonstrate his inability to make the monthly mortgage payments. Langdon v. Langdon, 854 So. 2d 485, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 822 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's granting a divorce on the ground of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment because (1) in the course of the 19-year marriage, the wife cited to one isolated physical attack and verbal threat and the other accusations of the husband's mean tricks, name-calling, and refusal to sleep with her fell more in the categories of mere unkindness, rudeness, and incompatibility than cruelty and (2) the corroborative evidence, which was required by Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.03, provided by the daughter was inconsistent with the wife's testimony that the physical abuse was limited to the one choking incident; thus, the appellate court reversed and vacated the trial court's judgment granting the wife a divorce based upon the statutory ground of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-1. Reed v. Reed, 839 So. 2d 565, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 136 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court was manifestly in error in concluding that wife was subjected to habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, a statutory ground for divorce, insofar as husband would move out of their bedroom and return when he was ready to have sex with her, culminating in incident when husband grabbed wife in bedroom and requested sex, where both parties testified that husband never forced wife to have sex, wife testified that she did not seek any type of treatment for bad nerves that resulted from husband's unpleasant behavior, and husband never hit wife or harmed her. Potts v. Potts, 700 So. 2d 321, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 464 (Miss. 1997).

In an action for divorce on the ground of the husband's adultery, the husband's counter-complaint for a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment was properly dismissed where the best that the husband could argue was that his wife was not congenial toward him, since more than "mere unkindness, rudeness, or incompatibility" is required to support the granting of a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor erred in granting a divorce to both parties on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, since the 2 parties to a divorce can not be both guilty and innocent of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment; in a situation where both parties are at fault, the chancellor must determine which party's conduct was the proximate cause of the deterioration of the marital relationship and the divorce itself, and a divorce should be granted to the other party. Hyer v. Hyer, 636 So. 2d 381, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 139 (Miss. 1994).

Spouse seeking divorce on ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment must offer proof as to causal connection between cruel treatment complained of and spouse's separation from household. Fournet v. Fournet, 481 So. 2d 326, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2337 (Miss. 1985), limited, Richard v. Richard, 711 So. 2d 884, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 240 (Miss. 1998).

Where the chancellor was warranted in believing that the husband had been guilty of habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment of the wife, and that the reconciliations between the parties amounted to a condonement of past wrongdoing on the assumption that the conduct complained of would not be repeated, decree awarding divorce to wife would be affirmed. Jones v. Jones, 234 Miss. 461, 106 So. 2d 134, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 518 (Miss. 1958).

11. —Elements generally.

A chancellor did not err in dismissing a wife's complaint for divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where the evidence did not demonstrate habitual cruelty or inhuman treatment which endangered the wife's "life, limbs, or health," but merely showed "incompatibility, indignities, and intense quarreling." Steen v. Steen, 641 So. 2d 1167, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 1994).

A trial court erred in refusing to grant a wife a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment based on an absence of evidence suggesting that cruelty proximately caused the parties' separation since the conduct of a separated spouse may constitute habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where the spouse's actions proximately cause harm to the other spouse's health and well-being. Faries v. Faries, 607 So. 2d 1204, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 599 (Miss. 1992).

Although a husband and wife each sought a divorce and genuinely despised each other, they were not entitled to a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where there was no evidence that either party had been guilty of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment of the other, taking the legislative language by its common and ordinary meaning. Wilson v. Wilson, 547 So. 2d 803, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. 1989).

A divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment was warranted where a physician testified that the conduct of the husband was injurious to the wife's health to the extent that she required medical attention and hospitalization; a sensitive spouse, or a spouse from a society and environment of breeding, education or culture, may be physically, mentally, and emotionally affected and injured by slightly cruel and less severe treatment, while another spouse, who is hardened and calloused to physical abuse and treatment, might be unaffected by the same treatment. Parker v. Parker, 519 So. 2d 1232, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 157 (Miss. 1988).

Charge of cruel and inhuman treatment against spouse means something more than unkindness or rudeness or mere incompatibility or want of affection; divorce will not be granted on that ground where facts merely show that parties have irreconcilable differences and probably will never be able to live together in harmony. Churchill v. Churchill, 467 So. 2d 948, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2039 (Miss. 1985).

Before a divorce can be granted upon the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, the complaining party has the burden to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the offending party was guilty of such conduct, and that such conduct endangered or adversely affected his health and was the proximate cause of the separation. Porter v. Ainsworth, 285 So. 2d 752, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1294 (Miss. 1973).

The cruelty required by the statute is not such as to render the continuance of cohabitation undesirable or unpleasant, but must be so gross, unfeeling and brutal as to render further cohabitation impossible except at the risk of life, limb or health. Skelton v. Skelton, 236 Miss. 598, 111 So. 2d 392, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 354 (Miss. 1959).

To constitute cruel and inhuman treatment, short of personal violence, misconduct must be such as to impair complainant's health, create an apprehension of bodily injury, or cause the purpose of the marriage to be defeated. Taylor v. Taylor, 235 Miss. 239, 108 So. 2d 872, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 421 (Miss. 1959).

In order that a divorce may be granted on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, the treatment must be something more than mere unkindness or rudeness, something more than a mere incompatibility, want of affection, or lack of civil attention, it must be conduct so unkind as to be cruel, that is, so unreasonably harsh and servere as, naturally and reasonably, to inflict pain or suffering on the spouse. McBroom v. McBroom, 214 Miss. 360, 58 So. 2d 831, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 478 (Miss. 1952).

Cruel and inhuman treatment, unaccompanied by personal violence is such conduct only as endangers life, limb, or health, or creates reasonable apprehension of danger thereto, thereby rendering the continuance of the marital relation unsafe for the unoffending spouse or such unnatural of infamous conduct as would make the marital relation revolting to the unoffending spouse and render it impossible to discharge duties thereof. Sandifer v. Sandifer, 215 Miss. 414, 61 So. 2d 144, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 580 (Miss. 1952); Howard v. Howard, 243 Miss. 301, 138 So. 2d 292, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 347 (Miss. 1962).

Mere marital unhappiness, no matter how intense it may be, caused or induced by ill treatment of one spouse by the other will not warrant divorce, unless it be of such a character, and so long persisted in, as actually to become dangerous to the life, limb or health of the other spouse, or to create a reasonable apprehension of such danger, and thus render further cohabitation unsafe for the unoffending spouse. Stringer v. Stringer, 209 Miss. 326, 46 So. 2d 791, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 393 (Miss. 1950).

"Cruel and inhuman treatment" authorizing divorce is conduct endangering life, limb, or health, or creating reasonable apprehension of danger, or unnatural and infamous conduct making marital relation revolting. Smith v. Smith, 40 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 1949); Price v. Price, 181 Miss. 539, 179 So. 855, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1938); Russell v. Russell, 157 Miss. 425, 128 So. 270, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 303 (Miss. 1930).

Where there is no personal violence, misconduct, to constitute cruelty, must endanger health or create reasonable apprehension of bodily harm. Humber v. Humber, 109 Miss. 216, 68 So. 161, 1915 Miss. LEXIS 137 (Miss. 1915).

Personal violence is not required to constitute cruel and inhuman treatment. Wilson v. State, 85 Miss. 687, 38 So. 46, 1904 Miss. LEXIS 185 (Miss. 1904).

12. — —Continuousness.

Howard v. Howard, 243 Miss. 301, 138 So. 2d 292, 1962 Miss. LEXIS 347 (Miss. 1962).

Habitual cruel and inhuman treatment is offense of continuing nature and is not condoned by mere continuance of cohabitation. Reed v. Reed, 480 So. 2d 1163, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2438 (Miss. 1985).

Habitual cruelty is an offense continuing in nature and is not condoned by mere continuing of cohabitation. Waites v. Waites, 233 Miss. 496, 102 So. 2d 431, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 407 (Miss. 1958).

13. —Single incident as constituting.

As a general rule the charge of cruel and inhuman treatment is not established by a single act or an isolated incident, but there must be more to show habitual cruel or inhuman treatment, but on the other hand, one incident of personal violence may be of such a violent nature as to endanger the life of the complainant spouse and be of sufficient gravity to establish the charge. Ellzey v. Ellzey, 253 So. 2d 249, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1213 (Miss. 1971).

If the chancellor believed that the testimony showed that the defendant tried to shoot his wife, that incident alone was sufficient to establish the charge of cruel and inhuman treatment. Ellzey v. Ellzey, 253 So. 2d 249, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1213 (Miss. 1971).

Habitually cruel and inhuman treatment as a ground for divorce consists generally of a course of conduct rather than a single act. Smith v. Smith, 40 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 1949).

14. —Events occurring post separation.

Since a party can be granted a divorce based on incidents occurring after the parties have separated, there is no reason, on principle, why the fact that the parties have not been living together would render it legally impossible to establish cruel and inhuman treatment such as to justify a divorce. Day v. Day, 501 So. 2d 353, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2260 (Miss. 1987).

A charge of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment may be predicated upon conduct of the offending spouse occurring after the separation of the spouses. Bias v. Bias, 493 So. 2d 342, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2566 (Miss. 1986).

Although wife, who was denied a divorce on her first complaint charging her husband with acts of cruel and inhuman treatment, could not relitigate the matter of the husband's conduct prior to the dismissal of the first complaint, she was not precluded from litigating question of whether husband's acts, if any, prior to the dismissal of first complaint aggregated with his acts after dismissal of first complaint, if any, constituted habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, even though the parties lived apart during the interim between the dismissal of the first complaint and filing of the second one. Bias v. Bias, 493 So. 2d 342, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2566 (Miss. 1986).

15. —Particular circumstances as constituting.

It is common sense that abuse or mistreatment of a person's child may constitute cruelty to that person; chancery courts may consider evidence of child abuse or mistreatment as conduct supporting the grant of a divorce based on habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Pittman v. Pittman, 195 So. 3d 727, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 2016).

In a wife's divorce action, the chancery court erred in granting a husband's motion to dismiss because it did not apply the correct legal standard when it failed to consider acts of child mistreatment by the husband in assessing whether sufficient evidence of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment existed; the chancery court failed to make factual findings to which the supreme court had to defer regarding the violence the husband perpetuated in considering whether the wife defeated the motion. Pittman v. Pittman, 195 So. 3d 727, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 231 (Miss. 2016).

Sufficient evidence showed a husband's habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because his wife's testimony about his homosexual affairs and child molestation was corroborated. Jackson v. Jackson, 172 So. 3d 221, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 638 (Miss. Ct. App. 2014), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 172 So. 3d 179, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 413 (Miss. 2015).

Grant of divorce in favor of the wife was appropriate because the cumulative effect of the degrading sexual behavior, cursing and yelling, habitual gambling, jealousy, and stalking, and the resulting negative effect to the wife's health amounted to habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. The wife had testified about those behaviors and the adverse effects on her health. Harmon v. Harmon, 141 So. 3d 37, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 308 (Miss. Ct. App. 2014).

Due to multiple incidents of violent and cruel behavior, including a plate-throwing incident, destruction of the husband's property post separation, and corrobation of the violent events from husband's son, the appellate court agreed with the chancellor's findings and find that the husband met his burden of proving his ground for a divorce of cruel and inhuman treatment under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-1 (2008) by a preponderance of the evidence. Price v. Price, 22 So. 3d 331, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 772 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Wife presented more than ample evidence of diverse repugnant conduct and more corroborative evidence existed than just the singular testimony of a sole spouse claiming she was subjected to degrading and offensive sexual behavior by the offending spouse; the combination of the husband's behaviors, including his sexual behavior, financial conduct, and his verbal degradation, were so repugnant to the wife to render her unable to perform her marital duties and sufficiently supported the grant of divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Jones v. Jones, 43 So. 3d 465, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. 2010).

Divorce granted on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment was affired because the wife testified to numerous displays of violence by the husband, including his whipping her with a wet towel in front of friends, his throwing plates of food in her face when he was unhappy with what she had cooked, his giving her a black eye, his forcing her to abort their third child because of the expense of another child, and his frequent threats to kill her. Stein v. Stein, 11 So. 3d 1288, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 368 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancellor did not err in granting the wife a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment given the husband's demanding and manipulative behavior and two incidents that had rendered the relationship unsafe for the wife; the husband continually subjected the wife to demanding and manipulative behavior and accusations of infidelity, coupled with emotional isolation. G.B.W. v. E.R.W., 9 So. 3d 1200, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 285 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where a wife alleged that the husband committed adultery and physically and verbally abused the wife by hitting, punching, trying to strangle, and using a belt to whip the wife, it was error to deny a divorce based on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because (1) the wife offered testimony of physical and verbal abuse, (2) the wife provided sufficient corroboration to support the claim, and (3) the wife did not condone the abuse. Kumar v. Kumar, 976 So. 2d 957, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 156 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Where appellee wife testified that appellant husband was emotionally and mentally abusive throughout the course of the marriage, which had an adverse affect on her mental and physical well-being, and the couple's adult son provided corroborating testimony regarding the effect of his father's treatment on his mother's health and well-being, that uncontradicted testimony provided substantial, credible evidence for a grant of divorce upon the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. Cassell v. Cassell, 970 So. 2d 267, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 844 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Court properly granted a divorce to a wife where the husband's regular drinking binges, foul language, rude and condescending behavior toward the wife and the children, mysterious expenditure of marital funds, and unexplained extended absences rose to the level of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Jackson v. Jackson, 922 So. 2d 53, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Granting of a divorce to the wife on the grounds of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment was proper pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-1 where the husband's actions in allowing his daughter's alleged sexual perpetrator to come for overnight visits over objections from his wife and daughter were insensitive and caused severe emotional stress that became intolerable. M.W.F. v. D.D.F., 926 So. 2d 923, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 482 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), vacated, 926 So. 2d 897, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 204 (Miss. 2006).

Wife's allowing her 36-year-old son, who had been convicted of assaulting her husband, to live in the marital home despite the husband's objections was a sufficient basis to grant the husband a divorce based on habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Ferro v. Ferro, 871 So. 2d 753, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

A wife's conduct in taking the parties' child and secreting her for over 270 days constituted a sufficient factual basis for the court to award the husband a divorce based upon habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Michael v. Michael, 650 So. 2d 469, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 1995).

Evidence of a husband's "sexual problems," including his impotence and his interest in dressing in women's clothing, was sufficient to grant a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Cherry v. Cherry, 593 So. 2d 13, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 964 (Miss. 1991).

The chancery court's finding that the wife was not guilty of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment of her husband was supported by substantial evidence, even though the chancellor found that the wife's efforts, attitude, and desires to live beyond her husband's financial means were the cause of the parties' separation, that the husband was justified in leaving the home under all the circumstances, and that resumption of the marriage would be impossible given the psychological background of the parties. Ramsey v. State, 554 So. 2d 300, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1989).

The evidence was sufficient to support a finding that a husband had been guilty of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment of his wife where the husband repeatedly subjected the wife to threats upon her life, there were instances of severe physical abuse and numerous occasions of physical intimidation. Jones v. Jones, 532 So. 2d 574, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 488 (Miss. 1988).

Chancery court properly found that husband was not entitled to a divorce on ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, notwithstanding husband's testimony that he could not talk with wife about family or other matters, that wife's drinking contributed to the problem, that the wife refused to permit him to retrieve items of personal property from the home and their lock box, that wife had destroyed some of his personal items, and that her financial practices were an embarrassment. Day v. Day, 501 So. 2d 353, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2260 (Miss. 1987).

Marriage problems stemming from wife's desire to pursue career and on disputes over money, arguments regarding sexual relations, husband's criticism of stepson's behavior, husband's lack of friendliness and attentiveness when in-laws come to visit, and husband's single kick on wife's backside, causing her to scream out in pain, is not sufficient basis upon which to grant wife divorce on ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Haralson v. Haralson, 483 So. 2d 378, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2382 (Miss. 1986).

Evidence that husband used physical violence upon wife, as well as insults, abuse, and conduct which was impairment and menace to wife's health and physical well-being is sufficient to grant divorce to wife on ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Ethridge v. Ethridge, 483 So. 2d 370, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2400 (Miss. 1986).

Evidence that wife's manner of handling money caused husband hardship and embarrassment, that wife disappeared and abandoned family duties on several occasions, that wife occasionally bought jewelry without telling husband, that wife committed acts of cruelty against children, and that husband and wife frequently argued, is insufficient to support grant of divorce on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where there is no proof that wife's mismanagement of family funds, disappearances, or alleged mistreatment of children rendered continuance of cohabitation impossible, except at risk of life, limb, or health on part of husband. Kergosien v. Kergosien, 471

So. 2d 1206, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2133 (Miss. 1985).

Three minor incidents of physical abuse during 18 marriage and occasional social drinking is not sufficient basis upon which to find cruel and inhumane treatment as ground for divorce. Stennis v. Stennis, 464 So. 2d 1161, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 1955 (Miss. 1985).

Acts of husband in slapping wife, giving her a black eye on one occasion, hitting her on the head with the butt of a shotgun, causing her hospitalization for about a week, threatening to kill her and the children, repeatedly over a period of months making false accusations of infidelity, charging her with running around with other men and particularly with adultery with a named individual, constituted habitual cruel and inhuman treatment entitling the wife to a divorce. Petersen v. Petersen, 238 Miss. 190, 118 So. 2d 300, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 395 (Miss. 1960).

Cruelty justifying divorce is not established by fact that wife drank beer to such extent that in two years her weight had increased from 165 to 210 pounds, that husband had at times to prepare his own supper and breakfast, and that if he was a few minutes late she would cry and complain that he had been with some other woman. Skelton v. Skelton, 236 Miss. 598, 111 So. 2d 392, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 354 (Miss. 1959).

In husband's action for divorce, evidence failing to show abusive language, or continuous neglect, slander, unsociability, or threats of physical violence, or that there was any reasonable apprehension of physical danger or actual distress, which would cause a loss of weight, or injury to the husband's health, or made it impossible for the wife to discharge the duties of her marriage, did not establish habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment. Taylor v. Taylor, 235 Miss. 239, 108 So. 2d 872, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 421 (Miss. 1959).

Husband's admitted conduct in making frequent accusations of his wife's infidelity while admitting that he could not prove his charges, which caused the wife to become nervous and upset, and generally impaired her physical well being, entitled the wife to a divorce upon the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. Thames v. Thames, 233 Miss. 24, 100 So. 2d 868, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1958), but see Cheatham v. Cheatham, 537 So. 2d 435, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1988).

In a suit for divorce where it was shown that the husband continuously fussed at and cursed the wife and called her parents by indecent names and the husband was very penurious and where this was particularly obnoxious to the wife since it was shown she was a very devout church member and worker, the chancellor was justified in granting a divorce. Owen v. Owen, 228 Miss. 534, 88 So. 2d 100, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 543 (Miss. 1956).

Proof that defendant at times was quarrelsome, that he did not provide the necessities of life as liberally as he could have, and that on the day before filing of the action he choked plaintiff inflicting bruises which disappeared within about two weeks, was insufficient to establish cruel and inhuman treatment as ground for divorce. Stringer v. Stringer, 209 Miss. 326, 46 So. 2d 791, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 393 (Miss. 1950).

Husband's complaint alleging that wife continuously went home to her people whenever the least little argument came up between them, that she habitually nagged him, accusing him of things he was not guilty of, and that life for them together as husband and wife was unbearable, failed to state a ground for divorce. Nichols v. Nichols, 197 Miss. 302, 20 So. 2d 72, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 301 (Miss. 1944).

Husband not entitled to divorce because of vile epithets applied to husband and his family by wife, where on two occasions husband whipped wife but later repented, and parties resumed marital relations. Price v. Price, 181 Miss. 539, 179 So. 855, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 95 (Miss. 1938).

In order to authorize granting divorce on ground of cruel and inhuman treatment, consisting of wife's refusal to permit husband to exercise marital rights, facts should present a clearly extreme case of inexcusable and long-continued refusal. Sarphie v. Sarphie, 180 Miss. 313, 177 So. 358, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1937).

That husband indicated to wife he would approve of her leaving him, resulting in rendering her unhappy and her marital bond irksome, was not ground for divorce. Russell v. Russell, 157 Miss. 425, 128 So. 270, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 303 (Miss. 1930).

The crime of pederasty, whether restricted to sodomy, as commonly understood, or defined so as to include bestial habits and improper intimacy by a man with the male sex, is cruel and inhuman treatment within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2735], making "habitual cruel and inhuman treatment" a ground for divorce. Crutcher v. Crutcher, 86 Miss. 231, 38 So. 337, 1905 Miss. LEXIS 38 (Miss. 1905).

16. —Burdens.

Where a plaintiff in a divorce asserts the ground of habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment, the plaintiff must prove the ground by a preponderance of the credible evidence and typically must corroborate the plaintiff's testimony supporting the ground. Shavers v. Shavers, 982 So. 2d 397, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 254 (Miss. 2008).

The burden rests upon the complainant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the conduct of the appellant was not only cruel but that it endangered or adversely affected his health or safety, and further that it was the proximate cause of the separation. Criswell v. Criswell, 254 Miss. 746, 182 So. 2d 587, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1573 (Miss. 1966).

17. —Evidence.

Chancery court erred in granting a wife a divorce on the fault ground of habitual, cruel, and inhuman treatment, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-1, because the wife failed to provide evidence corroborating her allegations of abuse. Ladner v. Ladner, 49 So. 3d 669, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 659 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Corroboration of the offensive conduct complained of by the moving party is required when seeking a divorce based on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, except in unusual cases such as isolation; the testimony of the defendant may also provide corroboration. Additionally, the corroborating evidence need not be sufficient in itself to establish the ground, but rather need only provide enough supporting facts for a court to conclude that the plaintiff's testimony is true; corroboration must be sufficient enough to provide some supporting facts for a court to conclude that the plaintiff's testimony is true. Jones v. Jones, 43 So. 3d 465, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 946 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 49 So. 3d 106, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 463 (Miss. 2010).

Where the wife testified that her husband often became angry, cursed at her and the children, and threatened to physically harm her, substantial evidence supported a finding that the wife was entitled to a divorce on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 11 So. 3d 172, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 300 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the wife a divorce on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because the wife testified to three specific instances of abuse, and there was testimony from family members and friends that established a pattern of abuse. Fulton v. Fulton, 918 So. 2d 877, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 22 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancellor did not err in refusing to consider evidence of cruel and inhuman treatment that occurred before the parties were married because, to grant a divorce on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, there must be a causal connection between the cruel treatment and the separation from the household, and it must be related in point of time to the separation. Cochran v. Cochran, 912 So. 2d 1086, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 742 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor did not err in dismissing a wife's complaint for divorce based on habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because she presented insufficient proof and the isolation exception did not apply because, although the nearest neighbor was ½ mile away, the wife was fully employed throughout the marriage and saw people on a daily basis at work. Cochran v. Cochran, 912 So. 2d 1086, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 742 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor did not err in dismissing a wife's complaint for divorce based on habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where the wife failed to corroborate her allegations, which the husband denied except to admit to occasional name calling, and the evidence presented, consisting of her own testimony and the testimony of one of her former co-workers, as a whole was insufficient. Cochran v. Cochran, 912 So. 2d 1086, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 742 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Court rejected the husband's claim that his conduct, upon which the wife relied in making her case for divorce on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, was too remote in time to establish a causal connection between the separation and the ground for divorce, because it was no longer required that a specific act be the proximate cause of a separation before a divorce could be granted on grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. It was, instead, habitual or continuous behavior over a period of time, close in proximity to the separation, or continuing after a separation occurs, that could satisfy the grounds for divorce. Peters v. Peters, 906 So. 2d 64, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1125 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a divorce trial, where court was adjourned and the husband did not appear at the next scheduled hearing, the chancellor committed reversible error in concluding a decision on property division, alimony, and child support could be rendered fairly without allowing the wife an opportunity to cross-examine the husband; cross-examination of the husband was necessary for the chancellor's complete deliberation on the marriage and assets without a one-sided slant on the facts and circumstances. Barnes v. Barnes, 874 So. 2d 477, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 490 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court erred in granting the wife a divorce for habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because the husband's conduct did not rise to the appropriate level of abuse and the wife acknowledged that there was no physical abuse, threatening language nor financial neglect; due to the unconventional sleeping arrangement, conflicting testimony concerning each parties' sexual desire for the other and the undisputed fact that the couple consummated sex three months prior to separation, there was insufficient evidence to support the granting of divorce due to habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Tedford v. Tedford, 856 So. 2d 753, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 940 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The chancellor properly awarded a divorce to the husband on the ground of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where (1) the record revealed several incidents of violence by the wife throughout the marriage and that she had homicidal thoughts of killing her husband and mother, (2) the wife was severely and emotionally disturbed, and the husband withstood years of trauma in his marriage as he tried to help his wife cope with her various mental problems and limit the effect of such mental disturbance on his children, and (3) the wife openly had an extramarital affair with another woman. Morris v. Morris, 783 So. 2d 681, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 2001).

A chancellor's decision to not grant a wife a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment was not error where the only person who testified that the husband treated the wife in a cruel and inhuman manner was the wife herself, and the husband denied every instance of physical abuse that the wife alleged. Chamblee v. Chamblee, 637 So. 2d 850, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1994).

Two photographs of a wife's bruised arms were not sufficient corroborating evidence of the wife's claim of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment to warrant the granting of a divorce on that ground where there were other witnesses to the marriage who were available to testify. Moeller v. Roy, 609 So. 2d 426, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 651 (Miss. 1992).

Even without corroboration as to any of the facts, a chancery court is not entirely powerless to find that the evidence is sufficient to support a finding of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment. Polk v. Polk, 559 So. 2d 1048, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 198 (Miss. 1990).

Wife failed to prove claim of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment where there was nothing in record to show any attempt to ferret out sources or gain further information about alleged murder plot against wife. Internal Revenue Service agent who informed wife that her husband planned to murder her was never offered as witness and court did not know whether his testimony would have been any more than hearsay. If wife contemplated using this as basis for sustaining charge of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, she had responsibility of offering more evidence than conversation she had with agent. Cooper v. Cooper, 518 So. 2d 664, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 1988).

18. Insanity or mental incompetence.

A chancellor has authority and right in a divorce action to require the posting by a husband of a performance bond and the furnishing of a policy of insurance on his life to assure performance of provisions of a decree requiring him to support his mentally incompetent wife for the term of her natural life. Klumb v. Klumb, 194 So. 2d 221, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1402 (Miss. 1967).

On taking jurisdiction of a divorce action in which one of the parties is a mentally incompetent wife confined to an institution, the chancery court is acting in a dual constitutional capacity, as trier of the action for divorce, and as superior guardian of a person of unsound mine. Klumb v. Klumb, 194 So. 2d 221, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1402 (Miss. 1967).

When acting in the dual constitutional capacity of trier of divorce actions and as superior guardian of persons of unsound mind, it is the duty and responsibility of the chancellor to see that a mentally incompetent wife is supported and maintained during the remainder of her natural life. Klumb v. Klumb, 194 So. 2d 221, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1402 (Miss. 1967).

Dissolution of a marriage on this ground must be sought in the incompetent's lifetime. Will of Case v. Case, 246 Miss. 750, 150 So. 2d 148, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 500 (Miss. 1963).

Under statute, insanity at time of marriage renders marriage voidable during lives of the parties by party not knowing of insanity, including insane party suing by guardian. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

That this section [Code 1942, § 2735] provides for insanity as a ground for absolute divorce does not abrogate the power of the chancery court to annul a marriage on the ground of insanity brought for that purpose on behalf of the insane spouse. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Upon recovery of his reason, person, insane at time of marriage, may have marriage annulled, provided it clearly appears that he has not ratified marriage and is not estopped to attack it, but court may protect children of marriage by entry of decree effective on and after its date. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Presumption is that party insane at time of marriage and continuing insane thereafter did not know that he was insane at time of marriage within statute providing for divorce on ground of insanity by one not knowing of insanity at the time. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Common law rule that marriage of insane person was void, changed by this section [Code 1942, § 2735] providing insanity or idiocy ground for divorce only where complaining party did not know of infirmity at time of marriage. Wilson v. Wilson, 104 Miss. 347, 61 So. 453, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 48 (Miss. 1913).

19. Marriage to another at time of pretended marriage.

The chancery court erred in dismissing a wife's divorce complaint on the ground that no divorce would lie since the parties had never been legally married, in that the husband at the time of the pretended marriage was lawfully married to another woman; prior existing marriage is a valid ground for divorce. Callahan v. Callahan, 381 So. 2d 178, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 1923 (Miss. 1980).

In view of this provision, marriage to another person at the time of a pretended marriage is not ground for annulment. Will of Case v. Case, 246 Miss. 750, 150 So. 2d 148, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 500 (Miss. 1963).

20. Condonation.

Husband was properly granted a divorce on the ground of uncondoned adultery because the wife's defense of condonation failed since (1) there was nothing in the record to suggest that the husband, by engaging in sexual intercourse with the wife, forgave the wife for committing adultery, and (2) although the husband stated that the husband forgave the wife in a letter, the husband did not specify to which adulterous conduct the husband was referring. Ware v. Ware, 7 So. 3d 271, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Appellate court affirmed the ruling that denied the husband a divorce on the grounds of adultery because even though the wife admitted that she had an extramarital affair that ended in November 2001, the parties continued to live with each other after the wife's admission and ultimately renewed sexual relations. Thus, the trial court held that the defense of condonation applied, and the appellate court agreed. Fulton v. Fulton, 918 So. 2d 877, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 22 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

A wife's condonation of her husband's "peculiar" sexual activities was not sufficient to deny her a divorce on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment based on evidence that the husband was impotent and occasionally dressed in women's clothing, even though the wife continued to live with the husband and at least attempted to have sexual relations, since it was not proper for the wife to be penalized for attempting to save her marriage. Cherry v. Cherry, 593 So. 2d 13, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 964 (Miss. 1991).

Chancellor was not manifestly wrong in granting divorce to husband on ground of adultery, which may be shown by either evidence or admissions, either of which is sufficient to support decree of divorce, where evidence showed wife had sexual intercourse with another man and her acts of adultery were uncondoned. Jordan v. Jordan, 510 So. 2d 131, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2628 (Miss. 1987).

The defense of condonation is recognized, but the mere resumption of residence does not constitute a condonation of past marital sins and does not act as bar to a divorce being granted. Wood v. Wood, 495 So. 2d 503, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2691 (Miss. 1986).

Habitual cruel and inhuman treatment is offense of continuing nature and is not condoned by mere continuance of cohabitation. Reed v. Reed, 480 So. 2d 1163, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2438 (Miss. 1985).

Where the chancellor was warranted in believing that the husband had been guilty of habitual, cruel and inhuman treatment of the wife, and that the reconciliations between the parties amounted to a condonement of past wrongdoing on the assumption that the conduct complained of would not be repeated, decree awarding divorce to wife would be affirmed. Jones v. Jones, 234 Miss. 461, 106 So. 2d 134, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 518 (Miss. 1958).

Habitual cruelty is an offense continuing in nature and is not condoned by mere continuing of cohabitation. Waites v. Waites, 233 Miss. 496, 102 So. 2d 431, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 407 (Miss. 1958).

Knowledge by complainant of cause for divorce at time marriage was consummated is bar to suit on that ground, but complainant does not have knowledge or good reason to believe that at time of marriage husband was habitual drunkard when husband, prior to marriage, was never drunk, but at most was only occasional and moderate social drinker and did not become habitual drunkard until after marriage. Kincaid v. Kincaid, 207 Miss. 692, 43 So. 2d 108, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 380 (Miss. 1949).

Wife's condonation of past acts of cruelty is impliedly conditioned upon the future good behaviour of the husband, and after condonation if the cruelty is repeated the right to assert the condoned offenses as a ground for divorce is revived. Smith v. Smith, 40 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 1949).

Cohabitation after cruel and inhuman treatment cannot be considered as condonation in the same sense as after an act of adultery. Smith v. Smith, 40 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 1949).

Contention that acts of cruel and inhuman treatment occurring prior to last reconciliation were condoned by the wife and could not constitute grounds for divorce held untenable, since habitually cruel and inhuman treatment as grounds for divorce consists generally of a course of conduct rather than a single act. Smith v. Smith, 40 So. 2d 156 (Miss. 1949).

Where husband and wife entered into an agreement after alleged acts of cruelty stating that differences were settled and agreeing to dismiss pending litigation and resume relations as husband and wife, the court held that by agreement and conduct the parties condoned all alleged acts of cruelty accruing prior to such agreement so as to preclude divorce under this section [Code 1942, § 2735]. Starr v. Starr, 206 Miss. 1, 39 So. 2d 520, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1949).

Wife's failure to come and live with husband in designated town and her failure to deliver the children to him as provided in agreement condoning prior alleged acts of cruelty does not revive the alleged acts of cruelty, so as to constitute grounds for divorce under this section [Code 1942, § 2735]. Starr v. Starr, 206 Miss. 1, 39 So. 2d 520, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1949).

Where evidence shows cruel treatment extending over several years plaintiff should not be denied divorce because she wrote defendant a friendly letter after leaving him. Forrester v. Forrester, 101 Miss. 155, 57 So. 553, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 115 (Miss. 1912).

21. Property rights affected.

Chancellor lacked authority to divide marital assets because the claims for divorce had been denied. Brown v. Brown, 142 So. 3d 425, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 820 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), cert. denied, 141 So. 3d 947, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 335 (Miss. 2014).

In the division of the marital property, the chancellor awarded the ex-wife a vehicle free and clear, the leasehold interest to a residence, one-half of the value of the marital home, and personal property in her possession, which she valued at $50,000 in her financial statement, and awarded the ex-husband sole ownership of a corporation, two encumbered vehicles, one-half of the value of the marital home, and any personal property in his possession; although the ex-wife alleged otherwise, the chancellor properly classified the ownership of the corporation, which was valued at $10,000, as marital property, and thus based on the facts of the case and the value of the corporation, the assets of the marriage were equitably divided. Wilson v. Wilson, 975 So. 2d 261, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 681 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Where the husband and wife divorced on the ground of irreconcilable differences, the chancellor did not err in: (1) valuing the marital home based on the average of the two parties' appraisals; (2) awarding the husband his full retirement to maintain his life and to keep the marital home; (3) awarding the wife a substantial equity in the marital home; and (4) awarding alimony to the wife to address any discrepancy in the distribution of assets. McKnight v. McKnight, 951 So. 2d 594, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 130 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancellor determined that a utility trailer was a marital asset, based on a pretrial order which classified it as a marital asset, and the chancellor relied on the evidence of the manner in which each spouse and the children would need to use the trailer; the mother would need to use the trailer for her daughter's horse, while the father stated that he would use the trailer for various tasks unrelated to his daughter's horse. Thus, the chancellor did not err in awarding the trailer to the mother; accordingly, there was nothing inequitable about the chancellor's finding with regard to the utility trailer, let alone reversible. Ethridge v. Ethridge, 926 So. 2d 264, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Where the parties agreed to an irreconcilable differences divorce, the husband was awarded the double-wide and the wife the single-wide, and the chancellor ordered the husband to pay the wife $17,000, representing one-half of the equity; he was also required to pay the wife an additional $16,500 for the value of the single-wide mobile home which was destroyed in a fire before the entry of judgment. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 942 So. 2d 305, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 847 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Equitable division of assets does not require that each party continue to have a possessory interest in an asset; a party being divested of her interest in an asset is compensated for her divestiture by receiving other assets or through monetary compensation. The former wife received two years free rent, valued at $ 9,600, as compensation for her interest in the marital residence; thus, the chancellor did not err in awarding the former husband sole ownership of the marital residence. Fogarty v. Fogarty, 922 So. 2d 836, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 139 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Upon distributing property in a divorce, the chancellor committed reversible error by failing to properly classify $ 64,274 that the parties had borrowed to pay off a pre-marital debt owed by the husband. The wife did not benefit from the loan, and the debt should have been classified as nonmarital. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 914 So. 2d 193, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 240 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 921 So. 2d 344, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 749 (Miss. 2005).

Upon the parties' divorce, the chancellor did not abuse her discretion in awarding the wife the marital home as her separate property, because she received it from her father as a gift. Brock v. Brock, 906 So. 2d 879, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where the wife had established a service oriented painting business, the value of a business included more than physical assets and goodwill, as she argued. Contrary to her position, there were many factors, other than physical assets and goodwill, that could be used in arriving at the value of a business, including income generated, accounts receivable, pending contracts, and customer lists; the chancery court erred in not assigning a specific value to the business, and on remand, the chancery court was free to consider factors other than goodwill and physical assets in valuing the wife's business. Goodson v. Goodson, 910 So. 2d 35, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 29 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Only document commemorating the transaction was a statement signed by the wife's friend that she borrowed $ 20,000 from him to buy a car. That document was not generated until after the parties' depositions and there was no legally binding lien on the wife's car; the wife never signed a document agreeing to pay back her friend, and on that evidence, there was no abuse of discretion in the chancellor holding that her car was free of liens and was marital property. Goodson v. Goodson, 910 So. 2d 35, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 29 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where the chancellor valued the marital home at $ 20,000 to $ 30,000 minus a $ 10,000 lien, but the only evidence in the record was a professional appraisal valuing the home at $ 65,000 minus a $ 6,000 lien, and where the chancery court's finding that all of the contributions the husband made to the household went to every day living expenses, and that none of the husband's contributions went to debt service on the mortgage was not supported by the record, a remand for consideration of the Ferguson factors was required. Tate v. Tate, 875 So. 2d 257, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 539 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court could consider only those factors it found applicable to the property in question when attempting to effect an equitable division of marital property; when a trial court denied a spouse's petition for contempt, no award of attorney's fees was warranted. Glass v. Glass, 857 So. 2d 786, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 961 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Trial court erred by not identifying the assets as assets of the husband, of the wife, or of the marriage; therefore, it was unable to fairly evaluate whether the distribution of property was equitable. Smith v. Smith, 856 So. 2d 717, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 904 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

If "contribution" toward the acquisition of assets is proven by a divorcing party, then the court has the authority to divide these "jointly" accumulated assets. Thus, equitable division of the marital property, including the transfer of title to real property, was appropriate where the wife contributed cash and services to the family business. Jones v. Jones, 532 So. 2d 574, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 488 (Miss. 1988).

While the chancellor is not obligated to equally divide the property of the parties to divorce, because Mississippi is not a community property state, the chancellor does have the power and authority to effect an equitable division of jointly accumulated personal property acquired during the marriage. Dillon v. Dillon, 498 So. 2d 328, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2749 (Miss. 1986).

While the chancellor is not obligated or required by law to equally divide the property of the parties to a divorce, he does have the power and authority to effect an equitable division of jointly accumulated personal property acquired during the marriage. Dillon v. Dillon, 498 So. 2d 328, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2749 (Miss. 1986).

Husband was not entitled to a return of a coin collection under record showing that wife had the collection at the time of the divorce and at no time did husband move to have her produce it, and the evidence established that the wife assisted husband in acquiring and maintaining the collection and that the family may have made sacrifices in order to allow husband to form the collection. Tutor v. Tutor, 494 So. 2d 362, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2639 (Miss. 1986).

Chancellor did not err in failing to award husband an interest in a certificate of deposit which was acquired with wife's funds. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 493 So. 2d 1310, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2627 (Miss. 1986).

Where at the time of the first divorce between the parties certain Tennessee property was placed in wife's name, and since the revocation of that divorce did not return the property to husband, the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in failing, nor did he have authority, to award any of that property to husband. Devereaux v. Devereaux, 493 So. 2d 1310, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2627 (Miss. 1986).

Divorce decree and property settlement agreement purporting to divest party of title to real property are not valid consent decree, which would be subject to modification, where decree is not signed and consented to in writing by parties. Spearman v. Spearman, 471 So. 2d 1204, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2084 (Miss. 1985).

Although chancery court generally cannot force spouse to deed real property to other spouse by judicial decree, thereby divesting spouse of title to property, court may do so where there is consent decree wherein parties agree to such division of realty and it is incorporated into divorce decree itself or where property has been jointly accumulated by parties, and chancellor makes equitable division of it; realty in name of one spouse is subject to equitable division where other spouse has signed mortgage and contributed payments toward it. Watts v. Watts, 466 So. 2d 889, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 1972 (Miss. 1985).

Consent decree in which parties to divorce have agreed to division of realty may be set aside on clear showing of fraud, or substantial equivalent thereof, or mutual mistake. Wray v. Langston, 380 So. 2d 1262, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 1870 (Miss. 1980).

When acting in the dual constitutional capacity of trier of divorce actions and as superior guardian of persons of unsound mind, it is the duty and responsibility of the chancellor to see that a mentally incompetent wife is supported and maintained during the remainder of her natural life. Klumb v. Klumb, 194 So. 2d 221, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1402 (Miss. 1967).

Where decree of divorce in favor of husband was sustainable on ground of wife's adultery, decree awarding wife sole use and occupancy of property owned by husband and wife as tenants in common was erroneous, and supreme court, having entered decree awarding custody of children to the father, would also reverse the decree as to property and direct that property should be made free to a partition proceeding between the parties. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss. 391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

22. Alimony.

Chancellor erred in awarding a wife child support, periodic alimony, and lump-sum alimony because the chancellor erred in failing to conduct a hearing, to receive and consider evidence of the parties' financial circumstances up to the time of remand when determining periodic alimony and child support, and to receive and evaluate evidence of the value of the husband's interest in a car dealership; the chancellor was directed to conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine: (1) the value of marital assets, including the value of the husband's interest in dealership, (2) the amount of periodic alimony and child support due up until the time of the remand hearing, which would be determined based on circumstances that occurred up until the time of the remand hearing, and (3) the amount of periodic alimony and child support going forward from the time of the remand hearing, which would be determined based on the circumstances existing at the time of the remand hearing, and marital assets would be valued at a time no later than the date of divorce and would be based on evidence presented at the remand hearing. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 26 So. 3d 1053, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 50 (Miss. 2010).

From the record it was clear that the parties specifically reserved the issue of alimony for the trial court's resolution, and the implication of such a specific reservation was that there was no marital property remaining to be divided. Further, in representing to the chancellor that alimony, credit card debt, and attorney's fees were the sole issues remaining, the wife waived her opportunity to argue that the individual retirement account and the share of a trucking company were marital property subject to equitable distribution; in any event, the chancellor did consider the latter assets, and all assets, in awarding the wife periodic alimony which had no fixed termination date (except for when the obligor died or the obligee remarried), as she seemed to have implied on appeal. Evans v. Evans, 912 So. 2d 184, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 706 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

23. Practice and procedure; limitations.

In their divorce case, the parties' Miss. R. Civ. P. 8.05 declarations were "very unspecific," and they presented conflicting testimony as to the value of their property. Since neither party offered expert testimony as to the value of said property, and because there was no ongoing business or unusual or unique asset in the marital estate that might have required expert testimony, the chancellor properly derived a value for the property based primarily upon the Rule 8.05 declarations of the parties. Studdard v. Studdard, 894 So. 2d 615, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1063 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the chancellor erred by adopting, verbatim and by incorporation, the findings of fact and conclusions of law prepared by an attorney for one of the litigants as those of the lower court. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

Where a wife was guilty of desertion in leaving her husband in the first place and had no intention of returning, the subsequent filing by her of a bill for separate maintenance did not toll the statute. Leggett v. Leggett, 185 So. 2d 431, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1503 (Miss. 1966).

If it could be said that the husband made an unconditional effort in good faith to bring about a reconciliation and resumption of the marital relation, and that the wife's refusal so changed the character of the separation that it became wilful and obstinate desertion on her part, so as to set in motion the running of the one-year period required by the statute, nevertheless this period could be computed only from the date of the offer of reconciliation and would not revert back to the date when the original separation occurred. Criswell v. Criswell, 254 Miss. 746, 182 So. 2d 587, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1573 (Miss. 1966).

Decree in favor of wife in separate maintenance suit is res adjudicata and bar to maintenance by husband of suit for divorce against wife on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment and desertion when such acts occurred or had their origin prior to decree in separate maintenance suit as decree in separate maintenance in favor of wife necessarily conclusively established that wife was not guilty of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment prior to actual separation and that there was no wilful desertion of husband by wife. Van Norman v. Van Norman, 205 Miss. 114, 38 So. 2d 452, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 1949).

Decree granting wife separate maintenance in suit wherein the main issue was whether the wife had deserted the husband, barred husband's suit for divorce filed 60 days thereafter predicated on charge of desertion. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945).

Decree granting wife separate maintenance was an adjudication that at the date of that decree she was not then a deserter, and, no appeal having been taken, the decree stands as final and conclusive, except as it may be modified upon petition presented for that purpose because of a material and substantial change of circumstances arising subsequent to the date of the decree. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945).

24. Review.

While chancellor's determinations of events that precede divorce are findings of fact, finding that spouse's conduct rose to level of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, as defined as statutory ground for divorce, is a determination of law and is reversible where chancellor has employed erroneous legal standard. Potts v. Potts, 700 So. 2d 321, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 464 (Miss. 1997).

Reviewing court in divorce action will not set aside chancellor's findings of fact on issue of adultery unless they are manifestly wrong. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

Where the chancellor in a divorce action has failed to make his or her own findings of fact and conclusions of law on issue of adultery, Supreme Court will review the record de novo. Holden v. Frasher-Holden, 680 So. 2d 795, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 485 (Miss. 1996).

In an appeal from a judgment of divorce on the ground of adultery, deference would not be given to the findings of fact and conclusions of law of the lower court where the chancellor erred by applying an incorrect legal standard of proof for adultery, and by adopting, verbatim and by incorporation, the findings of fact and conclusions of law prepared by an attorney for one of the litigants as those of the lower court. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

Decree granting wife divorce and allowing attorney's fee and permanent alimony for herself and child will be entered in supreme court on appeal on reversal of chancery court's decree denying divorce, fees and alimony to wife. Kincaid v. Kincaid, 207 Miss. 692, 43 So. 2d 108, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 380 (Miss. 1949).

Supreme court has power to affirm, reverse, or modify divorce decree appealed from, or it may reverse in part and affirm in part, or remand for a new hearing, and where all the facts necessary to enable it to do justice are contained in the record, it may make such order with respect to alimony or allowances as the trial court should have made. Gresham v. Gresham, 198 Miss. 43, 21 So. 2d 414, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1945).

Decree granting divorce must be reversed where the complaint fails to allege a ground for divorce, even though there was neither an answer nor a demurrer to the complaint. Nichols v. Nichols, 197 Miss. 302, 20 So. 2d 72, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 301 (Miss. 1944).

A chancellor's decree denying divorce is binding upon reviewing court and precludes granting of divorce by reviewing court, unless chancellor's finding on conflicting evidence was manifestly wrong. Sarphie v. Sarphie, 180 Miss. 313, 177 So. 358, 1937 Miss. LEXIS 118 (Miss. 1937).

§ 93-5-2. Divorce on ground of irreconcilable differences.

(1) Divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be granted on the ground of irreconcilable differences, but only upon the joint complaint of the husband and wife or a complaint where the defendant has been personally served with process or where the defendant has entered an appearance by written waiver of process.

(2) If the parties provide by written agreement for the custody and maintenance of any children of that marriage and for the settlement of any property rights between the parties and the court finds that such provisions are adequate and sufficient, the agreement may be incorporated in the judgment, and such judgment may be modified as other judgments for divorce.

(3) If the parties are unable to agree upon adequate and sufficient provisions for the custody and maintenance of any children of that marriage or any property rights between them, they may consent to a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences and permit the court to decide the issues upon which they cannot agree. Such consent must be in writing, signed by both parties personally, must state that the parties voluntarily consent to permit the court to decide such issues, which shall be specifically set forth in such consent, and that the parties understand that the decision of the court shall be a binding and lawful judgment. Such consent may not be withdrawn by a party without leave of the court after the court has commenced any proceeding, including the hearing of any motion or other matter pertaining thereto. The failure or refusal of either party to agree as to adequate and sufficient provisions for the custody and maintenance of any children of that marriage or any property rights between the parties, or any portion of such issues, or the failure or refusal of any party to consent to permit the court to decide such issues, shall not be used as evidence, or in any manner, against such party. No divorce shall be granted pursuant to this subsection until all matters involving custody and maintenance of any child of that marriage and property rights between the parties raised by the pleadings have been either adjudicated by the court or agreed upon by the parties and found to be adequate and sufficient by the court and included in the judgment of divorce. Appeals from any orders and judgments rendered pursuant to this subsection may be had as in other cases in chancery court only insofar as such orders and judgments relate to issues that the parties consented to have decided by the court.

(4) Complaints for divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences must have been on file for sixty (60) days before being heard. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section, a joint complaint of husband and wife or a complaint where the defendant has been personally served with process or where the defendant has entered an appearance by written waiver of process, for divorce solely on the ground of irreconcilable differences, shall be taken as proved and a final judgment entered thereon, as in other cases and without proof or testimony in termtime or vacation, the provisions of Section 93-5-17 to the contrary notwithstanding.

(5) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section, no divorce shall be granted on the ground of irreconcilable differences where there has been a contest or denial; provided, however, that a divorce may be granted on the ground of irreconcilable differences where there has been a contest or denial, if the contest or denial has been withdrawn or cancelled by the party filing same by leave and order of the court.

(6) Irreconcilable differences may be asserted as a sole ground for divorce or as an alternate ground for divorce with any other cause for divorce set out in Section 93-5-1.

(7) For the purposes of orders touching the maintenance and alimony of the wife or husband, "property" and "an asset of a spouse" shall not include any interest a party may have as an heir at law of a living person or any interest under a third-party will, nor shall any such interest be considered as an economic circumstance or other factor.

1. Generally.

Although the chancery court never specifically stated that the property settlement was adequate and sufficient, there was no reversible error as a lack of a mere recitation of the obligatory words was not outcome determinative under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2. In re

Dissolution of the Marriage of De St. Germain, 977 So. 2d 412, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Although a wife did not show prejudice as a result of a lower court's failure to comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2 by requiring the parties to sign a consent to adjudicate a divorce action based on irreconcilable differences, the fact that the husband failed to file an appellate brief prevented an appellate court from concluding that equity did not warrant reversal. Engel v. Engel, 920 So. 2d 505, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 61 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Under an irreconcilable differences divorce, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3), a written consent must state that the parties voluntarily consent to permit the court to decide the issues upon which they cannot agree, and the consent defines the issues that are to be contested and resolved by the chancellor. A chancellor erred when he failed to abide by what the parties had stipulated in the consent to divorce, namely, that all businesses of the parties were to be classified as marital property. Johnson v. Johnson, 877 So. 2d 485, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1203 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 862 (Miss. 2004).

Because there was no enforceable agreement between the divorcing parties, the chancellor was required to address issues of property distribution and support consistent with the principles of equitable distribution; however, the record was completely devoid of any analysis of the appropriateness of the distribution of property or the award of alimony, and the chancellor merely took what was an agreement for purposes of an irreconcilable differences divorce and made it the order of the court, with the result that, by failing to apply the 12 factors to be considered in awarding alimony, there was not an appropriate and equitable distribution of property or a fair and just amount of alimony awarded. Ash v. Ash, 877 So. 2d 458, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1040 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 66, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 878 (Miss. 2004).

A separation agreement signed by both parties was valid and binding as of the date of its execution and was not voided by the untimely death of the husband or by any supposed reconciliation of the parties and, consequently, the wife was precluded by the separation agreement from inheriting the estate of the husband. Barton v. Barton, 790 So. 2d 169, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 105 (Miss. 2001).

The chancellor did not exceed his statutory authority when he entered a final judgment of divorce on the sixtieth day subsequent to the filing of the joint complaint, rather than waiting until the next day, as the last day of the 60 day period prescribed by subsection (4) of this section is properly included in computing that period. Robbins v. Robbins (In re Robbins), 744 So. 2d 394, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 370 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Giving a strict interpretation to subsection (2) of this section, the statute provides that the parties provide a written agreement and that the court finds that such provisions are adequate and sufficient; thus, where there was no written consent agreement, the chancellor exceeded his statutory authority by granting a divorce based on irreconcilable differences. Cassibry v. Cassibry, 742 So. 2d 1121, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 211 (Miss. 1999).

The chancellor was manifestly in error when he granted an irreconcilable differences divorce to the parties since there was no written agreement between the parties that resolved all matters touching on child custody and support and the settlement of all property rights; attorneys' notes signed by the parties at the end of a day's negotiations were incomplete and were nothing more than uninformative and practically unintelligible scribblings and were devoid of any information about child custody, visitation, or the various matters touching on the support and maintenance of the children of the parties. Joiner v. Joiner, 739 So. 2d 1043, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 167 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Although the parties had not entered into a property settlement agreement nor had the court adjudicated those issues on the date that the court declared the parties divorced, such error was harmless where the agreed judgment of divorce provided for temporary custody and support and the parties thereafter entered into a child custody, support and property settlement agreement which the chancellor found to be adequate and sufficient and which was approved by the chancellor in the final judgment. Rounsaville v. Rounsaville, 732 So. 2d 909, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 36 (Miss. 1999).

An oral agreement of the parties is not sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the statute; the consent agreement must be written and signed by both parties. Cook v. Cook, 725 So. 2d 205, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 613 (Miss. 1998).

The problem with § 93-5-2 is that it requires all financial matters incident to the divorce to be resolved by voluntary agreement. Section 93-5-2 blithely proceeds on the premise that parties having irreconcilable differences regarding their marriage will somehow be able to reconcile their differences on financial matters. What is needed is a simple amendment to § 93-5-1 providing for a thirteenth ground for divorce: irreconcilable differences. That ground for divorce should be subject to proof as any other. The defendant's denial should have no more effect than his or her denial in the case of any of the other 12 grounds for divorce. That one spouse out of blindness, obstinance or nostalgia refuses to recognize it hardly means that a marriage may not in fact be irretrievably broken. Most important, the defending spouse's refusal to agree on financial matters would be no bar to the granting of a divorce because of irreconcilable differences. Wilson v. Wilson, 547 So. 2d 803, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. 1989).

A prior property settlement agreement entered into by the parties is not enforceable if it is not approved by the court for purposes of § 93-5-2, which requires that parties seeking a divorce on the grounds of irreconcilable differences enter into a property settlement agreement that is to be incorporated into the final decree. Traub v. Johnson, 536 So. 2d 25, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 608 (Miss. 1988).

A divorce accompanied by property settlement did not revoke, by implication, a previously executed will where the parties continued to live together, the divorce decree or property settlement contained no proof of intent to revoke the prior testamentary instrument, and there was no showing that the property settlement was anything more than a formality to comply with the requirements of a divorce for irreconcilable differences. Rasco v. Estate of Rasco, 501 So. 2d 421, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2274 (Miss. 1987).

Agreement between divorcing husband and wife, which was incorporated into their divorce decree pursuant to Mississippi Code § 93-5-2, which obligated husband to pay $5,000 per month to wife, and further provided that payments to the wife would not terminate upon husband's death or wife's remarriage, and that wife could never ask that payments to her be increased, was, notwithstanding the use of the term "alimony" therein, in fact a property settlement or lump sum alimony, payable in fixed, unalterable installments, which could not be modified on ground of husband's subsequent deteriorated financial condition. East v. East, 493 So. 2d 927, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2564 (Miss. 1986).

Although no fault divorce may not be granted without parties having made provisions by written agreement for custody and maintenance of children and for settlement of property rights between parties, effective date of separation agreement is not delayed until no fault divorce is granted. Crosby v. Peoples Bank of Indianola, 472 So. 2d 951, 41 U.C.C. Rep. Serv. (CBC) 1052, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2032 (Miss. 1985).

When parties who obtain divorce on grounds of irreconcilable differences have submitted property settlement agreement which has been incorporated by court into final decree; contradictory, private contract entered by parties is void as against public policy. Sullivan v. Pouncey, 469 So. 2d 1233, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2083 (Miss. 1985).

When § 93-5-2 has been complied with, a custody, support, alimony and property settlement agreement becomes a part of the final decree for all legal intents and purposes, and this is so, whether the agreement is copied verbatim into the text of the decree, whether it is attached as an exhibit and incorporated by reference, or whether it is simply on file with the clerk of the court; if the agreement is sufficient to comply with the statute, that is enough to render it a part of the final decree of divorce. Switzer v. Switzer, 460 So. 2d 843, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 2032 (Miss. 1984).

2. Applicability.

Chancery court did not err by not equitably dividing a husband's military retirement when granting the parties a divorce based on irreconcilable differences because the wife signed a consent agreement wherein the wife indicated the chancery court only needed to resolve one disputed issue related to whether she had misappropriated $ 46,000 from the husband. Gordon v. Gordon, 126 So. 3d 922, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 273 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 127 So. 3d 1115, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 631 (Miss. 2013).

In a case in which a husband argued that divorce judgment was void because the parties failed to execute a consent pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3), that issue was meritless because there were no issues submitted to the chancellor. The judgment of divorce was entered pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(2), and the proposed agreed order met § 93-5-2(2)'s requirement of a written agreement. Cobb v. Cobb, 29 So. 3d 145, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

In divorce in which the parties entered a written consent for divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, it was signed by both parties and by their respective counsel, and neither party was granted leave of court to withdraw his or her consent to the divorce based on irreconcilable differences, the ex-wife argued unsuccessfully that the judgment of divorce was void because neither party had ever withdrawn the fault-based grounds asserted in their respective complaint and counter-complaint, as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(5). Section 93-5-2(3) operated as a cancellation and withdrawal of the contests or denials referenced in § 93-5-2(5). O'Neal v. O'Neal, 17 So. 3d 572, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 428 (Miss. 2009).

Amended § 93-5-2, which became effective April 9, 1990, applied to a divorce action in which all pleadings were filed prior to the effective date of the amendment and trial took place after the effective date since the amended statute affected only the mode of procedure and no substantive right of any of the parties, and the proceedings which were in process under the statute had not reached the stage of final judgment at the time the modification by amendment became effective. Massingill v. Massingill, 594 So. 2d 1173, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1992).

3. Personal appearance requirement.

In an uncontested divorce action based on irreconcilable differences, it was within the chancellor's discretion to determine whether a personal appearance of a party or of an attorney was required since no proof is required under § 93-5-2, which governs a divorce sought on the grounds of irreconcilable differences, and neither § 93-5-7 nor 93-5-17, which govern the conduct of divorce proceedings, indicates a requirement that the person seeking the divorce must personally appear before the chancellor. The chancellor abused his discretion in refusing to grant the divorce without a personal appearance where the parties were proceeding pro se, the wife was a resident of California, and the husband was incarcerated in a correctional facility. Bullard v. Morris, 547 So. 2d 789, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 355 (Miss. 1989).

4. Pleadings.

Chancellor's decision to award a divorce based on irreconcilable differences amounted to manifest error because complaints for divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences had to have been on file for 60 days before being heard pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(4) and an ex-husband's complaint failed to satisfy such requirement. Tyrone v. Tyrone, 32 So. 3d 1206, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 630 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court exceeded its authority in granting the parties a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences because the parties failed to establish that each of the procedural steps in Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2 necessary for withdrawing the contested divorce were taken by the parties. Although the parties did filed the requisite consent, the record was devoid of any order permitting the parties to withdraw their contest or denial. Pittman v. Pittman, 4 So. 3d 395, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 126 (Miss. Ct. App.), abrogated, Sellers v. Sellers, 22 So. 3d 299, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 338 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), overruled, O'Neal v. O'Neal, 17 So. 3d 572, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 428 (Miss. 2009).

Trial court did not err by not ruling that the judgment of divorce was void and, consequently, that the citation of contempt against the father for failing to pay child support was void, as the mandates of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(5) were inapplicable; the father filed neither an answer to the complaint for divorce, nor a counterclaim, and he admitted in his appellate brief that the proceedings for divorce were uncontested. Further, because the record showed that the father was personally served with process, the divorce proceedings met the requisite mandates of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(1). Breland v. Breland, 920 So. 2d 510, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 57 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancellor's decision dividing the marital property and awarding alimony was based upon a complete and careful factor-by-factor analysis and was supported by substantial evidence; the chancellor did not err in denying the wife's request for attorney fees because under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3), the chancellor was limited to the resolution of the issues specifically identified and personally agreed to in writing by the parties, which only included the three contested issues of property distribution, alimony, and marital property. Wideman v. Wideman, 909 So. 2d 140, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 557 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), cert. denied, 933 So. 2d 303, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 344 (Miss. 2006).

Because the Irreconcilable Differences Divorce Act had been complied with, the parties' settlement agreement became a part of the final divorce decree; it became a part of the final decree of divorce as if the decree had been rendered by the chancery court following a contested divorce proceeding. West v. West, 891 So. 2d 203, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1411 (Miss. 2004).

The mere fact that irreconcilable differences was asserted in the pleadings filed by both parties as an alternate ground for divorce did not, in and of itself, meet all the requirements of § 93-5-2(3), which mandates a written consent to a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences signed by both parties, and was not alone sufficient to justify a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences; although both parties requested a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, both parties also denied that the other party was entitled to a divorce on that ground, and, therefore, the facts negated any conclusion that there was mutual consent to a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences. Massingill v. Massingill, 594 So. 2d 1173, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 74 (Miss. 1992).

The chancery court acted beyond its statutory authority in awarding divorce on ground of irreconcilable differences where there was no written agreement of the parties regarding property rights, and husband had filed cross-complaint against wife whose complaint sought a divorce on grounds of adultery, habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, and, in the alternative, irreconcilable differences. Alexander v. Alexander, 493 So. 2d 978, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2636 (Miss. 1986).

Filing of second complaint by husband, grounded on wife's adultery, which was inconsistent with first complaint based upon irreconcilable differences, constituted an effective withdrawal from and objection to the first complaint and, since wife had adequate notice, chancellor could grant divorce and custody of minor child to husband on second complaint, notwithstanding the parties' earlier execution of child custody, child support, and property settlement agreements. McCleave v. McCleave, 491 So. 2d 522, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2517 (Miss. 1986).

5. Contest or denial.

Parties complied with the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3) and filed a consent agreement prior to trial and the terms of the consent agreement made it clear that after the chancellor commenced the hearing, the parties could not withdraw their consent without leave of court. Because the parties fully and properly acceded to the procedural strictures of § 95-5-2(3), the safeguards provided by § 93-5-2(5) – namely the withdrawal of any contest or denial – were no longer necessary. Cossey v. Cossey, 22 So. 3d 353, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 771 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a divorce proceeding, a husband argued unsuccessfully that the divorce judgment was void because he did not formally withdraw his initial denial of his wife's assertion in her complaint that she was entitled to a divorce on the grounds of irreconcilable differences. The agreed judgment of divorce provided that all further relief herein requested by either party was denied and that was sufficient to operate as a withdrawal of the wife's fault-based grounds for divorce and the husband's initial denial of her assertion that she was entitled to a divorce on the grounds of irreconcilable differences. Cobb v. Cobb, 29 So. 3d 145, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Chancery court did possess the requisite jurisdiction under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2 to grant the divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences even though the parties never canceled or withdrew their contest or denial by leave and order of the chancery court. Sellers v. Sellers, 22 So. 3d 299, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 338 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court did not err in denying a wife's motion to declare a divorce judgment null and void; because the parties entered into a consent agreement to divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, under Miss. Code § 93-5-2(3), the requirements of Miss. Code § 93-5-2(5) did not apply. Irby v. Estate of Irby, 7 So. 3d 223, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 146 (Miss. 2009).

Statutory requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(5) were not met because the wife never withdrew or cancelled her answer and counterclaim denying that the husband was entitled to a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences. On remand, if the wife agreed to withdraw her answer and denial to the husband's complaint, the chancellor was permitted to grant the parties a divorce on the basis of irreconcilable differences. Heatherly v. Heatherly, 914 So. 2d 754, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 796 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Granting a divorce based on irreconcilable differences on the day set for the trial to hear a fault-based divorce fully contested by one of the parties and where irreconcilable differences had not been pled as an alternative was manifest error because the statutory requirements for irreconcilable differences divorce were not met. Perkins v. Perkins, 787 So. 2d 1256, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 158 (Miss. 2001).

An irreconcilable differences divorce requires that neither spouse contest its granting; this does not mean that both spouses must fervently desire a divorce; unless a spouse exercises the right to contest it, a decree of divorce may be entered. Sanford v. Sanford, 749 So. 2d 353, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 596 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The wife was entitled to relief from a judgment of divorce where she was unrepresented, she indicated several times her misunderstanding of her husband's right to a divorce merely by wanting one, she expressed frequently her opposition to the divorce, and, not least of all, she promptly sought to undo the agreement. Sanford v. Sanford, 749 So. 2d 353, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 596 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

6. Child custody, support.

Chancellor properly awarded child support to a wife because the amount was presumptively correct under the guidelines and the parties' proposed agreement did not provide adequate and sufficient support for the child. Mosher v. Mosher, 192 So. 3d 1118, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 334 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

Escalation clauses do not have to be tied to all four factors in Tedford v. Dempsey, 437 So.2d 410 (Miss. 1983); therefore, in a child support dispute, a child support agreement was enforceable because it was clear and measurable, it adequately and sufficiently provided for the needs of the child, it allotted room for a fluctuation in income, and it set the minimum amount the parties agreed was sufficient to support the child. The clause was tied to the father's earnings, and depending upon his yearly income, it could have been escalating or de-escalating. (overruling Bruce v. Bruce, 687 So.2d 1199 (Miss. 1996)). Short v. Short, 131 So. 3d 1149, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2014).

Father's argument that a chancellor disregarded the statutory guidelines for child support was rejected because the child support was ordered pursuant to an agreement that the father freely entered into; the parties used the broad latitude prescribed to them in formulating an agreement that they presented to the chancellor as sufficient to support their child. Even though the amount of child support was high, the father consented to providing more support than recommended by the guidelines. Short v. Short, 131 So. 3d 1149, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2014).

Although a chancery court erred in granting the parties a divorce based on irreconcilable differences without addressing custody or support of their seventeen-year-old child, who was residing with his older sister, the error was harmless and the issue was moot because the child was no longer a minor and the parties were no longer obligated to pay child support for him. Gordon v. Gordon, 126 So. 3d 922, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 273 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 127 So. 3d 1115, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 631 (Miss. 2013).

Trial court denied wife's motion for relief from a divorce judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) based upon its erroneous application of law because a showing that an agreement was overreaching did not require a showing of fraud, and the settlement agreement that the wife signed without an attorney was clearly one-sided and unfair with the wife giving up custody of the children and all her marital property. Further, the court could not say that the agreement was in the best interests of the children because it gave the children no specific visitation period with their mother, formerly the primary caregiver of the children, and thus it did not meet the requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2. Lowrey v. Lowrey, 919 So. 2d 1112, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 522 (Miss. Ct. App. – 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 921 So. 2d 1279, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 33 (Miss. 2006).

In an irreconcilable differences divorce, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(2), the chancery court did not err in refusing to offset the ex-husband's child support obligation by his payments for his oldest child's college education because, inter alia: (1) although the child lived at college, he frequently came home on the weekend and for holidays; (2) the child received financial support from both parents as the ex-wife gave him money to pay for his car insurance; (3) the wife used a portion of the child's support payment to provide for the child when he came home for visits and to maintain the household for the rest of the family; and (4) the child support agreement contained no provision for reducing child support payments to the wife once the children left home. Dix v. Dix, 941 So. 2d 913, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 812 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In an irreconcilable differences divorce case, the parties asked the chancellor to decide the issues of primary custody, property settlement, and support, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3); because the parties consented to the chancellor determination of custody, that met the statutory directive of "joint application" in § 93-5-24(2). Because the parents had been sharing joint legal and physical custody since their separation, on their own initiative, the chancellor found that there was a proven willingness from both parties to cooperate; thus, the chancellor did not err in awarding joint custody of the child to the parties. Crider v. Crider, 904 So. 2d 142, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 222 (Miss. 2005).

Although the chancellor erred by granting a divorce absolute before adjudicating all matters involving custody and maintenance of the children and property rights between the parties raised by the pleadings, such error was harmless in the absence of a showing of prejudice. Johnston v. Johnston, 722 So. 2d 453, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 457 (Miss. 1998).

Chancellor can modify child support provisions of divorce decree only when there has been material or substantial change in circumstances of one of the parties, and that is true for divorces granted due to irreconcilable differences. Bruce v. Bruce, 687 So. 2d 1199, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 484 (Miss. 1996), overruled in part, Short v. Short, 131 So. 3d 1149, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2014).

A child support agreement, submitted to the court pursuant to § 93-5-2, which ends support for a child before that child reaches the age of 21 or is otherwise emancipated, is unenforceable as to the rights of the child. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 574 So. 2d 1376, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1991).

Chancery courts must refuse to approve any child custody agreement presented under § 93-5-2 or otherwise which mandates, without exception, that children be raised in a given community. Bell v. Bell, 572 So. 2d 841, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 582 (Miss. 1990), modified, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 869 (Miss. Dec. 12, 1990).

The provision in § 93-5-2 stating that a divorce decree "may be modified as other decrees for divorce," refers only to child custody and maintenance because property right settlements are fixed and final. A divorce judgment relating to child support is not a settlement of property rights, which is immutable, fixed and not subject to change, but a decretal provision based upon the reasonable needs of the child coupled with the ability of the parent to pay, and which can vary, dependent upon future developments. Brown v. Brown, 566 So. 2d 718, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 450 (Miss. 1990).

In a divorce suit wherein the husband answered and cross-claimed for divorce and for custody of the parties' minor child and, where in the interim, the child was found to be a neglected child while in mother's custody and custody was given to child's maternal grandfather by youth court referee, the chancellor, who, at the divorce hearing, refused to hear testimony on child's custody, left child in custody of maternal grandfather, and granted divorce on irreconcilable differences, was without authority to substitute youth court referee's judgment, and in so doing, he deprived natural father of right to be heard on the custody of his son. Keely v. Keely, 495 So. 2d 452, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2652 (Miss. 1986).

Filing of second complaint by husband, grounded on wife's adultery, which was inconsistent with first complaint based upon irreconcilable differences, constituted an effective withdrawal from and objection to the first complaint and, since wife had adequate notice, chancellor could grant divorce and custody of minor child to husband on second complaint, notwithstanding the parties' earlier execution of child custody, child support, and property settlement agreements. McCleave v. McCleave, 491 So. 2d 522, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2517 (Miss. 1986).

Section 93-5-2 gives the chancellor the power and the responsibility, in the face of the reasonably foreseeable, to require a reasonable escalation clause in every child support agreement, tailored to the situation of parties, absent unusual circumstances that might render it inequitable. Tedford v. Dempsey, 437 So. 2d 410, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2861 (Miss. 1983).

7. Visitation.

Chancellor's finding that she lacked authority to order specific visitation schedule because the issue had not been jointly submitted to the court was error; although Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2 does not explicitly state that visitation must be agreed upon by the parties or adjudicated by the court before a divorce based on irreconcilable differences, it is implicit in the statute's language that visitation must be addressed if the issue of custody is submitted to the trial court for resolution. Benal v. Benal, 22 So. 3d 369, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

8. Modifiability.

Since a petition was not made to the chancellor to review and modify the property settlement agreement, it was not properly before the chancery court; in order to change the agreement to reflect the parties' new custodial arrangement, the wife had to petition the chancery court to review and alter the agreement. Everett v. Burchfield, 192 So. 3d 1053, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 640 (Miss. Ct. App. 2015).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in denying a former husband's request for modification of child support. The husband had agreed in a property-settlement agreement that he would pay a minimum monthly support payment of $3,000 and while the husband had incurred a loss of income,under the relevant Powell factors, the circumstances did not warrant a downward modification. Short v. Short, 131 So. 3d 1200, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 35 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), rev'd, 131 So. 3d 1149, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2014).

In this divorce action, the chancellor was within her authority to utilize the equitable powers of the chancery court to "modify" or "reform" the property settlement agreement and to order its distribution according to the applicable percentages because the impossibility stemmed from the incorrect estimate of the account's balance at the time of divorce, and from the fact that the husband did not have the information regarding the account to which to effect the transfer. Wood v. Wood, 35 So. 3d 507, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 272 (Miss. 2010).

Where a father lost his job and made less at a subsequent employer, an agreement entered into regarding alimony and child support due to the granting of a divorce based on irreconcilable differences was modified under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23; the agreement could no longer have been given its intended effect, and a material change in circumstances was shown. Austin v. Austin, 981 So. 2d 1000, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 710 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 223 (Miss. 2008).

Record made it clear that the parties reached their property settlement agreement by and through the negotiations of their attorneys and the court was not persuaded that the language proposed by the former husband reflected the original intent of the parties; a thorough comparison of the documents provided in the record did not lend the court to agree with the husband's contention that the final agreement should have been reformed due to a mutual mistake to reflect the understanding and intent of the parties. Pratt v. Pratt, 977 So. 2d 386, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 606 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 94 (Miss. 2008).

Chancery court erred in granting a husband's motion for modification of the property settlement agreement approved by the court, nine years after it was incorporated into the divorce decree; the trial court erred in voiding the alimony and property settlement provisions of the property settlement agreement and in concluding that the provisions were ambiguous, unconscionable and contained illegal escalation clauses. The husband made a deal that he had no problem with for nine years; he was represented by numerous counsel during negotiations of the property settlement agreement, which the parties negotiated for over a year, and could not now be heard to complain. West v. West, 881 So. 2d 188, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1025 (Miss. 2004).

In an irreconcilable differences divorce, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(2), the chancery court did not err in refusing to reduce or eliminate the ex-husband's periodic alimony award to the ex-wife because, inter alia: (1) he was in a much better financial position than her; (2) the decrease in his salary for one year did not reflect a continuing pattern of decline and he was still able to purchase luxury items that year, including an airplane and a recreational vehicle, and to invest in numerous real estate ventures; and (3) based on the husband's monthly disposable income, he could pay his annual periodic alimony obligation to the wife in one month and still have money left over. Dix v. Dix, 941 So. 2d 913, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 812 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancery court did not err in denying a husband's motion for modification of the amount of child support payable under an agreement entered into in connection with the parties' irreconcilable differences divorce where husband had paid less than 10 percent of the amount due and had voluntarily changed jobs resulting in a lowering of the husband's income; husband was ordered to not only continue paying the agreed amount but the amount of the husband's monthly obligation was increased to pay the past due amount. Seeley v. Stafford, 840 So. 2d 111, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 134 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

This section empowered the chancellor to modify a judgment of divorce by entry of a supplemental judgment based on substantial evidence to support the reformation of the parties' property settlement agreement. Dilling v. Dilling, 734 So. 2d 327, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 58 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Chancellor can modify child support provisions of divorce decree only when there has been material or substantial change in circumstances of one of the parties, and that is true for divorces granted due to irreconcilable differences. Bruce v. Bruce, 687 So. 2d 1199, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 484 (Miss. 1996), overruled in part, Short v. Short, 131 So. 3d 1149, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 85 (Miss. 2014).

Support agreements for divorces granted on ground of irreconcilable differences are subject to modification, but only if there has been material change in circumstances with one or more of parties which occurs as result of after-arising circumstances not reasonably anticipated at time of agreement. Varner v. Varner, 666 So. 2d 493, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 599 (Miss. 1995).

Section 93-5-2 gives the chancellor the power and the responsibility, in the face of the reasonably foreseeable, to require a reasonable escalation clause in every child support agreement, tailored to the situation of parties, absent unusual circumstances that might render it inequitable. Tedford v. Dempsey, 437 So. 2d 410, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2861 (Miss. 1983).

Alimony agreements in divorces based upon irreconcilable differences are subject to modification the same as other decrees. Taylor v. Taylor, 392 So. 2d 1145, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1912 (Miss. 1981).

9. Written consent.

Although both parties orally consented to a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, because this statute required that consent to a divorce had to be in writing and signed by both parties personally, the chancellor committed manifest error by not getting consent to the divorce in writing and by granting the divorce. Reno v. Reno, 119 So. 3d 1154, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 487 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Grant of divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences to the husband and wife in their divorce action was inappropriate because the parties failed to comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3) or (5). There was discussion between counsel at trial that revealed that no written consent was ever entered into by the parties and the husband never sought leave of the court to withdraw his fault-based complaint. Johnson v. Johnson, 21 So. 3d 694, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 746 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

10. Revocation of consent.

Under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(3), an ex-husband needed leave of the court to withdraw his consent and the chancellor committed no manifest error in denying the request, because the divorce had been pending for three years before the husband sought to revoke his consent and there had been hearings on the matter since the parties had given their consent. McDuffie v. McDuffie, 21 So. 3d 685, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 628 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

11. Miscellaneous.

Chancery court did not err in denying a husband's Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4) motion for relief from a final judgment of divorce on the grounds that it lacked subject matter and personal jurisdiction where the wife had waived the defenses of lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process by not raising them, and the husband's failure to comply with Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(1) had created the alleged jurisdictional defect. Ridgeway v. Hooker, 240 So. 3d 1202, 2018 Miss. LEXIS 68 (Miss. 2018).

After granting the parties a divorce based on irreconcilable differences, the chancellor properly found their date of separation as the date of demarcation, divided the marital assets, and refused to award the wife alimony because neither party provided any monetary support to the other post-separation, except the disability benefits paid on behalf of their child, the chancellor set out his considerations in classifying the contested items as marital property and conducted a detailed analysis of all the factors in distributing that property, and alimony was inappropriate inasmuch as the wife was not left with a deficit where she was awarded 28 acres of a 34-acre tract (valued at $35,000) and a majority of the marital assets. Randolph v. Randolph, 199 So. 3d 1282, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 579 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

There was a genuine dispute of material fact about whether an alienation of affections case was time barred because it was unclear when a former wife's affections were alienated; although the couple filed for divorce on May 27, 2010, they moved back in together in July 2010 as the wife recovered from surgery, during which time they allegedly cohabitated and engaged in sexual relations. The trial court failed to consider the sixty-day waiting period before an irreconcilable differences divorce became final, as well as the public policy underlying the waiting period, which sought to foster reconciliation. Anderson v. Ladner, 198 So. 3d 381, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 15 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 202 So. 3d 617, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 364 (Miss. 2016).

In a divorce proceeding, a husband argued unsuccessfully that the agreed judgment of divorce was void because it incorrectly recited that the parties were present and giving testimony. Both parties agreed that no testimony was heard by the chancellor on the day the divorce was entered, and the husband asserted that was a material variance in the judgment which renders it void, but he cited no authority for this proposition; however, chancellor correctly found that the language was mere surplusage and held any error harmless. Cobb v. Cobb, 29 So. 3d 145, 2010 Miss. App. LEXIS 118 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

12. Illustrative cases.

Parents may resolve a custody schedule issue through an agreement that a chancellor finds adequate and sufficient before incorporating it into an amended divorce judgment, or they could allow the chancellor to resolve the issue for them. A joint-physical-custody schedule should provide each parent with significant periods of physical custody in such a way so as to assure their child of frequent and continuing contact with both parents, but that does not necessarily mean that each parent would have to get equal time with their child. Todd v. Todd, 216 So. 3d 1178, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 214 (Miss. Ct. App. 2017).

Although the issue of periodic alimony was not included in the parties' signed consent, as required for an irreconcilable differences divorce, a remand was necessary to determine if an initial award of lump sum alimony was intended to be part of a property settlement such that it could have been reinstated. If it was intended as alimony, it could not have been reinstated. Myrick v. Myrick, 186 So. 3d 429, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 102 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

Chancellor erred in distributing the parties' property because several of his findings were not supported by the evidence presented at trial where, while the husband used the proceeds of the sale of certain agricultural equipment to pay off marital debt, the chancellor weighed it against the husband, finding that he had violated a temporary order and dissipated marital assets, and, while the husband possessed four college degrees, no evidence was provided to show that they would provide more gainful employment than he presently possessed as a junior college professor. Burnham v. Burnham, 185 So. 3d 358, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 560 (Miss. 2015).

Contempt action was timely because the statute of limitations in Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-43 applied as a spouse's action sought enforcement of a hold-harmless provision of a property-settlement agreement, which became part of the final judgment of divorce, and the spouse filed for contempt within seven years of learning that a bank was pursuing the spouse for the debt on a car which was assigned to the other spouse and discharged in bankruptcy by the other spouse. Moseley v. Smith, 180 So. 3d 667, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 689 (Miss. Ct. App. 2014), cert. dismissed, — So. 3d —, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 605 (Miss. 2015), cert. dismissed, — So. 3d —, 2015 Miss. LEXIS 625 (Miss. 2015).

Where a husband and wife, in attempting to obtain an irreconcilable-differences divorce, never fully complied with either Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(2) or (3), as their signed consent agreement did not set forth any issues for the chancellor to decide, and their purported settlement did not settle all property rights, the chancellor erred in erred in granting a final divorce. Sanford v. Sanford, 124 So. 3d 647, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 571 (Miss. 2013).

Because the wife acknowledged that she was entering into a binding agreement to divorce the husband pursuant to the terms of the settlement and on the basis of irreconcilable differences, she withdrew her fault-based divorce grounds, and their property-settlement agreement was executed in writing and signed by both parties, she could not later renegotiate the nature or the terms of the divorce. Keith v. Keith, 121 So. 3d 967, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 596 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Consent agreement was not invalid. Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2 did not require it to be notarized or signed by an attorney; furthermore, the husband's attempt to withdraw or expunge the agreement after the divorce decree was entered did not invalidate it. McNeese v. McNeese, 119 So. 3d 264, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 172 (Miss. 2013).

Pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-2(2) and (3), a trial court chancellor did not err by only enforcing the property division provision of parties' property settlement agreement in their divorce action; the wife's claim that she was under duress when she signed the agreement lacked merit based on the circumstances. Wilson v. Wilson, 53 So. 3d 865, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 70 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

§ 93-5-3. Not mandatory to deny divorce because of recrimination.

If a complainant or cross-complainant in a divorce action shall prove grounds entitling him to a divorce, it shall not be mandatory on any chancellor to deny such party a divorce, even though the evidence might establish recrimination on the part of such complainant or cross-complainant.

1. In general.

The defense of recrimination was not available to deny a divorce to a wife where the defense was based on the parties' son's testimony that he had seen his mother sit on a man's lap and kiss him, since this would not qualify as a ground for divorce; it did not constitute habitual cruel and inhuman treatment because there was no testimony as to the habitual nature of the act or that the husband even knew about the alleged relationship. Cherry v. Cherry, 593 So. 2d 13, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 964 (Miss. 1991).

Under the doctrine of recrimination, which is founded on the basis that the equal guilt of a complainant bars his or her right to a divorce, the complainant's offense need not be the same offense charged against his or her spouse, but it must be an offense sufficient to constitute a ground for divorce. Parker v. Parker, 519 So. 2d 1232, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 157 (Miss. 1988).

2. Illustrative cases.

Chancellor made specific findings of fact when he stated that the basis for granting the divorce was the wife's admission of uncondoned adultery; even though the husband admitted to having an affair, the chancellor was not required to deny him a divorce based on recrimination when he proved that the wife had also committed adultery. Dykes v. Dykes, 191 So. 3d 1287, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 289 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016).

Husband was properly granted a divorce on the ground of uncondoned adultery because the wife's recrimination defense failed since, even though the husband admitted having an affair, the chancery court was not required to deny the husband a divorce when the husband had proven that the wife had committed adultery. Ware v. Ware, 7 So. 3d 271, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

A wife's condonation of her husband's "peculiar" sexual activities was not sufficient to deny her a divorce on the grounds of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment based on evidence that the husband was impotent and occasionally dressed in women's clothing, even though the wife continued to live with the husband and at least attempted to have sexual relations, since it was not proper for the wife to be penalized for attempting to save her marriage. Cherry v. Cherry, 593 So. 2d 13, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 964 (Miss. 1991).

The fact that a divorced plaintiff continued to live under the same roof with the defendant after filing the complaint is a heavy factor to be weighed in considering whether he or she has a valid cause, though it does not in and of itself compel a denial of divorce; it is conceivably possible for valid grounds for divorce to exist despite this. Lawyers representing persons seeking a divorce have the obligation to advise and warn them about the undesirability of continuing to live in the same household following the filing of the suit, and they have the obligation to seek and press for a temporary hearing before the chancellor to secure alimony pendente lite and temporary support money. Jethrow v. Jethrow, 571 So. 2d 270, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 700 (Miss. 1990).

A wife did not condone her husband's adultery as a matter of law by continuing to live in the same house with him and sleep in the same bed while waiting for a second indiscretion as proof of adultery after the initial indiscretion, which was not conclusive. Cheatham v. Cheatham, 537 So. 2d 435, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1988).

§ 93-5-5. Residence requirements for divorce.

The jurisdiction of the chancery court in suits for divorce shall be confined to the following cases:

(a) Where one (1) of the parties has been an actual bona fide resident within this state for six (6) months next preceding the commencement of the suit. If a member of the armed services of the United States is stationed in the state and residing within the state with his spouse, such person and his spouse shall be considered actual bona fide residents of the state for the purposes of this section, provided they were residing within the state at the time of the separation of the parties.

(b) In any case where the proof shows that a residence was acquired in this state with a purpose of securing a divorce, the court shall not take jurisdiction thereof, but dismiss the bill at the cost of complainant.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Intent.
3. Foreign decree.

1. In general.
Chancellor's finding of 6 months residency of wife prior to commencement of divorce proceeding was manifestly in error and therefore jurisdiction of subject matter failed; residence of married woman is that of her husband during time they lived together as husband and wife, although married woman may establish residence upon separation from husband with intent to abandon her marital residence and establish independent residence; wife had left husband in Germany on August 19, with round trip ticket to return to Germany and filed original and amended bill alleging November 16 as date of separation of parties, although she filed affidavit and testified that she had never intended to change her residence from state of Mississippi; calculation of 6 months period prior to either August or November date failed to reveal 6 month period preceding date of commencement of action on December 28. O'Neill v. O'Neill, 515 So. 2d 1208, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2922 (Miss. 1987).

In wife's action for divorce and other relief wherein summons upon the husband was issued by non-resident publication in a newspaper, with a copy of the publication notice being mailed, first class, to husband's address in another state, while the chancery court was without jurisdiction to render a personal monetary judgment against the non-resident husband, the court had jurisdiction over the subject matter of the divorce action and personal jurisdiction over one of the parties who met the residency requirements, and had authority to grant the divorce. Noble v. Noble, 502 So. 2d 317, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2316 (Miss. 1987).

Iowa 1-year residency requirement for instituting divorce action held constitutional. Sosna v. Iowa, 419 U.S. 393, 95 S. Ct. 553, 42 L. Ed. 2d 532, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 19 (U.S. 1975).

Jurisdiction of Mississippi courts over a divorce suit brought by one who had become a resident of the state, upon personal service of process on defendant, is not affected by pendency of a divorce proceeding theretofore instituted in another state. Cox v. Cox, 234 Miss. 885, 108 So. 2d 422, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 564 (Miss. 1959).

There is no requirement that the bill of complaint should necessarily allege that one of the parties had been an actual bona fide resident for the period stated, and especially where the bill alleges that the parties had been living in the state for such a period of time as husband and wife, since their residence under such circumstances would have been presumed to have been bona fide in the absence of proof to the contrary. Horton v. Horton, 213 Miss. 768, 57 So. 2d 723, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 423 (Miss. 1952).

Where the jurat of the chancery clerk discloses that the complainant personally appeared before him and made an oath that the facts as stated in the above bill for divorce are true as stated therein and the bill was not filed by collusion with the defendant for the purposes of obtaining a divorce contrary to the laws, the affidavit to the bill of complaint was sufficient to give jurisdiction to the trial court despite the fact there was a failure to add the words but that the cause or causes for divorce are true as therein stated, in the language of the statute. Horton v. Horton, 213 Miss. 768, 57 So. 2d 723, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 423 (Miss. 1952).

The question of jurisdiction may be raised for the first time in the supreme court. Horton v. Horton, 213 Miss. 768, 57 So. 2d 723, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 423 (Miss. 1952).

Under divorce statute, domicile once acquired is presumed to continue, and burden of proving contrary is upon party alleging it. May v. May, 158 Miss. 68, 130 So. 52, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1930).

Husband's absence from state for purpose of study pursuant to scholarship held not "abandonment" of domicile, and therefore chancery court had jurisdiction of divorce suit. May v. May, 158 Miss. 68, 130 So. 52, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1930).

Party voluntarily appearing is subject to jurisdiction of court. Clay v. Clay, 134 Miss. 658, 99 So. 818, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 322 (Miss. 1924).

Divorce statutes as to residence inapplicable in annulment suit. Antoine v. Antoine, 132 Miss. 442, 96 So. 305, 1923 Miss. LEXIS 50 (Miss. 1923).

2. Intent.

That a man and wife move to another state, purchase a home, register to vote, and reside there for an extended period of time are circumstances indicative of an intention to abandon their domicil of origin and to establish a new domicil, but such facts are not conclusive in the face of uncontradicted evidence of an intention not to abandon the domicil of origin. Brookhaven Pressed Brick & Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 191 So. 2d 840, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1225 (Miss. 1966).

A naval officer, married in Maryland and thereafter living at duty stations in various parts of the country to which he had been ordered, who claimed his parents' residence in Greenville, Mississippi as his legal residence on a driver's license and navy emergency data records, had established a domicile in Mississippi which met the jurisdictional requirements of this section [Code 1942, § 2736]. Bannan v. Bannan, 188 So. 2d 253, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1376 (Miss. 1966).

In order for the court to have jurisdiction in a divorce action there must be bona fide domicile which means residence with intent to remain. Lynch v. Lynch, 210 Miss. 810, 50 So. 2d 378, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 1951).

Complainant must actually and voluntarily have established residence within the state for a year next preceeding commencement of a divorce suit, with a bona fide intention of remaining there at least indefinitely, in order to give the court jurisdiction. Lucia v. Lucia, 200 Miss. 520, 27 So. 2d 774, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1946).

Once established, a domicile continues until another is acquired by removal to another locality with a bona fide intention to remain there at least indefinitely and to abandon the old domicile without intent to return thereto. Lucia v. Lucia, 200 Miss. 520, 27 So. 2d 774, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1946).

Where the complainant first registered and paid poll tax in this state in 1943, overlooked payment of 1944 poll tax, paid 1945 poll tax, testified that he established his domicile in January, 1944, and otherwise testified that it was established a month or two later, and further stated that he did not decide to make this state his legal residence until after discovery that insanity was a ground for divorce in this state, the decree of the chancellor dismissing the bill was remanded for further investigation of evidence apparently obtainable. Lucia v. Lucia, 200 Miss. 520, 27 So. 2d 774, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 1946).

To constitute a complainant an actual bona fide resident of a county in this state, there must have been an actual residence voluntarily established in such county with the bona fide intention of remaining there, if not permanently, at least indefinitely. Smith v. Smith, 194 Miss. 431, 12 So. 2d 428, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1943).

Intent necessary to establish a residence in this state is the intent that an established residence shall be reasonably permanent, and a mere intention to establish a residence at some future time is not sufficient. Smith v. Smith, 194 Miss. 431, 12 So. 2d 428, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1943).

While a complainant's own testimony as to his intention is relevant in determining whether he has established a residence within the purview of this section [Code 1942, § 2736], a mere assertion of intention to establish a residence within the state is not in itself sufficient to comply with this section. Smith v. Smith, 194 Miss. 431, 12 So. 2d 428, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1943).

3. Foreign decree.

Where divorce decree of another state purporting to affect or determine marital status and right of citizens of Mississippi is contrary to public policy of Mississippi, its courts will determine for themselves jurisdiction of court rendering such decree and consequent validity thereof, notwithstanding recitals of decree of jurisdictional fact of residence or domicile. Miller v. Miller, 173 Miss. 44, 159 So. 112, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 192 (Miss. 1935).

Mere rendition of Arkansas divorce decree raised no presumption that husband obtaining such decree was resident of Arkansas in good faith with intention of remaining and acquiring permanent domicile there, and therefore husband pleading such decree in bar of wife's divorce suit in Mississippi must prove that he acquired domicile in Arkansas. Miller v. Miller, 173 Miss. 44, 159 So. 112, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 192 (Miss. 1935).

§ 93-5-7. Conduct of divorce proceedings.

The proceedings to obtain a divorce shall be by complaint in chancery, and shall be conducted as other suits in chancery, except that (1) the defendant shall not be required to answer on oath; (2) no judgment by default may be granted but a divorce may be granted on the ground of irreconcilable differences in termtime or vacation; (3) admissions made in the answer shall not be taken as evidence; (4) the clerk shall not set down on the issue docket any divorce case unless upon the request of one (1) of the parties; (5) the plaintiff may allege only the statutory language as cause for divorce in a separate paragraph in the complaint; provided, however, the defendant shall be entitled to discover any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the issues raised by the claims or defenses of the other; (6) the court shall have full power in its discretion to grant continuances in such cases without the compliance by the parties with any of the requirements of law respecting continuances in other cases; and (7) in all cases, except complaints seeking a divorce on the ground of irreconcilable differences, the complaint must be accompanied with an affidavit of plaintiff that it is not filed by collusion with the defendant for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, but that the cause or causes for divorce stated in the complaint are true as stated.

1. In general; bill of complaint.

Where a complaint was not accompanied by an affidavit signed by the plaintiff that the action was not filed in collusion with the defendant, the court did not err in requiring the submission of an amended complaint with a properly signed affidavit and then proceeding with the trial. Keller v. Keller, 763 So. 2d 902, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 228 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

An affidavit to a bill of complaint for divorce which contained all of the other essential averments but omitted "for the purpose of obtaining a divorce" is not defective. White v. Fillyaw, 272 So. 2d 924, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1557 (Miss. 1973).

Fact that the affidavit attached to the amended cross bill of complaint failed to state that it was not filed in collusion with the complainant is not a basis for reversal where the objection was raised for the first time on appeal and both the original bill of complaint and the original cross bill were accompanied by an affidavit which affirmatively stated that neither was filed by collusion. Marshall v. Marshall, 205 So. 2d 644, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1541 (Miss. 1968).

A bill for divorce is never taken as confessed whether answered or not. Ladner v. Ladner, 233 Miss. 222, 102 So. 2d 195, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 375 (Miss. 1958).

The purpose of requiring affidavit of complainant is to purge the conscience of complainant touching the question of collusion. Vance v. Vance, 197 Miss. 332, 20 So. 2d 825, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1945).

Where a statute specifically prescribes who shall make a certain affidavit, it can be made by none other than the person specified, although there is nothing in the language of the statute to show that its designation was intended to be exclusive. Vance v. Vance, 197 Miss. 332, 20 So. 2d 825, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1945).

Affidavit of complainant required under this section [Code 1942, § 2737] can only be made by complainant himself or herself, and not by an agent or attorney, that statute (Code 1942, § 1661), generally permitting an oath or affirmation to be made by an agent or attorney, being inapplicable. Vance v. Vance, 197 Miss. 332, 20 So. 2d 825, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1945).

Where bill for divorce was sworn to by attorney of record and mother of ostensible complainant, who was in armed services overseas, and not by the complainant himself, and wife made timely objection to any hearing because of this failure, supreme court will dismiss decree for husband and remand the cause with direction that it may not be proceeded with further until the required affidavit is made by the complainant personally. Vance v. Vance, 197 Miss. 332, 20 So. 2d 825, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 293 (Miss. 1945).

2. Other action, proceedings; res judicata.

Wife's claims against her husband which she brought in circuit court that were more closely related to the parties' marital relationship and financial affairs had to be decided in chancery court; her claims against him for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, along with her alienation of affection claims against his alleged paramour, were purely legal and were properly before the circuit court. Germany v. Germany, 123 So. 3d 423, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 545 (Miss. 2013).

As a wife's conversion claim against her husband was really a request for a award of marital assets that ordinarily would be distributed in the divorce action, the circuit court erred in denying the husband's motion to transfer that claim to the parties' divorce action which was pending in chancery court. Germany v. Germany, 123 So. 3d 423, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 545 (Miss. 2013).

Circuit court erred in denying a husband's motion to transfer his wife's claim for unjust enrichment to the parties' divorce action which was pending in chancery court, because 1) it was an equitable claim, and 2) to allow her to pursue that claim in circuit court could lead to a double recovery if she was awarded alimony by the chancery court. Germany v. Germany, 123 So. 3d 423, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 545 (Miss. 2013).

As the substance of a wife's breach-of-contract and fraud claims against her husband was related to divorce and alimony, the circuit court erred in denying the husband's motion to transfer those claims to the parties' divorce action which was pending in chancery court. Germany v. Germany, 123 So. 3d 423, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 545 (Miss. 2013).

Where a prenuptial agreement provided that a wife would receive equity in the marital home upon divorce, but did not provide remedies for a breach, the chancellor's remedy and credibility determinations would not be reversed on appeal. Doster v. Doster, 853 So. 2d 147, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

A chancellor's finding that a wife was entitled to distribution of marital property and/or lump sum alimony was premature where the husband's principal asset was in bankruptcy, since the value of the husband's estate was not before the court due to the bankruptcy proceedings; the issues of property division and lump sum alimony should have remained in the trial court pending the conclusion of the bankruptcy proceedings. Heigle v. Heigle, 654 So. 2d 895, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 228 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor's determination that a wife was not entitled to periodic alimony was premature where the husband's principal asset was in bankruptcy, since the value of the husband's estate was not before the court due to the bankruptcy proceedings; the issue of periodic alimony should have remained in the trial court pending the conclusion of the bankruptcy proceedings. Heigle v. Heigle, 654 So. 2d 895, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 228 (Miss. 1995).

A chancery court abused its discretion in exercising jurisdiction over a divorce action brought by the wife where a divorce had been granted by a Maine court in an action filed by the husband; the wife was estopped from asserting the invalidity of the Maine decree since she remarried soon after the decree became final, thereby indicating her reliance on its validity. Scribner v. Scribner, 556 So. 2d 350, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 23 (Miss. 1990).

Where a wife filed a bill of complaint for divorce in one county and a hearing was held and a temporary decree was issued awarding the wife temporary custody of a child, and the issue was joined on the merits when the husband filed an answer and cross bill, a subsequent reconciliation of the parties in another county did not ipso facto dispose of the proceeding, and the chancery court of another county in which the wife subsequently filed a bill for divorce should have sustained the husband's plea in abatement. Lee v. Lee, 232 So. 2d 370, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1627 (Miss. 1970).

A decree for separate support and maintenance is res judicata of the fact that the wife has not deserted the husband, and in a subsequent action by the husband for a divorce on the ground of desertion the issues are limited to that which has transpired subsequent to such decree. Wilson v. Wilson, 202 Miss. 540, 32 So. 2d 686, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 313 (Miss. 1947).

Dismissal of a bill for divorce and separate maintenance is res adjudicata of the issues of both divorce and maintenance, there being no showing of any change in condition of the parties. Lynch v. Lynch, 202 Miss. 500, 32 So. 2d 358, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 306 (Miss. 1947).

3. Representation pro se.

Mississippi Constitution Article III, § 24 and § 25 permit a party to proceed pro se. Thus, a husband and wife were permitted to proceed pro se in a divorce action. Bullard v. Morris, 547 So. 2d 789, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 355 (Miss. 1989).

4. Appearance in person.

Chancery court did not err in granting a divorce on the ground of desertion even though the proceedings were not heard in open court because the husband failed to answer the wife's complaint or enter an appearance. Luse v. Luse, 992 So. 2d 659, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 391 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

In an uncontested divorce action based on irreconcilable differences, it was within the chancellor's discretion to determine whether a personal appearance of a party or of an attorney was required since no proof is required under § 93-5-2, which governs a divorce sought on the grounds of irreconcilable differences, and neither § 93-5-7 nor 93-5-17, which govern the conduct of divorce proceedings, indicates a requirement that the person seeking the divorce must personally appear before the chancellor. The chancellor abused his discretion in refusing to grant the divorce without a personal appearance where the parties were proceeding pro se, the wife was a resident of California, and the husband was incarcerated in a correctional facility. Bullard v. Morris, 547 So. 2d 789, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 355 (Miss. 1989).

5. Continuance.

Where plaintiff, upon filing of answer denying allegation of divorce bill, set cause down for hearing without waiting period allowed for taking testimony, defendant was entitled to dismissal of bill or a continuance. Chisholm v. Chisholm, 114 Miss. 332, 75 So. 125, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 39 (Miss. 1917).

6. Incidental or ancillary claims.

A wife was entitled to proceed in Chancery Court against her husband for partition of jointly held property as an incident to her action for divorce. Johnson v. Johnson, 550 So. 2d 416, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 454 (Miss. 1989).

7. Burdens; proof; evidence.

Because a husband did not challenge the granting of a divorce itself or the chancery court's decision to try the case in his absence, the husband's attempt to defend the case for the first time on appeal was improper, and the issues he raised were procedurally barred by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-7 (Rev. 2004) and Miss. R. Civ. P. 55(e). Lee v. Lee, 78 So. 3d 337, 2011 Miss. App. LEXIS 131 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011), rev'd, 78 So. 3d 326, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 36 (Miss. 2012).

A divorce complainant must prove the allegations of the complaint even when the defendant has failed to answer; the complainant's proof requirement does not become lighter because the defendant fails to answer. Moeller v. Roy, 609 So. 2d 426, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 651 (Miss. 1992).

Section 93-5-7 does not bar a defendant in a divorce action from presenting proof rebutting the plaintiff's proof even if the defendant did not file an answer to the complaint; since the lack of an answer does not confess the allegations and the plaintiff is still required to place the necessary proof before the court, a defendant's failure to answer does not deprive the defendant of the right to put on evidence to rebut the allegations of the complaint, though the defendant cannot offer evidence outside the scope of the complaint and cannot offer any evidence supporting any affirmative charge. Moeller v. Roy, 609 So. 2d 426, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 651 (Miss. 1992).

Two photographs of a wife's bruised arms were not sufficient corroborating evidence of the wife's claim of habitual cruel and inhuman treatment to warrant the granting of a divorce on that ground where there were other witnesses to the marriage who were available to testify. Moeller v. Roy, 609 So. 2d 426, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 651 (Miss. 1992).

Divorce will not be granted on uncorroborated testimony of complainant unless the case is such that, in its nature or owing to the isolation of the parties, no corroborating proof is reasonably possible. Anderson v. Anderson, 190 Miss. 508, 200 So. 726, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1941).

A case where corroborating proof is not reasonably possible is not made out where the parties lived throughout their married lives in a large and closely settled town, and moved almost daily among many who, in the various relations of life, could hardly have escaped observation of corroborative facts and circumstances. Anderson v. Anderson, 190 Miss. 508, 200 So. 726, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1941).

Corroborating evidence will be sufficient if it proves such substantial facts and circumstances as will serve to engender in a sound and prudently cautious mind a confident conclusion that the testimony of the complainant is true in all the essential particulars. Anderson v. Anderson, 190 Miss. 508, 200 So. 726, 1941 Miss. LEXIS 72 (Miss. 1941).

8. Decree.

A trial court in a divorce action erred by failing to provide findings of fact and conclusions of law when requested to do so by one of the parties, and therefore the case would be reversed and remanded for the limited purpose of providing findings of fact and conclusions of law as required under Rule 52, Miss. R. Civ. P. Lowery v. Lowery, 657 So. 2d 817, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 332 (Miss. 1995).

It will be presumed from the entry of a decree of divorce that the court did its duty, that the ground for divorce was duly proven, and that the divorce was not the result of collusion. In re Estate of Kennington, 204 So. 2d 444, 1967 Miss. LEXIS 1194 (Miss. 1967).

Presumption of divorce and validity of woman's second marriage not overcome by court records of counties of her residence only. Pigford v. Ladner, 147 Miss. 822, 112 So. 785, 1927 Miss. LEXIS 307 (Miss. 1927).

Where the supreme court reversed that part of a decree in a divorce case which erroneously adjudged the guilty wife to have forfeited her interests in a life insurance policy on the life of her husband, it will not remand the cause for an amendment of the pleadings, so that a reformation of the policy may be sought, but will, on timely request, frame its judgment without prejudice of any right the husband may have to bring original suit for such relief. Grego v. Grego, 78 Miss. 443, 28 So. 817, 1900 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 1900).

9. Notice of trial settings.

Appellate court in no way suggests, intimates or holds that the date of a divorce trial must be set on the trial docket at least 20 days prior to trial. In many instances, if not most, complaints for divorce may be set for trial outside of the normal docket setting of the civil trial docket because a divorce case may not be set down on the issue docket unless at the request of one of the parties. Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-7. The appellate court simply holds that once a party appears in a temporary phase of the divorce proceeding, the party is entitled to notice of the subsequent hearing on the underlying divorce proceeding unless the party is so notified during the temporary proceeding. Brown v. Brown, 872 So. 2d 787, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 439 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

10. Admissions.

In a divorce proceeding, where the husband failed to answer the wife's requests for admissions, and they were deemed admitted, it was not error to deny the wife's motion to alter or amend judgment in regard to the weight given to the admissions, because the admissions were taken into consideration, but they were not conclusive, in and of themselves, of the ultimate issue. Kumar v. Kumar, 976 So. 2d 957, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 156 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

§ 93-5-9. Minors as parties to divorce proceedings.

A married minor may bring or defend a suit for divorce, separate maintenance and support, temporary maintenance or support, custody of children, or any other action involving marital rights without the necessity of a next friend or guardian ad litem, and a judgment in such cases shall be as effective as if the minor were an adult.

§ 93-5-11. Filing of complaints; transfer of venue.

All complaints, except those based solely on the ground of irreconcilable differences, must be filed in the county in which the plaintiff resides, if the defendant be a nonresident of this state, or be absent, so that process cannot be served; and the manner of making such parties defendants so as to authorize a judgment against them in other chancery cases, shall be observed. If the defendant be a resident of this state, the complaint shall be filed in the county in which such defendant resides or may be found at the time, or in the county of the residence of the parties at the time of separation, if the plaintiff be still a resident of such county when the suit is instituted.

A complaint for divorce based solely on the grounds of irreconcilable differences shall be filed in the county of residence of either party where both parties are residents of this state. If one (1) party is not a resident of this state, then the complaint shall be filed in the county where the resident party resides.

Transfer of venue shall be governed by Rule 82(d) of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

ANALYSIS

1. In general.
2. Construction and application.

1. In general.

Trial court, in a divorce proceeding, exercised jurisdiction over the parties it did not have and had to be dismissed; even though the wife brought the action in DeSoto County and the husband waived process and voluntarily attempted to submit to the jurisdiction, jurisdiction could not be agreed on. Roberts v. Roberts, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 487 (Miss. Ct. App. June 3, 2003), op. withdrawn, sub. op., 866 So. 2d 474, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 915 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

If proper venue is lacking in a divorce proceeding, the bill for divorce must be dismissed and can not be transferred. Stark v. Stark, 755 So. 2d 31, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 371 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

This section [Code 1942, § 2738] is mandatory, and statute (Code 1942, § 1441) providing for the transfer of causes to the proper venue where the court lacks venue jurisdiction does not apply to divorce actions. Price v. Price, 202 Miss. 268, 32 So. 2d 124, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 270 (Miss. 1947); Cruse v. Cruse, 202 Miss. 497, 32 So. 2d 355, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1947).

The court is without authority to transfer a cause to another county on the ground of defendant's residence and citizenship there. Cruse v. Cruse, 202 Miss. 497, 32 So. 2d 355, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1947).

If proper venue is lacking, the bill must be dismissed; the action cannot be transferred to the proper venue. Cruse v. Cruse, 202 Miss. 497, 32 So. 2d 355, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 305 (Miss. 1947).

This statute is not a mere statute of venue that may be waived but one of jurisdiction of the subject matter of the suit. Price v. Price, 202 Miss. 268, 32 So. 2d 124, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 270 (Miss. 1947).

2. Construction and application.

Statute governs the venue of a divorce action and limits the chancery court's exercise of personal jurisdiction over the defendant; the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure control the procedure to be utilized when venue is improper. Lewis v. Pagel, 233 So. 3d 740, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 2017).

Cruse v. Cruse, 202 Miss. 497 (1947), Price v. Price, 202 Miss. 268 (1947), Carter v. Carter, 278 So. 2d 394 (Miss. 1973), Miller v. Miller, 323 So. 2d 533 (Miss. 1975), Stark v. Stark, 755 So. 2d 31 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999), Slaughter v. Slaughter, 869 So. 2d 386 (Miss. 2004), and Bush v. Bush, 903 So. 2d 700 (Miss. 2005) are overruled to the extent they hold the statute confers subject-matter jurisdiction on chancery courts; such jurisdiction is conveyed by the Mississippi Constitution. Lewis v. Pagel, 233 So. 3d 740, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 2017).

Substantial evidence supported the chancery court's finding that a husband resided in Harrison County, Mississippi with the intention to remain there when the divorce was filed because the husband listed his address as Harrison County, and he testified in a deposition that he lived in Harrison County; the wife testified that when the husband left the marital home he left to live at his aunt's condominium in Harrison County. Lewis v. Pagel, 233 So. 3d 740, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 221 (Miss. 2017).

Wife's divorce action against nonresident husband was filed as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11 because it was filed in the county in which the wife was residing, notwithstanding that the couple's former home, which the wife had not yet sold and on which a homestead exemption was claimed, was in another county. Hampton v. Hampton, 977 So. 2d 1181, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 507 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 977 So. 2d 1144, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 129 (Miss. 2008).

Where the parties resided in Rankin County, Mississippi, prior to and at the time of separation, the Chancery Court in Rankin County had subject matter jurisdiction over their divorce filed on the ground of adultery. Bush v. Bush, 903 So. 2d 700, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 2005).

A proper reading of all the three statutes, Miss. Code Ann. §§ 93-5-11, 93-5-23 and 93-11-65, does not provide for a custody matter to proceed under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-11-65 when a divorce is pending. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 869 So. 2d 386, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 2004).

The mandatory filing provisions for contested and irreconcilable differences divorces are clearly stated in Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11. The statutory requirements for proper filing of a divorce action are straightforward and clear and may not be circumvented by an attempt to expand § 93-5-11 through the use of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-11-65, nor indirectly through Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23; to find otherwise would negate the need for Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11 and create judicial conflict. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 869 So. 2d 386, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 2004).

Filing of the contested divorce in Coahoma County was incorrect in light of the mandatory requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11 as a contested divorce had to be filed in the county of defendant's residence, which was Chickasaw County, and the trial court correctly determined that Coahoma County did not have jurisdiction over the contested divorce, but the trial court erred in attempting to cure the jurisdictional error by simply dismissing the contested divorce and retaining the irreconcilable differences divorce, which could have been filed in Coahoma County as the wife was a resident of that county; thus, because the trial court had no jurisdiction over the contested divorce, it had no jurisdiction over the entire action and the trial court erred by failing to grant the husband's motion to dismiss in toto. Slaughter v. Slaughter, 869 So. 2d 386, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 317 (Miss. 2004).

Where wife first filed for divorce in Tate County, and the Tate County Chancellor denied a divorce, but granted custody of the parties' children to the father, and the wife then moved to DeSoto County, and filed for divorce, and the Desoto County Chancellor granted the parties' a divorce, incorporating the Tate County Chancellor's orders, and where the wife then asserted the judgment was void for lack of jurisdiction in Desoto County, the appellate court agreed that pursuant to the jurisdiction and venue requirements of Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-11, the judgment was void, however, the wife was subject to sanctions for manipulation of the judicial system. Roberts v. Roberts, 866 So. 2d 474, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 915 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 866 So. 2d 473, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 169 (Miss. 2004), cert. denied, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 170 (Miss. Feb. 5, 2004).

Where the defendant in a divorce action was a resident of the state, but was absent so that process could not be served, Code 1972 § 93-5-11 permitted the plaintiff to file suit in the county of her residence, and authorized service on the defendant by publication pursuant to Code 1972 § 13-3-19. Miller v. Miller, 323 So. 2d 533, 1975 Miss. LEXIS 1563 (Miss. 1975).

In order to rebut the presumption arising from a subsequent marriage that the former marriage has been terminated by divorce, the prior spouse must show where each party to the prior marriage had resided up to the time of the second marriage, and then procure from the clerk of the proper court in each county a certificate of search showing that no divorce or annulment has been granted by the court. In re Estate of Erwin, 317 So. 2d 55, 1975 Miss. LEXIS 1731 (Miss. 1975).

The words "county in which such defendant resides or may be found at the time" should be construed in accordance with the policy of this state and, accordingly, the word "residence" means the "domicile" of the defendant, while the words "or may be found at the time" apply either to a nonresident of the state or to a citizen of the state who has no actual domicile or fixed place of residence. Mississippi State Highway Com. v. Brown, 208 So. 2d 194, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1404 (Miss. 1968).

Where the defendant has a domicile within the state the bill of complaint must be filed in the county of his domicile and not in some other county where he may temporarily be served with process. Mississippi State Highway Com. v. Brown, 208 So. 2d 194, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1404 (Miss. 1968).

A suit for alimony pendente lite, separate maintenance, and attorneys' fees which was brought in Tate County, the residence of the wife, should have been transferred to the chancery court of Alcorn County where the evidence established that the latter county was the residence of the husband, and the husband had made timely objection to the venue. Trainum v. Trainum, 234 Miss. 448, 105 So. 2d 628, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1958).

Wife's separate maintenance suit should be brought in county of which husband is resident. Trainum v. Trainum, 234 Miss. 448, 105 So. 2d 628, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1958).

The general rule is that the word "residence," as used in divorce statutes, should be construed as equivalent to "domicile." Bilbo v. Bilbo, 180 Miss. 536, 177 So. 772, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 1938).

Evidence disclosing that husband had maintained residence in Pearl River County since 1908, that in 1923 he was defeated as candidate for governor and on next day announced his candidacy for same office in 1927 election and moved to Hinds County in interest of that campaign, that he moved into executive mansion in Hinds County in 1928, and that separation of husband and wife occurred while they were living in the executive mansion in 1931, established that the legal "residence" of the parties was in Pearl River County when they moved into the executive mansion and continued while they sojourned there until their separation was consummated, so that chancery court of Pearl River County had jurisdiction of husband's suit for divorce. Bilbo v. Bilbo, 180 Miss. 536, 177 So. 772, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 1938).

Under divorce statute, domicile once acquired is presumed to continue, and burden of proving contrary is upon party alleging it. May v. May, 158 Miss. 68, 130 So. 52, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1930).

Husband's absence from state for purpose of study pursuant to scholarship held not "abandonment" of domicile, and therefore chancery court had jurisdiction of divorce suit. May v. May, 158 Miss. 68, 130 So. 52, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1930).

ANALYSIS

1. Proceeding held in vacation — In general.
2. —Divorce.
3. —Temporary orders.
4. —Permanent orders.
5. —Other proceedings.
6. Jurisdictional issues.
7. Modification of decree.
8. Miscellaneous matters.

1. Proceeding held in vacation — In general.

In a case where a divorce decree was entered against a wife based on the ground of adultery, the wife impliedly consented to a hearing in vacation by failing to contest the divorce and make a timely appearance, and the repeal of Miss. Code Ann. § 9-5-93, referenced in Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-17(1), did not mean that the chancellor did not have the authority to hear the divorce matter in vacation. Lindsey v. Lindsey, 818 So. 2d 1191, 2002 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 2002).

Chancery court has a broad discretion in determining the factual issues as to custody of a minor but that discretion should be exercised in the light of an established rule of this and other courts in such cases. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 222 Miss. 469, 76 So. 2d 375, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 666 (Miss. 1954).

2. —Divorce.

Chancery court did not err in granting a divorce on the ground of desertion even though the proceedings were not heard in open court as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-17(1); there was nothing in the record to contradict the chancellor's finding regarding the wife's grounds for divorce, and the husband, who failed to answer or appear, failed to follow Miss. R. App. P. 10(c), which might have created a record on appeal. Luse v. Luse, 992 So. 2d 659, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 391 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

The trial court did not err in granting a divorce decree in vacation without having previously taken the case under advisement for a ruling in vacation, where the wife requested additional time to present argument to the court, the court granted the request and instructed her to prepare an order so that the case could be taken under advisement, as required by § 93-5-17, she did not follow the instruction, either through oversight or inadvertence, and the order was never entered, and where, further, the parties consented to take the decree in vacation, and their understanding had the effect of retaining jurisdiction in the court until the decree nunc pro tunc was entered, the necessity for which was prompted by the wife's oversight in failing to prepare the order. Chaffin v. Chaffin, 437 So. 2d 384, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2819 (Miss. 1983).

In a divorce action the court improperly held that a divorce decree was void on the basis that the decree set a date certain in vacation when the matters pertaining to alimony and child support and property rights would be heard but the decree rendered thereon was another date, where none of the proceedings in the case after the date on which the divorce was granted involved "proceedings to obtain a divorce" as envisioned by § 93-5-17. Bornaschella v. Orcutt, 418 So. 2d 768, 1982 Miss. LEXIS 2099 (Miss. 1982).

Chancellor had jurisdiction to hear in vacation petition, contained in wife's suit for separate maintenance, for temporary alimony and counsel fees, where petition alleged that the granting of such relief in vacation was urgent and necessitous, notwithstanding that it developed at the vacation hearing that the wife was receiving a monthly allowance from the federal government allotted to her at the instance of a son-in-law in the military service. Berryhill v. Berryhill, 198 Miss. 759, 23 So. 2d 889, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1945).

3. —Temporary orders.

Based on the evidence presented, the chancellor did not err in awarding the ex-wife rehabilitative alimony as it served the purpose of helping the ex-wife become self-supporting and prevented her from becoming destitute while doing so. The chancellor possessed the authority to order temporary alimony and make all proper orders and judgments thereon and the ex-husband was required to comply with previous orders of the court made prior to the final decree. McCarrell v. McCarrell, 19 So. 3d 168, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 703 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where, in a divorce action, it appeared that the pleadings showed a valid marriage, that an application for temporary alimony was made in good faith, and that the court had jurisdiction, the court erred in denying temporary relief as a matter of law, without hearing the testimony. Neely v. Neely, 52 So. 2d 501, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 530 (Miss. 1951).

In passing on petition for temporary alimony under this section [Code 1942, § 2742], chancellor is not required to investigate the merits or inquire into the truth of the facts alleged, but is only required to determine whether a case for relief is stated on the face of the petition. Berryhill v. Berryhill, 198 Miss. 759, 23 So. 2d 889, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1945).

If it should develop at a vacation hearing that the granting of petition for temporary alimony and counsel fee is not urgent and necessitous, the chancellor should decline to grant relief until term time. Berryhill v. Berryhill, 198 Miss. 759, 23 So. 2d 889, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1945).

Vacation decree awarding wife temporary alimony of $50 per month minus such payment as may be collected by the wife each month from the federal government on allotment by son-in-law in military service was too indefinite and uncertain, and therefor unenforceable. Berryhill v. Berryhill, 198 Miss. 759, 23 So. 2d 889, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 244 (Miss. 1945).

Petition for temporary alimony wherein complainant alleged that he was without means for support and that "this is an urgent and necessitous case for temporary alimony," and praying for general relief and that the defendant be required to show cause why a reasonable amount could not be adjudged to be paid by the defendant for the support and maintenance of petitioner, while inartificially drawn, was susceptible of construction and acceptance as a bill for separate maintenance; and demurrer thereto should not have been sustained on the ground that a decree for temporary alimony could not be entered save where complainant seeks either a divorce or separate maintenance. Rutland v. Rutland, 192 Miss. 613, 7 So. 2d 553, 1942 Miss. LEXIS 64 (Miss. 1942).

Chancellor could hear in vacation petition for temporary alimony and solicitor's fee and temporary order regarding custody of children. Johnston v. Johnston, 182 Miss. 1, 179 So. 853, 1938 Miss. LEXIS 135 (Miss. 1938).

4. —Permanent orders.

A decree of permanent custody cannot be made in vacation. Gordon v. Gordon, 196 Miss. 476, 17 So. 2d 191, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1944).

5. —Other proceedings.

The hearing on a defendant's motion to dismiss a bill for divorce on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the parties may not be held in vacation, and even though the hearing is held by agreement the complainant is not barred from contesting its validity on appeal, for no proceedings in a divorce action, save those specifically excepted in this section [Code 1942, § 2742] may be heard or considered except in open court. Moran v. Moran, 252 Miss. 890, 173 So. 2d 916, 1965 Miss. LEXIS 1158 (Miss. 1965).

6. Jurisdictional issues.

The hearing on a defendant's motion to dismiss a bill for divorce on the ground of lack of jurisdiction of the parties may not be held in vacation, and even though the hearing is held by agreement the complainant is not barred from contesting its validity on appeal, for no proceedings in a divorce action, save those specifically excepted in this section [Code 1942, § 2742] may be heard or considered except in open court. Moran v. Moran, 252 Miss. 890, 173 So. 2d 916, 1965 Miss. LEXIS 1158 (Miss. 1965).

A custodial decree made by a court not having jurisdiction of the person of the minor whose custody is sought thereby to be determined is void. Montgomery v. Walker, 227 Miss. 552, 86 So. 2d 502, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 725 (Miss. 1956).

7. Modification of decree.

Emergency order modifying custody decree may not be entered in absence of urgent and necessitous circumstances, particularly where no notice is given to custodial parent who has permitted noncustodial parent to have children consistent with provisions of original custody decree. Robinson v. Robinson, 481 So. 2d 855, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2339 (Miss. 1986).

Fact that custodial parent is receiving aid for dependent children, and social services from federal and state programs, including housing, does not disqualify parent from having custody of children and does not constitute material change adversely affecting children which may be basis for modification of custody decree, either by emergency order or by final decree. Robinson v. Robinson, 481 So. 2d 855, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2339 (Miss. 1986).

Although a proceeding to obtain a divorce must be heard at a regular or special term of the court, a hearing for modification of an award of alimony in an original divorce proceeding may, in the discretion of the chancellor, be set for hearing in vacation. Spradling v. Spradling, 362 So. 2d 620, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2117 (Miss. 1978).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 2742] the chancery court may modify a decree under certain circumstances, but a subject concerning which no decree was made in the divorce proceeding may not be the subject of a later decree in a divorce cause on the theory of modification of a divorce decree. Montgomery v. Walker, 227 Miss. 552, 86 So. 2d 502, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 725 (Miss. 1956).

When a decree of custody is to be made or modified in substantial or major aspects, a proper notice and opportunity to be heard must be given to the adverse party. Gordon v. Gordon, 196 Miss. 476, 17 So. 2d 191, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1944).

Decree in vacation awarding permanent custody of child to mother, modifying original decree dividing custody of child equally between parents, without notice to father was void. Gordon v. Gordon, 196 Miss. 476, 17 So. 2d 191, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1944).

This section [Code 1942, § 2742] does not authorize modification of original decree of divorce and alimony in wife's favor by decree in vacation, over objection of husband, dealing with the rights of the parties, not only with reference to alimony but also to the custody and care of the children and the rights of the parties as to the real estate and insurance of the husband. Lanham v. Lanham, 194 Miss. 872, 14 So. 2d 215, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 1943).

Original decree of divorce and alimony in wife's favor, providing that changes might be made therein with reference to alimony and property rights and custody of the children on five days' notice to either party, did not authorize hearing in vacation and decree modifying original decree, in the absence of specific provision in such decree for modification proceedings in vacation. Lanham v. Lanham, 194 Miss. 872, 14 So. 2d 215, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 1943).

8. Miscellaneous matters.

Chancellor was within the chancellor's discretion when the chancellor found a spouse in contempt for violating a temporary support order because the spouse admitted that the spouse did not pay the credit-card debts, child support, or medical costs not covered by insurance as mandated in the temporary support order. Apparently, the chancellor considered the spouse's unemployment as a basis to not hold the spouse in wilful contempt and to permit the arrearage to be paid in monthly installments. O'Brien v. O'Brien, 149 So. 3d 508, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 69 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 151 So. 3d 1017, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 523 (Miss. 2014).

In an uncontested divorce action based on irreconcilable differences, it was within the chancellor's discretion to determine whether a personal appearance of a party or of an attorney was required since no proof is required under § 93-5-2, which governs a divorce sought on the grounds of irreconcilable differences, and neither § 93-5-7 nor 93-5-17, which govern the conduct of divorce proceedings, indicates a requirement that the person seeking the divorce must personally appear before the chancellor. The chancellor abused his discretion in refusing to grant the divorce without a personal appearance where the parties were proceeding pro se, the wife was a resident of California, and the husband was incarcerated in a correctional facility. Bullard v. Morris, 547 So. 2d 789, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 355 (Miss. 1989).

Chancellor consulted by wife in divorce case regarding choice of attorneys should, in order to avoid even appearance of impropriety, recuse himself from further proceedings between parties. Haralson v. Haralson, 483 So. 2d 378, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2382 (Miss. 1986).

Spouse who is aware that divorce case is to be heard by master, not chancellor, but nevertheless proceeds before master without objection has waived objections to appointment or order of reference. Massey v. Massey, 475 So. 2d 802, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2213 (Miss. 1985).

Where proof shows that both parents have separate incomes or estates, the court may require that each parent contribute to the support and maintenance of the children of the marriage in proportion to the relative financial ability of each. Cupit v. Brooks, 223 Miss. 887, 79 So. 2d 478, 1955 Miss. LEXIS 452 (Miss. 1955).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

There can be no per se prohibition against a child witness testifying in a divorce case between the child's parents. The right of every litigant to compulsory process for witnesses and to have them testify under oath in court is so well grounded that any per se exclusion simply because he or she is a child of the divorcing parents risks offending the due process provisions of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution and Mississippi Constitution Art 3, § 14. Before excluding the testimony of a child witness of tender years in a divorce proceeding, the chancellor, at a minimum, should follow the procedure required by Crownover v. Crownover (1975) 33 Ill App 3d 327, 337 NE2d 56. Although no parent can be precluded from having a child of the marriage testify in a divorce proceeding simply because of that fact, parents in a divorce proceeding should, if at all possible, refrain from calling children of their marriage as witnesses, and counsel should advise their clients against doing so except in the most exigent cases. Jethrow v. Jethrow, 571 So. 2d 270, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 700 (Miss. 1990).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Statute provided wide discretion for a chancellor to close trials in divorce and custody cases. In re Memphis Publ'g Co., 823 So. 2d 1150, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2001).

§ 93-5-23. Custody of children; alimony; effect of military duty on custody and visitation.

When a divorce shall be decreed from the bonds of matrimony, the court may, in its discretion, having regard to the circumstances of the parties and the nature of the case, as may seem equitable and just, make all orders touching the care, custody and maintenance of the children of the marriage, and also touching the maintenance and alimony of the wife or the husband, or any allowance to be made to her or him, and shall, if need be, require bond, sureties or other guarantee for the payment of the sum so allowed. Orders touching on the custody of the children of the marriage shall be made in accordance with the provisions of Section 93-5-24. For the purposes of orders touching the maintenance and alimony of the wife or husband, "property" and "an asset of a spouse" shall not include any interest a party may have as an heir at law of a living person or any interest under a third-party will, nor shall any such interest be considered as an economic circumstance or other factor. The court may afterwards, on petition, change the decree, and make from time to time such new decrees as the case may require. However, where proof shows that both parents have separate incomes or estates, the court may require that each parent contribute to the support and maintenance of the children of the marriage in proportion to the relative financial ability of each. In the event a legally responsible parent has health insurance available to him or her through an employer or organization that may extend benefits to the dependents of such parent, any order of support issued against such parent may require him or her to exercise the option of additional coverage in favor of such children as he or she is legally responsible to support.

Whenever the court has ordered a party to make periodic payments for the maintenance or support of a child, but no bond, sureties or other guarantee has been required to secure such payments, and whenever such payments as have become due remain unpaid for a period of at least thirty (30) days, the court may, upon petition of the person to whom such payments are owing, or such person's legal representative, enter an order requiring that bond, sureties or other security be given by the person obligated to make such payments, the amount and sufficiency of which shall be approved by the court. The obligor shall, as in other civil actions, be served with process and shall be entitled to a hearing in such case.

At the discretion of the court, any person found in contempt for failure to pay child support and imprisoned therefor may be referred for placement in a state, county or municipal restitution, house arrest or restorative justice center or program, provided such person meets the qualifications prescribed in Section 99-37-19.

Whenever in any proceeding in the chancery court concerning the custody of a child a party alleges that the child whose custody is at issue has been the victim of sexual or physical abuse by the other party, the court may, on its own motion, grant a continuance in the custody proceeding only until such allegation has been investigated by the Department of Human Services. At the time of ordering such continuance, the court may direct the party and his attorney making such allegation of child abuse to report in writing and provide all evidence touching on the allegation of abuse to the Department of Human Services. The Department of Human Services shall investigate such allegation and take such action as it deems appropriate and as provided in such cases under the Youth Court Law (being Chapter 21 of Title 43, Mississippi Code of 1972) or under the laws establishing family courts (being Chapter 23 of Title 43, Mississippi Code of 1972).

If after investigation by the Department of Human Services or final disposition by the youth court or family court allegations of child abuse are found to be without foundation, the chancery court shall order the alleging party to pay all court costs and reasonable attorney's fees incurred by the defending party in responding to such allegation.

The court may investigate, hear and make a determination in a custody action when a charge of abuse and/or neglect arises in the course of a custody action as provided in Section 43-21-151, and in such cases the court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for the child as provided under Section 43-21-121, who shall be an attorney. Unless the chancery court's jurisdiction has been terminated, all disposition orders in such cases for placement with the Department of Human Services shall be reviewed by the court or designated authority at least annually to determine if continued placement with the department is in the best interest of the child or public.

The duty of support of a child terminates upon the emancipation of the child. The court may determine that emancipation has occurred pursuant to Section 93-11-65.

Custody and visitation upon military temporary duty, deployment or mobilization shall be governed by Section 93-5-34.

I. ALIMONY.

1. In general.

Appellate court reversed trial court's denial of a husband's motion to terminate his spousal support payments to his former wife, and remanded the matter to the trial court, as it was unclear from the agreement as to whether the payments were to be considered alimony and whether the husband's obligations would continue after his death. Beezley v. Beezley, 917 So. 2d 803, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 704 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where the record showed that the parties had been married almost 20 years and that the wife had primarily worked at a few part-time jobs, in addition to raising two children, the appellate court held: (1) as to the husband's part ownership in the business, the chancellor was within his discretion in finding that there was no goodwill, because said air conditioning business had numerous skilled employees, the husband was not an essential, irreplaceable part of said business, and the business would have operated normally if the husband left the business; (2) even though the husband was granted primary physical custody of the parties' minor child, the award of child support to the wife was not improper based on the criteria for overcoming the presumption that the guidelines were appropriate; (3) the award of periodic alimony to the wife was proper given the length of the marriage, given the fact that the parties had enjoyed a high standard of living, and given that the wife had very little education or work experience; and (4) the wife's acts of infidelity which occurred while the parties were separated was not a ground for denying alimony. Rush v. Rush, 932 So. 2d 800, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 533 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 932 So. 2d 794, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 354 (Miss. 2006).

Where the father was severely in arrears as to his child support obligation and had voluntarily left his employment for early retirement, he came into court with unclean hands. Thus, the chancellor properly denied his motion for modification of child support. Leiden v. Leiden, 902 So. 2d 582, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 879 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), cert. denied, 901 So. 2d 1273, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 331 (Miss. 2005).

Chancellor erred in changing the alimony from rehabilitative to permanent periodic alimony at a review hearing where a motion for modification was never filed. Further, the chancellor erred in focusing on the husband's financial condition; the focus should have been on the wife's financial condition, as the fact that the husband's financial condition was about the same as it had been earlier had no bearing on whether the wife had arrived at a point that the wife no longer needed financial help. Oster v. Oster, 876 So. 2d 428, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court applied the incorrect legal standard in determining if alimony was reasonable; the Ferguson factors were used to determine whether alimony was proper in a case, except the chancellor did not use these factors, but instead used the Hemsley factors, which were used to determine if alimony is reasonable, such that since he applied the wrong legal standard, the determination of alimony was reversed and remanded. Smith v. Smith, 856 So. 2d 717, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 904 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Ex-husband argued that that in addition to the seven year bar under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-43, laches and/or equitable estoppel should have precluded ex-wife from enforcing any of the 1981 settlement agreement's financial provisions, except those that he had already met, and that the parties had a verbal understanding that, while he would continue paying $ 3,900 per month in alimony, the ex-wife would not seek to enforce the escalator and retirement fund provisions of the settlement agreement. However, by the husband's threats, the husband came into court with "unclean hands," which prevented the husband from being able to assert equitable defenses, there was no fraud or overreaching on the ex-wife's part with respect to the 1981 settlement agreement, and the contempt order for the ex-husband to pay alimony, and stock dividend division arrearages, of almost one-half million, was proper. Nicholas v. Nicholas, 841 So. 2d 1208, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 287 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Property settlement provided for payments consistent with nonmodifiable lump-sum alimony, rather than periodic alimony, even though they were to end upon death of the payor husband and were to be replaced by potentially lesser amount of life insurance proceeds, where agreement designated payments as lump-sum alimony, provided for payment of fixed sum, clearly stated that said payments were not modifiable, and very significantly, did not provide for termination of payments upon wife's death. McDonald v. McDonald, 683 So. 2d 929, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 633 (Miss. 1996).

Lump-sum alimony is not in the nature of continuing support, but rather, is a property transfer which is vested in recipient spouse at the time said alimony is awarded. McDonald v. McDonald, 683 So. 2d 929, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 633 (Miss. 1996).

"Rehabilitative periodic alimony," synonymous with "periodic transitional alimony," is a separate and equitable tool for chancellors to use in their discretion, and allows a party needing assistance to become self-supporting without becoming destitute in the interim. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 656 So. 2d 124, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. 1995).

"Periodic alimony" and "rehabilitative periodic alimony" vest as they become due and are modifiable; however, periodic alimony is for an indefinite period of time, while rehabilitative alimony is for a fixed period. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 656 So. 2d 124, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. 1995).

While both rehabilitative periodic alimony and lump sum alimony which is not paid all at once can share the same characteristic of being a certain amount of money paid over a definite period of time, they are distinguishable in their modifiability, respective purposes, and by the intent for which the chancellor grants them; rehabilitative periodic alimony is not intended as an equalizer between the parties but is for the purpose of allowing the less able party to start anew without being destitute in the interim, while lump sum alimony is intended as an equalizer between the parties to serve equity between them completely, once and for all. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 656 So. 2d 124, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. 1995).

A wife's lump sum alimony award of $24,000 was grossly inadequate and constituted an abuse of discretion where the husband had a net worth of at least $315,000 due to an inheritance from his family, the wife's estimated minimum monthly expenses totalled $1,600, she was awarded $500 per month in child support payments, and she earned gross monthly wages of $340, since the award did not allow the wife to maintain her accustomed standard of living and did not reflect a consideration of her lack of available resources or the husband's ability to pay. Creekmore v. Creekmore, 651 So. 2d 513, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 110 (Miss. 1995).

When the equitable distribution of property acquired during the marriage is accomplished, the resultant division of assets and liabilities must be factored into the determination of other financial matters such as alimony and child support. Bennett v. Bennett, 650 So. 2d 517, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 1995).

In determining an award of alimony upon divorce, homemaker contributions are not to be measured by a mechanical formula, but on the contribution to the economic and emotional well-being of the family unit. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

An antenuptial contract is like any other contract and as such is subject to the same rules of construction and interpretation applicable to contracts. Estate of Hensley v. Estate of Hensley, 524 So. 2d 325, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 212 (Miss. 1988).

After Mississippi divorce proceeding in which wife neither seeks alimony nor reserves right to do so becomes final, wife is precluded from seeking alimony in Louisiana. Mitchell v. Mitchell, 483 So. 2d 1152, 1986 La. App. LEXIS 6165 (La.App. 5 Cir. 1986).

Prior to statutory revision, in a divorce action instituted by a husband against his wife, the trial court erred in granting alimony to the wife where she had filed an answer but had not filed a cross-bill for affirmative relief. Diamond v. Diamond, 403 So. 2d 129, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2159 (Miss. 1981), but see Queen v. Queen, 551 So. 2d 197, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 363 (Miss. 1989).

A husband's challenge to the constitutionality of the statute was untimely where no such challenge had been raised in the original divorce proceedings or in several subsequent proceedings in which he had attempted to defeat or reduce the alimony award. Walker v. Walker, 389 So. 2d 502, 1980 Miss. LEXIS 2112 (Miss. 1980).

Where neither party is entitled to a divorce under the evidence, no alimony can be allowed. Burnett v. Burnett, 271 So. 2d 90, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1269 (Miss. 1972).

The duty of the husband to support his wife is not abrogated by the fact that the wife is capable of earning her own living. McInnis v. McInnis, 227 So. 2d 116, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1335 (Miss. 1969).

The right to alimony is controlled generally by statute. King v. King, 246 Miss. 798, 152 So. 2d 889, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 506 (Miss. 1963).

A chancellor may allow past-due alimony to be paid in installments. Rubisoff v. Rubisoff, 242 Miss. 225, 133 So. 2d 534, 1961 Miss. LEXIS 548 (Miss. 1961).

A court cannot give relief from civil liability for accrued alimony. Rainwater v. Rainwater, 236 Miss. 412, 110 So. 2d 608, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 334 (Miss. 1959).

In a general sense, alimony is an allowance authorized by law to be made to the wife out of her husband's estate for her support, the amount of his property, whether exempt or not from sale under an ordinary execution, being taken into account in determining such allowance. Felder v. Felder's Estate, 195 Miss. 326, 13 So. 2d 823, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1943).

Alimony not awarded where prayer therefor is dependent on decree of divorce which cannot be granted. Walker v. Walker, 140 Miss. 340, 105 So. 753, 1925 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 1925), overruled, Davis v. Davis, 194 Miss. 343, 12 So. 2d 435, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 75 (Miss. 1943).

The allowance of alimony is justified by the natural obligation of the husband, as the bread winner of the family, to support his wife. Robinson v. Robinson, 112 Miss. 224, 72 So. 923, 1916 Miss. LEXIS 93 (Miss. 1916).

The wife's right to alimony is not affected by her statutory emancipation from the disabilities of coverture. Verner v. Verner, 62 Miss. 260, 1884 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1884).

2. Factors in determining whether alimony should be granted.

Because the broad, inherent equity powers of a chancery court establish its authority to divide marital assets, and because a chancellor supported the chancellor's findings by substantial credible evidence in the record, the court did not err in the calculation of marital assets on remand by finding a second mortgage to be a marital debt and a joint obligation of the parties. Gutierrez v. Gutierrez, 233 So. 3d 797, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 247 (Miss. 2017).

Because the broad, inherent equity powers of a chancery court establish its authority to divide marital assets, and because a chancellor supported the chancellor's findings by substantial credible evidence in the record, the court did not err in the calculation of marital assets on remand by finding a second mortgage to be a marital debt and a joint obligation of the parties. Gutierrez v. Gutierrez, 233 So. 3d 797, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 247 (Miss. 2017).

There was no abuse of discretion in a chancellor's award of periodic alimony to a wife because the chancellor noted that the wife was in her fifties, that the wife and husband had been married for thirty-three years, there was a disparity in the incomes between the parties, the wife's education level was low, and she had a sparse employment history, which would likely make it difficult for her to obtain gainful employment; there was no error in the chancellor's determination of fault or misconduct by the husband during the marriage, and the chancellor's finding of "fault or misconduct" was not the sole reason for awarding periodic alimony but was merely considered in conjunction with the other factors discussed above. George v. George, 22 So. 3d 424, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 856 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancellor did not err in awarding the wife $500 a month in permanent alimony and properly considered all factors, finding that the wife suffered a defect in her ability to meet her reasonable living expenses after the equitable division of the martial property. Elliott v. Elliott, 11 So. 3d 784, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 353 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Award of periodic alimony to the wife was appropriate because the chancellor addressed the Armstrong factors in making the determination, including the length of the marriage, the fault of the parties, the lack of children, the health of the parties, the age of the parties, and the income and expenses of the parties in the alimony determination. Goellner v. Goellner, 11 So. 3d 1251, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 346 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding the wife rehabilitative alimony as it would serve the purpose of preparing her to reenter the work force when their son reached the age of eighteen. Smith v. Smith, 25 So. 3d 369, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 283 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), cert. denied, 24 So. 3d 1038, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 2010).

In a case where a divorce was granted to a wife based on a husband's habitual drunkenness, a chancellor did not err by denying the wife periodic alimony because the parties would have made almost the exact same amount if the wife had worked 40 hours as a nurse; it was within the chancellor's discretion to weigh each party's fault. Also, lump sum alimony was also properly denied since the marital residence, as well as the wife's education, was paid for by the husband's parents. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 972 So. 2d 48, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 18 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Alimony award had to be reversed and the case remanded to the chancery court for a determination of whether periodic or rehabilitative alimony was needed because: (1) neither the bench opinion nor the final decree granting the divorce indicated whether an analysis of the factors for granting alimony was made; (2) the chancellor himself stated that he was astounded that the ex-wife testified she only earned $250 to $270 every two weeks in take home pay; (3) the wife was 41 years old at the time of the trial, and since then the couple's only child had married and left the marital home; (4) the record indicated that the ex-husband had essentially become voluntarily unemployed in an effort to avoid showing any means to pay the wife the alimony ordered; and (5) from the record it was impossible to see why the wife would need $4,000 per month in periodic alimony, unless the award was meant as an equitable distribution. Carroll v. Carroll, 976 So. 2d 880, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 301 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 107 (Miss. 2008).

Chancery court did not err by awarding a wife alimony in the amount of $375 per month, after she received a lump sum representing her share of the marital property, based on her age, the fact that the parties were married for 29 years, and her limited earning capacity; the chancery court's failure to make record consideration of these factors was not error based on the facts. Roberson v. Roberson, 949 So. 2d 866, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 75 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Appellate court affirmed the trial court's decision as it was clear that the trial court factors such as the length of the marriage, the parties' respective ages, the income received by both parties, and the fact that the husband would retain the marital home while the wife did not have a home; thus, the appellate court found that the chancellor's findings were supported by credible evidence in the record, and that she did not abuse her discretion or commit manifest error in awarding alimony. Blalack v. Blalack, 938 So. 2d 909, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 721 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in awarding the wife alimony in the amount of $1,000 per month pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23, as the trial court considered all the proper factors before awarding the alimony, and the award of alimony was consistent with the testimony presented. Dobbs v. Dobbs, 912 So. 2d 491, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 709 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a divorce action, a wife was properly awarded $250 per month in alimony where the evidence showed that she had worked on the husband's chicken farm for many years, had declining health, and worked part-time as a massage therapist; the chancery court properly applied the factors under Armstrong v. Armstrong, 618 So.2d 1278, 1280 (Miss. 1993), and reviewed the parties' financial statements. Stuart v. Stuart, 956 So. 2d 295, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 759 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Trial court did not err in refusing to award alimony to a wife even though the husband's income was substantially higher as the couple's marriage was very short, and most, if not all, of the wife's requests were met through the trial court's property distribution. Larney v. Record, 908 So. 2d 171, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 487 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

In a no-fault divorce, the record showed that the line of questioning at issue (primarily cross-examination of the husband), was not intended to establish that he had abandoned the wife by his leaving the marital home before the marriage, but was for the purpose of establishing time lines and the financial contributions of the parties. The questioning was also to determine how the payments of the wife's vehicle were being made, not to establish fault; there was no indication that the husband's having left the marital home was the driving factor in establishing the alimony award to the wife, and in any event, the fact that both spouses agreed to a divorce did not eliminate the consideration of the fault factor. Patterson v. Patterson, 917 So. 2d 111, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 432 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 921 So. 2d 1279, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 812 (Miss. 2005).

While the chancery court did not specifically mention the Armstrong factors, the chancery court did find: (1) that the divorce was a result of the husband's adultery; (2) that the wife's earnings were about half of her husband's; (3) that her cancer and other health problems prohibited her from seeking other employment; and (4) that the parties were married for 29 years. Those factors all favored an award of periodic alimony for the wife and there was no manifest error. White v. White, 913 So. 2d 323, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 250 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Alimony the husband was ordered to pay met only the reasonable needs of the wife and barely allowed her to pay her living expenses; no evidence indicated that the wife was living extravagantly or wasting the husband's alimony checks and even though the trial court did not properly consider fault as a factor in awarding alimony, the alimony award was not rendered improper, and the wife had established her inability to pay her own attorney's fees and rejected the husband's argument that her inability to pay her legal bills was due to her costly vices. Lawton v. Lawton, 905 So. 2d 723, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1067 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a trial court did not delineate its reasoning and analysis regarding the amount and type of alimony to be distributed, and its award of rehabilitative periodic alimony to the wife was arguably inappropriate because she had a stable, professional job and did not put her career on hold during the marriage, the case was remanded to the trial court for determination of the appropriate type and amount of alimony. Holley v. Holley, 892 So. 2d 183, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1171 (Miss. 2004).

Court erred in its alimony award where the income that the chancellor did not consider in the original award to the wife did not serve to convince him to lower alimony; instead, he raised it; therefore, the same debt served to advantage the wife twice; first, to increase her award of assets, and second, to increase her award of alimony. Watson v. Watson, 882 So. 2d 95, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 709 (Miss. 2004).

Where the parties were married approximately 36 years, in awarding the wife more than two-thirds of the marital estate, the chancellor clearly recognized the wife's contributions to the financial well-being of the marriage. The great majority of the assets awarded the wife were unencumbered while most of the property awarded the husband held mortgages; further, the wife had the ability to resume a nursing career, and on those facts the chancellor's decision denying alimony was not erroneous. Marsh v. Marsh, 868 So. 2d 394, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 202 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in finding that a wife was not entitled to an award of alimony where the chancellor conducted a thorough analysis of all the relevant factors. Tynes v. Tynes, 860 So. 2d 325, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1065 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where the parties were in their late 50s, and husband's net income was over double that of the wife, an award of the parties' home, one-half of the husband's 401K, and periodic alimony to wife was proper, especially since the wife was going to lose health coverage through the husband's employer; the husband's support of a girlfriend was not grounds to reduce alimony, and a recitation of facts in the judgment showed the chancellor covered most, if not all the Ferguson and Armstrong factors, so that no reversal was required. Palmer v. Palmer, 841 So. 2d 185, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Factors to be in awarding alimony include parties' income and expenses, parties' health and earning, parties' needs, parties' obligations and assets, presence or absence of minor children in the home, parties' ages, parties' standard of living during marriage and at time of support determination, tax consequences of spousal support order, parties' fault or misconduct, any wasteful dissipation of assets by either party, and any other factor deemed by the court to be just and equitable. Parsons v. Parsons, 678 So. 2d 701, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 410 (Miss. 1996).

3. —Spouse's infidelity.

Alimony was denied to a former wife in a divorce matter after a consideration of the factors under Armstrong v. Armstrong, 618 So.2d 1278 (Miss. 1993); a chancery court did not just look to the wife's adultery in making its decision, but also relied on her work history, her extreme behavior, and her unwillingness to contribute either directly or indirectly to the marriage. Brabham v. Brabham, 950 So. 2d 1098, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 128 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Court of appeals erred in holding that the trial court had improperly imposed alimony to punish the husband for his adultery, as the trial court specifically stated that it was not doing so; therefore, alimony, although incorrect as to its specific type, was awarded for its proper purpose. Holley v. Holley, 892 So. 2d 183, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1171 (Miss. 2004).

Where alimony is otherwise appropriate, it should not be denied a wife solely because she is adjudged at fault in the divorce judgment; adultery should not stand as an absolute bar to alimony, especially when denial of alimony would render the wife destitute; thus, a wife who committed adultery was entitled to minimal alimony in an amount which would not leave her in a state of financial misfortune where she contributed substantially to the total accumulation of marital assets, the marriage lasted approximately 25 years, the wife had no separate income or estate while the husband's was substantial, and the wife lacked any financial security without alimony. Hammonds v. Hammonds, 597 So. 2d 653, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 195 (Miss. 1992).

A husband who was granted a divorce on the ground of the wife's adultery would not be required to pay the wife periodic alimony where the wife was a college graduate, she was capable of full-time employment, and she owned 49.8 percent of the shares in the corporate owner of 5 commercially successful McDonald's restaurants. Retzer v. Retzer, 578 So. 2d 580, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 858 (Miss. 1990).

It was an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court to refuse to grant alimony to complainant wife when the long marriage of the parties, the conduct accorded the wife by her husband, the admission of adultery in open court on his part, as well as the ages of the parties, including the likelihood of unemployment by reason thereof, were taken into consideration. Horton v. Horton, 269 So. 2d 347, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1224 (Miss. 1972).

Where, in a divorce action, the wife's infidelity was overwhelmingly established by the evidence and at least in part was not condoned, it was error for the court to make an allowance for her support. King v. King, 191 So. 2d 409, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1213 (Miss. 1966).

When a divorce has been properly granted because of the adultery of the wife, she is not entitled either to alimony or to the custody of the children. Keyes v. Keyes, 252 Miss. 138, 171 So. 2d 489, 1965 Miss. LEXIS 1084 (Miss. 1965).

When divorce has been properly granted because of the adultery of the wife, she is not entitled either to alimony or to the custody of the children, save temporarily as to an infant so young as not to permit separation from its mother, and save in exceptional circumstances. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss. 391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

Where decree of divorce in favor of husband was sustainable on ground of wife's adultery, award of alimony and custody of the youngest of three children, aged six years, to the wife was wholly reversed and vacated and a decree entered awarding the custody of the children to the father, leaving the privilege of visitation to the children open for the chancellor to determine on remand. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss. 391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

4. —Spouse's desertion.

As a general rule, even in cases of divorce, no alimony is allowed to a wife who has abandoned her husband and remains away without legal justification. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945).

Wife who separated from husband and refused to return except on condition that he send away a girl adopted by them is not entitled to alimony. Hilton v. Hilton, 88 Miss. 529, 41 So. 262, 1906 Miss. LEXIS 174 (Miss. 1906).

A husband who deserts his wife because of rumors affecting her chastitiy before marriage, which rumors are disproved, is liable for alimony. Verner v. Verner, 62 Miss. 260, 1884 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1884).

5. —Spouse's mental condition.

Chancery court could render decree for alimony to quondam wife, subsequent to absolute divorce decree granted husband while wife was in insane hospital. Crawford v. Crawford, 158 Miss. 382, 130 So. 688, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 75 (Miss. 1930).

6. —Financial considerations.

Trial court did not err in awarding a wife $1,000 per month as permanent alimony because the parties were married 26 years, the majority of marital assets received by the wife consisted of retirement accounts that she could not use for living expenses without incurring substantial tax penalties, the husband earned considerably more income than the wife and had the potential for his income to increase further through promotions, and the husband was primarily at fault for the collapse of the marriage. Myrick v. Myrick, 122 So. 3d 93, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 258 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Because an award of lump-sum alimony pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23, albeit deemed periodic alimony, was based on an errant division of marital property, if the chancellor found on remand that the wife's wasteful dissipation of assets through gambling exceeded one-half of the value of the marital estate, no more need be done as to equitable distribution of marital assets. Lowrey v. Lowrey, 25 So. 3d 274, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 549 (Miss. 2009).

Chancellor did not err in awarding lump-sum alimony of $60,000 to the wife to counterbalance the award of real property, the marital estate's only asset, to the husband because the wife had no separate estate since she contributed her entire inheritance from her mother–approximately $80,000–to the family and those funds had been used to purchase the home. Further, the wife lacked financial security because she had repeatedly sacrificed her career to help her husband advance his, had supported her husband while he went to school, and was in remission after surviving breast cancer. Palculict v. Curtis-Palculict, 22 So. 3d 293, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 307 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Where the husband's adulterous conduct was the sole cause of the breakup of the nineteen-year marriage, the evidence supported the chancellor's order requiring the husband to pay $ 750 per month in periodic alimony and $ 500 per month in alimony arrearages; the chancellor correctly applied the Armstrong factors. The husband's net income was greater than the wife's; her expenses were higher; the children lived with the wife; without alimony, she could not maintain her previous standard of living. Holley v. Holley, 969 So. 2d 842, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 675 (Miss. 2007).

In a divorce case, a chancery court did not err by awarding a former wife $700 in monthly alimony where an elderly former husband had extra monthly income, his elderly former wife did not have enough money to meet her monthly expenses, and she was unable to work due to her health conditions; the husband failed to show that the wife's expenses should have been rejected as unreasonable. LaRue v. LaRue, 969 So. 2d 99, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 338 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 968 So. 2d 948, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 660 (Miss. 2007).

Ex-husband had, shortly before trial, over $500,000 in his personal possession, a working farm, a helicopter, and a mistress with whom he continued to live and financially support after the divorce; thus, the chancellor did not err in finding that the husband had the ability to pay the spousal support ordered in the final judgment. Carroll v. Carroll, 976 So. 2d 880, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 301 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 107 (Miss. 2008).

Where evidence indicated that a former wife and her boyfriend were mutually supportive of one another, the trial court did not err in ruling that the wife was not entitled to rehabilitative alimony. Alexis v. Tarver, 879 So. 2d 1078, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 750 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a former wife's net income slightly exceeded her former husband's, and she was awarded over $300,000, or 51.7 percent, of the marital property, which adequately provided for her needs, the chancellor did not err in denying her alimony. McLaurin v. McLaurin, 853 So. 2d 1279, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 787 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Evidence supported determination that wife was entitled to alimony, notwithstanding husband's testimony concerning amount of his expenses; husband's testimony that he had $500 monthly "expenses" consisting of money put aside for "emergency" showed that such "expenses" actually were "savings" and husband's failure to document other claimed expenses, $400 per month of which were unnecessary, rendered those claims highly suspect. Parsons v. Parsons, 678 So. 2d 701, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 410 (Miss. 1996).

Wife's financial declaration, reverse side of which revealed itemized list of wife's monthly expenses, was sufficient evidence of wife's needs to justify award of alimony. Parsons v. Parsons, 678 So. 2d 701, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 410 (Miss. 1996).

A chancellor was correct in awarding lump sum alimony to a wife, even though she did not contribute to the husband's accumulation of wealth, where the husband's wealth was inherited from his family, the wife's wages during the first 5 years of the marriage helped to conserve the husband's estate, she worked during most of the marriage while he did not, she quit her job after both parties agreed that she should stay home with their daughter, her separate income and estate were meager in comparison to his, and she would enjoy no financial security without lump sum alimony. Creekmore v. Creekmore, 651 So. 2d 513, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 110 (Miss. 1995).

An award of alimony to a wife would be reversed and remanded for reconsideration in light of the division of marital property accomplished by the parties' stipulation where the chancellor failed to take into consideration the extent of the assets awarded to the wife and the income therefrom when determining the award of alimony. Bennett v. Bennett, 650 So. 2d 517, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 1995).

A trial court did not err in refusing to award alimony to a 62-year-old wife where the parties were married for only 6 years, the wife left the marriage economically stronger than she entered, she worked part time and received monthly social security income, the 67-year-old husband did not intend to resume his carpentry work full time and had recently undergone surgery for a hernia repair, and there was no jointly acquired property. Ethridge v. Ethridge, 648 So. 2d 1143, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 16 (Miss. 1995).

A wife was entitled to lump sum alimony where the parties were married for 22 years, the wife worked to help support the family seemingly at the expense of her own education, she stayed home to care for the children when the couple decided that was best, she worked on and off throughout the marriage for the husband's medical practice, and there was a large disparity between the parties' estates. Tilley v. Tilley, 610 So. 2d 348, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 780 (Miss. 1992).

In determining an award of lump sum alimony, the following factors should be considered: (1) substantial contribution to accumulation of total wealth of the payor, either by quitting a job to become a homemaker or by assisting in the spouse's business; (2) a long marriage; (3) the recipient spouse has no separate income or the separate income is meager by comparison; and (4) without the lump sum award, the receiving spouse would lack financial security. Bishop v. State, 607 So. 2d 122, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 649 (Miss. 1992).

A chancellor abused his discretion in denying periodic alimony to a wife where the chancellor awarded a divorce to the wife on the ground of the husband's habitual cruel and inhuman treatment, the duration of the marriage was 22 years, the husband had a "healthy income" and was able to afford alimony in a reasonable amount, and some form of alimony was required in order to prevent the wife from being in desperate need. Gammage v. Gammage, 599 So. 2d 569, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 215 (Miss. 1992).

A husband who was granted a divorce on the ground of the wife's adultery would not be required to pay the wife periodic alimony where the wife was a college graduate, she was capable of full-time employment, and she owned 49.8 percent of the shares in the corporate owner of 5 commercially successful McDonald's restaurants. Retzer v. Retzer, 578 So. 2d 580, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 858 (Miss. 1990).

A wife was not entitled to alimony and child support where she received ½ of the proceeds from the operation of the parties' chicken farm, which was their most valuable asset, she was provided with substantial income for her and the children, and the property was divided equally between the parties with the exception of a 101-acre tract of land in which the wife had a lesser interest. Martin v. Martin, 566 So. 2d 704, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 466 (Miss. 1990).

An award of lump sum alimony to a wife was not an abuse of discretion, even though the wife would not have lacked financial security without the lump sum award, where the wife resigned from her employment at the request of her husband to assist him in the operation of his real estate business 6 months after the parties' marriage, she was able to contribute more to the business after she received her license to sell real estate, she resigned from her employment with another realtor at the request of her husband because the realtor was a competitor, she promoted her husband's business through her home and social life, she assumed all of the duties associated with running the family's household, the parties were married for 19 years, and the wife's estate was substantially less than the husband's net worth. White v. White, 557 So. 2d 480, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1989).

A divorcing spouse, who has assisted his wife or her husband in the accumulation of wealth during the marriage as reflected by an increase in net worth, may be awarded lump sum alimony reflecting an equitable portion of the increase. Moreover, a substantial lump sum award of alimony is similarly appropriate where one spouse has accumulated considerable property and the other spouse has contributed by doing his or her part as a homemaker. White v. White, 557 So. 2d 480, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1989).

In determining whether to award lump sum alimony, the single most important factor to be considered is the disparity of the separate estates. Cheatham v. Cheatham, 537 So. 2d 435, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1988).

Chancery Court did not commit error in denying alimony to wife where parties were unable to meet expenses with current income. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Chancery Court did not err in refusing to award wife lump sum alimony where husband's financial circumstances were such that his current income was insufficient to meet his monthly expenses, although wife was in need of alimony. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Incident to judgment for divorce, Chancery Court has authority to award alimony after considering, weighing, and balancing among other factors, (1) health and earning capacity of husband, (2) health and earning capacity of wife, (3) entire sources of income of both parties, and (4) such other facts and circumstances bearing on subject that might be shown by evidence. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Even in cases where the wife has been guilty of fault justifying granting the husband a divorce, alimony, if allowed at all, should be reasonable in amount, commensurate with wife's accustomed standard of living, minus her own resources, and considering the husband's ability to pay. Wood v. Wood, 495 So. 2d 503, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2691 (Miss. 1986).

Where a couple had been married for approximately 24 years, at the beginning of the marriage they had no assets and the husband made a salary of $85 per week, and at the time of the divorce the husband admitted assets of $800,000, and the wife's worth was meager by comparison, since the wife had contributed to the accumulation of the property of her husband, doing her part as a housewife, it would not be improper that she be allowed a reasonable amount as lump-sum alimony in conjunction with an award of monthly alimony. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 278 So. 2d 446, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1445 (Miss. 1973).

It was an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court to refuse to grant alimony to complainant wife when the long marriage of the parties, the conduct accorded the wife by her husband, the admission of adultery in open court on his part, as well as the ages of the parties, including the likelihood of unemployment by reason thereof, were taken into consideration. Horton v. Horton, 269 So. 2d 347, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1224 (Miss. 1972).

Where a divorce was granted to the husband because of the wife's fault, although the record revealed that the wife was not entirely to blame for the dissolution of the marriage, and where the wife received income from a prior husband for the support of her children and the prior husband also had arranged a home for the children, and it appeared that the wife was able to earn her own living, a decree awarding alimony to the wife would be reversed. Russell v. Russell, 241 So. 2d 366, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1339 (Miss. 1970).

It was not abuse of discretion to deny alimony to a divorced wife, where following their separation, the wife removed the furniture and appliances from the home of the parties and sold most of the cattle of the husband, retaining the proceeds for her own use, and also kept the automobile, the payments for which the husband was directed by the court to pay. Gatlin v. Gatlin, 234 So. 2d 634, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1418 (Miss. 1970).

Evidence that a wife has a separate income may be shown to determine her urgent needs, but it is not an absolute defense to her claim for support. McInnis v. McInnis, 227 So. 2d 116, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1335 (Miss. 1969).

Where the record shows that the husband was at least partially at fault and that the wife was sick and unable to earn a living and had no means of support other than living with her parents, this evidence was adequate to warrant the finding of the chancellor that the wife was entitled to alimony. Fleming v. Fleming, 213 Miss. 74, 56 So. 2d 35, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 334 (Miss. 1952).

Fact that wife obtaining divorce has substantial separate estate does not require denial of alimony. Miller v. Miller, 173 Miss. 44, 159 So. 112, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 192 (Miss. 1935).

7. —Other considerations.

Where the parties agreed to an irreconcilable differences divorce, the wife was awarded $2,615,815 upon the distribution of the parties' $ 5.1 million marital estate. In light of the wife's property settlement, the chancellor's alimony award of $7,000 per month was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence and not supported by the record. Cosentino v. Cosentino, 986 So. 2d 1065, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 386 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Denial of alimony to the mother was improper where reversal was warranted on the custody issue and the presence of children was a factor in the decision concerning an award of alimony. Watts v. Watts, 854 So. 2d 11, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 143 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 859 So. 2d 392, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 378 (Miss. 2003).

Award of periodic alimony in the amount of $375 per month was appropriate based on the disparity in the earning capacity of the parties, the fact that a wife had fewer work prospects, the parties had been married for 29 years, and the wife had nowhere to live as a result of the judgment; moreover, it was of no consequence that the husband was unemployed at the time of the award because he was a skilled carpenter who could have easily found work. Roberson v. Roberson, 949 So. 2d 866, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 75 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In determining whether to award alimony, trial court could consider fact that wife, who was 60 years old at time of divorce, had given up her job based on husband's insistence that he did not want his wife working and promise that he would take care of wife. Parsons v. Parsons, 678 So. 2d 701, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 410 (Miss. 1996).

The source of one party's ownership of assets is not a factor in the determination of a lump sum alimony award. Creekmore v. Creekmore, 651 So. 2d 513, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 110 (Miss. 1995).

A wife was entitled to lump sum alimony where the parties were married for 22 years, the wife worked to help support the family seemingly at the expense of her own education, she stayed home to care for the children when the couple decided that was best, she worked on and off throughout the marriage for the husband's medical practice, and there was a large disparity between the parties' estates. Tilley v. Tilley, 610 So. 2d 348, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 780 (Miss. 1992).

A wife could not be awarded lump sum alimony where the husband was granted the divorce because of the wife's wrongdoing. Retzer v. Retzer, 578 So. 2d 580, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 858 (Miss. 1990).

A provision in a divorce decree which directed the husband to pay the wife a sum certain and specified regular installment payments was a final settlement of all of the husband's financial obligations to the wife, and therefore the wife's subsequent action for a share of the husband's military retirement pension was precluded; it should have been known at the time of the divorce that the husband would ultimately become eligible for military retirement pay and, since there was nothing to indicate otherwise, it had to be assumed that in fixing the financial terms of the original divorce judgment the chancery court considered all relevant facts, including the husband's ultimate eligibility for military retirement. Bowe v. Bowe, 557 So. 2d 793, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1990).

A divorcing spouse, who has assisted his wife or her husband in the accumulation of wealth during the marriage as reflected by an increase in net worth, may be awarded lump sum alimony reflecting an equitable portion of the increase. Moreover, a substantial lump sum award of alimony is similarly appropriate where one spouse has accumulated considerable property and the other spouse has contributed by doing his or her part as a homemaker. White v. White, 557 So. 2d 480, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1989).

Incident to judgment for divorce, Chancery Court has authority to award alimony after considering, weighing, and balancing among other factors, (1) health and earning capacity of husband, (2) health and earning capacity of wife, (3) entire sources of income of both parties, and (4) such other facts and circumstances bearing on subject that might be shown by evidence. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Where a couple had been married for approximately 24 years, at the beginning of the marriage they had no assets and the husband made a salary of $85 per week, and at the time of the divorce the husband admitted assets of $800,000, and the wife's worth was meager by comparison, since the wife had contributed to the accumulation of the property of her husband, doing her part as a housewife, it would not be improper that she be allowed a reasonable amount as lump-sum alimony in conjunction with an award of monthly alimony. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 278 So. 2d 446, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1445 (Miss. 1973).

It was an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court to refuse to grant alimony to complainant wife when the long marriage of the parties, the conduct accorded the wife by her husband, the admission of adultery in open court on his part, as well as the ages of the parties, including the likelihood of unemployment by reason thereof, were taken into consideration. Horton v. Horton, 269 So. 2d 347, 1972 Miss. LEXIS 1224 (Miss. 1972).

Where a wife who was drawing alimony from her divorced husband entered into a second marriage which was annulled because of fraud on the part of the second husband, she may not thereafter draw alimony from the first husband, for by entering into the second marriage she made an election as to the man to whom she would look for her support. Bridges v. Bridges, 217 So. 2d 281, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1261 (Miss. 1968).

Generally, husband cannot relieve himself from payment of alimony pursuant to divorce decree by incurring obligations resulting from a subsequent marriage, since the claim of the divorced wife, under alimony award, on his earnings ordinarily would take precedence over that of the second wife. De Marco v. De Marco, 199 Miss. 165, 24 So. 2d 358, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 184 (Miss. 1946).

Woman not legally married to defendant is not entitled to alimony. Aldridge v. Aldridge, 116 Miss. 385, 77 So. 150, 1917 Miss. LEXIS 314 (Miss. 1917).

8. Duration of payments.

Where a wife was 59, had no medical disabilities, had skills as an insurance agent and computer operator, and was awarded property worth $ 133,000 plus other real estate, the chancellor did not err in awarding her rehabilitative alimony of $500 per month for one year. Ferro v. Ferro, 871 So. 2d 753, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 90 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

The duration of a periodic alimony award, which directed the husband to pay monthly alimony of $700 until July, 2001, at which time the sum would be reduced to $550, was not excessive where the husband made no showing that the chancellor should have deviated from the general rule which dictates that periodic alimony terminates upon death or remarriage. Boykin v. Boykin, 565 So. 2d 1109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 290 (Miss. 1990).

Periodic or permanent alimony terminates upon the death of either party or upon the remarriage of the party receiving alimony. However, lump sum alimony, which may be paid in installments, becomes vested in the party to whom it is awarded and it does not terminate upon remarriage or death. Holleman v. Holleman, 527 So. 2d 90, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 270 (Miss. 1988).

Provision and award that periodic alimony payments would terminate upon ex-wife reaching age 65 was error, and it was ordered that support continue until her death or remarriage. Skinner v. Skinner, 509 So. 2d 867, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2549 (Miss. 1987).

A 57-year old husband was not entitled to have a time limit fixed on the periodic monthly alimony payments, because of his age and eventual retirement, especially since it appeared that he had more than sufficient net worth and investment returns to enable him to continue making the payments without suffering any hardship. Tutor v. Tutor, 494 So. 2d 362, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2639 (Miss. 1986).

Husband's obligation to pay periodic alimony ceases upon the wife's remarriage or his death, and the parties cannot by contract deprive the court, and it is doubtful if any court can deprive itself, of the future authority to modify ordinary periodic alimony, or to make it continue beyond the wife's remarriage or the husband's death. East v. East, 493 So. 2d 927, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2564 (Miss. 1986).

Chancery court has discretionary authority and power to award lump sum alimony in a sum certain, or alimony in gross, as it is sometimes called, and permit the payment to be made in periodic, sum certain installments which will terminate on some future date, and having done so, these will become fixed obligations of the divorced husband, the same as any other indebtedness, and the death or remarriage of the wife will not terminate or alter the obligation to pay. Wray v. Wray, 394 So. 2d 1341, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1954 (Miss. 1981).

Remarriage of the divorced wife relieved her former husband of all duties to support and maintain her thereafter, and the divorced wife was not entitled after the date of her remarriage to the monthly payments for her support or to mortgage instalment payments against the former home. East v. Collins, 194 Miss. 281, 12 So. 2d 133, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1943).

9. Amount of payments; generally.

Chancellor was neither manifestly wrong nor did he abuse his discretion when he awarded a wife only $300 a month in periodic alimony because the award was not oppressive, unjust, or grossly inadequate. The alimony award was reasonable, especially in light of the wife's receipt of nearly half of the marital estate. Rodriguez v. Rodriguez, 2 So. 3d 720, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 25 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion in awarding the ex-wife only $4,000 each month in alimony because: (1) the standard of living that she was accustomed to was about 50% of the ex-husband's reported income; (2) the chancellor found that her monthly expenses were greatly exaggerated; and (3) the chancellor determined that the ex-husband did not have the ability to continue paying $10,000 monthly in temporary alimony the ex-wife had been receiving. Wilson v. Wilson, 975 So. 2d 261, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 681 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Chancellor properly awarded the mother $3,000 per month alimony, while placing the tax deduction for the three children and the responsibility to pay the marital debts with the father; these awards were supported by the facts of the case where the father maintained the mother in a high standard of living. Lauro v. Lauro, 924 So. 2d 584, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 161 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In the division of property, the former husband was awarded ownership of the home, valued at $ 40,000, and an airplane, valued at $ 7,000, but he was directed to pay the parties' marital debt of almost $ 26,000 as well as the wife's $ 3,025 in attorney fees; the former wife was awarded the lawn mower, valued at $ 500, the four-wheeler, valued at $ 1,000, and was allowed to remain in the marital home for two years rent free, valued at $ 9,600. When the two estates were reviewed in combination with the two year rehabilitative alimony of $ 200 per month, the wife's estate was valued at $ 15,900 and the husband's estate was valued at $ 10,175, which did not even include the amount of temporary support the wife had received since the parties' separation, the value of living in the marital residence over the period of the parties' separation, or the value of all the personal property in the marital residence awarded to the wife; thus, the chancery court did not abuse its discretion in its award of rehabilitative alimony of $ 200 per month. Fogarty v. Fogarty, 922 So. 2d 836, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 139 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In a divorce case, while the trial court concluded that it could be said that alimony should have decreased in recent years because of decreases in the ex-husband's income, it could also be said that alimony should have increased for two other years because of his increased income for those two years; thus, the trial court's decision not to modify the periodic alimony award was not manifestly wrong. Brennan v. Ebel, 880 So. 2d 1058, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 233 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 234, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1084 (Miss. 2004).

Where the wife's assets could not produce income sufficient to meet her recurring monthly living expenses, requiring the husband to continue to contribute an amount of $ 850 per month in alimony to permit his former wife to continue to meet her recurring expenses could not be considered excessive and did not demonstrate an abuse of discretion by the chancellor. Seale v. Seale, 863 So. 2d 996, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 3 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Although the husband failed to make all the mandated alimony payments to the wife, the wife admitted to receiving various benefits from the husband after he stopped submitting checks marked "alimony;" the chancery court had to classify each of the payments made and determine whether or not they were court-ordered expenses, such as medical or dental expenses, for which the husband would not be entitled to a credit, and others not specifically ordered but that were of benefit to the wife, such as payment of her household utilities. Franklin v. Franklin, 864 So. 2d 970, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

The totality of a chancellor's awards of alimony and property to a wife was excessive where the wife was awarded periodic alimony which exceeded the husband's net income as well as his gross income, she was granted greater than 50 percent of the marital property, and she was awarded substantial lump sum alimony. Brooks v. Brooks, 652 So. 2d 1113, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 152 (Miss. 1995).

Alimony should be reasonable in amount, "first deducting the resources of the wife and then finding an amount commensurate with the wife's accustomed standard of living, and considering the ability of the husband to pay." As long as the chancellor follows this general standard, the amount of the award is largely within his or her discretion. The chancellor should consider the reasonable needs of the wife and the right of the husband to lead as normal a life as possible with a decent standard of living. Brendel v. Brendel, 566 So. 2d 1269, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 539 (Miss. 1990).

In awarding the original sum of alimony and child support, the factors which must be considered are the health of the husband and his earning capacity, the health of the wife and her earning capacity, the entire sources of income of both parties, the reasonable needs of the wife, the reasonable needs of the child, the necessary living expenses of the husband, the estimated amount of income taxes the respective parties must pay on their income, the fact that the wife has the free use of the home, furnishings, and automobile, and such other facts and circumstances bearing on the subject as might be shown by the evidence. Carpenter v. Carpenter, 519 So. 2d 891, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 49 (Miss. 1988).

Award of alimony and child support must be made to wife who for some 13 years has used her income to pay household bills so that husband could invest his income; husband cannot be permitted to reap all benefits of increase in income and net worth simply by divesting himself of assets to avoid appearance of income. Rudder v. Rudder, 467 So. 2d 675, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2024 (Miss. 1985).

Chancery court may allow such alimony as is equitable and just with regard to circumstances; wife's ability to earn something by her own labor to be considered. Ramsay v. Ramsay, 125 Miss. 185, 87 So. 491, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 1921).

10. — Periodic payments.

In a dissolution matter, a chancery court did not abuse its discretion in awarding a wife $ 1,500 per month in periodic alimony because the parties were married eleven years, the wife suffered from a genetic illness and was unable to work, and the husband earned $ 84,000 per year while the wife's annual $ 9,324 Social Security disability benefit was her only source of income; the husband was fully aware of the wife's illness prior to their marriage. Rogillio v. Rogillio, 101 So. 3d 150, 2012 Miss. LEXIS 493 (Miss. 2012).

Mississippi Supreme Court properly classified the award of alimony to the mother as permanent periodic alimony and did not instruct the chancellor to award rehabilitative alimony; rehabilitative alimony was not considered during equitable division. Lauro v. Lauro, 924 So. 2d 584, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 161 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Award of $1,000 in temporary spousal support was upheld on review where the evidence showed that a former husband had the ability to pay this due to his employment as a doctor; the trial court reviewed the financial situations of the parties, including the fact that the wife had returned to work as a nurse, and moreover the husband was properly found in contempt for failing to make this payment for seven months. Henderson v. Henderson, 952 So. 2d 273, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 869 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 951 So. 2d 563, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 165 (Miss. 2007).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding the wife alimony where the record was clear that the wife's income along with her share of marital property and child support would not cover the basic monthly expenses for herself and her children; the addition of $1,000 per month in alimony left the wife with only a moderate surplus after paying the basic monthly expenses for her and her children. Seymour v. Seymour, 960 So. 2d 513, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 805 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 959 So. 2d 1051, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 382 (Miss. 2007).

Chancellor did not err by awarding a former wife $2,500 per month in periodic alimony where the evidence showed that a former husband was capable of earning more than $12,000 per month; moreover, it was not error to order that twenty-five percent of the earnings over $150,000 be awarded to the wife to account for the husband's fluctuating income. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 961 So. 2d 48, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 613 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), rev'd, 961 So. 2d 19, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 414 (Miss. 2007).

Chancellor did not err in a divorce case by refusing to award a wife periodic payments of rehabilitative alimony; the wife's situation was not the type that warranted such an award because she did not need retraining to reenter the workforce after being a stay at home mother for three years, and she failed to substantiate money borrowed to pay debts. LeBlanc v. Andrews, 931 So. 2d 683, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 462 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

A chancellor did not err in awarding a wife periodic alimony in the amount of $300 per month where the parties were married for 10 years, the husband was retired, the wife was permanently disabled, the wife's monthly income was $525 and her monthly expenses were approximately $1100, the husband's monthly income was $1413 and his monthly expenses were approximately $1120, and both parties were awarded exclusive use of an unencumbered home and at least one automobile. Crowe v. Crowe, 641 So. 2d 1100, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 378 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding a wife $1,400 per month in periodic alimony where the husband had a net income of approximately $4,000 per month, and the wife had a net income of $1,540 per month. Hemsley v. Hemsley, 639 So. 2d 909, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 351 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor abused his discretion in awarding a wife only $500 per month in periodic alimony where the husband's adjusted gross income was in excess of $8,000 per month while the wife earned $150 per month. Brennan v. Brennan, 638 So. 2d 1320, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 331 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor committed a severe abuse of discretion when he awarded a wife only $12,000 in lump sum alimony and refused to grant her any periodic payment alimony where there was a large disparity between the parties' income and earning capacity, the husband would have no difficulty contributing monthly support payments to the wife given his significant income, the wife supported the couple for the first 11 years of their 17-year marriage which enabled the husband to obtain a medical degree, and the wife had experienced a deterioration in her mental state as evidenced by her psychological and emotional treatment at a hospital on 2 different occasions; the chancellor had a duty to attempt to see that the wife, who had a history of emotional problems, be provided for in her present and future mentally disturbed state. Monroe v. Monroe, 612 So. 2d 353, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 789 (Miss. 1992).

A chancellor abused his discretion in apparently attempting to punish the husband for his actions during the parties' marriage by ordering the husband to pay aggregate monthly alimony and child support in the amount of $11,038.34 a month when the husband had a monthly net income of $7,306.00. Tilley v. Tilley, 610 So. 2d 348, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 780 (Miss. 1992).

An award of $500 per month in alimony and $950 per month in child support was not an abuse of discretion where the wife, who had custody of the parties' child, was a school teacher with a net income of $832.18 per month, a check spread indicated that the monthly living expenses for the wife and the child was $2,625.93, the husband was a certified public accountant who had a total personal net taxable income of $58,688 in 1987, the wife was not awarded any part of the husband's oil share investment, resident real estate investment, commercial building, or an equitable interest in 8 acres and a house which the husband inherited, and the award was not so high that it would provide the wife and child with a higher standard of living than the husband. Powers v. Powers, 568 So. 2d 255, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 278 (Miss. 1990).

An award of periodic alimony to a wife in the amount of $700 per month was not excessive where both parties were in good health and of approximately the same age, the husband earned an annual salary of $41,000, the wife earned an annual salary of $13,624, the husband attended high school through the 10th grade, the wife graduated high school, the wife received use of the parties' home and automobile but was responsible for paying the notes on both, and the husband had no responsibility for payment of the note on the home or the automobile; the terms of the decree placed both parties in nearly identical financial positions. Even if the award provided the wife with slightly more disposable income than the husband, such a disparity would not be sufficient to prove an abuse of discretion. Boykin v. Boykin, 565 So. 2d 1109, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 290 (Miss. 1990).

Chancellor did not err in awarding wife $60 per week child support and $65 per week temporary alimony, subsequently changed to $250 per month alimony for 24 months, granting wife possession and use of family's automobile, and providing that equity, if any, from foreclosure of family home would be divided equally between parties, where wife was qualified school teacher and husband was attorney at law. Jordan v. Jordan, 510 So. 2d 131, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2628 (Miss. 1987).

Award of $2,158.52 per month periodic alimony was proper where earning capacity of wife, in accordance with testimony given, had obviously been considered. Skinner v. Skinner, 509 So. 2d 867, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2549 (Miss. 1987).

Where husband, who was 57 years old in excellent health for his age, was a board certified neurosurgeon with an annual income of close to $300,000 and net worth well in excess of $900,000, while the wife, who was 59 years old without significant health problems had completed 2 years of college and had no special skills, her work experience being that of a sales clerk with limited clerical training, and whose earning, exclusive of alimony, was about $11,000 per year, an award to wife of periodic monthly alimony of $2,500 was not an abuse of discretion, but a $50,000 lump sum alimony award was so inadequate as to constitute an abuse of discretion and husband would be required to pay her $150,000 as lump sum alimony. Tutor v. Tutor, 494 So. 2d 362, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2639 (Miss. 1986).

A divorce action would be remanded to the trial court for further consideration of the alimony award to the wife upon additional evidence being taken of the husband's ability to pay, since the award of $300 per month alimony and the use of the jointly owned home was grossly inadequate for a wife of 34 years, provided the former husband had earning ability or assets indicative of greater ability to pay. Smith v. Smith, 429 So. 2d 588, 1983 Miss. LEXIS 2577 (Miss. 1983).

Where a decree required the divorced husband to pay $50 each month to the divorced wife "for the support of herself" and their children, the language of the decree intended that the award be for the support of both the mother and children. Duett v. Duett, 285 So. 2d 140, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1270 (Miss. 1973).

An award of $1,000 per month for the support of the wife was not equitable and just since it was insufficient to maintain her in accord with her station and condition in life and in harmony with the estate of her husband, particularly since the monthly payments were subject to be terminated by the death of the husband, leaving the wife with no security in that event, an insurance policy upon the husband's life with the wife being one of the beneficiaries, was subject to termination by the company which the husband controlled, and the monthly award was insufficient to support the wife with basic necessities and to maintain the home as existed prior to the divorce. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 278 So. 2d 446, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1445 (Miss. 1973).

An award of $275 per month for the support and maintenance of the wife, and the parties' two minor children, was not excessive where the husband was a strong able bodied man with a good earning capacity, and was the owner of considerable property. Blount v. Blount, 231 Miss. 398, 95 So. 2d 545, 96 So. 2d 232, 97 So. 2d 240, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 525, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 526, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 527 (Miss. 1957).

Under a showing that the divorced wife, in addition to owning her own home and 367 acres of land, also owned personal property of the value of several thousand dollars, and prior to the separation she had been employed at a salary of more than $200 per month, while the husband earned slightly more than $422 a month and owned no property except an automobile which was used in his employment, an award to the wife of $200 per month as alimony and support of the parties' minor child was unjust and oppressive and the supreme court could reduce the amount to $150 a month, without remanding the case for rehearing, since all of the facts necessary to enable the court to make a determination were in the record. Lowry v. Lowry, 229 Miss. 376, 90 So. 2d 852, 1956 Miss. LEXIS 617 (Miss. 1956).

Allowance of $150 per month alimony and $50 per month for support of minor child is not so excessive as to justify reversal of finding of chancellor, especially since allowance may be modified under future changed conditions. Brown v. Ohman, 43 So. 2d 727 (Miss. 1949).

Where alimony decree relieving husband of all future obligations to support wife by paying $1250 and allowing her the use of the home for one year, was unjust under the circumstances, supreme court decreed that husband pay her $60 per month and permit her to occupy the home, or, at her option, to pay her $100 per month without the use of the home, to continue until a change in circumstances justified a modification of the order. Gresham v. Gresham, 198 Miss. 43, 21 So. 2d 414, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1945).

Supreme court cannot say $100 per month permanent alimony is erroneous because only $40 a month temporary alimony allowed. Hamblin v. Hamblin, 107 Miss. 113, 65 So. 113, 1914 Miss. LEXIS 59 (Miss. 1914).

11. — Lump sum payments.

Mississippi chancery court's order requiring a Chapter 7 debtor to pay his ex-wife $550,000 as "lump-sum alimony" and $35,110 in attorney's fees created debts that were nondischargeable under former 11 U.S.C.S. § 523; the court's award was intended as support in the nature of alimony so the debtor's ex-wife could retain the standard of living she enjoyed while she was married to the debtor. Rustin v. Rustin (In re Rustin), 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 5728 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Nov. 9, 2011).

Chancellor did not err by awarding a former wife lump sum alimony in the amount of $250,000 where the evidence showed that a former husband earned more than $400,000 in 2001 and more than $800,000 in 2002 while the wife only worked part-time and depleted her savings account when the husband failed to pay his support obligations. Yelverton v. Yelverton, 961 So. 2d 48, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 613 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), rev'd, 961 So. 2d 19, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 414 (Miss. 2007).

Chancellor had not erroneously classified the payment of one half of the husband's military retirement as lump sum alimony because the payment of one-half of the husband's military retirement had no fixed duration, nor, as of the time of the proceedings sub judice, a fixed amount. However, the instant property settlement agreement granted the wife one-half of the military retirement, and the chancellor correctly stated in his final judgment that the husband's payment of such benefits was a "substitute for a property division" and thus characterized as lump sum alimony. Chroniger v. Chroniger, 914 So. 2d 311, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 788 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor had not erroneously classified the 36 fixed alimony payments as lump sum alimony. The 36 monthly payments, in fixed amount, agreed to in the property settlement agreement were clearly lump sum alimony and thus not subject to modification or termination. Chroniger v. Chroniger, 914 So. 2d 311, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 788 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding the ex-wife lump sum alimony rather than permanent alimony because (1) the wife was assuming a greater debt than the husband; (2) the wife needed assistance in caring for the children; (3) the wife had been out of the work force for a few years; and (4) the husband's financial means were greater. White v. White, 868 So. 2d 1054, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 229 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a divorce case, the judgment regarding the lump sum alimony award was final and not subject to further litigation. Brennan v. Ebel, 880 So. 2d 1058, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 233 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 882 So. 2d 234, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1084 (Miss. 2004).

Where a chancellor awarded a wife lump sum alimony, based, inter alia, on the 32-year marriage, the husband's fault in causing the divorce by committing a crime that caused him to be imprisoned, and his assets, which included a life estate property interest, the alimony award of $ 12,600 was not so exorbitant as to constitute an abuse of discretion. Avery v. Avery, 864 So. 2d 1054, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 91 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a divorce case, a chancery court erred in failing to analyze the four factors considered in lump sum alimony awards; the appellate court noted that such an award did not seem appropriate because the parties each had separate assets and households, and the chancery court seemed to base its award on the fact that the wife had extensive medical problems. Haney v. Haney, 881 So. 2d 862, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1114 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 907 So. 2d 948, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 441 (Miss. 2005).

An award to a wife of $12,000 in lump sum alimony was grossly inadequate and constituted an abuse of discretion where the wife's separate income and estate were meager in comparison to the husband's, the wife had permanent custody of the party's minor child, the husband's monthly child support payments would terminate at his death and his life expectancy was not long, and the amount of the award constituted only 2.6 percent of the husband's estate. Creekmore v. Creekmore, 651 So. 2d 513, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 110 (Miss. 1995).

A wife's lump sum alimony award of $24,000 was grossly inadequate and constituted an abuse of discretion where the husband had a net worth of at least $315,000 due to an inheritance from his family, the wife's estimated minimum monthly expenses totalled $1,600, she was awarded $500 per month in child support payments, and she earned gross monthly wages of $340, since the award did not allow the wife to maintain her accustomed standard of living and did not reflect a consideration of her lack of available resources or the husband's ability to pay. Creekmore v. Creekmore, 651 So. 2d 513, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 110 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not err in awarding lump sum alimony to a wife in the amount of $4500, in addition to periodic alimony in the amount of $300 per month, where the parties were married for 10 years, the wife had assisted in the husband's business, the husband's monthly income was $1413 while the wife's was $525, the husband had obtained $10,000 from the couple's joint checking account while the wife had removed $5,000, and the husband was awarded sole ownership of 2 vehicles used during the marriage while the wife received only one. Crowe v. Crowe, 641 So. 2d 1100, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 378 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not abuse her discretion in awarding a wife lump sum alimony in the amount of $25,020 where the parties were married for approximately 18 years, the wife worked for many years in the husband's businesses without receiving a salary, there was no indication that she was not a dutiful and faithful wife, the husband's income was more than twice that of the wife's, the chancellor was skeptical as to the husband's true earnings and the evidence suggested that the husband had some alternative source of support that he had not disclosed, and the wife would lack financial security without the award. Grogan v. Grogan, 641 So. 2d 734, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor's award of lump sum alimony to a wife would be affirmed, even though the post-divorce disparity of the parties' separate estates demonstrated that the award was skewed slightly in favor of the husband, where it was apparent that the chancellor had been mindful of each party's circumstances when he made the award. Brennan v. Brennan, 638 So. 2d 1320, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 331 (Miss. 1994).

An award to a wife of $600.00 per month in the form of "periodic transitional alimony" for 30 months, which was actually a lump sum award payable in fixed periodic installments, was not excessive where the wife's net income was $896.00 per month, her monthly expenses totalled $2,843.00, the husband's net income was approximately $5,075.00 per month, and his monthly expenses amounted to approximately $2,539.00. Dufour v. Dufour, 631 So. 2d 192, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor committed a severe abuse of discretion when he awarded a wife only $12,000 in lump sum alimony and refused to grant her any periodic payment alimony where there was a large disparity between the parties' income and earning capacity, the husband would have no difficulty contributing monthly support payments to the wife given his significant income, the wife supported the couple for the first 11 years of their 17-year marriage which enabled the husband to obtain a medical degree, and the wife had experienced a deterioration in her mental state as evidenced by her psychological and emotional treatment at a hospital on 2 different occasions; the chancellor had a duty to attempt to see that the wife, who had a history of emotional problems, be provided for in her present and future mentally disturbed state. Monroe v. Monroe, 612 So. 2d 353, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 789 (Miss. 1992).

A lump sum alimony award to a wife in the amount of $60,000 was so low as to be an abuse of discretion where the parties had been married for approximately 14 years, the husband had had assets worth $817,000 before the marriage, the wife had had assets worth $30,000 before the marriage, the husband's worth had increased $446,000 during the course of the marriage, the wife's assets had increased by $110,754.11, and though the wife's contributions to her husband's construction business had not been significant, her efforts had been concentrated more as a homemaker. Branton v. Branton, 559 So. 2d 1038, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 193 (Miss. 1990).

A trial court abused its discretion in limiting a wife's lump sum alimony award to $50,000 where the evidence showed a substantial increase in wealth obtained during the course of the parties' marriage, the wife's contributions to the marriage and promotion of the husband's business were worth substantially more, the wife quit 2 jobs to assist in her husband's business, and she was instrumental in the public relations aspect of the business. White v. White, 557 So. 2d 480, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 516 (Miss. 1989).

An award to a wife of $5,400 as lump-sum alimony was inadequate and amounted to an abuse of discretion where the wife had contributed $28,000 to the husband while he was in law school, she had contributed $11,000 to a joint savings account upon his completion of law school, $6,900 was put into IRA accounts by the wife in the husband's name, and the wife contributed $1,200 to office furniture for the husband's law office. Robinson v. Irwin, 546 So. 2d 683, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 321 (Miss. 1989).

A divorcing spouse who has assisted his wife or her husband in the accumulation of wealth during the marriage as reflected by an increase in net worth may be awarded lump sum alimony reflecting an equitable portion of the increase. Jones v. Jones, 532 So. 2d 574, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 488 (Miss. 1988).

Lump-sum award of $75,000 was not so low as to constitute abuse of discretion, where ex-husband's assets totaled between $700,000 and $900,000, all accumulated during the marriage, and ex-wife's total assets at end of marriage were approximately $40,000, reflecting her one-half interest in marital home, although lump-sum award would be payable immediately, instead of upon ex-wife reaching age 65. Skinner v. Skinner, 509 So. 2d 867, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2549 (Miss. 1987).

Where husband, who was 57 years old in excellent health for his age, was a board certified neurosurgeon with an annual income of close to $300,000 and net worth well in excess of $900,000, while the wife, who was 59 years old without significant health problems had completed 2 years of college and had no special skills, her work experience being that of a sales clerk with limited clerical training, and whose earning, exclusive of alimony, was about $11,000 per year, an award to wife of periodic monthly alimony of $2,500 was not an abuse of discretion, but a $50,000 lump sum alimony award was so inadequate as to constitute an abuse of discretion and husband would be required to pay her $150,000 as lump sum alimony. Tutor v. Tutor, 494 So. 2d 362, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2639 (Miss. 1986).

There was no merit to a former husband's contention that an award of lump-sum alimony in the amount of $240,000 was oppressive or would present the likelihood of the necessity that he liquidate assets, where his net worth had been determined to be not less than $750,000. Schilling v. Schilling, 452 So. 2d 834, 1984 Miss. LEXIS 1654 (Miss. 1984).

A lump sum award of alimony, if reasonable in amount as determined from the circumstances of the parties, does not violate the terms of the statute even though made in conjunction with other alimony, and an order was proper requiring a husband, whose average earnings were in excess of $630 per month and who together with his wife was able to accumulate in excess of $25,000 in savings during the period of the marriage, to pay to the wife the lump sum of $5,325 together with monthly payments of $150. Harrell v. Harrell, 231 So. 2d 793, 1970 Miss. LEXIS 1609 (Miss. 1970).

Where the divorce is granted for the husband's adultery, the conduct of the wife being unexceptionable, and the husband being an active businessman with no children, one-third of his estate was not deemed too much alimony. Armstrong v. Armstrong, 32 Miss. 279, 1856 Miss. LEXIS 201 (Miss. 1856).

12. Interest on alimony.

Each unpaid installment of alimony bears legal interest from its due date. Rubisoff v. Rubisoff, 242 Miss. 225, 133 So. 2d 534, 1961 Miss. LEXIS 548 (Miss. 1961).

Accrued alimony is a vested right, and interest is allowable thereon. Rainwater v. Rainwater, 236 Miss. 412, 110 So. 2d 608, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 334 (Miss. 1959).

Interest, as a general rule, runs on alimony after it is due. Schaffer v. Schaffer, 209 Miss. 220, 46 So. 2d 443, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1950).

13. Separate maintenance.

Because the appellate court affirmed the chancellor's grant of divorce based on the husband's habitual cruel and inhuman treatment of the wife, which materially contributed to their separation, the husband's claim for separate maintenance was a moot issue. G.B.W. v. E.R.W., 9 So. 3d 1200, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 285 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Wife was not entitled to periodic, lump sum, or rehabilitative alimony because the chancellor essentially split the marital estate equally, the disparity between the parties' estate was less than five hundred dollars, the equitable division of the marital property resulted in no appreciable deficit for either party, and at the time of both of the hearings, the wife was employed full-time as a school teacher. McIntosh v. McIntosh, 977 So. 2d 1257, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Wife was not entitled to separate maintenance because she testified that during their separation the husband continued to pay the majority of the household bills. Likewise, the husband testified that he was "willing to pay anything." McIntosh v. McIntosh, 977 So. 2d 1257, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 184 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Where a married couple separated, the chancellor properly granted the wife's request for separate maintenance. The the husband had almost $ 4,000 a month in "spendable" income; therefore, a separate maintenance award of $1800 to his wife would not deplete his estate. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where a married couple decided mutually that the wife would quit her job because the husband's income was sufficient to support them, upon their separation the wife was entitled to a separate maintenance award. The wife had access to $ 3,600 a month before the separation; she met the qualifications for separate maintenance in that no fault was alleged on her part for the separation. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Wife need not be totally blameless for an award of separate maintenance to be allowed, but her misconduct must not have materially contributed to the separation. A wife was entitled to a separate maintenance award where the couple's separation was due to the husband's desire to spend more time with his children from a previous marriage. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In order to award separate maintenance, a court must find a separation without fault on the wife's part, and willful abandonment of her by the husband with refusal to support her. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Separate maintenance does not have only one purpose. The purpose of separate maintenance should be to provide, as nearly as may be possible, the same sort of normal support and maintenance for the wife, all things considered, as she would have received in the home if the parties had continued normal cohabitation and the wife had helped in a reasonable way, in view of her health and physical condition, to earn her own support and that of the family. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Six criteria must be considered in setting awards of separate maintenance: (1) the health of the husband and the wife; (2) their combined earning capacity; (3) the reasonable needs of the wife and children; (4) the necessary living expenses of the husband; (5) the fact that the wife has free use of the home and furnishings; and (6) other such facts and circumstances. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

While the amount of separate maintenance should provide for the wife as if the couple were still cohabiting, the allowance should not unduly deplete the husband's estate. Honea v. Honea, 888 So. 2d 1192, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 958 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Chancellor's award of separate maintenance to the wife was not excessive where the chancellor took into consideration all the relevant factors when determining the appropriate amount of the payments; the award was equitable due to the wife's poor health and the great disparity between their respective incomes. Myers v. Myers, 881 So. 2d 220, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1165 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 881 So. 2d 180, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 711 (Miss. 2004).

A chancellor properly set aside a separate maintenance agreement where the parties' marriage was void under § 93-1-1 because they were uncle and niece; equitable estoppel was not available, since the parties had equal access to all the facts and ample opportunity to investigate the legality of the marriage, and public policy prevented validation of the void marriage by the doctrine of estoppel. Weeks v. Weeks, 654 So. 2d 33, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 200 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not err in ordering a wife to "maintain medical insurance" for the parties' 2 children as a form of separate maintenance where the wife's income exceeded the husband's throughout the marriage, the wife's income was $2932 per month, the husband's income was $2166 per month, there was no indication that the wife could not secure medical insurance through her employment, and it was the chancellor's intention to encourage the parties to resume cohabitation. Steen v. Steen, 641 So. 2d 1167, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 1994).

A wife was not entitled to separate maintenance where her efforts, attitude and desires to live beyond her husband's financial means contributed to the parties' separation because of the psychological makeup of her husband and the husband's leaving the marriage was justified, even though the wife made efforts to salvage the marriage after the separation by seeking marital counseling. Ramsey v. State, 554 So. 2d 300, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1989).

An award of separate maintenance and child support to the wife and the parties' 3 children of approximately 41 percent of the husband's $88,700 annual salary was reasonable where both parties were in good health, the husband's earning power was approximately 4 times as great as the wife's, and the needs of the wife and the children were reasonable in light of the style of living to which they had become accustomed. Ramsey v. State, 554 So. 2d 300, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 601 (Miss. 1989).

A separate maintenance award in the form of a "lump sum" is inappropriate as it runs contrary to the basic purpose of separate maintenance, which is to order the husband to re-enter the marital relationship or pay support to the wife. Presumably, if "lump sum" separate maintenance were allowed, the husband would continue to owe his wife this vested amount even if he resumed the marital relationship, which runs contrary to the policies concerning separate maintenance. Williams v. Williams, 528 So. 2d 296, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 330 (Miss. 1988).

Separate maintenance is a monetary amount for support and does not extend to division of marital assets. As a Chancery Court has no authority to divest title to property from the husband on an order of separate maintenance, it likewise lacks authority to vest title to property in the husband in a separate maintenance award. Thompson v. Thompson, 527 So. 2d 617, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss. 1988).

An earlier decree of separate maintenance did not bar the relitigation of the issue of maintenance in a divorce decree but, rather, the earlier decree for separate maintenance could be modified upon a showing of a material or substantial change of circumstances arising subsequent to the date of that decree. Rodriquez v. State, 498 So. 2d 1230, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2807 (Miss. 1986).

In setting amount to be paid by husband to wife as separate maintenance, court may not deprive husband of reasonable standard of living in effort to force reconciliation of parties desired by wife; nor may husband be ordered to pay unspecified sum for utilities, upon submission of bills to him by wife. Tanner v. Tanner, 481 So. 2d 1063, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2340 (Miss. 1985).

Wife is entitled to separate maintenance where husband leaves wife and refuses to return, while she states that she is willing to accept him back. Kergosien v. Kergosien, 471 So. 2d 1206, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2133 (Miss. 1985).

Wife need not be granted separate maintenance where both spouses are about equally to blame for separation. Churchill v. Churchill, 467 So. 2d 948, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2039 (Miss. 1985).

Where a wife's conduct materially contributes to a separation she is not entitled to separate support and maintenance. Cox v. Cox, 279 So. 2d 612, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1476 (Miss. 1973).

Where the complainant-husband's charges of his wife's infidelity were overwhelmingly established by the evidence and her conduct, at least in part, was not condoned, and the wife filed a cross-action for divorce on the ground of her husband's alleged cruelty, it was error on the part of the trial court to refuse to grant either party a divorce but, instead, to enter a decree of separate maintenance requiring the husband to support his wife; and on appeal the decree of separate maintenance was set aside and the husband was awarded a divorce on his original bill of complaint. King v. King, 191 So. 2d 409, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1213 (Miss. 1966).

Where a wife was guilty of desertion in leaving her husband in the first place and had no intention of returning, the subsequent filing by her of a bill for separate maintenance did not toll the statute. Leggett v. Leggett, 185 So. 2d 431, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1503 (Miss. 1966).

Separate maintenance should not be awarded to a wife whose separation from her husband is in part attributable to her fault. King v. King, 246 Miss. 798, 152 So. 2d 889, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 506 (Miss. 1963).

Decree in separate maintenance suit is conclusive, as res adjudicata, in subsequent divorce suit, so far as concerns any issue which was litigated between parties in separate maintenance suit, and if issue was decided in favor of wife in that suit, it bars husband in any subsequent divorce suit brought by him predicated on facts which were in existence at time of maintenance decree and which were put in issue and decided in favor of wife therein. Van Norman v. Van Norman, 205 Miss. 114, 38 So. 2d 452, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 1949).

This section [Code 1942, § 2743] applies only in divorce cases, and not in cases involving separate maintenance only. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945).

Suits for separate maintenance, wherein there is no prayer by bill or cross-bill for divorce, are not based upon this section [Code 1942, § 2743] or any other statute, but are lodged in the equity jurisdiction of the chancery courts and are regulated by equitable principles independently of, and apart from, statutes of divorce. Wilson v. Wilson, 198 Miss. 334, 22 So. 2d 161, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 202 (Miss.), modified, 198 Miss. 334, 23 So. 2d 303, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 203 (Miss. 1945).

Alimony may be decreed upon a bill by which no divorce is sought. Crawford v. Crawford, 158 Miss. 382, 130 So. 688, 1930 Miss. LEXIS 75 (Miss. 1930).

14. Court's power or discretion.

While a chancellor was within the authority granted the chancellor by the parties when the chancellor ordered the husband to maintain a life-insurance policy with the wife named as the beneficiary, the amount that the husband was required to maintain was unreasonable and excessive. On remand the chancellor was to take a new look at the amount of life insurance that was required to protect the wife's alimony interest. Griner v. Griner, — So. 3d —, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 388 (Miss. Ct. App. June 27, 2017).

Substantial credible evidence supported the chancellor's decision to award the wife $ 300 per month in periodic alimony and an additional award to pay the note on her mobile home, including any delinquent payments; the wife had several physical conditions that limited her ability to work, and the husband's behavior was also a factor in the parties' decision to divorce. Beddingfield v. Beddingfield, 11 So. 3d 780, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 348 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Chancellor did not err in denying the husband an award of alimony where the trial court properly applied the correct factors to the evidence and determined that an award of alimony was not appropriate. Ericson v. Tullos, 876 So. 2d 1038, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 595 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

A chancellor errs in making an alimony determination where he fails to follow the proper procedure to determine the appropriate division of marital property and award of alimony: (1) the chancellor is to classify the parties' assets as marital or nonmarital; (2) the chancellor is to evaluate and equitably divide the marital property employing the Ferguson factors as guidelines in light of each party's nonmarital property, but property division should be based upon a determination of fair market value of the assets, these valuations should be the initial step before determining division, and the chancellor must assume that the contributions and efforts of the marital partners, whether economic, domestic, or otherwise, are of equal value in determining a division of assets; (3) if the marital assets, after equitable division and in light of the parties' nonmarital assets, will adequately provide for both parties, then no more need be done; and (4) if an equitable division of marital property, considered with each party's nonmarital assets, leaves a deficit for one party, then alimony should be considered. A chancellor erred where he failed to consider a wife's domestic contributions equally with her husband's economic contributions, where he improperly applied an alimony standard of "semblance of living" rather than "standard of living to which the wife was accustomed", where he failed to properly apply the Hemsley factors to division of marital property, and where he failed to properly apply the Ferguson factors as guidelines to dividing that property. Johnson v. Johnson, 877 So. 2d 485, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1203 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 878 So. 2d 67, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 862 (Miss. 2004).

In the context of property division or alimony in a divorce proceeding, when a chancellor provides a recitation of facts in his judgment that covers most, if not all the Ferguson and Armstrong factors, no reversal is required; a chancellor is in the best position to hear the testimony and view the evidence. Palmer v. Palmer, 841 So. 2d 185, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 244 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Where trial court took into consideration wife's need for financial security in regards to her lack of earning capacity, as well as the prior property settlement agreement of the parties, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's award of alimony to the wife. Riley v. Riley, 846 So. 2d 282, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 163 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Whether to award alimony and amount of alimony to be awarded are largely within chancellor's discretion. Parsons v. Parsons, 678 So. 2d 701, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 410 (Miss. 1996).

A chancellor may place a time limitation on periodic alimony which is called "rehabilitative periodic alimony" for rehabilitative purposes. Hubbard v. Hubbard, 656 So. 2d 124, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. 1995).

Broad authority is vested in the chancery courts to provide for the material needs of spouses incident to divorce; there are several forms of aid including, but not limited to: (a) periodic alimony, sometimes called permanent or continuing alimony; (b) lump sum alimony or alimony in gross; (c) division of jointly accumulated property; and (d) award of equitable interest in property. There are no clear lines of demarcation between these, nor should there be, and courts are authorized in their sound discretion to use one or several or all in combination. What is commonly referred to as periodic alimony terminates automatically upon the death of the obligor or the remarriage of the obligee. Periodic alimony is subject to modification or termination in the event of a material change of circumstances subsequent to the decree awarding alimony; such a modification may be made only upon order of the chancery court. Periodic alimony becomes vested only on the date each periodic payment becomes due. In contrast, what is commonly referred to as lump sum alimony is that ordered by the court in such form and manner that from the outset it becomes fixed and irrevocable. Lump sum alimony may be payable in a single lump sum or in fixed periodic installments. It may be payable in cash or in kind or in combination thereof. It is a final settlement between the husband and wife and may not be changed or modified by either party, absent fraud. Lump sum alimony is vested in the obligee when the judgment awarding it becomes final, retroactive to the date the judgment is entered. It becomes an obligation of the estate of the obligor if he or she dies before payment. Because of these important differences between the 2 forms of alimony, chancery courts are urged to be as clear as possible in providing the terms and effects of an alimony award. Bowe v. Bowe, 557 So. 2d 793, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1990).

Failure to award any alimony is not necessarily an abuse of discretion. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 245 Miss. 370, 148 So. 2d 510, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 524 (Miss. 1963).

Court's power to award alimony does not extend to requiring husband to join wife in conveyance of jointly owned timber so that wife may receive the entire proceeds. Jones v. Jones, 234 Miss. 461, 106 So. 2d 134, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 518 (Miss. 1958).

Award of permanent alimony is discretionary with court. Winkler v. Winkler, 104 Miss. 1, 61 So. 1, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 3 (Miss. 1913); Yelverton v. Yelverton, 200 Miss. 569, 28 So. 2d 176, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 324 (Miss. 1946).

Matter of awarding alimony, both temporary and permanent, is largely within discretion of trial court, and is not subject to revision and correction on appeal unless it is erroneous on its face, or unjust to either party, or oppressive. Gresham v. Gresham, 198 Miss. 43, 21 So. 2d 414, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1945).

15. Alimony pendente lite.

The fact that a divorced plaintiff continued to live under the same roof with the defendant after filing the complaint is a heavy factor to be weighed in considering whether he or she has a valid cause, though it does not in and of itself compel a denial of divorce; it is conceivably possible for valid grounds for divorce to exist despite this. Lawyers representing persons seeking a divorce have the obligation to advise and warn them about the undesirability of continuing to live in the same household following the filing of the suit, and they have the obligation to seek and press for a temporary hearing before the chancellor to secure alimony pendente lite and temporary support money. Jethrow v. Jethrow, 571 So. 2d 270, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 700 (Miss. 1990).

Noncompliance with order to pay solicitors' fees and alimony pendente lite is ground for dismissal of appeal. Creel v. Creel, 29 So. 2d 838 (Miss. 1947).

Refusal to allow alimony pendente lite and attorney's fees to woman who married permanently insane person, when she knew he was in institution for insane, and did not live with such person for more than a few days, held not abuse of discretion. Parkinson v. Mills, 172 Miss. 784, 159 So. 651, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 128 (Miss. 1935).

Whether wife's bill presents cause for temporary alimony, whether she requires it, and husband's pecuniary circumstances are to be considered; wife's misconduct not subject of inquiry. Elam v. Elam, 129 Miss. 36, 91 So. 702, 1922 Miss. LEXIS 19 (Miss. 1922).

Where husband sues for divorce, on wife's bill for alimony and to set aside husband's fraudulent conveyance, she should be allowed attorney's fees and alimony pendente lite. McNeil v. McNeil, 127 Miss. 616, 90 So. 327, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 265 (Miss. 1922).

Wife not entitled to alimony pendente lite, where her estate sufficient. Evans v. Evans, 126 Miss. 1, 88 So. 481 (Miss. 1921).

In suit to annul defendant wife not entitled to temporary alimony unless marriage prima facie void. Sims v. Sims, 122 Miss. 745, 85 So. 73, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 474 (Miss. 1920).

16. Practice and procedure.

In a divorce case, a former husband's Sixth Amendment right to counsel was not triggered because he would not have lost his physical liberty if he had not prevailed in a temporary support hearing; the right was implicated in contempt proceedings, but the husband was represented by counsel during those hearings. Bougard v. Bougard, 991 So. 2d 646, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 578 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Record made it clear that the parties reached their property settlement agreement by and through the negotiations of their attorneys and the court was not persuaded that the language proposed by the former husband reflected the original intent of the parties; a thorough comparison of the documents provided in the record did not lend the court to agree with the husband's contention that the final agreement should have been reformed due to a mutual mistake to reflect the understanding and intent of the parties. Pratt v. Pratt, 977 So. 2d 386, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 606 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 977 So. 2d 343, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 94 (Miss. 2008).

When the chancellor, in the judgment of divorce, ordered the husband to pay rehabilitative alimony for six months and neither the husband nor the wife appealed, that judgment became final. The review provision was contained in the judgment of divorce, not in a separate temporary order, and the consequences flowing from the finality of that judgment were binding on both parties; thus, the chancellor erred in converting the rehabilitative alimony into permanent periodic alimony. Oster v. Oster, 876 So. 2d 428, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 377 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In wife's action for delinquent child support and delinquent spousal support, there were two judgments, an interim judgment, which did not mention the husband's motion for modification, and the final judgment which stated that the motion for modification was denied; applying Brennan v. Brennan, the appellate court held the entry of the latter judgment, effective retroactively to the former judgment, cleansed the husband's hands, since it was the first judgment that was entered after the trial court specifically refused to hear the husband's motion for modification due to the fact that the husband came into court with unclean hands. Cook v. Whiddon, 866 So. 2d 494, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 130 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a case involving a dispute over a lump sum alimony award, a chancery court should have considered the changed financial circumstances of the parties when the case was remanded for further proceedings. Haney v. Haney, 881 So. 2d 862, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1114 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 907 So. 2d 948, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 441 (Miss. 2005).

In a case involving a dispute over an alimony award, a chancery court erred in awarding attorney's fees to a former wife because the wife had the ability to pay the fees based on separate assets and an award of lump sum alimony. Haney v. Haney, 881 So. 2d 862, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1114 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 907 So. 2d 948, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 441 (Miss. 2005).

Where a case was remanded because the chancellor failed to make sufficient findings in support of his division and classification of marital property, the chancellor also had to revisit his award of permanent periodic alimony to the former wife, as equitable division and alimony were linked and when one expanded, the other had to recede. Lauro v. Lauro, 847 So. 2d 843, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 272 (Miss. 2003).

Chancellor abused her discretion by allowing a wife to put forward evidence of her need for temporary rehabilitative alimony, in order "to be fair to both parties and to do equity," where there had been no mention of alimony in the pre-trial statement. Singley v. Singley, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 283 (Miss. June 12, 2003).

A chancellor's determination that a wife was not entitled to periodic alimony was premature where the husband's principal asset was in bankruptcy, since the value of the husband's estate was not before the court due to the bankruptcy proceedings; the issue of periodic alimony should have remained in the trial court pending the conclusion of the bankruptcy proceedings. Heigle v. Heigle, 654 So. 2d 895, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 228 (Miss. 1995).

In a divorce case, there was no need for a chancellor to apply the factors under Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921 (Miss. 1994), or Armstrong v. Armstrong, 618 So. 2d 1278 (Miss. 1993), because the parties entered into settlement agreement regarding property division and alimony. Bougard v. Bougard, 991 So. 2d 646, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 578 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

An award of lump sum alimony was not beyond the scope of the pleadings, even though the complaint did not specifically request lump sum or periodic alimony, but instead requested permanent support and maintenance and other general relief, since the husband could not reasonably be said to have been surprised by the award of alimony in a divorce action. Crowe v. Crowe, 641 So. 2d 1100, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 378 (Miss. 1994).

A judgment of alimony was properly awarded, even though the original complaint was for separate maintenance and was not formally amended, where there was nothing inherent in the substance of the claim to prevent the separate maintenance action from being converted to one for alimony, and the issue of alimony was tried by consent. Weiss v. Weiss, 579 So. 2d 539, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1991).

A court's exercise of jurisdiction to determine alimony was not improper where the parties were previously granted a foreign divorce with reservation of the right to litigate alimony, and the statutory residency jurisdictional requirement was satisfied. Weiss v. Weiss, 579 So. 2d 539, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1991).

Where parties incomes were not sufficient to meet expenses at time of trial, Chancery Court should have retained jurisdiction over question of alimony and if at later date husband's dental practice became successful financially, court would have authority to award such alimony as may at that time be fair and equitable; in cases where facts do not justify present award of alimony, Chancery Court generally ought to retain jurisdiction over question of alimony, and need not award nominal alimony in order to allow for modification in event that earning power of one spouse increases. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Award to wife of alimony and child support where such is not sought in pleadings is error, because it deprives husband of due process, although such judgments are not void; therefore, where husband paid alimony and child support for 3 years before complaining about due process violation, decree is final and due process right has been waived. Miller v. Miller, 512 So. 2d 1286, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2815 (Miss. 1987).

In a divorce action instituted by a husband against his wife, provisions of the decree requiring the husband to furnish an automobile and to make mortgage payments would be upheld where these allowances were elements of child support, and the husband had injected the question of custody and support of the minor child in his original bill of complaint. Diamond v. Diamond, 403 So. 2d 129, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 2159 (Miss. 1981), but see Queen v. Queen, 551 So. 2d 197, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 363 (Miss. 1989).

II. CUSTODY.

17. In general.

Father did not make explicit charges of abuse or neglect against the mother, and the record did not support the mother's claim that the appointment of a guardian ad litem was mandatory; while the mother's residence was not an ideal living condition for the child, a report did not show that she was abused or neglected, nor did a doctor who treated the child find that she was abused or neglected, and the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in failing to appoint a guardian. The Court of Appeals' decision was overruled to the extent it announced a new standard requiring mandatory appointment of a guardian ad litem in child-custody proceedings. Carter v. Carter, 204 So. 3d 747, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 489 (Miss. 2016).

Chancellor did not err in choosing the guardian ad litem's alternative option of liberal visitation because it explained that the circumstances presented made alternating weeks too difficult. Sullivan v. Sullivan, 180 So. 3d 695, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 155 (Miss. Ct. App. 2015), cert. denied, 181 So. 3d 1010, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 13 (Miss. 2016).

Trial court had authority to award a mother sole legal and physical custody of the couple's two children even though a guardian ad litem had recommended that the husband and wife each have joint custody. Henderson v. Henderson, 952 So. 2d 273, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 869 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 951 So. 2d 563, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 165 (Miss. 2007).

Father who was awarded custody of the parties' son argued that the chancellor's award of the daughter's custody to the mother was clearly contrary to her best interest, primarily because of the mother's adulterous relationship. However, the record demonstrated that the chancellor had found that neither parent was unfit to have custody, that he considered the children's preferences, and that he had determined that given the age and sex of the children it would be beneficial for them to have respective male and female role models; thus, there was no manifest error. Sandlin v. Sandlin, 906 So. 2d 39, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 1115 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding primary physical custody of minor children to the mother because there was evidence in the record to support the findings that the continuity of care prior to the separation favored the mother because she had been the primary caretaker, and the mother's parenting skills favored her as well, and evidence raised by the father of the mother's gambling activities and relationships with other men did not demonstrate the mother's unfitness as a custodial parent; while there was evidence that tended to weigh in favor of the father's ability to be the preferred caregiver of the children, it was the trial court's duty to weigh the evidence, make witness credibility assessments, and reach a determination that best served the interests of the children, and because it appeared that this was done, the judgment was affirmed. Ivy v. Ivy, 863 So. 2d 1010, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 11 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

No indication existed that the chancellor considered the appointment of a guardian ad litem to be mandatory based on allegations of neglect or abuse of the child; Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23 afforded the chancellor some discretion in whether there was a legitimate issue of neglect or abuse, and the father's representations to the chancellor, even if exaggerated, were not so egregious as to render him unfit to serve as a custodial parent. Johnson v. Johnson, 872 So. 2d 92, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 370 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Because of the apparently limited assistance a guardian ad litem could have rendered, the chancellor's decision against making such an appointment did not constitute such an abuse of discretion as to constitute reversible error; the guardian ad litem would have considered the same information that was presented to the chancellor in open court and that would have offered an opinion as to what arrangement would best serve the child's interest. Loomis v. Bugg, 872 So. 2d 694, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 376 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

The chancellor erred in determining that he did not have the power to make a custody award to a stepparent and thus make no custody decision whatsoever even after expressly finding the natural parent unfit; where it is in the best interests of the child, temporary custody/guardianship should be given to a stepparent, until such time as the biological parent can be located and given proper notice. Logan v. Logan, 730 So. 2d 1124, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 626 (Miss. 1998).

In all child custody cases, polestar consideration is the best interest of the child. Touchstone v. Touchstone, 682 So. 2d 374, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 534 (Miss. 1996).

In all child custody cases, polestar consideration is best interest of child. Riley v. Doerner, 677 So. 2d 740, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 287 (Miss. 1996).

A court order requiring a custodial mother to obtain court approval before she could move her residence was erroneous and unenforceable. It is an incident of custody that the parent having physical custody provide a residence for the child where he or she thinks is appropriate; the location of this residence is a matter committed to the discretion of the custodial parent in the first instance. A court may only intervene where there has been a material change in circumstances which adversely affect the child and it is shown that the best interests of the child require a modification of custody; a change of residence is not per se a change of circumstance. Bell v. Bell, 572 So. 2d 841, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 582 (Miss. 1990), modified, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 869 (Miss. Dec. 12, 1990).

An award of child custody to the mother was not manifestly wrong, even though there was testimony that the children at times went unsupervised, where the court did not find that the mother was unfit to have the care and custody of the children. Martin v. Martin, 566 So. 2d 704, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 466 (Miss. 1990).

County agency had no duty, under due process clause of Federal Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment, to protect child against abuse by his father while child was in father's custody. DeShaney v. Winnebago County Dep't of Social Servs., 489 U.S. 189, 109 S. Ct. 998, 103 L. Ed. 2d 249, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1039 (U.S. 1989).

In a divorce suit wherein the husband answered and cross-claimed for divorce and for custody of the parties' minor child and, where in the interim, the child was found to be a neglected child while in mother's custody and custody was given to child's maternal grandfather by youth court referee, the chancellor, who, at the divorce hearing, refused to hear testimony on child's custody, left child in custody of maternal grandfather, and granted divorce on irreconcilable differences, was without authority to substitute youth court referee's judgment, and in so doing, he deprived natural father of right to be heard on the custody of his son. Keely v. Keely, 495 So. 2d 452, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2652 (Miss. 1986).

The object of any child custody and support decree is the accomplishment of that which is in the best interest of the child. Leonard v. Leonard, 486 So. 2d 1240, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2426 (Miss. 1986).

The trial court is authorized by this statute to reexamine the question of child custody or support at any time on a showing of changed circumstances, regardless of the pendency of an appeal. Smith v. Necaise, 357 So. 2d 931, 1978 Miss. LEXIS 2516 (Miss. 1978).

In arriving at the proper solution of a custodial problem the chancellor is in a particularly advantageous position, and under evidence in a proceeding to modify a final divorce decree as to custody of four minor children, the chancellor did not abuse his discretion in determining that both parents were personally unfit and unsuitable for custody, and in granting temporary care, custody, and control to the maternal grandparents, leaving the door open for the parents to come back into court if there should be a material change in their circumstances and if they should rehabilitate and prove themselves. Morris v. Morris, 245 So. 2d 22, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1350 (Miss. 1971).

The chancery court has the inherent power, and it is its duty, where the issue is before the court by proper pleadings, supported by competent evidence, in proceedings in which it has jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter, to make such orders and decrees from time to time as will protect and promote the best interest of minor children. Webb v. State, 186 So. 2d 462, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1311 (Miss. 1966).

The question of a child's custody is an issue of fact for the trial court. Rubisoff v. Rubisoff, 242 Miss. 225, 133 So. 2d 534, 1961 Miss. LEXIS 548 (Miss. 1961).

Subsequent abandonment of a child does not indicate fraud in obtaining an award of custody. Rubisoff v. Rubisoff, 242 Miss. 225, 133 So. 2d 534, 1961 Miss. LEXIS 548 (Miss. 1961).

The chancery court has a broad discretion in awarding custody of children. Brown v. Brown, 237 Miss. 53, 112 So. 2d 556, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 448 (Miss. 1959).

The chancery court has a broad discretion in determining the issue of custody of child in reference of what is best for the welfare of the child. Boswell v. Pope, 213 Miss. 31, 56 So. 2d 1, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1952).

Decree of chancery court awarding custody of children must be given due recognition and its provisions be protected against modification save by court which made initial award. Hinman v. Craft, 204 Miss. 568, 37 So. 2d 770, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 390 (Miss. 1948).

A decree of permanent custody cannot be made in vacation. Gordon v. Gordon, 196 Miss. 476, 17 So. 2d 191, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 217 (Miss. 1944).

Court can inquire into custody of child as between parents divorced in foreign state. Haynie v. Hudgins, 122 Miss. 838, 85 So. 99, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 481 (Miss. 1920).

The statute annuls the paramount right of the father, as it existed at the common law, to the custody of the children. Cocke v. Hannum, 39 Miss. 423, 1860 Miss. LEXIS 71 (Miss. 1860).

18. Factors in determining award of custody.

Substantial evidence supported the chancery court's decision to award the mother custody of the children because the chancery court provided a thorough analysis of the Albright factors and found that they favored awarding custody to the mother, and the mother had custody of the children's siblings. Miller v. Smith, 229 So. 3d 148, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 749 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016), aff'd, 229 So. 3d 100, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 427 (Miss. 2017).

Because the chancery court met the statutory requirements, it acted within its discretion in ruling contrary to the recommendation of the guardian ad litem (GAL); the chancery court based her decision on the testimony she heard during the trial and the reports detailing the child's interviews with police and the Mississippi Department of Human Services, and it specifically discussed the GAL's recommendation and its analysis under each of the Albright factors. Miller v. Smith, 229 So. 3d 148, 2016 Miss. App. LEXIS 749 (Miss. Ct. App. 2016), aff'd, 229 So. 3d 100, 2017 Miss. LEXIS 427 (Miss. 2017).

In a child custody dispute where a guardian ad litem was appointed after a mother raised allegations of child abuse, a chancellor was not required to accept the recommendations of the guardian ad litem that the mother receive primary physical custody of the children; the chancellor stated that he considered the recommendations, but determined that it was in the best interest of the children for the father to receive primary custody after considering the appropriate factors. Borden v. Borden, 130 So. 3d 1168, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 36 (Miss. Ct. App.), rev'd, 167 So. 3d 238, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 498 (Miss. 2014).

Chancellor erred by awarding a maternal grandmother custody of a child because the chancellor failed to apply the legal presumption that it was in the child's best interest for her father to have custody; the chancellor treated the particular custody battle as a modification, failing to recognize that the grandmother had no right to custody as against the father. Wilson v. Davis, 111 So. 3d 1280, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 222 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 181 So. 3d 991, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 4 (Miss. 2016).

Chancellor's judgment awarding the father primary physical custody of the three minor children was affirmed because: (1) the record reflected that the chancellor specifically considered the potential effect that the separation of the mother's child from a prior relationship from the other children might have had on the children, but she determined it did not outweigh the other factors favoring the father; (2) the chancellor did not err when she failed to provide the mother with the tender-years advantage with respect to the five-year old boy because she did specifically acknowledge the tender-years doctrine and cited case law addressing its diminished application; and (3) the chancellor's finding that the stability of home environment factor favored the father was supported by credible evidence that the father had maintained a stable routine and ensured the children were cared for by his mother while he was at work. Montgomery v. Montgomery, 20 So. 3d 39, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 663 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a custody proceeding, the chancellor properly considered the Albright factors because, inter alia, the mother testified concerning her home's close proximity to the child's school and the presence of family members who cared for the child while the mother was at work, and the chancellor concluded from the testimony that there was a strong relationship between the child and his half-sister and that any great reduction in his time with her would adversely impact the child. Collins v. Collins, 20 So. 3d 683, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 739 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), cert. denied, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 542 (Miss. Nov. 5, 2009).

Where a father was granted a divorce on the ground of adultery, substantial evidence supported the decision to grant the father custody of the parties' child because, inter alia, despite a temporary agreed order, the mother maintained a sexual relationship with a boyfriend throughout the trial and testified that the boyfriend regularly slept at the mother's house while the child was in the mother's custody. Thurman v. Johnson, 998 So. 2d 1026, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 523 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancellor did not err in failing to find a change in material circumstances sufficient to support a modification of a child custody agreement because even though there was evidence that the mother interfered with the father's visitation rights, there was also evidence that he had, to some degree, interfered with her rights as well. Bittick v. Bittick, 987 So. 2d 1058, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 402 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Chancellor, in awarding custody of a 20-month-old child to the child's father, did not give insufficient weight to the fact that the child was of tender years because: (1) the once strong presumption that a mother was generally best suited to raise a young child had been significantly weakened; and (2) the chancellor properly weighed the age of the child as he would any other factor. Klink v. Brewster, 986 So. 2d 1060, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 382 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

Trial court did not err in awarding father custody of parties' child as the mother failed to prove her allegations that the father had viewed pornography on family computers and had engaged in adultery; further, the mother had an unstable employment history, had admitted to committing adultery, and had a history of alcohol use and traffic violations. DeVito v. DeVito, 967 So. 2d 74, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 700 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Father alleged that the mother was morally unfit as a parent due to her relationship with a boyfriend and due to alleged drug abuse, but there was no substantial evidence that the mother used illegal drugs, but only that a boyfriend – who apparently was awaiting sentencing for a conviction – did so; also, in an effort to reduce the children's exposure to the mother's boyfriend, the mother was ordered not to have custody of her children in the presence of any male to whom she was not married or related between 10:30 p.m. and 7:00 a.m. on the following day. The chancellor made a reasonable analysis of the evidence, found the evidence raised concerns about the moral fitness of the mother, took steps to reduce the effect of those concerns, and on the balance found that the totality of the evidence supported giving custody to the children's mother. Ethridge v. Ethridge, 926 So. 2d 264, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 270 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Court properly awarded child custody to a mother because the child had lived in the mother's home his entire life, he did well in school there, the father was physically limited as to what he could do with the child, and there was nothing to indicate that separation from his sister would be in the child's best interest. Owens v. Owens, 950 So. 2d 202, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 750 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

In determining the best interest of two minor girls, a chancellor did not err by awarding legal and physical custody thereof to a father where the applicable factors demonstrated that the mother had used drugs and committed adultery; although the father's conduct was questionable as well, it was for the chancellor to weigh the evidence and judge credibility, and the other factors favored neither party. Bellais v. Bellais, 931 So. 2d 665, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 436 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancellor did not err in finding that a material change in circumstances had occurred when parties' daughter moved to Mississippi as both the mother and father stipulated to the fact that there was a material and substantial change in circumstances. Review of the Albright factors meant that the father was properly granted primary physical custody of children. Harper v. Harper, 926 So. 2d 253, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 263 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Chancellor's opinion devoted 29 pages to the Albright factors and gave the husband the benefit of all of the admissions arising from the wife's failure to respond under Miss. R. Civ. P. 36, absent the admission pertaining to the ultimate issue of the child's custody; therefore, the chancellor properly determined the best interests of the child. Gilcrease v. Gilcrease, 918 So. 2d 854, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 781 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

When considering the Albright factors upon the father's petition to change child custody, the chancellor properly found that the tender years doctrine weighed equally between the parties because the girls had recently lived with their father for two years. Glissen v. Glissen, 910 So. 2d 603, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 160 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Where the custody decision was a close call, the appellate court upheld the chancellor's decision to award child custody to the husband based on the following Albright factors: continuity of care; employment; moral fitness; stability of the home environment; and the home, school and community record of the child. Funderburk v. Funderburk, 909 So. 2d 1241, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 110 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor carefully considered the Albright factors and the best interest of the children in finding that the father was entitled to primary physical custody of the children, aged 3 and 14. While both parents had excellent parenting skills, the mother's occasional use of marijuana was troubling, as to her judgment, and the stability of the home environment and employment of each parent favored the father; moreover, even though one child was a child of "tender years," a factor slightly favoring the mother, the children had a strong emotional bond, and it was not in their best interest to be separated. Taylor v. Taylor, 909 So. 2d 1280, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 126 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Physical custody of an 18-month-old child was properly awarded to the husband in a divorce case because the trial court examined all of the applicable factors before determining that the father had the best parenting skills, his employment was more flexible, he provided more continuous care, and the sex of the child favored custody by the father; although the tender years doctrine slightly favored the mother, this was not a ground for reversal, and there was no rule that the best interest of the child was served by keeping siblings together. Copeland v. Copeland, 904 So. 2d 1066, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1490 (Miss. 2004).

Chancellor did not plainly err in her evaluation of the evidence and application of the Albright factors to determine that the best interest of the child would be served by the mother having primary custody; the evidence demonstrated that the mother was a good mother, and the stability of the home environment favored the mother. Bass v. Bass, 879 So. 2d 1122, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 775 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Chancery court did not make specific findings of fact concerning child custody; therefore, the appellate court had to remand for consideration of all the necessary factors and on-the-record factual findings. Franklin v. Franklin, 864 So. 2d 970, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 1113 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Father was properly awarded custody of parties' two minor boys because the Albright factors were properly considered, as both children were boys, and the compelling interest in keeping siblings together outweighed the "tender years" presumption; the father was involved in extracurricular activities and sports with the boys; and one of the children had a stronger bond with his father than his mother. Steverson v. Steverson, 846 So. 2d 304, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 457 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Chancellor did not err by awarding primary care of a minor child to a husband because the evidence showed that the husband had extended family to care for the child, and the child needed the guidance of his father; the parties' religious differences were irrelevant to the custody determination. Messer v. Messer, 850 So. 2d 161, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 542 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Chancellor improperly granted custody in favor of a mother where the evidence showed that the mother was unable to provide a stable environment for the child because of her medical condition; the chancellor also erroneous determined that the father was unable to provide daycare or housing and that the mother had provided continuous care for the child before the parties' divorce. Divers v. Divers, 856 So. 2d 370, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 194 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 614 (Miss. Nov. 6, 2003).

Custody decision reversed and remanded where chancellor failed to consider each of the factors set out in Albright v. Albright, 437 So. 2d 1003, 1005 (Miss. 1983) in both his oral statement and written order. Hamilton v. Hamilton, 755 So. 2d 528, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 696 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

There is no hard and fast rule that the best interest of siblings will be served by keeping them together. Bredemeier v. Jackson, 689 So. 2d 770, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1997).

A chancellor did not err in awarding permanent primary child custody to the mother, even though she had committed adultery and temporary custody had been awarded to the father, where the chancellor found that the mother had greater willingness and capacity to learn proper parenting skills, the father's psychological profile was potentially detrimental to the children, and "coaching" of the children had occurred while they were in the father's custody. Williams v. Williams, 656 So. 2d 325, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 280 (Miss. 1995).

The doctrine of unclean hands cannot override a chancellor's duty to award custody in the best interests of the child. Shelton v. Shelton, 653 So. 2d 283, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 150 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not abuse his discretion in awarding custody of a 14-year-old boy to his mother on the ground that the father was unfit to be a parent, even though the child testified that he preferred to live with his father, where the child's testimony indicated that his relationship with his mother would seriously deteriorate if he were allowed to live with his father, and the father had encouraged the child to ignore and disobey his mother, allowed him to chew tobacco and dip snuff, allowed him to ride a 4-wheeler without adult supervision, allowed him to carry and shoot a .357 magnum pistol without adult supervision, kept his supply of pornographic movies in the child's bedroom, told him he would buy the child a truck if he stayed with him after the divorce, and belittled his wife in the child's presence and encouraged the child to do the same. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

The presumption in favor of awarding custody of a child to a natural parent should prevail over any imperative regarding the separating of siblings. Sellers v. Sellers, 638 So. 2d 481, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 311 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor erred in awarding custody of a child to her maternal aunt rather than her father where there was no finding that the father was unfit to have custody of the child, and the main foundation for the ruling was the chancellor's concern about separating the child from her half-brother; while the separation of siblings may be an important consideration, it may not be used as a basis to deprive a parent of his or her child in favor of a third party unless the parent has been found to be unfit. Sellers v. Sellers, 638 So. 2d 481, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 311 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not err in awarding custody of a child to his father, even though the mother "may have presented enough evidence at trial to let one conclude that custody should have been awarded to her," where the weight of the evidence in favor of the mother was not so great as to make an award of custody to the father erroneous, the wife stated that the father was a good parent and that he and the child were close, and the only evidence of the father's alleged physical abuse of the child was the mother's uncorroborated testimony. Chamblee

v. Chamblee, 637 So. 2d 850, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not err in awarding physical custody of 2 minor children to their mother where the chancellor awarded the parents joint legal custody, both parents were found to be fit and proper parents, the mother was the primary caregiver though both parents played active parenting roles, the father had a work schedule based on 12-hour shifts and the only option he had considered for child care while he was at work was his elderly mother who had suffered a stroke, the father did not dispute the mother's ability to care for the children, and the father was given liberal visitation rights. Moak v. Moak, 631 So. 2d 196, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 44 (Miss. 1994).

An award of custody to the father based on the finding that the father was more morally fit than the mother to care for the child was erroneous to the extent that it was based on a finding of adultery by the wife where the evidence of adultery was neither clear nor convincing and did not rise above mere conjecture. McAdory v. McAdory, 608 So. 2d 695, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 600 (Miss. 1992).

A trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding custody of 2 minor children to their father, though both parents were suitable choices for custody, where the mother had previously "secreted the children" for approximately three weeks, and the father had possession of the parties' house which would give the children stability of the home environment and place them in familiar surroundings. Faries v. Faries, 607 So. 2d 1204, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 599 (Miss. 1992).

There was no abuse of discretion in visitation provisions which granted a father visitation with his 15-year-old son 7 days at Christmas and 2 weeks during the summer, "and such other visitation as could be worked out" between the father and son, where the father had voluntarily moved to another state which made regular visitation more difficult, the father chose to live in a home which was several levels below what he could actually afford and provided little or no testimony of features of the home which might be conducive to visitation, and the son testified that he disliked the father. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 579 So. 2d 543, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 236 (Miss. 1991).

A child custody agreement which provides that the child or children must until majority reside in a particular community, is contrary to the best interests of the children and should not be approved by the court. Such agreements that have been approved are unenforceable. It is presumptuous for anyone, court or otherwise, to declare as an absolute that it is in the best interest of a young child that he or she spend his or her entire minority in a single community. Thus, courts may not require that children be reared in a single community come what may, and divorcing parents may not make such agreements which courts are obligated to enforce. Chancery courts must refuse to approve any child custody agreement presented under § 93-5-2 or otherwise which mandates, without exception, that children be raised in a given community. Such agreements do not make "adequate and sufficient" provisions for the care and maintenance of children. Bell v. Bell, 572 So. 2d 841, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 582 (Miss. 1990), modified, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 869 (Miss. Dec. 12, 1990).

A mother was unfit to have custody of her children where she had used marijuana in the children's presence, she sometimes slept until 11:00 a.m. and the children would already be outside, unsupervised, by that time, and there was testimony that the children had not been adequately fed or clothed and that there had been a resulting deleterious effect on their health. White v. Thompson, 569 So. 2d 1181, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 631 (Miss. 1990).

In order to overcome the presumption that best interest of child will be served by child being in custody of his or her natural parent as against third party, there must be a clear showing that the natural parent has (1) abandoned the child; (2) the conduct of the parent is so immoral as to be detrimental to child; or (3) that the parent is unfit mentally or otherwise to have custody. Keely v. Keely, 495 So. 2d 452, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2652 (Miss. 1986).

Award of custody of children to husband is not impermissibly based solely on wife's adultery where chancellor looks to work schedules, life styles, and other criteria and, while finding that no special circumstances exist to justify granting custody to adulterous mother, considers adultery as but one factor in overall consideration. Carr v. Carr, 480 So. 2d 1120, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2379 (Miss. 1985).

In determining relative fitness of parents to be awarded custody of child, adultery may be unwholesome influence and impairment to child's best interest or may have no effect; this factor should be considered by trial court along with all others when making original custody determinations; marital fault should not be used as sanction in custody award. Carr v. Carr, 480 So. 2d 1120, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2379 (Miss. 1985).

Offshore oil workers, truck drivers, and other persons whose professions require them to be away from home for extended periods of time are not to be deprived of custody of children on that basis. Smith v. Todd, 464 So. 2d 1155, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 1924 (Miss. 1985).

That which will promote the best interest of the children is the criterion by which an award of custody should be made, and the problem of what is to the best interest of a child must be solved by a consideration of the relative fitness and ability of each parent to discharge the duties of nurture, maintenance, education, and training. Hodge v. Hodge, 186 So. 2d 748, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1326 (Miss. 1966).

In awarding the custody of a minor child, the welfare and the best interests of such child are of chief importance and of prime consideration. Cassell v. Cassell, 211 Miss. 841, 52 So. 2d 918, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 1951); Neal v. Neal, 238 Miss. 572, 119 So. 2d 273, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 440 (Miss. 1960).

In considering the child's custody the paramount consideration is the child's welfare and a chancery court has a broad discretion in determining the factual issue. Bland v. Stoudemire, 219 Miss. 526, 69 So. 2d 225, 1954 Miss. LEXIS 359 (Miss. 1954).

Child's welfare is paramount consideration. Haynie v. Hudgins, 122 Miss. 838, 85 So. 99, 1920 Miss. LEXIS 481 (Miss. 1920).

Common law right of father to custody of children modified so that now best interest of child is prime consideration. Duncan v. Duncan, 119 Miss. 271, 80 So. 697, 1918 Miss. LEXIS 34 (Miss. 1919).

19. Mother's right to custody.

Upon the parties' divorce, the chancellor properly applied the Albright factors in awarding the wife custody over their daughter; the wife was the better choice with regard to the children's continuity of care, her willingness and capacity to provide primary child care, the employment and employment responsibilities of the parents, and the home, school, and community record of the children. As a part-time truck driver, the husband's schedule was unpredictable and stressful; the wife's adultery did not affect her parental responsibilities. Brock v. Brock, 906 So. 2d 879, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 241 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor did not err by not applying the "tender years" doctrine, because chancellors were required to weigh a number of factors, of which age was only one, and manifest error did not arise simply from failing to give custody of children of tender years to their mother. Steverson v. Steverson, 846 So. 2d 304, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 457 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Custody of children may not be awarded solely on basis of tender age of children. Pellegrin v. Pellegrin, 478 So. 2d 306, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2286 (Miss. 1985).

Where it is clearly to the best interest of a child to remain with the mother, it may be proper to grant custody to the mother even though she may have been found guilty of adultery. Yates v. Yates, 284 So. 2d 46, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1240 (Miss. 1973).

Where a divorce was granted husband on grounds of his wife's adultery and drunkenness, temporary custody of children 5 and 8 years of age was awarded to the husband on showing that they would be properly cared for. Nix v. Nix, 253 Miss. 565, 176 So. 2d 297, 1965 Miss. LEXIS 1013 (Miss. 1965).

When a divorce has been properly granted because of the adultery of the wife, she is not entitled either to alimony or to the custody of the children. Keyes v. Keyes, 252 Miss. 138, 171 So. 2d 489, 1965 Miss. LEXIS 1084 (Miss. 1965).

A husband acquiescing in an award of custody of a child to the wife, knowing her to be a narcotics addict, cannot be heard to say that the award was obtained by fraud. Rubisoff v. Rubisoff, 242 Miss. 225, 133 So. 2d 534, 1961 Miss. LEXIS 548 (Miss. 1961).

In a habeas corpus proceeding by a mother against the paternal aunt and paternal grandparents seeking custody of two children awarded to the mother by a prior divorce decree, trial court committed reversible error in suppressing affidavits of nonresident witnesses whose attendance could not be procured, and awarding mother custody of the children, without hearing evidence as to changed conditions and circumstances since the divorce decree, pertaining to abandonment, neglect, and alleged moral unfitness of the mother. Neal v. Neal, 238 Miss. 572, 119 So. 2d 273, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 440 (Miss. 1960).

The chancery court has a broad discretion in awarding custody of children, which, however, is to be exercised in the light of the rule that custody of children of tender years should be awarded to the mother. Brown v. Brown, 237 Miss. 53, 112 So. 2d 556, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 448 (Miss. 1959).

Where the wife was entitled to a divorce from the husband on grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, and there was no proof of any immoral conduct on her part, the wife, as natural mother, was entitled to the custody of two minor children of the marriage as against their natural father, and their paternal grandparents, or either of them. Thames v. Thames, 233 Miss. 24, 100 So. 2d 868, 1958 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1958), but see Cheatham v. Cheatham, 537 So. 2d 435, 1988 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1988).

Where decree of divorce in favor of husband was sustainable on ground of wife's adultery, award of alimony and custody of the youngest of three children, aged six years, to the wife was wholly reversed and vacated and a decree entered awarding the custody of the children to the father, leaving the privilege of visitation to the children open for the chancellor to determine on remand. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss.

391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

When divorce has been properly granted because of the adultery of the wife, she is not entitled either to alimony or to the custody of the children, save temporarily as to an infant so young as not to permit separation from its mother, and save in exceptional circumstances. Winfield v. Winfield, 203 Miss. 391, 35 So. 2d 443, 1948 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1948).

20. Jurisdiction.

Although the chancellor initially granted the mother's motion to terminate the father's parental rights, the Hinds County Chancery Court did not have proper subject matter jurisdiction to do so because the Scott County Chancery Court entered the initial order of child custody; when presented with information regarding the jurisdictional problem, the chancellor immediately corrected the defect by setting aside his previous orders and instructing that any further proceedings regarding the case be brought before the Scott County Chancery Court, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23. C.M. v. R.D.H., 947 So. 2d 1023, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 29 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

In a child custody case where the mother chose to move the child to a new area that "coincidentally" happened to be in another state and under the same roof of a man who had been found by a chancellor to have abused her child, the court-ordered restriction upon removing the child from the trial court's jurisdiction was both valid and enforceable. Allen v. Williams, 914 So. 2d 254, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 518 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Chancellor who had proper jurisdiction over divorce action was also authorized, pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23, to make any appropriate custodial and support arrangements for the minor children. Scally v. Scally, 802 So. 2d 128, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 545 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The chancery judge who has in personam jurisdiction over the parties of the marriage may deal not only with divorce but also with care, custody (which includes visitation) and maintenance (support) of the children. Peters v. Peters, 744 So. 2d 803, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 147 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

The youth court had exclusive jurisdiction to determine custody and visitation rights with respect to an abused child even though the youth court order was in direct conflict with a chancery court order in the parents' divorce proceedings which were being conducted concurrently with the youth court proceedings. D. L. D. v. Wilkinson County, 606 So. 2d 1125, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 543 (Miss. 1992).

Continuing and exclusive nature of chancery court jurisdiction over issues involving child custody precludes Youth Court from having exclusive original jurisdiction over proceedings involving abused child, where allegations of abuse are raised in context of custody proceeding over which chancery court already exercises jurisdiction. Rights of minor child suspected of having been sexually abused by parent, to access to court, were not impaired by chancery court's considering allegations of sexual abuse without referring matter to Youth Court; and even though Youth Court statute provided for exercise of exclusive jurisdiction over child abuse cases, such provision was not applicable to charges raised in case over which chancery court had already assumed and was exercising jurisdiction. Chrissy F. v. Mississippi Dep't of Public Welfare, 780 F. Supp. 1104, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17998 (S.D. Miss. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 995 F.2d 595, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 16843 (5th Cir. Miss. 1993).

Chancery court has exclusive and continuing jurisdiction over custody proceedings, and may issue subsequent modifications to one of its decrees as material change in circumstances may warrant. Chrissy F. v. Mississippi Dep't of Public Welfare, 780 F. Supp. 1104, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17998 (S.D. Miss. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 995 F.2d 595, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 16843 (5th Cir. Miss. 1993).

Although custody of a child may be awarded in a habeas corpus proceeding, support for the child and visitation rights of the parties may not be determined in the habeas corpus court. Thus, Chancery Court did not have continuing jurisdiction over child by virtue of decree previously rendered by it in habeas corpus proceeding. Roach v. Lang, 396 So. 2d 11, 1981 Miss. LEXIS 1976 (Miss. 1981).

Where the chancery court had granted a divorce and had granted custody of the children to the mother, it had continuing jurisdiction to act on a subsequent petition to modify the divorce decree as to custody, even though in the interim the youth court had stepped in to deal with a temporary emergency situation. Morris v. Morris, 245 So. 2d 22, 1971 Miss. LEXIS 1350 (Miss. 1971).

Exclusive jurisdiction of the custody of children as between their parents is vested in the chancery court in which the original divorce decree was entered, and as between the parties the youth court of another county had no authority to change or modify the chancery court's decree awarding custody. Ladner v. Ladner, 206 So. 2d 620, 1968 Miss. LEXIS 1577 (Miss. 1968).

The proper venue for a habeas corpus proceeding by a mother to obtain custody of her children from the father was in the county where the children resided in the custody of the father, rather than in the county where the decree, largely giving custody to the mother, was entered. Logan v. Rankin, 230 Miss. 749, 94 So. 2d 330, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 1957).

Where the father invoked the jurisdiction of a Texas court to obtain custody of his children, after the mother, to whom custody had been largely awarded by the Mississippi court, had taken the children to that state, the judgment of the Texas court, awarding exclusive custody of the children to the mother, superseded the earlier decree of the Mississippi court, and was entitled to full faith and credit, and was res adjudicata of the facts and circumstances existing at the time of the rendition of the judgment. Logan v. Rankin, 230 Miss. 749, 94 So. 2d 330, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 419 (Miss. 1957).

The chancery court in granting a divorce is authorized to make such orders touching the care, custody and maintenance of the children of the marriage as may seem equitable and just and where the chancery court makes no order of custody, the county court has jurisdiction to issue writ of habeas corpus and to determine the rightful custody of the minor. Payne v. Payne, 58 So. 2d 377 (Miss. 1952).

No adjudication will be made in divorce action as to custody of minor child of parties when child is beyond jurisdiction of court. Kincaid v. Kincaid, 207 Miss. 692, 43 So. 2d 108, 1949 Miss. LEXIS 380 (Miss. 1949).

Jurisdiction of divorced husband's petition for permanent care and custody of minor child then in custody of such husband, in which proceedings divorced wife was summoned but did not appear, was properly declined by chancery court, since proceeding was merely advisory and not adversary. Bobo v. Christian, 199 Miss. 433, 25 So. 2d 325, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 214 (Miss. 1946).

While the general rule is that in order for a decree or judgment awarding the custody of children to be valid, the child or children must be within the territorial jurisdiction of the court, their removal from the jurisdiction prior to decree after the court has once acquired jurisdiction of such children does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to fix their custody. Cole v. Cole, 194 Miss. 292, 12 So. 2d 425, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 71 (Miss. 1943).

21. Practice and procedure.

Chancery court did not err in failing to appoint a guardian ad litem, sua sponte, to investigate a father's allegations of neglect because the allegations were either not severe enough to require investigation or were adequately investigated by an agent of the court who acted as a guardian ad litem in all but name, the agent, the parties, and the court all seemed to have understood the agent to have been assigned to act as a neutral, investigative agent for the court, and, while the mother's home environment could have had some harmful effects on the child and the father was more attendant to her care, a pediatric endocrinologist found no evidence that the child was abused or neglected. Carter v. Carter, 204 So. 3d 803, 2015 Miss. App. LEXIS 687 (Miss. Ct. App. 2015), aff'd on other grounds, 204 So. 3d 747, 2016 Miss. LEXIS 489 (Miss. 2016).

Chancellor erred in not providing a summary of the guardian ad litem's recommendation and a summary of why the chancellor rejected that recommendation where the chancellor only acknowledged the guardian ad litem's recommendation in awarding custody. Borden v. Borden, 167 So. 3d 238, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 498 (Miss. 2014).

Chancellor made a determination that it was in the best interest of the child that her primary custody be placed with her grandmother, but with the mother continuing to have a role in the child's life. The chancellor specifically noted and gave proper consideration to a guardian ad litem's recommendation, and he stated why he felt the best interest of the child required that that the child's grandmother have primary custody. McCraw v. Buchanan, 10 So. 3d 979, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 242 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

In a custody proceeding, the chancellor properly considered all of the evidence before it in rendering the custody decision, including findings of the guardian ad litem, because the guardian ad litem made no custody recommendation; the only recommendation that the guardian ad litem made to the court was that there were no grounds for finding any abuse of the child. That was reflected in the chancellor's divorce decree, which stated that there was insufficient proof of child abuse. Collins v. Collins, 20 So. 3d 683, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 739 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), cert. denied, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 542 (Miss. Nov. 5, 2009).

Chancellor did not commit reversible error by not following the recommendation of the child's guardian ad litem because she found that the guardian ad litem considered only the isolated incident in which the father physically harmed the child and not all of the times the child witnessed the abuse of her mother and because the guardian failed to recognize Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-24(9). J.P. v. S.V.B., 987 So. 2d 975, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 394 (Miss. 2008).

Although the trial court retained jurisdiction over the case in order to review custody before the child was to begin attending school, the trial court's custody determination was a final order that was appealable under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23; like many kinds of domestic relations orders, custody orders were permitted to be modified at any time, but such orders were considered final and appealable. Crider v. Crider, 905 So. 2d 706, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 757 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), rev'd, 904 So. 2d 142, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 222 (Miss. 2005).

A mother's contention on appeal that the appointment of a guardian ad litem in a custody proceeding was improper was erroneous where both parties agreed to the appointment of the guardian ad litem. Foster v. Foster, 788 So. 2d 779, 2000 Miss. App. LEXIS 472 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A child custody order awarding the father custody of the parties' 2 children would be vacated where the mother did not have sufficient time to prepare for 2 adverse witnesses and the custody question was extremely close, so that the mother's lack of an opportunity to prepare for the witnesses could have affected the evidence presented and, necessarily, the chancellor's decision. Schepens v. Schepens, 592 So. 2d 108, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 983 (Miss. 1991).

The court may decree custody of the children even though there is no express prayer therefor. Dickerson v. Dickerson, 245 Miss. 370, 148 So. 2d 510, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 524 (Miss. 1963).

In all cases except where a divorce is granted, or separate maintenance is decreed, the right to the custody of children must be determined on habeas corpus and where the court dismissed the husband's divorce action on the ground that wife's prior divorce was valid, it was not error for the court not to retain the bill to determine the question of custody. Payne v. Payne, 213 Miss. 815, 58 So. 2d 9, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 430 (Miss. 1952).

Custody of children may be awarded notwithstanding prayer for divorce is denied, custody not being dependent on decree of divorce. Davis v. Davis, 194 Miss. 343, 12 So. 2d 435, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 75 (Miss. 1943).

Remarriage of a divorced wife entitled the divorced husband to a reassignment of a policy of insurance on his life, assigned by him to her under the alimony provisions of a divorce decree, requiring such assignment for the evident purpose of protecting her against failure of alimony payments by the death of the husband, since under the divorce decree the divorced wife did not receive absolute ownership of the policy. East v. Collins, 194 Miss. 281, 12 So. 2d 133, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 1943).

III. SUPPORT OF CHILDREN.

22. In general.

Chancellor did not err in concluding that there was no showing that the mental and emotional well-being of the child was in danger in the mother's care; the mother removed the conditions in the home that could have had an adverse effect on the child had they been allowed to continue. Ruth v. Burchfield, 23 So. 3d 600, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 928 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Trial court erred in ordering a divorced father to reimburse the mother's expenses for attorney fees to defend their child in a murder trial; the supreme court found no provisions within Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23 or Miss. Code Ann. § 93-11-65 that could be extended to payment of criminal defense expenses, which in the supreme court's view, did not fit under the general provisions of maintenance, support, or education for a child. Edmonds v. Edmonds, 935 So. 2d 980, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 383 (Miss. 2006).

Trial court's determination that a twenty-year-old child was emancipated for purposes of a divorce action, despite the fact that the child met none of the three legal requirements listed in Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23 for emancipation, was harmless error; the child continued to live with his father until after his twenty-first birthday, and the father did not ask for child support in his pleadings or at trial. Ward v. Ward, 825 So. 2d 713, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 502 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the former husband was entitled to a credit for the amount he paid as child support past the time his oldest child turned 21-years-old as the former husband's duty of support terminated by operation of law at the time the older child turned 21-years-old. Houck v. Houck, 812 So. 2d 1139, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 111 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

When the equitable distribution of property acquired during the marriage is accomplished, the resultant division of assets and liabilities must be factored into the determination of other financial matters such as alimony and child support. Bennett v. Bennett, 650 So. 2d 517, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 86 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor erred in ordering a father to pay child support without taking into consideration all the relevant factors, including the father's ability to pay and the mother's income. Powell v. Powell, 644 So. 2d 269, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 627 (Miss. 1994).

A disabled child's receipt of Supplemental Security Income from the Social Security Administration does not reduce parental support obligations. Hammett v. Woods, 602 So. 2d 825, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 299 (Miss. 1992).

The conveyance of a former wife's interest in her residence to her former husband for a cash payment and mortgage assumption was a "sale" within the meaning of a property settlement agreement which was incorporated into the parties' final divorce decree, which provided that the former husband would continue to pay $350 per month toward the housing expenses of the parties' 2 minor children in the event the parties sold the residence. Thus, the former husband's obligation to provide financially for the housing expenses of his 2 children continued, in spite of his argument that his housing support obligation terminated because the transaction was not a "sale" within the meaning of the agreement in that it was not a sale to a third party. Webster v. Webster, 566 So. 2d 214, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 530 (Miss. 1990).

Social Security benefits received by a mother for the benefit of a minor child under the Social Security Act are considered an alternative source of payment that satisfies child support and should be credited toward that obligation. Moreover, child support obligations are to be off-set, not only to the extent of payments actually received under the Social Security Act, but also for payments that the child was entitled to receive, based on the parent's retirement. Thus, a father's child support obligations would be credited for social security benefits that the minor child was entitled to receive based on the father's retirement, even though social security benefits were elected based on the child's step-father's retirement. Bradley v. Holmes, 561 So. 2d 1034, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1990).

Under § 93-5-23 and § 93-11-65, regular child support is but one type of expense which the court may award for the care and maintenance of children. Regular child support refers to the sums of money which the particular parent is ordered to pay for the child's basic, necessary living expenses, namely food, clothing and shelter. Other sums which a parent may be ordered to pay for the care and maintenance of the child are the expenses of a college or other advanced education. Other items which may properly be awarded pursuant to a valid child care and maintenance order are health related expenses such as reasonable and necessary medical, dental, optical, and psychiatric/psychological expenses. A parent can also be required to absorb insurance expenses such as maintaining medical and hospitalization insurance on the child, and maintaining a life insurance policy on his or her own life with the child named as beneficiary. Additionally, a trial court may require a parent to furnish an automobile and make mortgage payments as part of an award for the care and maintenance of children. The foregoing items are not an exclusive listing, but are merely examples of the real distinction between regular child support and other types of payments for which the parent may become obligated under the terms of a valid child care and maintenance order under §§ 93-5-23 and 93-11-65. Nichols v. Tedder, 547 So. 2d 766, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1989).

The object of any child custody and support decree is the accomplishment of that which is in the best interest of the child. Leonard v. Leonard, 486 So. 2d 1240, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2426 (Miss. 1986).

Duty of parent to support children after divorce is not affected by fact that parent adopted children of other spouse 3 months prior to spouse's separation from parent. Adams v. Adams, 467 So. 2d 211, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 1979 (Miss. 1985).

A trial court may, within the sound discretion of the chancellor, require contribution from the wife toward the support and maintenance of minor children of the marriage. McInnis v. McInnis, 227 So. 2d 116, 1969 Miss. LEXIS 1335 (Miss. 1969).

A father is primarily required by law to support and maintain his children. King v. King, 191 So. 2d 409, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1213 (Miss. 1966).

After a decree awarding a divorce and custody of children of the marriage, the court may from time to time make decrees in regard to the maintenance of the children. Crum v. Upchurch, 232 Miss. 74, 94 So. 2d 321, 98 So. 2d 117, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 446, 1957 Miss. LEXIS 447 (Miss. 1957).

It is the duty of a father to support his minor child even though it is not in his custody, but that of the mother. Lide v. Lide, 201 Miss. 849, 30 So. 2d 51, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 455 (Miss. 1947).

The obligation of a father to pay child support money under a divorce decree, in the absence of a change in the decree, is not relieved by misconduct of the child's mother which might be violative of the decree. Lide v. Lide, 201 Miss. 849, 30 So. 2d 51, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 455 (Miss. 1947).

In divorce proceeding court had power to enter decree requiring that divorced father pay specified sum monthly to divorced mother for support of the parties' child. Collins v. Collins, 171 Miss. 891, 158 So. 914, 1935 Miss. LEXIS 21 (Miss. 1935).

Duty of father to support children, whose custody awarded to wife, remains and divorced wife may recover such support from him. Lee v. Lee, 135 Miss. 865, 101 So. 345, 1924 Miss. LEXIS 89 (Miss. 1924).

It is parent's duty to support infant child. Rawlings v. Rawlings, 121 Miss. 140, 83 So. 146, 1919 Miss. LEXIS 155 (Miss. 1919).

23. Amount of support.

Appellate court could not find that a chancellor exceeded the authority given to the chancellor by the parties in a divorce by assigning responsibility for the expenses associated with a minor child's car(automobile tag, maintenance and insurance) to the father. Griner v. Griner,—So. 3d —, 2017 Miss. App. LEXIS 388 (Miss. Ct. App. June 27, 2017).

In calculating child support, the trial court abused its discretion in attributing any future rental income to the husband, as it had awarded the rental property to the wife. Collins v. Collins, 112 So. 3d 428, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 2013).

In calculating child support, the trial court erred in arbitrarily determining a husband's monthly income to exclusion of the undisputed evidence he provided, due to his failure to comply with Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 8.05, because the remedy for his violation was to hold him in contempt, not to disregard the credible evidence he provided. Collins v. Collins, 112 So. 3d 428, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 2013).

Chancellor properly declined to apply the child support guidelines because the husband had no employment income, due to his incarceration; but as he had other assets, including half the equity in the marital home, the chancellor properly ordered him to pay $ 225 per month in child support, plus support retroactive to the date of his incarceration, secured by a lien against his interest in the marital home. Avery v. Avery, 864 So. 2d 1054, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 91 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Circumstances affecting child support include parents' health, income sources, income tax obligations, and earning capacities, child's reasonable needs, obligee's reasonable needs, obligor's necessary living expenses, and other relevant facts and circumstances shown by the evidence. Bredemeier v. Jackson, 689 So. 2d 770, 1997 Miss. LEXIS 77 (Miss. 1997).

A $350 per month award to be paid by a father for the support of his 3 children was manifestly erroneous where the father's adjusted gross income based on his salary, which was his only significant and reliable source of income, was approximately $2,350 per month, the guidelines set forth in § 99-19-101 suggested that he should pay $495 per month in child support, and the chancellor failed to make a specific finding on the record that application of the statutory guidelines would be unjust or inappropriate. Draper v. Draper, 658 So. 2d 866, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 362 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not err in deviating from the child support guidelines set forth in § 43-19-101 when determining the amount of support to be paid by a father where she stated her reasons for departing from the guidelines, including the fact that there was "considerable question as to the actual earnings" of the father. Grogan v. Grogan, 641 So. 2d 734, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not abuse her discretion in ordering a father to pay $600 per month for the support of 2 children, in spite of the father's argument that $600 per month constituted 27.5 percent of his adjusted gross income which was 7.5 percent greater than the percentage suggested by the statutory guidelines, where the mother's monthly net income was $1,168, her monthly expenses were $2,225, the chancellor was skeptical as to the father's true earnings, and the evidence suggested that the father had some alternative source of support that he had not disclosed. Grogan v. Grogan, 641 So. 2d 734, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor did not abuse his discretion in ordering a father to pay $300 in child support for his 14-year-old son, in spite of the father's argument that the amount was excessive because it exceeded 14 percent of his adjusted gross income which was above the statutory guidelines for one child set forth in § 43-19-101, where the record indicated that the father would be able to support himself as well as pay child support in the amount awarded. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor erred in awarding child support to be paid by the father in the amount of $1,000 per month where the father earned approximately $8,000 per month, and it appeared that the chancellor had used $4,155 as the figure for the father's. Brennan v. Brennan, 638 So. 2d 1320, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 331 (Miss. 1994).

A child support award to be paid by a mother for the support of one child was not excessive where the mother's income was almost triple that of the father's, and the chancellor followed the guidelines set out in § 43-19-101 and awarded the 14 percent of adjusted gross income suggested by the statute for the support of a single child. Chamblee v. Chamblee, 637 So. 2d 850, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1994).

A child support award would be reversed and remanded where the award was greater than the amount recommended by the guidelines in § 43-19-101, the chancellor did not make a specific finding as to the father's income or make any reference to the statutory child support guidelines, and the final decree did not indicate the basis for the child support award. Dufour v. Dufour, 631 So. 2d 192, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 41 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor abused his discretion in ordering a father to pay child support in the amount of $520 per month where, pursuant to the guidelines set forth in § 43-19-101, the child support should have been $362 per month, and the father's expenses exceeded his net income by almost $250 a month. Dunn v. Dunn, 609 So. 2d 1277, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 785 (Miss. 1992).

Although a chancellor's award of child support to be paid by a father was not, standing alone, an abuse of discretion, the amount awarded for child support was an abuse of discretion when considered in conjunction with the alimony award and the income of the father. McEachern v. McEachern, 605 So. 2d 809, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 479 (Miss. 1992).

A chancellor's departure from the guidelines set forth in § 43-19-101 in determining an appropriate amount of child support was not error where the chancellor followed the statutory method of rebutting the presumption that 26 percent of the father's adjusted gross income was the appropriate amount of child support, and the record included a written finding, as required by § 43-19-103, that the guidelines were inappropriate in that particular case. McEachern v. McEachern, 605 So. 2d 809, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 479 (Miss. 1992).

It was not error for a trial court to consider a father's overtime pay in measuring his earning capacity to determine an appropriate child support award where the trial court considered overtime in determining both parents' earning capacity, the father had worked overtime consistently for two years and had practically doubled his base salary, and the award was not of such an amount as to create the belief that the trial court gave undue weight to the father's overtime income. Gillespie v. Gillespie, 594 So. 2d 620, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1992).

A provision in a child support decree ordering an automatic $50 per month increase in child support when the child started kindergarten was improper where there was no evidence that kindergarten would cost more than what was previously being spent; if the automatic increase was a modification, it was improper since a modification can result only from substantial and material changes that follow the decree to be modified, and the automatic increase lacked the specificity required for an escalation clause since the specific basis for the calculation of the increase was not provided. Gillespie v. Gillespie, 594 So. 2d 620, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1992).

Section 43-19-101, which sets forth child support award guidelines, is only a guideline and may not determine the specific need or the specific support required; the determination of the amount of support needed must be made by a chancellor who hears all the facts, views the witnesses, and is informed at trial of the circumstances of the parties and particularly the circumstances of the child. Gillespie v. Gillespie, 594 So. 2d 620, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 67 (Miss. 1992).

A chancellor erred in disallowing interest on past due child support payments, and judgment would be entered for interest at the rate of 8 percent per annum on the past due amount of child support. Adams v. Adams, 591 So. 2d 431, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 843 (Miss. 1991).

A child support award of $325 per month was not so high as to constitute reversible error where the mother's adjusted monthly gross income was between $2100 and $2265, the father, who had custody of the child, performed many in-kind services for the child, and the mother had paid no direct support for the child for a minimum of 5 years. Smith v. Smith, 585 So. 2d 750, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 582 (Miss. 1991).

A child support award of $400 per month for one 6-year-old child was excessive where the father, who had custody of the child, only asked for $100 per month in child support, the chancellor recognized that $400 per month was not required at the time for child support, and both parents had approximately the same earnings. The chancellor should have considered the amount of money which reasonably should have been required in child support from each parent, but apparently considered only the guidelines developed by the Governor's Commission on Child Support. Jellenc v. Jellenc, 567 So. 2d 847, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 561 (Miss. 1990).

A child support award ordering a father to pay $400 per month in child support, to maintain medical and hospitalization insurance on the children, to be responsible for ½ of all reasonable and necessary medical bills not covered by insurance, and to pay ½ of the taxes and insurance on the marital home and real property was excessive where the father's gross income was $1,386, his net income was $973.60, he was ordered to pay several debts accumulated during the marriage, and he had to incur separate living expenses for himself as a result of the divorce. Cupit v. Cupit, 559 So. 2d 1035, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 190 (Miss. 1990).

Award of $300 per month child support was not against overwhelming weight of evidence based on facts and circumstances of case. McNally v. McNally, 516 So. 2d 499, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2956 (Miss. 1987).

Mother, who received full child support during time she had custody of the parties' child, and who did not complain when child moved in with father, and accepted the arrangement for 20 months with $200 a month child support being paid directly to the child by the father, was not entitled to $4,000 back child support with interest, as this would constitute a windfall to her forbidden by equity and good conscience. Alexander v. Alexander, 494 So. 2d 365, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2644 (Miss. 1986).

24. Education expenses.

Though there was no evidence as what portion of the parties' daughter's educational loans was spent before she turned 21, the chancellor did not err in ordering the father to pay 65 percent of the loans. Wooldridge v. Wooldridge, 856 So. 2d 446, 2003 Miss. App. LEXIS 279 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, 864 So. 2d 282, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 52 (Miss. 2004).

The court did not err in ordering the wealthy parents of a college-bound child to pay the costs of her college education without requiring the child to pay some or all of her expenses from her own substantial estate. Saliba v. Saliba, 753 So. 2d 1095, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 2000).

The court did not err in ordering the wealthy parents of a college-bound child to pay equal shares of her college expenses, notwithstanding the father's assertion that the wife's wealth was triple that of his own, where both parents had more than ample financial ability to pay for their child's college education. Saliba v. Saliba, 753 So. 2d 1095, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 2000).

It was not error for the trial court to order the father of a college-bound child to pay half of her college expenses, including out-of-state tuition, sorority expenses and car insurance in light of the father's wealth and the absence of any hardhip caused by such order. Saliba v. Saliba, 753 So. 2d 1095, 2000 Miss. LEXIS 35 (Miss. 2000).

A father was not entitled to credit against past due child support payments for the sum of $1,301.24, which he had deposited in his daughter's bank account from which she paid her educational expenses at college, where the original divorce decree provided for child support payments to be made in addition to any educational expenses. Adams v. Adams, 591 So. 2d 431, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 843 (Miss. 1991).

A trial court's finding that a daughter was not emancipated despite the fact that she was 22 years old and a fifth-year college student was error; the father's obligation to support his daughter, absent a contract, terminated after her majority. However, the father's 18-year-old daughter was not emancipated where she did not work full time and her earnings were insufficient to support the necessities for her continued education, she was enrolled as a student at Mississippi State University, and her record as a student was acceptable; the father was therefore required to continue to support the daughter at the rate of $300 per month. Duncan v. Duncan, 556 So. 2d 346, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 15 (Miss. 1990).

Where the minor child is worthy of and qualified for a college education and shows an aptitude therefor it is a primary duty of the father, if financially able to do so, to provide funds for the college education of the minor child in the custody of the mother, where the father and mother are divorced and living apart. Pass v. Pass, 238 Miss. 449, 118 So. 2d 769, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1960).

Where a divorced husband agrees to placing of his children in boarding school as provided for in a decree and where also the court expressly adjudicated the children to be wards of the court, the father was under a duty to pay the schools in which the children were placed. Savell v. Savell, 213 Miss. 869, 58 So. 2d 41, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 436 (Miss. 1952).

25. Medical expenses.

Although awards of other sums in addition to the regular child support may be ordered, the payment of health insurance is not mandatory. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 788 So. 2d 800, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 71 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Psychological expenses incurred as a result of treatment of a minor child for drug and alcohol abuse under the direction of an accredited medical facility were "medical expenses" to be paid by the child's father in accordance with the divorce decree. Martin v. Martin, 538 So. 2d 765, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 68 (Miss. 1989).

Divorced custodial parent has prerogative to incur substantial expenses for orthodontic care for children and to require supporting noncustodial parent to pay bill, in accordance with agreement of parties, incorporated into divorce decree, requiring noncustodial parent to pay medical and dental expenses of children, so long as care and treatment is reasonably necessary and cost reasonable in amount; amount of bill is not rendered unreasonable merely because noncustodial parent would have selected less expensive treatment. Clements v. Young, 481 So. 2d 263, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2373 (Miss. 1985).

Bills and prescription receipts evidencing charges made for medical and dental treatment furnished to children provide prima facie showing, in accordance with § 41-9-119, in child support proceeding, that medical and dental expenses represented by bills are reasonable in amount and were necessarily incurred. Clements v. Young, 481 So. 2d 263, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2373 (Miss. 1985).

In a divorce action the chancery court has the power to impose liability for unusual, unforeseen, emergency obligations such as medical attention for son receiving a serious injury playing football and that of daughter badly injured in automobile wreck. Castleberry v. Castleberry, 214 Miss. 94, 58 So. 2d 67, 1952 Miss. LEXIS 448 (Miss. 1952).

26. Escalation clauses.

A chancellor erred in ordering a father to pay future additional child support in the amount of 10 percent of his adjusted gross income exceeding $50,000 where the chancellor relied solely upon the father's possible future income and did not include other factors such as the mother's separate income, the inflation rate, and the needs and expenses of the children. Morris v. Stacy, 641 So. 2d 1194, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 368 (Miss. 1994).

When employing escalation clauses for child support, the bench and bar are urged to: (a) specify with certainty the specific cost of living or consumer price index which is to be utilized; (b) show the applicable ratio (present CPI is to ascertainable CPI as present award is to future award); (c) calculate the base figure as of the date of judgment; (d) establish frequency of adjustment (nothing less than yearly is suggested); and (e) establish an effective date for each adjustment (e.g. anniversary of date of judgment.) Caution should be exercised in applying a consumer price index that comports with Mississippi's economic picture, as well as the parent's job status. Wing v. Wing, 549 So. 2d 944, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 443 (Miss. 1989).

Escalation clauses should be included in child support decrees since strong public policy calls for provision for increased financial needs of children without additional litigation, incurring attorney's fees, court congestion and delay, and emotional trauma. Wing v. Wing, 549 So. 2d 944, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 443 (Miss. 1989).

27. Termination or nonsupport.

Because the chancellor found that the children were emancipated, as they were 24 and 22 years old at the time of the 2012 order, the chancellor erred in requiring the father to pay child support, college expenses, and life and health insurance for the benefit of the children. Archie v. Archie, 126 So. 3d 937, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 684 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Chancery court did not abuse its discretion by declining to require a parent to provide post-majority financial support for the parent's child because Mississippi law did not vest the court with the authority to mandate that parents financially support their offspring post-majority. The duty imposed for a parent to support its child does not extend beyond the child's minority, which terminates when the child reaches twenty-one years of age. Hays v. Alexander, 114 So. 3d 704, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 324 (Miss. 2013).

Where one child was married and another quit school, the children were not necessarily emancipated under Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23; it was up to the chancellor to determine such, especially since the father did not seek judicial relief from his obligation, but decided to engage in self-help, and the lump sum payments did not automatically terminate until the emancipation of the youngest child. Strack v. Sticklin, 959 So. 2d 1, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 634 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 2007).

Father's minor child was incarcerated for life following his conviction for murder; however, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the child was not emancipated because the father failed to present any authority that would warrant the conclusion that a child was emancipated when incarcerated. Edmonds v. Edmonds, 935 So. 2d 980, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 383 (Miss. 2006).

Chancellor did not err in modifying an original order of a county court that had improperly terminated child support when the child reached 16 years of age, because, Miss. Code Ann. § 93-5-23 (2004) clearly mandated that child support continued until the child attained the age of 21 years of age or was otherwise emancipated and the record showed that the child had not reached the age of 21. And, even if the appellate court held that the mother was estopped from bringing the action due to laches, child support could still be viably pursued by the child under Mississippi law. Owen v. Wilkinson, 915 So. 2d 493, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 914 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Trial court properly granted a father summary judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 56 in the father's action seeking to terminate his child support obligation on the ground that the children had attained the age of majority; where, absent an agreement to the contrary, the father was not required to provide child support under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 93-5-23 and 93-11-65 after the children reached age 21, the father's obligation had ceased, as the children were at least 21, and there was no written agreement providing for post-emancipation child support payments. Little v. Little, 878 So. 2d 1086, 2004 Miss. App. LEXIS 713 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Based upon the daughter's decision to become pregnant, not complete her education, and not work full-time, as well as the baby's father providing financial support for the daughter's child, the trial court did not err in finding that the daughter was an emancipated adult. Caldwell v. Caldwell, 823 So. 2d 1216, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 450 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Although a child possibly met the technical statutory requirements for emancipation, he was unable to support himself on his own, thus defeating the requirement for emancipation. Wesson v. Wesson, 818 So. 2d 1272, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 335 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Emancipation occurred when the child of the former husband and the former wife turned 21 and meant that the former husband had no further obligation to provide child support for that child; moreover, the trial court, in its discretion, had the right to grant the former husband a credit for child support he paid on behalf of that child past the time she was emancipated and did not abuse its discretion in granting him such a credit. Houck v. Houck, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 517 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 11, 2001), op. withdrawn, sub. op., 812 So. 2d 1139, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 111 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002).

Chancery court's finding that a daughter who had initially lived with her mother, the father's ex-wife, after the father and the ex-wife were divorced but who, after the death of her mother, lived in various places with various persons, including the father for a short period of time, and worked at various jobs, was not emancipated by her actions after moving out of the father's home because of the father's drinking and therefore awarding the daughter unpaid back child support upon the daughter's suit filed shortly after the daughter turned 21 was warranted. Burt v. Burt, 841 So. 2d 108, 2001 Miss. LEXIS 204 (Miss. 2001).

Evidence supported the determination that the parties' oldest child became emancipated in April, 1997, rather than in August, 1997, where (1) the child had discontinued full-time enrollment in school and had obtained full-time employment by April, 1997, and (2) although she was living in the custodial home, she had established independent living arrangements because her mother had moved to another state. Ligon v. Ligon, 743 So. 2d 404, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 269 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

Evidence supported the conclusion that the parties' 18 year old son was not emancipated where (1) although he had a full time job, he still lived with his mother as his income was insufficient to allow him to establish an independent residence, and (2) he expressed a desire to go to college and testified that he did not do so only because he could not afford it. Andrews v. Williams, 723 So. 2d 1175, 1998 Miss. App. LEXIS 982 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998).

When the parties' daughter moved into an apartment with her boyfriend, she removed herself from her parents' care and control and became emancipated; therefore, the mother was no longer entitled to receive child support for her, even though the daughter subsequently returned to her mother's home. Rennie v. Rennie, 718 So. 2d 1091, 1998 Miss. LEXIS 336 (Miss. 1998).

A trial court did not err in declining to order a father to pay child support where the mother and the father each had custody of one child, the court's decision was based on the fact that each party would have the responsibility for the child in his or her custody, and the parties' respective incomes were almost the same. Polk v. Polk, 559 So. 2d 1048, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 198 (Miss. 1990).

The fact that one child became emancipated and the other child moved into the father's home did not automatically grant the father the right to receive a credit for child support payments made after that point in time. However, the father was allowed the opportunity to prove before a trial judge that he should receive such a credit. Nichols v. Tedder, 547 So. 2d 766, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1989).

The age of majority for purposes of child care and maintenance orders issued pursuant to § 93-5-23 and § 93-11-65 is 21 years. Thus, the courts have no authority under these statutes to require parents to provide for the care and maintenance of their child after the child becomes emancipated, by reaching the age of 21, or otherwise, whichever occurs first. This does not foreclose the enforceability of agreements by the parties providing for the post-emancipation care and maintenance of their children, whether those agreements are separate contracts, or have been incorporated into the divorce decree. Nichols v. Tedder, 547 So. 2d 766, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1989).

When retarded son who lived with his mother became an adult, his father was no longer obligated to make payments for his support pursuant to the child support decree entered at the time of the parents' divorce. Watkins v. Watkins, 337 So. 2d 723, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1590 (Miss. 1976).

28. Practice and procedure.

Mother was not provided notice that she might be required to defend a claim of child support nor was there a suggestion in the record that support payments from the mother were even being contemplated by the court on its own or asked for by the father. Accordingly, the chancery court's imposition of child-support obligations upon the mother was reversed, based on procedurally inadequate notice rather than a review of the merits. Porter v. Porter, 23 So. 3d 438, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 593 (Miss. 2009).

Chancery court erred in making an increase in child support retroactive from the date of the parties' divorce judgment under Miss. R. Civ. P. 60(b) in order to rectify a mistake in the husband's statement of his income because a Rule 60(b) claim was time-barred absent a finding of fraud upon the court. Walton v. Snyder, 984 So. 2d 343, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 814 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), cert. denied, 984 So. 2d 277, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 315 (Miss. 2008).

Limitations period under Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-43 did not bar a contempt action to recover child support payments 12 years after a divorce decree was entered because the youngest child had until 2008 to bring the action under the savings clause of Miss. Code Ann. § 15-1-59. Strack v. Sticklin, 959 So. 2d 1, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 634 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 958 So. 2d 1232, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 371 (Miss. 2007).

Upon the parties' divorce, the mother was granted paramount physical custody of the parties, minor child; the chancellor did not err in ordering the father to pay $ 1,030 per month in child support and granting the income tax child dependency exemption to the father until such time as the mother could show an income of over $ 50,000 per year. A chancellor has the authority to require that a custodial parent waive the income tax child dependency exemption in favor of the noncustodial parent. Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, 914 So. 2d 193, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 240 (Miss. Ct. App.), cert. denied, 921 So. 2d 344, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 749 (Miss. 2005).

In a child custody and support modification action, the issue was whether the lower court committed reversible error by approving and signing a consent judgment which was not approved or signed by the father or his attorney. Further, no terms were ever announced in open court, recorded by a court reporter, or approved by counsel as required by Miss. Unif. Ch. Ct. R. 3.09 and 5.03,; the appellate court held that given those facts, it was without proof of substantial credible evidence to support the chancellor's order, and the order was vacated and the matter remanded for proper compliance with the aforementioned rules. Samples v. Davis, 904 So. 2d 1061, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1487 (Miss. 2004).

Where a case was remanded because the chancellor failed to make sufficient findings in support of his division and classification of marital property, the chancellor also had to revisit the issue of child support. Lauro v. Lauro, 847 So. 2d 843, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 272 (Miss. 2003).

The chancery judge who has in personam jurisdiction over the parties of the marriage may deal not only with divorce but also with care, custody (which includes visitation) and maintenance (support) of the children. Peters v. Peters, 744 So. 2d 803, 1999 Miss. App. LEXIS 147 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A chancellor properly refused to have an arrearage of approximately $4300 in child support payments placed in a trust fund that would begin to generate a monthly income for a hearing-impaired child when he reached the arbitrarily-designated age of 36, since past due child support payments become vested as of the date they were due and cannot be modified; furthermore, the chancellor would have abused his discretion by allowing the funds to be placed in a trust that was not established and maintained in accordance with applicable regulations and guidelines governing governmental assistance programs for the disabled. Hammett v. Woods, 602 So. 2d 825, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 299 (Miss. 1992).

A child support agreement, submitted to the court pursuant to § 93-5-2, which ends support for a child before that child reaches the age of 21 or is otherwise emancipated, is unenforceable as to the rights of the child. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 574 So. 2d 1376, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 17 (Miss. 1991).

The guidelines for child support awards set forth in § 43-19-101 must not control a chancellor's award of child support. The national guideline must not dictate the amount of food, the need of clothing, the requirement of education or the standard of living of the children. Rather, this should be done by a chancellor who hears all the facts, views the witnesses, and is informed at trial of the circumstances of the parties and particularly the circumstances of the children. The guidelines may be received and considered in all support matters as relevant, but the guidelines may not determine the specific need or the specific support required; this is to be done by a chancellor at a time real, on a scene certain, and with a knowledge special to the actual circumstances and to the individual child or children. Thurman v. Thurman, 559 So. 2d 1014, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 185 (Miss. 1990).

Trial courts have the authority to allocate income tax dependency exemptions by ordering the custodial parent to sign the required release where the equities of the case favor such action. A trial court's authority to allocate the exemption to the non-custodial parent reduces the amount of income tax to be paid to the federal government, and produces a tax saving to the non-custodial parent which exceeds the moderate increase in the tax liability of the custodial parent. This result will almost always prevail where, as is often the case, the custodial parent's adjusted gross income is less than the adjusted gross income of the non-custodial parent. In such a situation, the after-tax spendable income of the non-custodial parent is increased. This savings in tax liability could easily be channeled into increased child support or other payments thereby rendering the custodial parent's after-tax spendable income, including child support or other payments, the same or better than if he or she had claimed the dependency exemption. Nichols v. Tedder, 547 So. 2d 766, 1989 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1989).

Award to wife of alimony and child support where such is not sought in pleadings is error, because it deprives husband of due process, although such judgments are not void; therefore, where husband paid alimony and child support for 3 years before complaining about due process violation, decree is final and due process right has been waived. Miller v. Miller, 512 So. 2d 1286, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2815 (Miss. 1987).

To extent that there is legal duty for parent to support adult incapacitated child, duty runs from parent to child, not from one divorced spouse to other; any action for support of child should therefore be maintained by or on behalf of adult child against parent from whom support is sought, not by suit brought by one parent against other for modification of divorce decree. Taylor v. Taylor, 478 So. 2d 310, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2288 (Miss. 1985).

The chancery court's as authority under this section to make such orders as are deemed equitable and just may be exercised only after a full and complete hearing after due notice of the purpose of the hearing at which the parties have an opportunity to call witnesses and be heard; thus, in an uncontested divorce proceeding in which no pleading asking for support of the minor children was filed by defendant wife, who had the children with her, it was error for the court arbitrarily to fix a monthly sum that the father should contribute to the children's support, due process requiring that the father be given fair notice by an appropriate pleading that the question of support would be under consideration. Fortenberry v. Fortenberry, 338 So. 2d 806, 1976 Miss. LEXIS 1633 (Miss. 1976).

A petition for modification of a provision for the support of children, which alleges that the custodian mother is employed, contains enough to entitle petitioner to a hearing, though it does not allege the amount of her earnings. Bailey v. Bailey, 246 Miss. 390, 149 So. 2d 478, 1963 Miss. LEXIS 453 (Miss. 1963).

29. Visitation.

There was no error in granting supervised visitation as an ex-husband had drug and alcohol issues, there were questions concerning his moral fitness, and he had little or no contract with the child for some time. McDuffie v. McDuffie, 21 So. 3d 685, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 628 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Stepfather's rights under the Due Process Clause of U.S. Const. Amend. XIV were not violated by the chancery court's dismissal of his action seeking to enforce a visitation order against a father because the clause protected the fundamental right of parents to make decisions concerning the care, custody, and control of their children and the stepfather had no visitation rights. Pruitt v. Payne, 14 So. 3d 806, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 481 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Record failed to demonstrate that restrictions on visitation were necessary to prevent harm to minor children; although the wife testified that the husband had threatened to disappear with the children 10 years prior to the divorce action, there was no testimony that the husband made any such statements recently, or had ever made any effort to harm the children. Cassell v. Cassell, 970 So. 2d 267, 2007 Miss. App. LEXIS 844 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Final judgment of divorce provided reasonable visitation as specifically dictated in the record and agreed by the parties; however, the record did not indicate any specific visitation schedule or agreement between the parties concerning visitation between the father and his children; therefore, the appellate court remanded on this issue and ordered that the chancellor enter a specific visitation schedule. Lauro v. Lauro, 924 So. 2d 584, 2006 Miss. App. LEXIS 161 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Substantial basis for Chancellor's finding of viable relationship between minor child and his paternal grandparents, supporting grandparents' petition for visitation rights following parents' divorce, was provided by evidence that grandparents gave financial support to parents before parents' separation through use of grandparents' gas credit card and monetary support, and that grandparents regularly visited child both before and after parents' separation. Settle v. Galloway, 682 So. 2d 1032, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1996).

Substantial basis for Chancellor's finding that granting visitation rights to minor child's paternal grandparents was in child's best interest, supporting grandparents' petition for visitation rights following parents' divorce, was provided by evidence that child would have little exposure to his father, who was stationed away from home as member of United States Navy, but for child's contact with grandparents, who exchanged videotapes with father. Settle v. Galloway, 682 So. 2d 1032, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1996).

Granting paternal grandparents right to every-other-weekend visitation with their grandchild was not excessive, where primary basis was father's inability to exercise his parental visitation rights due to his being stationed away from home as member of United States Navy, and where the right was to be concurrent with any visitation exercised by father. Settle v. Galloway, 682 So. 2d 1032, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1996).

Natural grandparents have no common-law right of visitation with their grandchildren; such right must come from legislative enactment. Settle v. Galloway, 682 So. 2d 1032, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1996).

Natural grandparents' statutory right to visit their grandchildren is not as comprehensive as parents' visitation rights. Settle v. Galloway, 682 So. 2d 1032, 1996 Miss. LEXIS 573 (Miss. 1996).

A chancellor abused his discretion in requiring that during a mother's visitation with her minor child the child could not be in the presence of "any male companion not related to her by blood or marriage," since such a sweeping restriction was clearly overbroad; the fact that a parent is having an affair is not enough to create the danger requisite to limit visitation with a child. Chamblee v. Chamblee, 637 So. 2d 850, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 285 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor abused his discretion in enjoining a father from having his children in the presence of his lover where there was no evidence that visitation in the mere presence of the father's lover would be harmful to the children. Dunn v. Dunn, 609 So. 2d 1277, 1992 Miss. LEXIS 785 (Miss. 1992).

The chancery court has the power to restrict visitation in circumstances which present an appreciable danger of hazard cognizable in law. Thus, a chancellor did not err in modifying a mother's visitation rights without a motion by the father for modification where the mother had proven that she was capable of secreting the children by refusing to deliver the children in defiance of a court order changing custody from the mother to the father, which could certainly be considered a cognizable danger. Newsom v. Newsom, 557 So. 2d 511, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1990).

IV. DECREES.

30. Decree; generally.

A chancellor's finding that a wife was entitled to distribution of marital property and/or lump sum alimony was premature where the husband's principal asset was in bankruptcy, since the value of the husband's estate was not before the court due to the bankruptcy proceedings; the issues of property division and lump sum alimony should have remained in the trial court pending the conclusion of the bankruptcy proceedings. Heigle v. Heigle, 654 So. 2d 895, 1995 Miss. LEXIS 228 (Miss. 1995).

A chancellor did not err in entering a judgment of divorce nunc pro tunc after the death of the husband where the chancellor had fully considered all issues raised by the parties and rendered his opinion prior to the husband's death. White v. Smith, 645 So. 2d 875, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 461 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor may divide marital assets, real and personal, as well as award periodic and/or lump sum alimony as equity demands; moreover, all property division, lump sum or periodic alimony awards, and mutual obligations for child support should be considered together to determine that they are equitable and fair; to aid appellate review, findings of fact by the chancellor, together with the legal conclusions drawn from those findings, are required. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

Existing law regarding periodic alimony and child support is not altered by the law pertaining to the equitable division of marital assets; upon the dissolution of a marriage, the chancery court has the discretion to award periodic and/or lump sum alimony, divide real and personal property, including the divesting of title, and may consider awarding future interests to be received by each spouse. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 639 So. 2d 921, 1994 Miss. LEXIS 352 (Miss. 1994).

A chancellor erred in determining that a father was not entitled to regular overnight visitation with his minor son, where there was no substantial evidence in the record tending to show that such visitation would be detrimental to the son in any way, since non-custodial parents are presumptively entitled to regular overnight visitation with their children. Wood v. Wood, 579 So. 2d 1271, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 308 (Miss. 1991).

The principle that the litigation of divorce and of alimony are divisible applies to divorce decrees of both Mississippi courts and foreign courts. Weiss v. Weiss, 579 So. 2d 539, 1991 Miss. LEXIS 238 (Miss. 1991).

A husband had sufficient minimum contacts with Mississippi so that requiring him to submit to an adjudication of his rights in a divorce proceeding did not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice," where the husband was physically present in Mississippi at the time he was personally served, and he was domiciled in Mississippi for years and left the state incident to separation from his spouse and family. Chenier v. Chenier, 573 So. 2d 699, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 840 (Miss. 1990).

When a non-custodial parent has unsupervised visitation rights, the custodial parent has no right to interfere with the non-custodial parent's visitation with his or her children. Thus, a mother's wishes that her children not fly in a private plane was not sufficient to deny the father the right to provide flying lessons or to fly his children in his private airplane during his visitation hours, where there was no evidence that flying would endanger the children's lives or that the children were opposed to flying or taking flying lessons. Mord v. Peters, 571 So. 2d 981, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 716 (Miss. 1990).

A chancellor was not prohibited from awarding lump sum alimony and an equitable division of real property where the property was titled in the name of both parties. Gray v. Gray, 562 So. 2d 79, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 237 (Miss. 1990).

Visitation privileges should be reasonable and appropriate, fostering a positive and harmonious relationship between the children and parent. Stevison v. Woods, 560 So. 2d 176, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 205 (Miss. 1990).

A chancellor did not err in severely restricting a mother's visitation with her children to not more than once per week, for no more than one and ½ hours, in the father's home, where the mother had secreted the children and refused to deliver them in defiance of a court order changing custody from the mother to the father; the safety and welfare of the minor children compelled the chancellor to act in their best interest, protecting them from abduction by the mother. Newsom v. Newsom, 557 So. 2d 511, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 43 (Miss. 1990).

Chancellor erred, where corporation was in no way made party to proceedings, in awarding to ex-wife corporate property, i.e., use of automobile belonging to ex-husband's corporation and allowance of up to $160 per month in purchases of drugs, cosmetics, etc., at ex-husband's pharmacy at 50 percent discount. Skinner v. Skinner, 509 So. 2d 867, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2549 (Miss. 1987).

Chancery Court is within its authority concerning maintenance of children of marriage in providing that custodial parent shall have exclusive use and possession of marital residence, and issue of whether in interest of child entire 21 acres should be kept intact or 20 should be severed is type of question with respect to which Chancery Court is given some latitude. Regan v. Regan, 507 So. 2d 54, 1987 Miss. LEXIS 2441 (Miss. 1987), overruled, Tramel v. Tramel, 740 So. 2d 286, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1999). But see Tramel v. Tramel, 740 So. 2d 286, 1999 Miss. LEXIS 252 (Miss. 1999).

The object of any child custody and support decree is the accomplishment of that which is in the best interest of the child. Leonard v. Leonard, 486 So. 2d 1240, 1986 Miss. LEXIS 2426 (Miss. 1986).

Divorce decree and property settlement agreement purporting to divest party of title to real property are not valid consent decree, which would be subject to modification, where decree is not signed and consented to in writing by parties. Spearman v. Spearman, 471 So. 2d 1204, 1985 Miss. LEXIS 2084 (Miss. 1985).

Where nothing in the record indicated that it would be detrimental to the welfare of the children for the father to take the children out of the county within the time when he was permitted to visit with them pursuant to a decree of divorce, and there was no showing that the father intended to take the children to visit the woman who was said to have been the cause of the divorce, the decree would be modified by the Supreme Court so as to permit the father to take his children out of the county for the time he was permitted to visit them. Dubois v. Dubois, 275 So. 2d 100, 1973 Miss. LEXIS 1348 (Miss. 1973).

A decree for child support and the use of an automobile, entered against a nonresident husband upon proof of publication only, is void for want of jurisdiction. Brookhaven Pressed Brick & Mfg. Co. v. Davis, 191 So. 2d 840, 1966 Miss. LEXIS 1225 (Miss. 1966).

Where a consent decree expressly directed the husband to make stated monthly payments for the support and maintenance of the children of the parties, provision of a final decree to the effect that in the event of an appeal with supersedeas the earlier decree should remain in full force and effect during the pendency of the appeal was not erroneous. Petersen v. Petersen, 238 Miss. 190, 118 So. 2d 300, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 395 (Miss. 1960).

The chancery court of the proper county may, in a proceeding by a mother having custody of a minor child, award judgment against the father for the child's support and education, notwithstanding the parents are divorced and the divorce decree made no provision for such allowance. Hill v. Briggs, 236 Miss. 43, 109 So. 2d 349, 1959 Miss. LEXIS 292 (Miss. 1959).

Where alimony and absolute divorce decrees bear same date, supreme court will presume that the former was granted first. Schaffer v. Schaffer, 209 Miss. 220, 46 So. 2d 443, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1950).

In action for divorce and alimony, court may award alimony payable in lump sum or in monthly installments and may fix lien for payment thereof against property of husband with right on his part to discharge such lien and retain property, or court may order his property sold under execution after default in payment of alimony under decree fixing alimony in some definite amount in lump sum or in monthly installments. McCraney v. McCraney, 208 Miss. 105, 43 So. 2d 872, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 232 (Miss. 1950).

A wife had a right in an action for divorce to have the amount of an unpaid loan from her to her husband awarded to her in the decree. Oberlin v. Oberlin, 201 Miss. 228, 29 So. 2d 82, 1947 Miss. LEXIS 389 (Miss. 1947).

Court may decree wife alimony, although granting divorce to husband. Winkler v. Winkler, 104 Miss. 1, 61 So. 1, 1913 Miss. LEXIS 3 (Miss. 1913); Yelverton v. Yelverton, 200 Miss. 569, 28 So. 2d 176, 1946 Miss. LEXIS 324 (Miss. 1946).

Chancery court is not authorized to set aside a decree rendered at a former term and render another in lieu thereof, but only to change and modify the terms of a former decree in accordance with the after arising circumstances of the parties. Gresham v. Gresham, 198 Miss. 43, 21 So. 2d 414, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 167 (Miss. 1945).

Decree denying husband divorce and awarding wife custody of children, attorney's fees, and monthly support and granting lien on husband's lands to secure payment thereof, rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction having jurisdiction of the subject matter and of the parties, was not void but only erroneous because of an error apparent on the face of the decree. Todd v. Todd, 197 Miss. 819, 20 So. 2d 827, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 314 (Miss. 1945).

Chancery decree awarding wife custody of children, monthly support for herself and the children, granting a lien on husband's lands to secure payment thereof, and directing that, upon default, special execution should issue to the sheriff to advertise and sell such land, exceeded the power of the court in directing that the proceeds of the sale in excess of what would be required to satisfy costs and the instalments then due be impounded and retained by the sheriff as a trust fund out of which to provide payment of future instalments, and was subject to correction by injunction or bill of review. Todd v. Todd, 197 Miss. 819, 20 So. 2d 827, 1945 Miss. LEXIS 314 (Miss. 1945).

Where husband conveyed his interest in homestead to wife, and simultaneously entered into agreement with her whereby he agreed to relinquish possession upon becoming intoxicated, provision in divorce decree granted wife on grounds of habitual drunkenness and cruel and inhuman treatment, awarding wife title to the homestead as well as right of possession, together with the accumulated and impounded rent received therefrom since date of conveyance, was proper. Hemphill v. Hemphill, 197 Miss. 783, 20 So. 2d 79, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1944).

Provision in decree awarding divorce to wife, directing sale of certain personalty and division of proceeds upon an arbitrary basis of one-half to each, was unwarranted, where trial court found that the personalty had been purchased partially with funds of the wife and partially with funds of the husband and that each was entitled to a lien thereon for the purchase money paid by the respective parties. Hemphill v. Hemphill, 197 Miss. 783, 20 So. 2d 79, 1944 Miss. LEXIS 328 (Miss. 1944).

New decree within divorce statute is different decree on same subject matter as original decree. Schneider v. Schneider, 155 Miss. 621, 125 So. 91, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 344 (Miss. 1929).

Change in decree is modification of decree in respect to subject-matter which it decided. Schneider v. Schneider, 155 Miss. 621, 125 So. 91, 1929 Miss. LEXIS 344 (Miss. 1929).

Power to modify as to alimony does not justify substitution of decrees. Williams v. Williams, 127 Miss. 627, 90 So. 330, 1921 Miss. LEXIS 266 (Miss. 1921).

31. Effect of decree.

In the case of property jointly owned by the parties but undisturbed in the judgment of divorce, the title remains as before. Thus, where the divorce proceedings failed to reflect that the husband's anticipated military retirement pension was mentioned or affected, the wife's pre-divorce interest, if any, in the husband's pension remained undisturbed. Newman v. Newman, 558 So. 2d 821, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 55 (Miss. 1990).

The principles of res judicata, which command that a final judgment precludes all claims that were or reasonably may have been brought in the original action, apply in divorce actions; the rule that a judgment for alimony, custody or support may be modified only upon a showing of a post-judgment material change of circumstances is a recognition of the force of res judicata in divorce actions. Bowe v. Bowe, 557 So. 2d 793, 1990 Miss. LEXIS 53 (Miss. 1990).

In a habeas corpus proceeding instituted by a mother in a court other than one which had granted her custody of the children in a divorce proceeding, to obtain custody of the children from a paternal aunt and paternal grandparents, who were not parties to the divorce action, the prior decree of custody was not binding upon proof of circumstances and conditions arising since the date of its rendition, showing that the mother was unfit to exercise such right or had forfeited it. Neal v. Neal, 238 Miss. 572, 119 So. 2d 273, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 440 (Miss. 1960).

The mere fact that the custody of a minor daughter was awarded to the mother by court decree does not of itself cause an emancipation of the minor. Pass v. Pass, 238 Miss. 449, 118 So. 2d 769, 1960 Miss. LEXIS 426 (Miss. 1960).

Assumption of a second marriage will not relieve a husband and father from the payment of alimony and support to the first wife and child, according to the provisions of the decree of divorce. Davis v. Davis, 217 Miss. 313, 64 So. 2d 145, 1953 Miss. LEXIS 433 (Miss. 1953).

Where a divorce decree recites that the husband pay to his wife $20 a month until further orders, the husband was mandatorily required by this decree to make payments therein provided for. Dickerson v. Horn, 210 Miss. 655, 50 So. 2d 368, 1951 Miss. LEXIS 304 (Miss. 1951).

Decree for alimony is conclusive, the wife having a vested right to the decreed alimony. Schaffer v. Schaffer, 209 Miss. 220, 46 So. 2d 443, 1950 Miss. LEXIS 381 (Miss. 1950).

A decree for alimony is not a debt in the strict sense of that term, but rather a judgment calling for the performance of a duty made specific by the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, as regards homestead exemption. Felder v. Felder's Estate, 195 Miss. 326, 13 So. 2d 823, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1943).

In view of wife's right to alimony constituting an interest in her husband's real estate, alimony decree fixing payment thereof a specific lien upon the land of the husband as security for the payment of the alimony constitutes such lien an encumbrance running with the land so as to render subject thereto the subsequently acquired homestead right of husband's second wife. Felder v. Felder's Estate, 195 Miss. 326, 13 So. 2d 823, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1943).

In view of this section [Code 1942, § 2743] authorizing the court to require sureties for the payment of alimony allowed, and of the fact that a wife's right to alimony constitutes such an interest in her husband's real estate that she is entitled to have a lien fixed on it to enforce her vested right to maintenance out of his property regardless of whether the property was the homestead of the parties, the authority of the court could not be defeated by any subsequent act of the husband in contravention of her rights under a specific lien fixed on his property, and especially when such lien is declared at a time when no homestead rights could be effectually claimed by him therein. Felder v. Felder's Estate, 195 Miss. 326, 13 So. 2d 823, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1943).

Divorced husband was not entitled to cancelation of an alimony decree whereby a lien was fixed on his land for payment of the sums due thereunder, or to defeat commissioner's sale of such land to the wife because of default in payment of alimony, by remarrying and claiming homestead exemption. Felder v. Felder's Estate, 195 Miss. 326, 13 So. 2d 823, 1943 Miss. LEXIS 127 (Miss. 1943).

Where wife obtains decree for alimony she acquired lien on land superior to deed of trust executed by husband after filing of lis pendens notice. W. H. Gallaspy Sons Co. v. Massey, 99 Miss. 208, 54 So. 805, 1911 Miss. LEXIS 191 (Miss. 1911).

V. MODIFICATION OF DECREE.

32. Alimony; generally.

Chancery court properly denied a husband's motion to reduce or terminate his alimony obligation because the wife's receipt of disability benefits did not constitute a material change in circumstances; the plain language of the parties' divorce agreement reflected that it was anticipated that the wife would receive disability benefits at some point in the future. Morris v. Morris, 8 So. 3d 917, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 187 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Ex-husband's obligation to pay alimony was terminated because the ex-wife admitted that the ex-wife and a boyfriend cohabited, and the ex-wife failed to rebut the presumption of mutual support since, inter alia, the boyfriend gave the ex-wife money for groceries and clothes and helped the ex-wife with utilities and projects around the ex-wife's home. Rester v. Rester, 5 So. 3d 1132, 2008 Miss. App. LEXIS 517 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).
